Germans Lost Best Invasion Chance Against U.K. in '40

British Would Have Been Outnumbered by Five to One

By ROSS MUNRO
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Dec. 1 (CP Cable) — Britain's ill-equipped anti-invasion force in southeastern and southern England during September, 1940, would have been outnumbered more than five to one in divisional strength if the Germans had attacked that area as they were planning with 22 divisions followed up by 17 in reserve.

Lifting the curtain of secrecy from Britain's anti-invasion force the War Office disclosed to The Canadian Press that Britain at that time only had the equivalent of seven divisions, including the 1st. Canadian Division, deployed in Kent and spotted in a big arc around London.

These formations would have taken the brunt of the attack and all were inferior in equipment to the crack divisions the enemy planned to hurl against them in landings from Ramsgate, at the mouth of the Thames Estuary, to west of Southampton.

In addition to this meagre force there were 18 divisions scattered through Scotland and other parts of England but practically all were far under strength in men and equipment. It is believed some of them were merely being formed and that there were not many of them who could have been a factor in decisive battles the Germans planned to fight south of London.

The War Office revealed that the 12th. Corps was responsible at that time for the defence of Kent but it only included two divisions and two brigade groups — a thin red line to oppose the German army which intended to lunge through the hop fields.

The 1st London Division was at Canterbury and Ashford with the 45th Division at Ham Street, half way between Ashford and Rye on the Channel coast. The 5th and 7th New Zealand Brigade groups were south of Maidstone, in West Kent.

Backing up this corps was the General Headquarters Reserve including the composite Canadian-British 7th Corps commanded by Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton. It consisted of the 1st Canadian Division stationed at Nutfield, just east of Reigate, 15 miles south of London, the 1st British Armored Division at Leatherhead and Dorking west of Reigate, and the 1st British Armored Brigade at Reigate itself.

The remainder of the general headquarters reserve consisted of the 42nd Division at Newbury, Berkshire, 50 miles west of London and the 43rd Division at Hitchin, Hertfordshire, 25 miles north of London.

The capital itself was defended by only three brigades—the 3rd and the 20th and 24th guards.

Defence in Depth.

The anti-invasion plan was a defence in depth, the War Office said. There was to be no attempt made to stop the invasion on the beaches.

Generally the anti-invasion forces intended to fight with a combination of mobile columns and static defences by means of strong points or "stops."

The equipment picture was dismal. The War Office said there were only enough 25-pounder field guns to equip each field regiment on an average with one gun instead of 24. Some difficiencies were made up with old 18-pounders and 4.5 inch howitzers but even then the total number issued was only two-fifths of requirements of these, a large number were with training units.

At this time the army was still short 146,000 rifles and 10,000 light machine guns. Most units were equipped with old Lewis guns and Bren guns were in short supply.

Weather Forecast

Lake Superior: Sunday, occasional snowflurries or light drizzle.

Manitoba: Sunday, moderately cold.

DE GASPERI INVITED

Rome, Dec. 1—(AP)—Foreign Minister Alcide De Gasperi was invited by Crown Prince Humbert today to attempt to form an Italian government to succeed that of Ferruccio Parri, whose six-party coalition regime fell last week.

A royal communique said De Gasperi told Humber there was a possibility of forming a government based on the six parties which make up the National Committee of Liberation and "other elements."

LEHMAN ISSUES STATEMENT ON ERRONEOUS STORY

Tells of the Increasing Effectiveness of U.N.R.R.A. Operations

Washington, Dec. 1 —(AP)— Herbert H. Lehman, Director General of the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration, last night issued a statement in connection with a story carried by The Associated Press Thursday from Herford, Germany, and subsequently corrected. The story was relayed by The Canadian Press to its member newspapers.

"It is unfortunate indeed that U.N.R.R.A., at this critical time, should have to defend itself against an erroneous press report from Europe which, it must be said in credit to the press association which carried it, was immediately corrected.

"The original dispatch, for which there was no foundation in fact, said that U.N.R.R.A. had 'dismissed, suspended or arrested more than 600 of its workers accused of diverting relief supplies into the black market.' The dispatch said further that 'a majority of the workers involved were Americans and Britons.'

"I have investigated the matter thoroughly. The facts are these:

Completing Reorganization.

"General Morgan, chief of our operations in Germany, is now completing a reorganization. Over the last few months the services of 600 U.N.R.R.A. workers have been terminated for various reasons, including incompetency, illness, lack of adaptability, and other causes. These workers were chiefly European nationals, employed on the scene of operations, and not Americans and Britons.

"The unfortunate news dispatch, through some misunderstanding, linked this reorganization with the U.N.R.R.A. announcement that one U.N.R.R.A. worker of Czech nationality was imprisoned for theft and sale to the black market of coffee intended for displaced persons, and that 13 other workers were suspended as the result of an U.N.R.R.A. investigation into charges of black market operations.

"For several months a tightening up process in U.N.R.R.A. operations has been under way. This has been done under my direction. U.N.R.R.A. ocicials in this country have been in constant touch with every move. I have assured Congressional Committee that we have been replacing employees who have been found to be unsuitable with stronger personnel, now that the war is over and better-trained and more experienced workers are available to us.

"In line with this policy, Lt.-Gen. Sir Humfrey, Gale, former administrative officer to General Eisenhower, has been appointed my personal representative in charge of the European regional office in London; and Lt.-Gen. Sir Frederick Morgan, former deputy chief of staff under General Eisenhower, has been made director of the U.N.R.R.A. displaced persons operation in Germany.

G.M. PRESIDENT MAKES SURPRISE MOVE IN ISSUE

Offers to Make Parts And Accessories For Competitors But No Cars For Company

New York, Dec. 1 (AP)—C. W. Wilson, General Motors President, has surprised the auto industry with his plan for G.M. to produce parts and accessories for its competitors while G.M. itself is not making cars because of the C.I.O. auto workers strike for wage increases.

In a letter last night to President R. J. Thomas of the striking C.I.O. United Auto Workers, Mr. Wilson outlined his proposal. G.M. is willing, while the strike continues, to operate all its part and accessory divisions "exclusively on outside work." He said union members called back for this type work could come "with the definite understanding" that they would not be asked to do anything else.

U.A.W.'s reaction was awaited. The union's announced strategy is to "blockade" General Motors —largest of the "big three" motor manufacturers—while assisting its rivals in the post-war production race. U.A.W. Vice President Walter Reuther has agreed to shipment of G.M. finished products to prevent a shutdown at the Packard Motor Car Company.

Most other car manufacturers depend on G.M. for parts and one industry spokesman had predicted that virtually the entire industry would be shut down if the G.M. strike continued.

G. M. officials are going to Washington Tuesday to discuss the strike with the United States Conciliation Service Director, Edgar L. Warren.

Affecting 225,000 workers, the General Motors strike is the biggest among 145 disputes in the United States. Five major disputes account for four-fifths of the 550,000 idle in the country's labor troubles.

The other four involve 60,000 American Federation of Labor lumber and sawmi'l workers in the Pacific Northwest; 55,000 A.F.L. and C.I.O. machinists in the San Francisco area; 30,000 to 50,000 over the road A.F.L. truckers in seven Midwest states, and 40,00 workers laid off at the Ford Motor Company as a result of a strike in automobile parts plants.

The C.I.O. United Packinghouse Workers yesterday approved by 20 to 1 margin, a walkout to back up the union's request for a 25-cent hourly wage raise. Involved are 100,000 packinghouse workers throughout the country.

Marooned Hunters Brought to Shore

Brockville, Dec. 1 — (CP) — George Quirmbach and Jack Garrett, Brockville war veterans marooned since early Wednesday on McCoy Island two miles from here in the St. Lawrence River, were brought to the mainland yesterday afternoon in a motor boat. The two men were reported somewhat chilled but otherwise in good condition.

High waves forced the men ashore in their small rowboat during a hunting trip and prevented earlier rescue efforts. They had been thrown canned food from a light skiff by Robert Stayner, riverman yesterday and again this morning but Stayner said the waves made it impossible to handle the skiff with two men aboard.

Alfie McDonald, Quirmback's brother-in-law, and Robert Carr finally made a relief landing in a motor boat and brought the men ashore.

Naked Bodies of 18 Indian Soldiers Four Englishmen Found in Small Grave

(By VERN HAUGLAND)

Bekassi, Java, Dec. 1 (AP) — Naked bodies, believed to be those of 18 Indian soldiers and four Englishmen, were found in a shallow grave in this village about 12 miles west of Batavia today.

The Dutch news agency Aneta said the bodies were those of the crew and passengers of a transport plane which crashed in Batavia's outskirts last Friday.

An Indonesian woman, who had been held prisoner in the barracks where the men were confined, led a British unit to the burial spot, about 50 yards from the prison. She said four white men and 18 Indians were brought here naked in trucks last Saturday. They were beaten that night, she said, and Sunday they were led to the nearby river bank, one by one, with their hands tied behind them. There they were individually assaulted by yelling men with "anything that would cut," the woman said.

The woman, who had been imprisoned because she was married to an Amboinese, said she overheard a telephone conversation which indicated that an Indonesian general was informed about the prisoners and ordered them killed.

British native troops, acting on reports that the missing airmen had been in Bekassi, sent a patrol to this village yesterday. They found it deserted, with only a Dutch youth and three Amboinese women in jail. This morning a battalion with tanks, mortars, artillery and air support set out again from Batavia. They reached here without difficulty in mid-morning.

ARE THESE CHILDREN ADOLF'S?

This photograph, recently uncovered in a cache of personal effects of Eva Braun, reputed to have been the mistress of Adolf Hitler, shows the smiling Eva with two children. There is much speculation as to the identity of the children. Some believe they may have been Hitler's and Eva's.

USED, RETREADED TIRES TAKEN OFF RATIONED LIST

Virtually All Truck Tires Except Those in Passenger Car Sizes Also Ration Free

Ottawa, Dec. 1 —(CP)— Evidence piled up today, pinpointed by lifting of rationing of all used and retreaded tires and virtually all truck tires except those in passenger car sizes, that wartime Munitions Department controls soon will be a thing of the past.

The tire announcement last night by Munitions Minister Howe, part of the government's planned transition to a peacetime economy, is expected to be followed within a few days by abolition of the Wartime Industries Control Board and relaxation of the building permit system.

Class "B" motorists, previously eligible only for used or retreaded tires, now may purchase new tires, but the supply during the next three months may not allow more than two new tires per owner.

Wholesale commercial travellers, chain store supervisors, finance company collectors, tax collectors and assessors are under new category.

Certain sizes of farm implement tires also have been removed from the ration list.

Truck tires in sizes 600 x 20/30 x 5; 650 x 20/32 x 6—8 ply, and 700 x 20 and over are freed from rationing, and no permit is required for their purchase. Dealers, however, will still not be allowed to give or make any allowance for any used tire or tube taken in exchange for a new tire.

Light truck tires in sizes 600 x 16-17-20; 650 x 16-17-20; 700 x 15-16-17 and 750 x 16 will continue to be rationed under the present system.

All sizes of farm implement and tractor tires other than all 16-inch sizes, 525 x 21 and 600 x 20, are freed from rationing for replacement and changeovers, but must be sold for and mounted on a tractor or implement.

An improvement in the tire situation had been forecast by Mr. Howe, who predicted complete lifting of rationing by spring. The problem is one of fabrication rather than rubber because of the comparatively plentiful supply of synthetic rubber.

The major controls still in effect regulate rubber, motor vehicles, construction and timber.

A priority system has been established to control sales of new motor vehicles to essential users such as doctors and it likely will continue for some time because of the delay in reconversion of the automobile industry due to strikes.

The policy regarding the granting of construction permits recently was eased and it is believed a review of the situation may bring a formal relaxation shortly.

Export prices for timber are considerably higher than domestic prices and control of lumber may be continued for some time to prevent too drastic a depletion of Canadian supplies needed for construction at home.

RUSSIANS MOVE OUT OF TEHRAN; SURPRISE ACTION

All Military Headquarters, Private Billets Evacuated on Thursday Night

Tehran, Dec. 1 (AP) — The Russians began carrying out a surprise evacuation of Tehran Thursday night.

The railway station, communications centres and private billets including the military headquarters were completely evacuated.

The Governor of Azerbaijam, appointed recently by the Central Iranian government, arrived in the provincial capital of Tabriz yesterday from Tehran in a plane put at his disposal by Soviet authorities.

Meanwhile, the Iranian foreign ministry said the Russian note refusing passage of Iranian troops into trouble spots of northwestern Iran stated that "fighting and bloodshed would break out if Iran troops entered the territory and that the Soviet government would be forced to bring in additional soldiers.

Plan Includes Revitalization Tourist Trade

Toronto, Dec. 1 — (CP) — A program including revitalization of Ontario tourist trade, reforestation and conservation, better roads and improved labor relations was presented to the annual convention of the Ontario Association Boards of Trade and Chambers of Commerce which held a one-day session here yesterday.

In outlining the program G. T. Cockshutt of Brantford stressed the need for unity among municipalities to obtain government support for these projects and others which may arise in the future.

Following discussion of the association's part in presentation of these projects it was decided to increase the budget and expand the organization's scope.

In a convention address on the basis for industrial peace J. C. Adams of Toronto said industry must initiate a positive program of job security and remove the worker's fear of losing his job before management and labor can find common ground for the solution of labor difficulties.

No suggestions for worker security have yet come from management, he said. All have been put forward by unions for acceptance or rejection by management.

Municipal-Provincial-Federal co-operation, adequate salaries for permanent officials, encouragement of qualified citizens to enter municipal affairs and civic planning were advocated as bases for the better business community in an address by E. A. Horton of Toronto.

COMMONS URGES LOWER TAXES FOR MINING INDUSTRY

Pictured as Business Of Future Members Ask Industry Be Given Lower Taxation

By GEORGE KITCHEN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, Dec. 1—(CP)—More generous taxation treatment for Canada's mining industry, pictured as the business of the future, was urged in its own when the house, in committee of ways and means, reached budget resolutions dealing with taxation of such companies in relation to their expenses for exploration and development and members urged larger deductions for such expenses in view of the cost of searching for new ore-bearing areas.

Those speaking for the mining industry included Joseph Bradette (L—Cochrane), Lt.-Col. Alan Cockeram (PC—York South), Rodney Adamson (PC—York West) and Garfield Case (PC—Grey North).

Final reading was given to seven private bills, previously passed by the senate.

Passed Without Debate

The bills, passed without debate, were an act to incorporate the Canadian Jewelers Institute; an act to incorporate the Arctic Institute of North America; an act to incorporate the Royal College of Physicians and Surgeons of Canada; an act to consolidate and amend acts relating to Alliance Nationale; an act to incorporate Dominion General Benefit Association; an act to incorporate Dominion General Benefit Association; an act to incorporate the Ottawa Valley Trust Company; and an act to incorporate the Canadian Slovak Benefit Society.

Labor Minister Mitchell told the House he had informed the Dominion-Provincial conference yesterday that collective bargaining and wage contral legislation under the war measures act would have to be continued for an indefinite period, possibly a year or more.

In the senate, Senator John T. Haig, Progressive Conservative leader attacked government policy on housing during consideration of a bill merging the the munitions and reconstruction departments. The senate gave the bill second reading and sent it to its banking and commerce committee, where amendments are expected.

Taxation Discussed.

Back in the Commons taxation matters generally got a good going-over and Finance Minister Ilsley disclosed that the government was working out a system whereby incomes of farmers and fishermen would be averaged over a period of years for income tax purposes.

PROHIBIT RETURN

London, Dec. 1 — (Reuters) —The Yugoslav constituent assembly today followed abolition of the monarchy with a law prohibiting the return of deposed King Peter to his country and provided for exercise of presidential functions in the state by a committee of the speaker of the assembly and six deputy speakers, Belgrade radio reported.

Earlier in the session, Marshal Tito tendered the resignation of his cabinet to the Assembly, but it was immediately rejected.

Hess Capable Of Standing Trial Tribunal Learns

Confesses He Had Been Faking Amnesia in England

Nuernberg, Dec. 1 — (AP) — Rudolf Hess, one-time Nazi glamor boy who became one of the war's mystery men after he parachuted into Scotland in 1941, must continue to stand trial with 19 other Nazi leaders accused of war crimes.

The International Military Tribunal ruled today that Hess, who yesterday confessed he had been faking amnesia, was capable of standing trial.

Lord Justice Sir Geoffrey Lawrence, presiding, announced that no further mental examinations of Hitler's former deputy were necessary and that he was capable of standing trial.

Hess, who had read novels and paid scant attention to early portions of the trial, created a sensation yesterday when he told the court he had simulated loss of memory for "tactical" reasons and announced he would stand responsible for all of his actions.

Hess had hardly left the International Tribunal's presence yesterday when he began boasting that he had made psychiatrists of four countries "look ridiculous."

Aide to Hitler in the writing of Meine Kampf and once second only to Reichsmarshal Goering in the line of succession to the Fuehrer, Hess appeared to love the spotlight which switched suddenly to him after his startling announcement.

Maj. Douglas Kelley, San Francisco psychiatrist who had examined Hess, gave this interpretation of the gaunt defendant's announcement:

Deliberate Simulation

"Hess' action was a return to the typical hysterical personality he has constantly manifested. His amnesia was a deliberate simulation.

"Undoubtedly, after years of practice in a purposeful forgetting in England, he is unable to recall certain events of the past, but it is obvious he has been using amnesia as a defence."

Maj. Kelley suggested that Hess' outburst may have been inspired by the presence of Justice Robert H. Jackson, the chief United States prosecutor, throughout yesterday's session, for Hess is believed suffering from a "conscious malignity" toward Jackson.

Hess' counsel, Gunther Von Rohrscheidt, disclosed that Hess had prepared a statement for the court and press to be released today. Von Rohrscheidt also said that Hess made it plain that he "expects to be executed."

Black-browed Hess appeared much relieved by his confession and for the first time since the trial began engaged in lively conversation with other prisoners in the box just before the session opened.

Witness Recalled

Defence counsel got their first chance at cross-examination when the court recalled Maj.-Gen. Erwin Lahousen, leading German Army intelligence officer whose testimony yesterday placed the blame for mass murder of Polish and Russian prisoners directly on Hitler and the High Command's Chief of Staff, Field Marshal Wilhelm Keitel, one of the score of German leaders on trial.

Asked if he and other professed anti-Hitler military leaders knew the attitude of Franz Von Papen, former German diplomat and one of the defendants, toward the Nazi war policies, Gen. Lahousen replied:

"I recall that Canaris said they were negative." He referred to Admiral Wilhelm Canaris, German spy expert who was described as leader of a secret anti-Hitler military clique until his execution after the unsuccessful 1944 bomb plot against the Fuehrer.

Lahousen, Austrian-born aide to Canaris, said he had heard indirectly that Von Papen, like Canaris, had secretly opposed Hitler's war policies.

Questioned by an assistant British prosecutor, G. D. Roberts, Gen. Lahousen denied knowledge of the murder of 50 R.A.F. fliers when they were recaptured after escaping from a German prison camp.

Little Effort to Dispute

Field Marshal Keitel's counsel, Otto Nelte, in a long series of questions made little effort to dispute Gen. Lahousen's damaging testimony of yesterday concerning the High Command's war prisoner policy, but sought to gain admissions from the former intelligence officer that he had sabotaged Germany's war effort and was thus a traitor.

Mother and 4 Children Burned, Dog Believed Upset Can of 'Gas'

St. Pierre, Man., Dec. 1 — (CP) —Trapped in a blazing farmhouse in the St. Pierre district, a mother and four of her children died early today while another son and daughter were severely burned when flames lashed through the premises.

The fire is believed to have started when Mrs. E. Gratton ignited gasoline fumes in the house with a coal oil lamp. The fumes are said to have originated when a dog upset a can of gasoline in the home.

The intensity of the flames aroused 18-year-old Marie Gratton and her brother Gean 15. Marie called to her other two brothers and two sisters who were asleep. Then, bursting through a wall of flame she smashed a window and jumped to the ground 2 storeys below. Gean followed his sister.

The other four children, confused by the smoke, ran downstairs into a blazing inferno from which they did not escape.

Marie, despite her burns, ran to the neighboring Ritchot farm for help. Mr. Ritchot went to the burning building but the flames were so intense he could not effect any rescue.

Both Marie and Gean were taken to St. Boniface Hospital where Marie's condition is reported as poor and Gean is fairly good.

St. Pierre is 30 miles southeast of Winnipeg.

Chelmsford, Ont., Dec. 1—(CP) —A 26-year-old mother and four of her children were burned to death last night when fire swept through their farm home in this village 16 miles north of Sudbury.

Mrs. M. Fletcher Killed Instantly Near Bayside

Suffering fatal injuries when struck down by a truck as she ran across the road at Bayside to catch a bus, Mrs. Margaret Fletcher, aged 65, Sidney township, was instantly killed shortly before eight o'clock Saturday morning.

According to police who investigated the accident Mrs. Fletcher ran across the highway to catch the Belleville bus when she was struck by a truck owned by the Belleville Engineering and Construction Company, 18 Gordon Street, and driven by L. H. White, Pinnacle Street. The truck was proceeding west.

Identification of the body was made at a preliminary inquest held at Cobley's Funeral Home, Trenton.

Born in Manchester, England, Mrs. Fletcher was the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. James McGuire. She moved four months ago from Belleville to Bayside. She was a member of the Baptist Church.

Surviving are her husband, Charles Henry Fletcher, one daughter, Mrs. Edgar Jones, Cayuga, and one son, John Fisher of Belleville.

Resting at the Belleville Burial Company Funeral Home; the funeral announcement is made elsewhere in this edition.

Rejects Plea For New Trial

Toronto, Dec. 1 — (CP)—Ontario Court of Appeal yesterday rejected the plea of Raymond Haggerty of Windsor for a new trial on a charge of attempting murder and robbery for which he was sentenced to 12 years in penitentiary.

"In our opinion this appeal should be dismissed," said the written judgment.

Haggarty and five other men, who have since been recaptured, escaped from the Essex county jail in Windsor about two weeks age. Haggerty surrendered to W. H. Vaughan, executive editor of the Windsor Daily Star, after he received assurance he would be given a lie detector test.

The test is not recognized by Canadian courts, but Attorney-General Leslie Blackwell of Ontario gave permission for Haggerty to take it. Haggerty now awaits the test.

In his appeal, Haggerty claimed he was in Welland, Ont., at the time of the robbery and shooting of Lucien Robinet, a Windsor grocer.

SHOTGUN AND SHELLS TAKEN FROM HOUSE

It may be a trifle late for the duck hunting season but one person in the city is getting prepared for the season when it again opens, according to complaints received at the local police station. J. Hillier, 393½ Front Street reported that a young man was staying overnight and when left alone in the house had disappeared with 12-gauge shotgun and a quantity of shells.

Damages amounting to approximately $35 resulted to the front end of a Toronto-owned automobile when at noon Friday, Leslie Leahy, Toronto was proceeding west on Dundas Street when his vehicle slid into a local Checker taxi which was parked along the curb.

HOUSEHOLDERS ADVISED TO WRAP GARBAGE

Just to avoid unneeded jamming of their "hard-toget" garbage pails, local householders are advised by the public works department to wrap their wet garbage in paper these cold days in order that they will empty more easily. With the coming of cold weather garbage will freeze to ice cold metal containers unless some sort of protective measures are taken. Old newspapers will do the trick, according to City Engineer Charles Mott.

Contributions for Seals Should be Mailed Direct to Committee

A warning that buying Tuberculosis Christmas seals from any source except the Christmas Seals Sales Committee in Belleville may mean that contribution may never reach the proper persons, has been issued by Mr. D. L. Storey, chairman of the Seal Committee which, he points out, has the sole right to sell Christmas Seals in this district.

Mr. Storey has issued this warning in view of the fact that he has received many letters returning Christmas Seals and saying the sender had bought from school children or some other person. Mr. Storey calls attention to the fact that no person has yet turned in any money to his office as receipts from seals he or she has sold, and no one has been authorized by the local committee to make such sales.

In past years Christmas Seals were sent to the schools from the National Sanitarium Association of Toronto and the children were asked to sell these. However, this year that Association has withdrawn from this territory in favor of the Belleville Seal Sale, and seals have been sent to every householder in this territory. Helpful as school children have been in the past they are specially requested not to duplicate the work of the Shrine Club this year since this is very confusing to everyone.

Mr. Storey states that to date $1,200.00 has been received at the Christmas Seal headquarters here in Belleville, which is an excellent start towards financing a tuberculosis program by means of a community wide x-ray survey in this community. Mr. Storey has a committee of three who take turns each day in assisting the secretary, Miss Nora Armstrong in taking care of the incoming mail and banking the money.

Christmas Trees Sell at Dollar On City Market

Christmas trees at $1 each appeared for the first time on the local produce market Saturday morning with three vendors each having large truck loads of young evergreens for sale. Vendors asked a general price of $1, although it was stated the odd smaller tree could be had at slightly lower price.

Farmer vendors and city customers had to be content with only one half of the usual space in the city market building as the room had been divided for decoration in readiness for the British Empire Dairy Show which opens on Tuesday.

Prices on the inside market held at previous levels with eggs bringing from 52 to 55 cents per dozen. Mediums were quoted at 50 cents and pullets at 45 cents the dozen. Fowl held at the usual 38 to 42 cents, with a few capons bringing up to $3 each.

The vegetable offering was slim with a few carrots and parsnips bringing the usual 50 cents per peck or slightly higher price for smaller quantities. Cauliflowers sold up to 30 cents while sauerkraut brought 15 cents the quart.

Early morning customers quickly bought up what apples were offered with vendors displaying only basket lots of McIntosh and Talman Sweets at 75 cents each.

Herring were the only fish offered, this type bringing 20 cents the pound.

A few farmers offered young pigs at the customary $6 to $7 each.

Three Minor Traffic Crashes Are Reported

Slippery condition of streets was indirectly responsible for three minor traffic accidents involving property damage which occurred Thursday afternoon.

A driver of a local taxi was turning his vehicle at a Front Street gasoline station when his auto became stalled in the snow. The car was put in reverse and the driver got out and shoved with the result the auto suddenly gained traction and crashed into the gasoline pump before it could be controlled. The pump was broken off at the base as result.

Morely Mason, Murney Street, driver for National Grocers, was driving east on Bridge Street intending to turn left onto Cedar Street when in applying his brakes to permit another vehicle to pass the vehicle skidded into another driven by Mark Vanner. Considerable fender and other damage resulted to both cars, while Mrs. Vanner, passenger in her husband's auto, received a cut knee and was shaken up.

Shortly before six o'clock Kenneth Nolan of Holloway was driving west on Victoria Ave. and while crossing the intersection at George Street was in collision with another auto being driven west by Ezra Mott. Mott was attempting to turn onto George Street when the accident occurred. Fender and radiator damage resulted to the two autos.

Two Machinists Retire From C.N.R.

Shopmen at the Canadian National Railways roundhouse at Belleville yesterday bid adieu to two of their fellow workmen when machinist John S. Pratt and assistant machinist Alfred E. Burley retired from the service to go on well-deserved pensions.

A native of Belleville, Mr. Burley was born in this city back in 1880 and started his service with the C.N.R. at the Belleville roundhouse as a machinist's assistant in 1918. Although due for retirement last May, he carried on with his job on account of wartime exigencies and after six months extended service officially retired on November 30th.

Mr. Pratt was born in Cornwall and came to Belleville as a machinist's helper in 1918. He too was due for retirement more than a year ago but carried on due to shortage of machinists in the roundhouse department.

Mr. Burley resides at 10 Donald Street in Belleville while Mr. Pratt lives in "Stoney Lonesome."

Tribute Paid to J.O. Herity On Occasion of His 25th Anniversary With C. of C.

Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer:

I would like to make a statement that I have never made before in public. Last March 9th, the citizens of Belleville gave Mr. Herity a testimonial banquet. At that banquet, one of the guests was Mr. Frank W. Collins, head of the Industrial Department of the Canadian Pacific Railway, not only in Canada but for the entire system throughout the world. He is a man of great administrative capacity. He stayed over night in our city and the next day I had luncheon with him and drove him to the station. He said to me that day, that Mr. J. O. Herity was one of the best, if not the best Industrial Commissioner in all Canada from coast to coast. Mr. Collins knows all the Industrial Commissioners in Canada and knows of their work.

You often hear unfavorable and uninformed criticism of Mr. Herity's work and his department, but I want to place just a few facts before you and they are absolute facts. Mr. Herity completed twenty-five years of service as Industrial Commissioner and Manager of the Chamber of Commerce on November 30th, 1945. Ten of those years were years of the greatest depression that Canada has ever seen. There was almost no industrial movement during that period, but Mr. Herity in the years of his engagement here has brought six industries that I wish to mention particularly. These are Corbin Lock Co. of Canada Ltd., Mead-Johnson of Canada Ltd., Swift Canadian Co. Ltd., Stephens-Adamson Manufacturing Co. of Canada Ltd., Consolidated Optical Co. Ltd., and the J. and J. Cash Incorporated.

Five of these industries are branches of great American Industrial organizations. One, the J. and J. Cash Inc., is British. Four of these firms are the greatest and largest in their class in the world. They are Corbin Lock Co., Consolidated Optical Co., Swift Canadian Co., and J. and J. Cash Inc. They are worth, at a very low valuation more than two million dollars annual payroll to the city of Belleville as a civic asset. Five of these six industries have important plans for expansion for the very near future. Corbin Lock Co. already have plans out that will increase their capacity by 100 per cent and preparation for the construction is already being made. They are already employing in the neighborhood of 265 hands and after expansion expect to employ 450-500 workers. Mead-Johnson Co. is also working on plans that will very substantially increase their capacity. Stephens-Adamson Co. is going to manufacture not only for themselves, but for two other huge American corporations which have become associated with them. Swift Canadian Co. have acquired another large area of land and are going to put in a poultry rearing plant which will require seven new buildings. The Consolidated Optical Co. is expected to expand considerably very soon.

It is the absolute truth that Mr. Herity had full charge of the negotiations which brought those six fine industries to Belleville. Their future is positive and certain. Their only movement will be to expand. Mr. Herity, by his work has given jobs to several thousand industrial workers. Last year the 54 industries of Belleville paid out over four million dollars in wages. Think what that means to the merchants, business men and professional men of Belleville. That alone is a grand record, but Mr. Herity was instrumental in bringing here a large group of smaller industries. The smaller ones will grow to be greater industries. Think also, of Belleville when our Industrial Commissioner took charge of the department twenty-five years ago. There were then only a few industries here that were struggling along. Look at Belleville now and the great industrial possibilities of the future. I am sure every citizen will join with me in paying tribute to Mr. Herity on his 25th anniversary as Industrial Commissioner.

Accused Found Not Guilty On One Charge Laid

Arraigned on five charges, one of fraudulently obtaining lodging at the Queen's Hotel and on four charges of passing worthless cheques on local business persons, Glenn R. Sommerville, Toronto, was found not guilty on the first charge when he appeared in city police court on Friday.

Argument between the Crown and defence counsel Malcolm Robb of this city took up most of the regular morning police court session and extended long into the afternoon following a recess for the noon hour.

Judgment on the four charges of passing worthless cheques was reserved by Magistrate T. Y. Wills until December 7th. Sommerville pleaded not guilty to all five of the charges.

Sommerville had registered at the Queen's Hotel October 14th. and had stayed until Oct. 24th. when he left without paying his bill, the court was told by the hotel desk clerk called as a Crown witness. Defence counsel Robb inferred however that Sommerville had made arrangements for later payment of the bill with a hotel clerk on the opposite shift and that therefore there was no intent to fraud.

Found Not Guilty.

The Crown had already closed the case for the prosecution before the above claim by defence counsel and as the chain of evidence against Sommerville was not complete, Magistrate Wills found the accused not guilty of the charge.

During the stay of the accused in Belleville he had passed worthless cheques at Lattimer's Drug Store, McIntosh Bros., the Uptown Billiards and at Walter Aselstine's Shell Service Station. He was arrested in Montreal and brought back to Belleville.

In defence the accused took the stand at the request of his counsel and claimed there was no intention of fraud in passing the cheques as he expected them to be paid from his share of his late father's estate.

Sommerville admitted he had previously issued cheques on his Toronto bank for which he had not sufficient funds and they had been paid by the executor's of his father's will from his share of the estate.

All the cheques except one passed by Sommerville in Belleville were drawn on a Toronto bank, from where, it was stated by the accused, his account had been transferred. The accused claimed the cheque passed at the Uptown Billiards was made out on a Belleville bank by mistake.

POLICE COURT

One year's suspended sentence was the punishment handed out by Magistrate T. Y. Wills in local police court Friday when Pte. Wilbur Carter, Belleville district, pleaded guilty of taking without the owner's permission a truck owned by Graham Dried Foods.

Carter, AWOL from the army for over a month, had been employed by Graham's and had taken the truck on two occasions before being apprehended by local police.

"This does not appear to be a very vicious case of car theft," commented Magistrate Wills as he passed sentence on the 19-year-old soldier. He was turned over to military escort from Kingston.

Two drunks paid the conventional $13 each, out of court while a Foxboro youth paid $7.50 for careless driving on a local downtown street. A fine of $4.50 and costs was levied against another motorist for operating his auto without a muffler.

Lorne Sanford, found guilty on a second offence drunk charge, was sentenced to one month "on the hill."

Arraigned on a charge of careless driving following an accident which occurred at the corner of Pinnacle Street and Victoria Ave., Clayton Hanna of this city had his case enlarged indefinitely pending bringing of a civil action.

Still Time to Join Odeon Movie Club

It is still not too late for local children to join the Odeon Movie Club which had its first meeting at the McCarthy Theatre last Saturday, according to Manager Willard Fawcett. Second meeting of the club will be held at the McCarthy Saturday morning when a Roy Rogers western will be featured.

Odeon Movie Club meetings can be attended only by members who must register. Free membership entitles them to club badges and certificates. Community singing, educational features, competitions and stage entertainment are part of the regular Saturday morning programs with the children themselves, through appointment of special committees, taking an active part in running the club.

Children may get their Odeon Movie Club registration cards by calling at the McCarthy Theatre.

Need for Govt. Transportation Controls on Rail, Trucking Problems Stressed by Speaker

The need for Federal and Provincial transportation controls as affecting the transport problems of the railroads and truckers was expressed in no uncertain terms to a combined membership of the four service clubs in Belleville when Mr. Frank Gaffney, transport economist of the Canadian National Railways, told of the competition which truckers are giving to the railroads.

Speaking to members of the local Rotary, Kiwanis, Y's-Men's and Kinsmen clubs at their annual inter-club meeting Mr. Gaffney showed how truckers within the past 20 years have invaded the transport field to take business away from the railroads by moving traffic bearing comparatively high rail rates while traffic which pays under four cents per ton mile is left entirely alone.

Trucks Can Cut Higher Rates.

"Although trucks can cut any rate that is paying over four cents per ton mile, under their present operating conditions they cannot touch traffic which pays the railways anything up to three cents per ton mile."

Despite the admission that trucks can cut the railways in the higher rail rate brackets, Mr. Gaffney claimed that this cheapness was only an apparent cheapness as actually the energy and manpower spent and the total cost of moving the traffic by truck is generally five times that which the railways would have spent.

Costs of the entire volume of traffic handled by the railways in Canada is under one cent per ton mile, but if railways were permitted to abandon their present principle of charging what the traffic can afford to pay and substitute a flat rate of one cent per ton mile on all traffics, every over-the-road truck in the Dominion would go out of business.

In the effort to meet this unequal competition the railways have been compelled to decrease rates on the profitable traffic improve service by the inauguration of pick-up and delivery services on traffic moving in certain areas and speed up handling and train movements.

Compares Costs.

The complete inability of Canada to get by with only truck transport was demonstrated by the speaker who claimed that if all transport in the Dominion were by truck every person would be engaged in transport.

For example he cited the case of east-bound freight through Belleville. A full-tonnage train consists of about 2,600 tons which to move takes a crew of five men. The locomotive will burn one-third of a ton of coal per mile at a cost of $2; the length of the train would be three quarters of a mile.

To move the same amount of freight by truck would require 520 trucks with an average load of five tons, utilizing 520 drivers. These trucks would consume 58 gallons of gasoline per mile, costing $15 and the truck caravan would be ten miles in length. If all traffic moved through Belleville by railway were to be moved by truck the operation of 12,000 trucks per day through the streets of this city would be necessary. This would be one truck every seven seconds throughout the 24-hour day.

Highways Are Costly.

Highways are far from being self-sustaining or of paying for their own construction through gasoline taxes and motor licences, according to the speaker. To provide the existing highways of Canada a total investment of one and one half billions was necessary. Fifty per cent of this was raised by floating bonds and $811,000,000 of the funded debt for highway purposes was still outstanding at the end of 1943, costing carrying charges of approximately four millions.

In view of the fact that the users of the highways are not fully paying for them, it was claimed by the speaker, who quoted investigating bodies in Canada and the United States, heavy commercial vehicles are not paying their full share. State reports borne out in Canada by Royal Commissions in Ontario and Nova Scotia recommend an increase of at least 100 per cent in licence fees for heavier class vehicles.

Low Rail Costs in Canada

With the possible exception of the United States, Canada at present has the lowest railway transportation costs in the world, but the costs of less than one cent per ton mile are arrived at by a sliding rate scale based on the principle of what each traffic can afford to pay rather than the actual cost of moving each commodity. Railway rates vary from one-half cent per ton miles charges for wheat, coal and other such commodities, while another commodity may pay as much as ten cents per ton mile.

Such a rate structure makes possible the movement of wheat to both seaboards so it may be sold on competitive world markets, and the movements of Nova Scotia and Alberta coal to Quebec and Ontario points. Such rates are controlled by the Board of Transport Commissioners whose decisions are naturally based on a national rather than local interest.

Says Truckers Want Only Profitable Hauls

Truckers are not concerned with maintaining cheap commodity or low export rates in the national interest but are only concerned with moving such traffic such distances as would pay profit.

"If we are to save this country the loss of many millions of dollars a year due to uneconomic operations of highway vehicles a different basis of regulation than that existing at present will be necessary," stated Mr. Gaffney.

"We know the truck is the economic carrier in the short field, while the railway is the cheaper carrier in the long haul. With this fundamental difference in ability to move traffic it would seem that regulation designed toward the utilization of each transport agency in its economic field would be in order."

"Through study of the transportation situation this country with adoption of a national transportation policy based on sound economics and fashioned to serve the needs of the country as a whole.... To ensure uniformity in this respect and to provide machinery for the control of interprovincial, international highway services some central appeal authority set up by the Dominion in collaboration with the provinces, and authorized to act as an appeal board, would be necessary."

Rails Basic Transportation.

In closing the speaker admitted the highway vehicle has a proper place in the country's economy, but claimed the railways, are, and must remain the basis transportation machine. Therefore proper co-ordination of the two mediums to the end that each performs the service for which it is best fitted, would be of national interest.

Kinsmen George O'Brien introduced the guest speaker with Kin Ted Follwell expressing the appreciation of members of the four service clubs.

As guest club for the evening, Kinsmen president Harry Rollins acted as chairman for the inter-club meeting and appointed song leaders from the four clubs to lead in a community sing song. Club theme songs were sung by members of the various clubs, while other musical entertainment included duet cornet numbers by Stan Wiggins and Jimmie Elliott while Miss Ethel Smith sang "Lonesome, That's All," and "My Hero," with Miss Leona Riggs at the piano. Leo Riggs acted as accompanist for the sing song period.

Expressing a welcome to the four service club members, ex-Mayor Harry Rollins told of his appreciation for the work of service clubs in the city. Money spent by service clubs in community service relieved the city of considerable responsibility. He felt that service club membership was a splendid training for men offering themselves for civic responsibility.

Obituary

ELI MYLES
(Belleville - Tweed)

Eli Myles died at his home, 83 Victoria Avenue, on Friday evening. He was in failing health during the past three years. For thirteen years he was engaged in the hardware business in Tweed, and prior to that time he was in the furniture and undertaking business in Walkerton and undertaking business in Hamilton. In 1940 he came to make his home in this city.

The late Mr. Myles, who was in his 75th year, was born at Walkerton, Ontario, and was a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Charles Myles. During his residence in Tweed Mr. Myles took an interest in municipal matters and served as a member of the village council for five years. He was a member of the United Church and fraternally he was a member of the Masonic Order; the Scottish Rite at Hamilton, and an associate member of the Hindoo Koosh of Hamilton. Old friends in Tweed, Hamilton and Walkerton will regret to learn of his death.

Surviving him are his wife, the former Millicent Hugill; one daughter, Mrs. Gerald A. (Freeda) Morton, Belleville; one son, Mr. C. H. Myles of Toronto; two brothers, Mr. William Myles of Bradwardine, Manitoba, and Mr. Jack Myles of South Porcupine, Ontario.

Resting at the Martin Funeral Home, Church St.; the funeral announcement is made in this issue.

MARSHALL WILLIAM GEROW

Marshall William Gerow, 51 Dundas Street east, died in the Belleville General Hospital early this morning after a brief illness.

Born in Prince Edward County the late Mr Gerow was in his 75th year and was a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Dave Gerow, Practically all his life was passed in this city and he was well known as a commercial fisherman. During the First Great War he went overseas in 1917 as a Drum Major in the bugle band of the 155th Battalion, and returned home in 1919. He was a member of the Army and Navy Veterans' Association. Fraternally he was a member Eureka Lodge No. 283 A.F. & A.M., and he was a parishioner of St. Thomas Anglican Church.

He was the last of a family of twelve children and is survived by his wife, the former Mattie Swenor; three sons, Harry of Kingston; Wesley of Belleville, and Eric of Brighton; two daughters, Mrs. Wesley Kiser, of Consecon, and Mrs. Arthur Fisher of Belleville.

Resting at the Martin Funeral Home, Church Street; the funeral announcement is made in this issue.

LATE MRS. M. E. STONEBURG
Carrying Place

The funeral of Mrs. Margaret Emily Stoneburg, wife of Mr. Merton Stoneburg, Carrying Place, took place from the Belleville Burial Company Funeral Home, Campbell Street, on Friday afternoon. The service in the chapel and at Carrying Place Cemetery was conducted by the Rev. E. A. Wicks, pastor of Grace Chapel. During the service a vocal solo, "Jesus Keep Me Near the Cross," was rendered by Mrs. Wicks.

The bearers were S.D. Wood, Everett Fitzgibbon, Charles Frost, W. M. Brook, William Hall and George Kerr all of whom are members of the Order of Oddfellows.

BRITISH PLANES ATTACK WITH BOMBS, ROCKETS

Thirteen Killed and 34 Wounded by Indonesian Guns

Batavia, Dec. 1 (AP)—British aircraft today attacked with bombs and rockets Indonesian guns which yesterday hurled 95 shells in the Ambarawa camp area where Allied refugees were gathered.

Thirteen persons were killed and 34 wounded by the Indonesian shelling. Among those killed were five British soldiers.

The British command announced earlier that fighting broke out again in Bandoeng yesterday between Dutch and Indonesian nationalists.

A press statement said six casualties were reported in the engagement on Juliana boulevard. A British ultimatum had ordered all Indonesians out of the northern half of Bandoeng, the summer capital 75 miles southeast of Batavia, by noon yesterday.

To the east in Ambarawa Indonesians shelled a civilian refugee camp killing eight and wounding 19, the British command said. The Indonesians were declared to be landing reinforcements on the south and east banks of a lake in that interior Java town.

Gestapo Officers Blame Hitler

Oslo, Dec. 1 (Reuters) — Nine Gestapo officers accused of the murder of one British and six Norwegian prisoners of war, crew of a Norwegian motor torpedo-boat captured by the Germans in 1943, said at the opening of their trial here yesterday that Hitler ordered the prisoners to be treated as saboteurs.

The accused, all of whom pleaded not guilty, are being tried by a mixed British and Norwegian military court.

The Gestapo is charged with claiming the prisoners as saboteurs, murdering them one by one and disposing of the bodies at sea by night.

TO INVESTIGATE SAILOR'S DEATH

Topeka, Kas., Dec. 1 (AP) — Gov. Andrew Schoeppel of Kansas has launched an investigation into the death of merchant seaman Rodney M. Sandborn, 23, whose body, the boy's father charged, was returned nude and mutilated and unattended from a hospital in Washington, D.C.

The father, Guy F. Sanborn, Wichita, Kas., said deep incisions had been made in the boy's skull and none of them had been sewed.

He said he had no information as to the cause od death except that he had been told it was the result of an accident on shipboard. Officials had refused to reveal the nature of the accident on the ground it was a military secret, he said.

Rawdon

Rawdon — On Wednesday evening November 21st the Young Married Class of Mount Pleasant Sunday School were entertained at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Carleton Potts. There were twenty-four in attendance and all enjoyed a round of games and talked over plans for the winter term. The class organized as follows: Presidents, Mr. and Mrs. Carleton Potts; Vice presidents, Mr. and Mrs. Don Campbell; Secretaries, Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Weaver; Treasurers, Mr. and Mrs. Raymond McConnell. Light refreshments were served at the close.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Andrews entertained Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Reid and family of Ivanhoe on Sunday.

On Sunday afternoon at Mount Pleasant Mrs. Bert Jeffs rendered a vocal solo.

Mr. George McCurdy of West Huntingdon purchased the Sharp farm on the fourth concession on Monday from Mr. John McMullen and he and his wife plan to reside there in the near future.

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Thrasher, Mr. and Mrs. Cyrus Summers and Mrs. Emma Summers attended a birthday party for Wayne Shaw on his seventh birthday at the home of his parents Mr. and Mrs. Milton Shaw, Ivanhoe, on Monday evening, November 19th.

Mrs. Allan Bailey received word of the death of her brother-in-law, Mr. Gilbert Jones at Winnipeg last week.

Mrs. James Watson is visiting Mr. and Mrs. Harry Watson at Burnbrae.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Andrews attended the funeral of Mr. Fred Holland at Marmora on Tuesday afternoon, November 27th. Deceased was almost eighty four years of age and he leaves to mourn, his wife, formerly Miss Mary Andrews.

Mrs. Marguerite McMullen and her brother Pte. Ray White spent the weekend with Miss Hilda Shaw at Bannockburn.

Mrs. Celestine Snarr and Mrs. German Sine spent a day last week with their sister Mrs. C. U. Heath.

Mrs. Ellen Sharp is on the sick list.

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Williams were pleasantly surprised on Friday evening when a group of 20 people from the Anson line gathered at their new home and tendered the newlyweds a house-warming. All enjoyed a round of games after which Mrs. Kenneth Weaver read an appropriate address. Mrs. Arthur Phillips presented the young couple with a small table and kitchen stool on behalf of the neighbors. Roy and Shirley thanked their friends for the gifts and their kindness in coming. A dainty lunch brought to a close a happy evening.

THE sacrifice of our fighting men made it possible for Canadians to enjoy the privacy and safety of their homes. Now, thousands of young Canadians who made that sacrifice are unable to find accommodation for themselves and their families.

This is an appeal to all who have available space in their homes to assist in the present housing emergency, by providing family accommodation for veterans. One, two or possibly three rooms during the coming winter will aid greatly in the re-establishment of one of our fighting men and his family. In addition, it will provide a steady source of income to you, for Canada's veterans are solid young Canadians who will meet their obligations and pay their rent regularly.

You are asked to make this accommodation available only during this period of emergency. Realistic steps are being taken to meet the housing shortage and the situation will be greatly improved by next spring.

Landlords,—all who have accommodation for rent, are asked to give preference to veterans and their families. It's the least we can do, when we remember all they have done for us.

MRS. HOUSEHOLDER, YOU CAN DO IT!

Many householders across Canada who have never rented before, are now opening their homes to veterans. Their experience is that these people are as responsible as the average civilian.

If you have space which you can make available, list it with the Citizens' Rehabilitation Committee, or the local branch of the Canadian Legion; advertise it in the newspapers or list it with a real-estate agent. Inquire at the nearest Rentals Office of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board about five months or less rental agreements. These are exempt from normal Wartime Prices and Trade Board non-eviction regulations, and five months tenancy will help many veterans through the winter.

Do Not Fail to Vote

Once again on Monday, Dec. 3rd., voters of Belleville have the duty and privilege of exercising their municipal franchise by casting ballots for the election of mayor and seven aldermen as well as four trustees for the Board of Education whom they wish to have represent them in civic and educational matters for the year 1946. The aldermen and trustees are to be elected for two years, the mayor for one year.

For several years stress has been laid on the need of a large turnout of voters in the municipal elections because these establish the bodies which conduct the affairs of the city and matters of education and touch the community very closely. The appeal for greater participation by the voters in the use of ballots was responded to and for the past two years there has been a larger number of votes cast than hitherto.

Candidates who have offered their services can logically expect a large number to vote so that there may be the fullest expression of the electors' wishes. The candidates are to be praised for their public spirit in their readiness to serve if it is the people's will. The voters will show their best appreciation of the candidates by polling as near as possible a full vote.

This year's election is the first peacetime civic election in years. Elections since 1938 have been under the shadow of war. Monday's elections are in the light of victory and peace.

By-Law on Sewage Disposal

Property owners of Belleville will vote on Monday on a by-law to borrow money for the establishment of a sewage disposal system.

Under the by-law the proposed plan is to construct a complete sewage treatment plant on the bay front on the easterly side of George Street.

The cost of the project is estimated at $367,000. It will be a unit system and if the city grows to require additional units these can be added.

Annual cost of the proposed undertaking is estimated as follows, maintenance and operation $11,000, debt charges over twenty years with debentures at 3%, about $24,670: a total of $35,670.

Estimated annual charges will be approximately three mills on the tax rate.

If the city council should decide that the plant should be turned over to the Public Utilities Commission for management, the matter would have to be submitted to a vote of the people as the council could not do so of its own authority. If the charges were collected from water users instead of in taxes from the citizens, the increase in water rates would, it is estimated, be about 70%.

Belleville's population has had a steady growth for many years and it is believed by the consulting engineer, William A. Storrie, that the population will not go back to any extent.

Among the points urged in favor of the undertaking are the avoidance of the possibility of contamination from the present outlet reaching the present source of the city's water supply. It is pointed out that the river and bathing beach have been closed to swimming for reasons of public health.

It has also been pointed out that whether the by-law is carried or not the municipality will have to take steps to prevent the overcrowding of sanitary sewers by roof and surface water.

It has been urged that there is possibility of Government action in the future to force municipalities to take steps for the treatment of sewage, the contention being that the city would be in a better position to go ahead if plans had been laid than if there had been no preparation.

Foster Ward can petition for a system of sewers whenever the residents express a wish to have them. Cost of such with pumping station to join with the proposed dispersal works would be $74,500. Foster Ward's connection with the disposal system is covered by the proposed system.

Similar projects are being planned in various places in Ontario. Of 93 schemes 53 are for sewage disposal works at an estimated total cost of 19 million dollars, the other 44 schemes are for waterworks plants.

Dr. G. S. Cronk, Medical Officer of Health, at the public meeting on Thursday evening expressed himself in favor of a sewage disposal system and referred to the importance of safeguarding the health of the people.

This is a very important matter and property owners who alone can vote on this money by-law should give it their serious and favorable consideration and should exercise their vote.

The owner of property can vote in every ward in which he or she owns property.

25 Years as Industrial Commissioner

A quarter of a century of service in the interests of the industrial expansion and the welfare of the city of Belleville as Industrial Commissioner and Manager of the Chamber of Commerce has just been completed by Mr. J. O. Herity. Into those twenty-five years he has put his energy, business acumen, faith, and devoted service as well as his fine gifts. This contribution to the healthy growth of the city has been clearly marked. A look back over that period will show how the city has developed in industry. Mayor Follwell in a letter in today's issue in tribute to Mr. Herity's tireless efforts on behalf of the development of the industrial life of Belleville has mentioned the happy position industrially in which the city finds itself, noting six major industries and remarking on the large number of smaller industries which have been brought to Belleville through the efforts of the Industrial Commissioner, the Chamber of Commerce and the Industrial Commission and the healthy state of the fifty-four industries now located here.

The Commissioner has always believed in a sound development industrially. What these plants have meant to Belleville in bringing in industrial workers and their families to become a part of this city is something of which any man might be proud. The Mayor notes that the wages paid last year in these plants totalled no less than four million dollars and that the efforts put forth in bringing industries have also brought hither new citizens of which the city is proud and to whom it owes much in every phase of the community's life.

This progress is a happy augury for the Belleville of the coming days. Proof of Mr. Herity's faith in this city can be seen on every hand and in every industry in which the city takes so much interest and pride. The reward of this confidence in the ability of this city to grow and become a figure in the industrial sphere is to see the great progress which has been made.

On this twenty-fifth anniversary of his work in the commissionership citizens will join with the Mayor in offering tribute to Mr. Herity's services and the achievements of the term during which he has labored for the growth of the city.

At the same time they extend their sympathy to him in his illness and wish him early recovery.

With Canada's Naturalists

Toronto, Dec. 1—(CP)—A root of the Christmas rose, sent from Vancouver to a Toronto naturalist some years ago, has flourished and now in December ber bloom with about two dozen flowers of waxy whiteness fringed with mauve. The plant, dormant all spring and summer, has its springtime in November and is at its best when snow is on the ground and all the rest of the flowers are withered.

It has thick, velvety leaves of dark green, spreading low over the ground, and the tulip-like blossoms stand erect above them. In Ontario gardens it has withstood temperatures close to zero without appreciable hurt.

There is a happy legend about this winter-blooming plant. A shepherdess, it relates, wept on that first Christmas morn because the earth was cold and bare and not a flower bloomed to welcome the heavenly Babe. An angel heard her distress, waved a hand, and a path from where she stood and all the way to Bethlehem, blossomed with these hardy flowers.

On a sweltering day of 1828, J. R. Poinsett, an American diplomat, made a discovery in a lonely valley of Mexico and forgot the heat in the excitement of it. As far as the eye could reach, vivid patches of scarlet stood out against foliage of restful green. Natives said the plant, so new to Poinsett, was an old friend they called Painted Leaf, and they wondered why the American dug up roots of the common plant so carefully.

Specimens were sent to botanists at Philadelphia and elsewhere. It was Professor Graham of the Botanical Gardens in Edinburgh, Scotland, who was so thrilled by its beauty that he suggested the name Poinsettia to honor the man who had found the plant of such outstanding brilliance. Now the most popular Yule decoration in North America, the annual crop of poinsettias has a value running into many millions of dollars.

In Japan, not far the centre of greatest havoc created by the atomic bomb, water-lilies were found still blooming in a drainage canal, blooming on healthy plants. This was one of the bits of evidence brought forward by investigating radiologists and other men of science when discrediting Japanese claims that residual radiation from the explosion had continued to exert a destructive effect on all forms of life.

Hamamelis virginiana — better known as witch hazel, is a tree which does not blossom in spring or summer, but waits until the fall, often in November Nor does the cold weather, even zero temperatures affect the flowers. They open without hurt. Not until a year later do the resulting seeds ripen. They are then shot from the pods with a distinct sound—sometimes as In Japan not far from centre is done to prevent 'crowding' of the parent shrub.

Capital Closeups

By JACK BRAYLEY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, Dec. 1 (CP)— History was written this week in a small wooden-panelled committee room in the parliament buildings but the chapters are temporarily under wraps.

Under the eye of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, looking down from a photograph hung over the room's iron fireplace, the Dominion and Provincial government leaders met for four days to start redrafting Dominion-Provincial economic relations.

A corps of parliamentary press gallery reporters re-inforced by newspapermen from cities across Canada, kept a long almost newsless vigil outside the door of the committee room in a quiet fourth floor corridor where meetings were held in secret.

They caught a glimpse of the conference room only when guards opened the door to allow a delegate to enter or leave. Inside, the conference table bore fresh green ink blotters bound in leather and at each place cards marking the names of Premiers —with Mr. King at the head of the table and flanked by the Provincial leaders in order of their age of membership in the confederation.

The reporters waylaid federal and provincial leaders as they came and went. They asked leading questions and they took note of those called to the meeting and used this material to speculate on what was being done inside.

Meanwhile, the Prime Minister, spokesman for the group, had a difficult but amusing time issuing his one-line, post-meeting, non-committal communiques at the end of each session.

He used the words "interesting" "satisfactory," and "profitable" in various combinations. The trite post-meeting statement became almost a game with Mr. King and the reporters. He would leave the room with a broad grin and would give the reporters a different version of his non-committal statement. Then he would join in the general laughter.

Thursday night when he came out of the room after the final meeting reporters circled him as usual and waited. The Prime Minister chuckled and then with a wink used his entire combination:

"It has been an increasingly interesting, satisfactory and profitable week."

Most of the Premiers had good reasons for getting back home this weekend after an absence from their capitals but perhaps the best came from Hon. Walter Jones of Prince Edward Island, the humorous philosopher.

A scientific agriculturist, Premier Jones has one of the most valuable holstein herds in Canada. And he wanted to be home in time to play "midwife" to one of his "fancy bred" cows.

Happy Birthday: Deafness prevented Senator Sir Allen Aylesworth from hearing many of the tributes paid him in the Upper Chamber on his 91st birthday this week but the man he nominated for Liberal party leadership leaned over his shoulder and wrote him a hearty greeting.

Second oldest member of the Senate, oldest Privy Councillor; Postmaster General, Labor Minister and Justice Minister in Laurier cabinets; commissioner for settling the Alaskan boundary in 1903, Sir Allen didn't get all the nice things said about him until he read the Senate official report the day after his birthday.

Busy Mr. King took time out from Dominion-Provincial conferences, cabinet meetings and commons sessions, to hunt up his nominator at the 1919 Ottawa convention. He finally located Sir Allen in the parliamentary restaurant eating roast beef and Yorkshire pudding.

Mr. King gave Sir Allen a firm handshake and then, leaning over the table, he wrote: "Hearty birthday greetings" on a paper napkin while the veteran parliamentarian nodded in appreciation.

The oldest Senator is Hon. E. D. Smith, also of Ontario. Senator Smith, a Progressive Conservative, served in the Commons from 1900 to 1909 and was summoned to the Senate in 1913. Sir Allen served in the Commons from 1905 to 1911 and went to the Senate in 1923.

COMMONS URGES

At best, he said, the system would be complicated and it would be an "awful" job to draw a distinction between classes in the community. The government would have to go slowly if it was going to avoid charges of discrimination.

The plan might be to put the farmers and fishermen on one side of the fence and everybody else on the other side. Then there probably would arise continual claims from those who felt they were on the wrong side, but that would have to be faced.

Mr. Ilsley promised consideration of a suggestion that employers deduct 100 per cent income tax at the source to relieve employees of the irksome job of making out returns, and also said the government was considering withdrawing the special tax consideration given married couples in cases where both husband and wife were working.

Suggests Amendment.

In the discussion on mining, Mr. Bradette said the future of mining operations would depend on the willingness of the government to grant depletion allowances.

Mr. Adamson suggested the resolution be amended to allow as a write-off everything spent in the first three years of operation of a mine. There was a move afoot to exclude Canadian goods from sterling areas and Canada would have more use for gold and base metals than ever before.

Mr. Case brought up the once widely-debated question of the gold standard and asked why Canada should not use gold as a monetary base, store it in vaults and use it as a basis for currency. The Dominion simply was using gold as a commodity and exporting it to the United States.

Mr. Ilsley said he did not think it would be a good thing to return to the gold standard as it was known between the two great wars because it was too rigid as a monetary base.

A REASONABLE AMOUNT OF EXPOSURE

A few grandmas, more daughterless aunts and a good many spinsters chide me for approving of bare knees or bare legs, and I could take it if they would confine the criticism to the hygienic side of the question. I can't take it and refuse to even discuss the question when they raise a moral issue. It is no part of my province to advise people, young or old, male or female, upon moral and legal questions. When I tell you it is okeh or harmless to leave off whatever you don't want to wear I mean, of course, so far as hygiene or health is concerned. I can't promise in any circumstance that you will not run afoul of the law or get your unladylike boldness on the program for the next meeting of the Sewing Circle.

There may be more truth than poetry in the aphorism ascribed to my namesake Diamond Jim: "Them as has 'em wears 'em."

But no kidding, this is a principle of hygiene, preservation of health, which applies to infants, boys, girls, youths, and mature men and women alike: The more one exposes the body and the more of the body one exposes to sunlight or daylight without suffering actual discomfort, in any season, climate or weather, the better for health.

A frequent objection raised by grandmas particularly is that it must be harmful to a girl's health if she goes bare legged or so thinly clad that her skin gets blue with the cold or shows goose pimples. We need not go into the details of Grandma's interpretation of the pathology of such exposure. I can only reassure the girl who gets blue from the cold or shows the characteristic goose pimples, that her health will not suffer in the least—it is absolutely okeh as long as she herself doesn't mind the discomfort.

Here let me quote once more the advice of a distinguished English psychologist, Leonard Hill:

"It is absurd to put on an overcoat when going out for a walk. It is good to go out and be braced by feeling cold and so be impelled to take vigorous exercise."

Between the lines of Hill's observation there is a whole chapter of good sound physiology and hygiene, important features of which I shall continue to harp on here until I become disabled by the rheumatiz or carried off by pneumonia.

One reason why everybody should take all the exposure he or she can comfortably obtain is that direct or diffuse sunshine, daylight even on a cloudy, rainy, foggy or cold day and even in a shaded place provided it is not behind ordinary window glass, contains more or less ultra-violet and a certain amount of ultra-violet is essential to activate cholesterol in the skin and manufacture vitaminD, which is refacture vitamin D, which is rephorus metabolism in the body. Without good calcium-phosphorus metabolism neither infant, nor growing child, nor youth, nor mature adult nor aged person can have the best of health.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Consult Your Attorney

Hasn't a man a right to be present while a doctor examines his wife? Or can he be made to sit in another room and wait in ignorance. (C. B. M.)

Answer—Ask your attorney about your "rights". A woman who is of age should have whoever she wishes present when she is undergoing examination, treatment, operation or delivery, and no one can question her right to do so.

Goat's Milk

Husband bought a goat and we are drinking the milk. Our children are fond of it. But I wonder if there is danger of getting any disease. (Mrs. O. O.)

Answer—If the goat is healthy and well cared for you are fortunate to have such excellent food. In many communities fresh goat's milk brings a premium price. I'd take it, raw, in preference to any grade of cow's milk, and not worry about the remote possibility of undulant (Malta) fever.

INFORMATION ROUNDUP

What is a honey guide?

The honey guide is a small bird native to parts of Africa and Asia and so named from its remarkable habit of leading men and animals to the nests of bees with a view of sharing in the spoils.

This bird, which is plain in plumage, has a bill somewhat like that of a sparrow and toes like those of a woodpecker.

Many travellers and naturalists report that the honey guide flits to and fro in the vicinity of human beings or animals and utters a harsh chatter to attract attention. When followed the bird flies from tree to tree until the bees' nest has been opened and the robber has withdrawn. Then the bird descends and feeds upon the honey and the grubs in the combs.

The honey guide has discovered that the ratel or "honey badger" is particularly fond of honey, and a strange partnership in crime is the result. Upon sighting a ratel the honey guide induces the animal to follow it to a bees' nest, which the bird itself cannot open and which the ratel would have difficulty in locating.

This extraordinary habit of the honey guide is known to many of the natives of Africa and they believe that misfortune and bad luck will befall anybody who does not leave a just share of the booty for the bird.

One should be on his guard against ascribing too much shrewdness and intelligence to the honey guide. The subject requires further observation and study. Nevertheless there is ample evidence to show that the antics and calls of the honey guide have the effect described.

That the bird is not a trustworthy guide to honey in all cases has been demonstrated. Not infrequently it mistakes a dog or other animal for the ratel, and it has been known to lead human beings to a snake or wild beast instead of a bee tree.

Because of this particular habit the genus to which this and related species belong has been named "Indicator."

REMAINS AGROUND

Quebec, Dec. 1 —(CP)— A 7,00-ton cargo ship, the S. S. Fort Douglas, which ran aground at Ile Aux Coudres, 50 miles below Quebec in the St. Lawrence river, remained aground yesterday. Unless efforts to free the vessel are successful within the next week, the ship probably will have to spend the winter on the island.

Miss Jinnie Fuller left on Friday for Toronto to visit her sister, Mrs. Vern Goyer and to see the Argonaut-Winnipeg match today.

In spite of stormy weather over 350 attended the spaghetti dinner held in St. Michael's School under the auspices of the Catholic Women's League. Mrs. T. Morrell and Mrs. T. Mascaro were conveners, assisted by the Italian ladies of the parish. In charge of the servers were Mrs. McIntyre, Mrs. Hudon and Mrs. O'Connor. The C.W.L. was sorry to have to turn away so many people but hopes to accommodate them at a future dinner.

WEDDINGS

HOLDEN-McMASTER

At high noon on Nov. 24th, Della Irene McMaster, Ivanhoe, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George McMaster, became the bride of Harold Francis Holden, West Huntingdon, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Holden, in West Huntingdon United Church. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Mr. Everson, assisted by Mr. Kenneth Stewart. Wedding music was played by Miss Muriel Thompson. During the signing of the register Mrs. Edward Colden san "Until." The ceremony was performed under an arch decorated with pink and white bows against a background of green plants.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore white chiffon rayon sheer with bishop sleeves and fingertip veil. Her only ornaments were the groom's gifts, a strand of pearls with matching earrings. She carried a bouquet of red roses. Miss Jane Gay was the bride's only attendant, gowned in pale blue sheer trimmed with silver sequins and a shoulder length veil. She carried a bouquet of pink carnations.

The groom was attended by his brother, Orval Holden, Belleville, while the ushers were Roy Chambers, Halloway, and Earl McMaster, Ivanhoe.

The bride's gift to the soloist was a wall plaque, and to the bridesmaid and pianist, cups and saucers.

The reception was held at the Bar B-Q Tavern for 35 guests. The bride's mother received in hunter's green with brown accessories and a corsage of yellow mums. She was assisted by the groom's mother who wore spruce green with black accessories and a corsage of yellow mums.

For the wedding trip to Toronto, London and St. Thomas, the bride donned a gold wool dress with brown accessories. On their return the couple will reside near Minto.

Out-of-town guests were present from Belleville, Malone, Napanee, Harold, Halloway, Ivanhoe and West Huntingdon.

BARNUM-KERR

Marmora (Special) — The marriage was solemnized in St. Paul's Anglican Church, Marmora, at 6.30 p.m. on Wednesday, November 28th of Marion Kathleen Kerr, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Kerr, Marmora, and Lance Corporal John Douglas Barnum, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lorne Barnum of Petherick's Corners. The rector Rev. J. M. Brownlie performed the ceremony in the presence of a large congregation. White and pink chrysanthemums adorned the altar. Wedding music was played by the organist, Mrs. L. R. Rundle, and during the signing of the register, Miss Muriel Barnum sang "O Promise Me" with Mr. Bruce Barnum accompanying on the organ.

Given in marriage by her father the bride was wearing a floor-length gown of white chiffon over satin with fingertip veil of net. She carried a bouquet of Briarcliff roses and fern.

Miss Margeret Kerr was her sister's bridesmaid wearing a floor-length dress of blue chiffon with matching shoulder-length veil and carrying a bouquet of Briarcliff roses and fern.

Mr. Roy Southworth of Petherick's Corners was groomsman. The ushers were Roy Smith of Marmora and Gerald Barnum of Petherick's Corners.

Following the ceremony a reception was held in St. Paul's parish hall with eighty guests present. The bride's mother wore Powder blue with navy accessories. The groom's mother wore brown. St. Paul's Ladies' Guild catered.

The couple left on a short honeymoon following which they will take up residence at Campbellford. The bride's travelling costume was pale blue with navy accessories.

Out-of-town guests included Mr. John Robson, Miss Minnie Robson, Miss Marion Robson, and Mr. and Mrs. Harry Robson,; Port Hope; Mrs. M. Howe, Oshawa; Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Morrison, Stirling; Mr. and Mrs. A. Maynes, Tweed; Mr. and Mrs. George Devolin, Madoc; Mr. and Mrs. Lorne Ash and daughter Frieda, Foxboro; Private and Mrs. Tom Smith, Kingston; Mr. and Mrs. Lorne Barnum, Mr. and Mrs. Roy Southworth and Mr. Gerald Barnum, Petherick's Corners; Mr. and Mrs. Harry Watson, Rev. P. J. Lambert and Mr. Stewart Haig, Campbellford; Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Barnum, Mr. Bruce Barnum and Miss Muriel Barnum, Bonarlaw.

Women's Activities

MARMORA C.W.L.

The November meeting of the Catholic Women's League was held in Sacred Heart School on Wednesday evening, November 27th with a good attendance. The president, Mrs. E. D. O'Connor occupied the chair.

Rev. H. J. Farrell addressed the meeting thanking the members for their assistance and co-operation during the recent bazaar. He also spoke of plans for building a parish hall in the not too distant future. He spoke on the rehabilitation of the men returning from overseas, and spoke of the conditions of the world today, and of the starving people of Europe who deserve our charity, urging the members to do everything possible in assisting them.

Mrs. S. A. Stevens gave a reading entitled "Ireland's Queen" followed by two songs by Rev. Father Farrell "My Little Gray Home in the West" and "An Irish Lullaby" with Mrs. J. Black as accompanist.

It was decided that the money received from the collections at the meetings be put in a fund for purchasing new china and silverware.

The president passed around tickets to each member to be sold on a draw for a fur coat and other valuable prizes, proceeds to be used for post war expansion and charitable funds by the Catholic Women's League of Canada.

A few games of bingo were played and refreshments were served by the ladies in charge.

THOMASBURG W. M. S.

Thomasburg—The November meeting of Thomasburg United Church Women's Missionary Society was held in the vestry on the afternoon of the 13th with a fair attendance and three visitors. The president Mrs. J. E. Bateman opened the meeting.

The report of the nominating committee was presented.

Lantern slides showing interesting scenes of Africa and her people were much enjoyed.

Popular Member Of W.I. Conducts District Rally

Mrs. Clarence Hays on the lecturing staff of the W. I. recently conducted one of the most successful rallies for some time in the front road church, Thurlow, when Quinte Branch welcomed all visiting institutes to the district rally for Hastings East.

Mrs. Hays chose for her subject, "The Responsibilities of Standing Committees." Each meeting of local institutes should be a training school for officers, each member has important duties and responsibilities for some day they may be an officer. W.I. women must be more efficient, with a basic purpose to make the institute strong with a goal to achieve. Divide the work among all groups and scatter the interest.

Careful Selection.

A convener of all standing committees should be chosen by a nominating committee who should make a very careful selection, one who should know all about her job not for just one month in the year but twelve. This convener should have eyes, ears and minds open and alive to all opportunities. Knowledge kindles interest, interest kindles leadership. The object or task of each W.I. member should be to discover or develop, strong, intelligent, disciplined leaders who can express themselves in public and anything accomplished requires work.

As all districts had been deprived of a fall area convention, Mrs. Bunnett explained some changes arising from the area executive that each institute convener (after current events) be given two minutes at each monthly meeting for one item of interest along her line of office. Mrs. Hays and Mrs. Bunnett brought greetings from Miss Lewis the new Ontario W.I. superintendent, also from Mrs. H. Summers president F.W.I.O. who wished all institutes to make a Tweedsmuir Village history book. Lady Tweedsmuir's deep interest in the work of the Women's Institute, by suggesting that all local branches undertake the compilation of a local history book in the same manner as they are being compiled in England and Scotland. It must be borne in mind a community is just as high as the standards of its people. The ideal institute is as a mother to the community; your community is your responsibility.

Motto,—"For Home and Country"

There are 1250 branches of the Women's Institute in Ontario with a membership nearing 40,000 The 50th anniversary is in 1947. Mrs. Summers asks that there be 50,000 members on the 50th birthday.

At twelve o'clock all were invited to the dinner hall where a full course steaming dinner was served to the visitors. During the afternoon session Mrs. F. Haight sang a beautiful solo.

As Mrs. Clarence Hays was dealing with the afternoon topic, tension ran high when it was whispered around that two noted artists were in the audience, the first lady very willingly drew a picture and the speaker drew attention to this most wonderful picture what do (you) mean to your institute. This was followed by the second lady coming to the platform and sketching a (a home) in a remote valley. The speaker very ably dwelt with the W.I. members' task to make a home out of a rustic house.

At four o'clock the afternoon session closed with a vote of thanks to Mrs. Hays of the lecturing staff, Toronto, also the Quinte ladies for the wonderful banquet at noon and the welcome to all.

Advice to the Lovelorn

Jealousy Well Named the Green-Eyed Monster

People whose lives have been wrecked by jealousy often write to this column and ask the cause of this passion, the root of so much human tragedy. The briefest summary of jealousy is—fear, suspicion, resentment arising from mistrust of another.

The latest of these blind frenzies which doubtless you've read about in the papers comes from the West Coast. It includes murder, suicide, the disrupted home life of three children, stigmatized for life, the broken home of a soldier and a woman in a prison cell moaning that it was all a mistake.

The woman who caused the ruin of so many lives is 45 years of age and was once regarded as a beauty. She saw her husband in a motor with another woman, and without stopping to inquire the cause of their being together, made an appointment with the "other woman" and shot and mortally wounded her. Then the all-too-simple explanations came out. The woman's husband, a physician, had taken a hospital nurse on an emergency call, and, seeing them together, the wife went jealously-mad.

With her dying breath, the nurse assured her that she and the physician were hurrying to an emergency case, with someone's life hanging in the balance. The wife then drove the mortally wounded nurse to a hospital, where she died. And the wife whose jealous frenzies had subsided began to call for her husband. Why wasn't he there; why wouldn't he come to her? She wanted to explain.

But her husband was beyond explanation. He was dead in his car, slumped over from the poison he had taken, unable to face the tragedy his wife's insane jealousy had brought upon him, his three children and the soldier-husband of the nurse serving overseas.

It's easy enough to demoralize. Why did the woman, apparently sane in normal times let jealous madness wreck her mind? Why didn't she stop to think of her children, her husband's career, the dead woman and the soldier-husband who is now here from overseas, and who weeps inconsolably as he thinks of the Christmas he and his wife had planned to spend together? Well named the green-eyed monster is jealousy.

Ladies' Aid Emmanuel Ch. Holds Bazaar

The Ladies' Aid of Emmanuel Church was indeed in the spirit of Christmas, Friday afternoon on the occasion of a bazaar and tea.

The mysterious packages in the sawdust tub and the pretty articles on the fancy work table along with the home cooking table contributed much to the Yuletide season.

The room was very colorful with its attractive booths.

The fancy work booth under the supervision of Mrs. F. Camken, also convener of the bazaar, had for its color scheme, green and white streamers with silver icicles.

The homecooking booth with its tempting and inviting appearance was adorned with red and white steamers and silver icicles and was under the supervision of Mrs. J. Gannon.

In charge of the sawdust tub which was very pretty under an arch of red and green streamers was Mrs. J. Rigby.

The plant booth with its green foliage was very attractive in its setting of red and white streamers.

Receiving the guests and inviting them into the tea room was Mrs. T. S. Russell.

The tea room was very attractive. The head table presented a pretty picture with its ivory lace cloth and cut glass centrepiece with russet and yellow mums and its tall turquoise tapers in silver candelabra, grouped around were smaller tables very attractively decorated with baby mums in silver vases.

Presiding at the tea table were Mrs. F. Gymer, Mrs. W. J. Andrews and Mrs. A. W. Carmichael.

Acting at serviteurs were, Mrs. F. Bartropp who is visiting here from Montreal, Miss Shirley Bunnett one of the younger ladies of the church and Mrs. H. Irvine.

Replenishing the tables were Mrs. E. Bell and Mrs. J. Fuller.

After a most pleasant afternoon the treasurer, Mrs. F. Weese reported gratifying results.

Fashion Flashes

CAREER GIRLS usually like soft, but uncluttered frocks of good material. Such a model is in a fine wool crepe in beige made with high, softly-cowled neckline, two brown alligator buttons on one shoulder and a slim alligator belt. Two slanting pockets in skirt.

The emphasis is on luxury for evening wear. Guaranteed to make a beautiful dinner dress out of a long, slim skirt is a jacket of gold faille heavily embroidered with red beads in an intricate pattern. Jacket is made with softly-rising neckline and deep, flaring peplum.

What goes on under the fur coat these wonderful evenings? Well, for one thing, that satin suit is very much seen, usually in black or brown, but lately in navy. Usually the suit is simply fashioned and worn with black lace or pink chiffon rather than with a glitter blouse.

In keeping with the luxury look, gloves are nicer than ever. An attractive glove is of black suede, a six-button model with a full ruching of black satin around the cuff, and up the side. It is trimmed with three jet buttons.

There are so many colorful hair ornaments that it is sometimes difficult to make a choice. Nice for evening, though, is a comb on which is mounted a small bird from which pastel colored plumes swirl out and up.

The right type looks very well in those tightly-veiled, round crowned, curved brimmed bowlers. Nice in winter-white, and very, very grand in ermine, with narrow black crown band studded with tiny gilt nailheads.

THANKS!

The management of Superior Dry Cleaners Limited on this, our 10th. Anniversary, desire to thank all our customers for their patronage.

While our service during the trying war years was not as satisfactory as we would have desired we are proud of the fact that thousands of our personnel got their cleaning requirements done at half price. And also of the fact that we have been able to re-establish five of them on their return to civilian life.

Exercise Your Franchise in Civic Elections

THE ONTARIO INTELLIGENCER PRESENTS FOR THE BENEFIT OF ITS READERS THE FOLLOWING INFORMATION ON THE CANDIDATES FOR THE VARIOUS ELECTIVE OFFICES:

For Mayor

Frank S. Follwell

The present mayor of the city might claim Belleville as his native city because he came to Belleville when he was only three months old and has continuously resided in this community. He was educated in the Public Schools, the Collegiate Institute and then entered Queens to take up medicine but changed his mind and entered the employment of the C.N.R. as brakeman and stayed with the company for three years. Entering business he has become a merchant of the city having purchased the St. Charles Motor Car Supply. He entered municipal life and served on the council for four years before becoming Mayor last year. He has served on many chairmanships of the council and also on the Ration Board. Fraternally he is a member of the Masonic Order and the Royal Arch Mason having accepted office in both these lodges. He is a member of Christ Church.

Jamieson E. Bone

An ex-Mayor of the city, Jamieson E. Bone, is again contesting the Mayoralty. He came to Belleville as a young man and entered the banking business and served in several branches both in Eastern and Western Ontario. He later left the bank and went into the brokerage business and from there to the Insurance Brokerage business. He is keenly interested in the Ratepayers Association and has served as president of the Ontario association and is at present president of the Dominion body. Always taking a keen interest in municipal affairs, Mr. Bone served a term in 1919 and then later became Mayor of the city. He is past president of the Rotary Club and a member of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church.

For Aldermen

H. John Allin

"Jack" Allin as he is familiarly known in the city has been a resident of Belleville for some years and has taken an active interest in the municipal life of the city. He has served for a number of years on the City Council and for eight years was a member of the Board of Education and honored by the members by being elected chairman of that organization. He instituted the "fee" system for text books during his period on the Board. Mr. Allin was born in Bowmanville and took a course of mechanical engineering at Central Tech in Toronto. At the present time he is mechanical superintendent at the Stewart-Warner Alemite Corporation of Canada plant and has been associated with the plant for nearly twenty years. Jack also has an interest in the Superior Cleaners and takes an active interest in all community enterprises. He is a member of Bridge Street United Church.

Jule Bentley

Mr. Bentley, a native of Hastings County and resident in Belleville for many years is again offering himself as Alderman for the ensuing year. He came to Belleville 22 years ago and for some years operated a taxi business in the city. During the war years he entered the Consolidated Optical Company for war work duty and has remained an employee of the firm ever since. He is a member of Christ Church.

Charles Edward Brown

A native of Belleville, Charles Edward Brown is seeking municipal office for the first time. After receiving his early and high school education in the city, Mr. Brown joined the Ontario Hydro Power Commission and has been with that organization for the past 22 years and now holds the position of load supervisor. He has taken a keen interest in Boy Scout work and is associated with the movement in this city. He is married and has two children and resides at 288 Dufferin Avenue.

E. Ormonde Butler

A successful barrister in Belleville Ormonde Butler has served in the council for the past six years and has occupied the chairmanship of Market and City Property for three years until last year when he was chairman of Printing and Stationery. Ormonde studied law at Osgoode Hall and was admitted to the Bar in 1931. He practiced law with his late father, Magistrate E. J. Butler and was associated with B. C. Donnan, Crown Attorney for some time before entering business by himself in 1938. He was born in Belleville and with the exception of his University life has lived his entire life in this city. He is a member of the Kiwanis Club and the Knights of Columbus and St. Michael's Church.

Fred G. Chamberlain

Mr. Chamberlain at present an Alderman in the city council has resided but sixteen years of his life outside this city in which he was born. He was associated with the Grand Trunk Railway as an accountant during his sojourn from the city and on his return was employed with the Springer Lock Company now the Corbin Lock Company. He was associated with the latter firm as secretary treasurer. He acted as city auditor from 1929 to 1941 and at present is in business for himself as an accountant. Fred is a member of the Masonic Order and an active member of Fair Board for many years, serving at one time as its treasurer. He has served three years on the City Council and is a member of Christ Church.

Robert J. Graham

Born in this city and a former member of the City Council, Robert J. Graham is again seeking election to the city council. Bob's tenure of office in the council was interrupted, when he signed up to fight for democracy and he served with distinction on many fronts and was awarded the D. S. O. for gallantry. He was born in Belleville and received all of his education in this city. Bob is well known in the city and since his return from overseas has again joined his father in business.

William Harvey

At present an agent for general insurance William Harvey is a retired C.N.R. Shop man serving thirty-five years in that capacity in this terminal. He is one of the veterans in the municipal life of the city having served for eighteen years on the Board of Education and was honored as chairman for one term. He has served nine years in the council and has handled many chairmanships of that body. A member of the Masonic Order and other organizations Mr. Harvey is well known throughout the city. He is a member of the Baptist Church.

Charles L. Hyde

A native of Sidney Township, Charlie Hyde attended Belleville High School and Ontario Business College and is again offering himself as Alderman, having served 3 consecutive years in the City Council, after having served lengthy terms as Alderman and as a member of the Board of Education. Mr. Hyde has been in plumbing business practically all his life, serving as an apprentice in this city, later entering business for himself 22 years ago. Fraternally Mr. Hyde is a member of the Masonic Order, The Loyal Orange Lodge and the Order of the Eastern Star. He is also a member of the Belleville Lawn Bowling Club and Bridge Street United Church.

James Lazenby

A worker for the veterans and prominent in the Army and Navy Veterans Association, James Lazenby is seeking election for the first time. He was born in England and came to Canada 32 years ago and joined the old Grand Trunk Railway and has been employed with them excepting for a break when he served in the First Great War. Returning home he was stationed at Kingston and thirteen years ago came to Belleville. He has served as president of the Army and Navy Association and for some eight years was secretary of the Association.

Charles McKenzie

This is the second venture for Mr. McKenzie in the Aldermanic field. He is a young businessman of the city being associated with his father in the egg and hatchery business. Prevented from going overseas due to a medical category, Charlie has taken an interest in military affairs being a member of the Argyll Light Infantry (Tank) regiment and is now Troop Sergeant Major. He came to Belleville 20 years ago and attended the public schools of the city and Belleville Collegiate Institute.

Clare (Mike) Ridley

Born in Belleville, Clare Ridley is again seeking election as Alderman for the city. He is a sports enthusiast taking an active interest in tennis and figure skating but being a lover of all recreation. He is employed by the Reliance Industries, Limited, and is interested in labor organizations, being president of Local 426 of the United Automobile Workers. He resides at 43 Bridge St., West.

Claude D. Tice

A native of Hastings County, Mr. Tice is again offering his services as Alderman for the ensuing year. After receiving his early education in this district and at Cobourg Collegiate, and University, he went west, living in that part of the Dominion until the outbreak of the war when he came east to enlist and proceed overseas. After returning to Canada, he came to Belleville and for the past twenty-three years has been employed with the Ontario Intelligencer serving as Sports Editor and for the past number of years as City Editor. Mr. Tice is a member of the Masonic Order and St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, also a member of the executive of the Belleville Lawn Bowling Club, the Belleville Bridge Club and also a member of veteran organizations in the city.

Newton Wilbur

Recently elected president of the Kinsmen Club, Newton Wilbur is seeking his third term as Alderman for the city. He is manager of the Tip Top Tailors Shop and has spent thirty-four of his 41 years in this city. Newton is a member of the Masonic Order and takes a very active interest in the Kinsmen Club, having served as chairman of various committees in the club and as a director. He is a member of Bridge Street United Church.

Everett Wood

Mr. Wood is again standing for election as Alderman, having entered the contest last year. He is a native of Prince Edward County and came to this city eighteen years ago to enter the service station and garage business. A member of Bridge Street United Church he has taken an active interest in fraternal organizations being a member of the Masonic Order and past principal of the Royal Arch Masons. He resides at 21 Jane Street.

For Board of Education

Enos David

A native of the New Liskeard district of Northern Ontario, Mr. Enos David is well known in local business circles, being manager of David's Radio and Electrical Appliance store on Front Street. Formerly in business at Timmins, Cochrane and in the London, Ontario district, Mr. David came to Belleville five and one half years ago to set up business at his present site. Although offering himself for Board of Education for the first time, Mr. David has very definite views on educational matters and rates health as one of the most important phases of youth training. Mr. David is an active member of the Belleville Rotary Club.

Hiram B. Fetterly

A lifetime of experience as an educationist is offered by Mr. Hiram B. Fetterly as a candidate for re-election as member of the Board of Education. Now retired from active work as a teacher, Mr. Fetterly has had 14 years experience as a high school teacher at Cornwall High School, including several years as principal, previous to that period he had taught public school and from the period 1930 to 1934 was principal of the Ontario School for the Deaf at Belleville. He also acted as public school inspector for Dundas County.

Born at Cornwall he was educated at public and high schools in that city and after receiving his M. A. at Queen's University, launched upon his long career as an educationist. He came to Belleville in 1930 to accept the principalship of the O.S.D. and since has lived in this city. He is offering himself for his tenth term as member of the Board of Education.

Mr. Fetterly's interest in educational matters extends outside the Belleville district, he being for many years a member of the Association of Public School Trustees and Ratepayers and was recently elected to the presidency of that body. He is a member of the Masonic Order and Loyal Orange Lodge and also of Bridge Street United Church.

Alex Nathan

Although a newcomer to civic life in Belleville Alex "Red" Nathan has taken an active interest in community work since his coming to Belleville district approximately fifteen years ago. Born in England, Mr. Nathan came to Canada in 1927 and has lived in the Belleville district since 1930. Service manager at Baragar's Tire Shop on Front Street, Alex has held that position for two and one half years. Prior to that he was with Bata Shoe Company at Batawa. Active in service club work, Alex is secretary of the local Rotary Club and his interest in education is evidenced through his association with the Queen Mary Home and School Club as secretary. A family man, Mr. Nathan is married with three children.

Harold C. Seldon

Another civic spirited local resident offering himself as candidate for the Board of Education for the first time, Mr. Harold C. Seldon is a well-known druggist of this city who has lived in Belleville since 1934.

Born in Whitby, Ontario, he took his early education there and graduated from the Ontario College of Pharmacy in 1927 and worked as a druggist in Toronto for some years before coming to Belleville eleven years ago when he purchased the former Don. G. Bleecker drug business on Front Street.

Member of the Belleville Kiwanis Club and former director of that organization, Mr. Seldon took especial interest in air raid precautionary work during the war years and acted as head of the local organization. He is an ardent sailing enthusiast and became closely interested in local educational matters following a night school course in woodworking at the local collegiate. A resident of Bleecker Ave., Mr. Seldon is married with two children and is a member of Bridge Street United Church.

B. C. Sisler

A member of the Board of Education and chairman of that body in 1942, Lt. Col. B. C. Sisler is again offering himself for re-election as a board member.

Born in North York Township shortly before the turn of the century, Mr. Sisler is manager of the local Dominion Bank and has been in Belleville for the past twelve years. He was first appointed as member of the Board of Education when that body was composed of 21 members.

A banker for 32 years, which period was broken by a four-and-one-half year term spent in the Canadian Army during the First Great War. He won his commission on the battle field and has since continued his interest in military matters, being commanding officer of the local Argyll Light Infantry. Interested in youth training, he is district governor of the Boy Scout movement and is one of the charter members of the Kinsmen Club being a member of the first Kinsmen club organized in Hamilton more than 25 years ago. He is a member of the Masonic Order and also of Bridge Street United Church.

Miss Josephine Tickell

First woman to offer herself as candidate for Board of Education in recent years, Miss Josephine Tickell has seventeen years' high school teaching experience upon which to form her opinions on educational matters. Miss Tickell was born in Belleville and is a graduate of Toronto University. She taught high school at Picton, Pembroke, Kingston and Simcoe and for the past seven years has lived retired in the city.

But although retired from active work as a teacher, Miss Tickell has interested herself in many ways in women's organizations in the city. She is treasurer of the local Humane Society and is secretary of the Belleville Branch of the Red Cross and is also Red Cross representative from the Belleville district on the executive on the Ontario division of that organization. She is a member of Bridge Street United Church.

Veterans Needs Of Housing Are Very Great

The urgency of veterans' needs for adequate, reasonably-priced living accommodations cannot be too greatly stressed, the Rehabilitation Information Committee declares. In hundreds, even thousands, of cases lack of such accommodations is seriously affecting the rehabilitation of ex-servicemen and women. It is impossible for a man to readjust himself satisfactorily to civilian life when there is the constant worry of where he and his family will be sleeping during the winter, it is stated. Men who served up to six years in the armed services sometimes find it somewhat difficult to accept the fact that housing facilities are in short supply. For one thing, they have, during their period in uniform, always been supplied with either a roof or a shovel with which to dig a habitation. For another, they know that there are many spare rooms, even entire attics, which householders are not occupying.

Home Owner Protected

From the point of view of the home owner, it is sometimes less than agreeable to have strangers in the house. In a number of instances, people to whom rooms were rented did not behave with the best possible grace. The result is that many ratepayers do not feel inclined to expose themselves to such conditions.

The present situation, however, has reached emergency proportions, says the Rehabilitation Committee. It is now imperative that Canadians who remained at home lend all possible assistance in providing shelter for those who travelled across half-a-dozen countries in order to keep the war far removed from Canada.

When it is realized that so long as a lease is not drawn up for a period of longer than five months—provided that such a lease is the first entered into in a twelve-month period—the householder can take eviction proceedings against an undesirable tenant, much of the fear of renting rooms will be removed.

But the basic fact is that living space is imperatively required for returned soldiers, sailors and airmen; it is up to Canadians to "Be A Good Neighbor. Rent to A Veteran."

TORONTO RINKS QUALIFY

Oshawa, Dec. 1 — (CP) — Two Toronto rinks qualified for the finals in play for the R. S. McLaughlin Trophy at the Oshawa Bonspiel yesterday. Bert Kennedy's Royal Canadians gained one final bracket by defeating Hamilton Thistles, skipped by A. Ross Tarlton, 12-6, and C.R. Redfern's Victorias took a 12-8 verdict over H. Howard's Toronto Granites in the other semi-final.

Canned Fruit in Plenty For Methodist Minister

(By H. P. A. in Windsor Star)

Every fall when I went with ad and Mother and my small ister to the annual donation arty given for the pastor of the Morenci Methodist church, I used wonder how the family could t so much canned fruit and so many pickles of all sorts and varieties as one would see displayed n the church parlor before the ig supper which was, for me, he main feature of the party.

Today, what with wartime su ar shortages, I would be frankly nvious of anybody who had that much canned fruit. But it was dif erent 50 years back in my home own where we were pretty much n the pie belt and expected pie r something along the rich pud ing line for dinner and supper. And on the days when Mother would give us cookies or cake and ome-canned peaches for dessert t supper time, both Dad and I would feel cheated, and Mother would usually apologize and tell ow busy she had been all day. Possibly it was different at the Methodist parsonage, I thought.

And it was a fact that Methodist ministers were different than he rest of us. For one thing, they ad no settled homes. Back of the arsonage at Morenci one always aw strongly made crates and oxes piled up, just waiting for he family to move to another harge in conformity with the Conference rule of those days which did not allow ministers to tay in one place more than two ears.

For another thing Methodist ministers who served small towns n those days had little money, mainly because there wasn't a reat deal of money among mem ers of their congregations. Plenty of men in Morenci raised families on wages of a dollar a day with a few plutocrats making as much as $10 to $12 a week. There were some rich men, of course, for that is always true of any age and time.

Plenty of Food

But there was plenty of food; everybody in town had a garden and fruit trees. At home, for instance, we had five big cherry trees and I remember one season when the fruit was so abundant that Mother had to ask the neighbors in to help themselves, to keep it from going to waste. Meat at the butcher shop was 10 cents a pound for round steak and if we had to pay 15 cents a dozen for eggs, that was considered a very high price.

The annual donation party for the Methodist minister served two purposes. It was a social event of some importance and it provided food for the minister's family and extra cash that never would have come from the collection plate.

The Ladies' Aid Society, headed by the bossy woman who always comes to the fore in any community to take such a job and generally loves it, was in charge. Not all the women of the church belonged to the Aid; Mother didn't, but she, along with every other woman in the congregation, was expected to do her share and bring some food for the minister as well as something for the supper. Then everybody who ate would pay 25 cents for a supper that would cost around $1.50 to $2 in these days. The quarters all went to the minister as there were no expenses whatsoever.

In the church parlor, a dismal sort of basement room with a red carpet on the floor where Mrs. Rose Cole and Mrs. Belle Reppert ran the baby class of the Sunday School every Sunday, would be piled the donations. All were brought in with the exception of cordwood, and if you wished to see that, there would be an abundance piled up behind the parsonage across the street, with more to come when the minister needed it.

Pillowshams and Tidies

Most of the donations would be in the form of food, but such things as crocheted pillow shams and tidies (every rocking chair had to have them in those days), knitted articles and other clothing were not barred. Everybody, it would seem, felt under obligation to bring canned fruit or pickles in addition, while white turnips, potatoes, pumpkins and Hubbard squashes were so numerous that I could hardly vision the minister's family eating all of it, especially the pumpkins, useful only for pie. To get rid of all the pumpkins I have seen at one donation party in our Methodist church, a family of six would have had to have pie three times a day all winter and top that fare off with an extra piece before retiring.

I could understand a pie jag like that, for I was always very fond of pumpkin pie, the way it was made by Mother and Grandma Pooler with mild spicing, but I could not, for the life of me, figure out how the minister's family could eat so much canned fruit. And the pickles! Mother claimed they were bad for one's digestion and discouraged their use in our home. So they left me sorely puzzled.

There was meat from the farmers, mostly salt pork and ham, with an occasional slab of bacon. There would be head cheese and other kinds of meat that would keep and a few crocks of butter and others filled with lard. Somebody would always bring a grain sack filled with walnuts and hickory nuts and old Elias Miles, who grew the best popcorn in our country, always brought a big sack full.

No Speech Making

One thing that was good about donation parties in my estimation was that there was no speech making, and the minister would always be brief with his invocation when we sat down to a bewildering variety of food at the long tables in the main part of the church basement.

One does not see tables loaded like that nowadays. You could have your choice of chicken, meat loaf, roast pork, roast beef, baked ham or half a dozen other sorts of meat if you were a light eater, or take all of them, as I generally did, and baked beans besides.

Beans came in two varieties, light and dark, and I always preferred the dark variety, with more molasses in them. If you wanted a flavor of tomatoes in your beans, there would be enough home-made tomato ketchup on the table (dark reddish brown, as nature intended it to be and no garlic in it) to do the trick, with pickles of all the varieties all of the good cooks who belonged to the Morenci Methodist Church could think up, and that, in a day when eating was more of a symbol of success than it is now, would be a plenty. Besides which you were supposed to eat plenty of mashed potatoes and do justice to baked squash, sweet potatoes, stewed dried corn, stewed tomatoes, rutabagas and white turnips and beets as well.

Mother used to caution me and say that if she had to stay up all night with me after I had put away a meal like that with four kinds of pie and cake as well (you had to have a sample of each kind) that I couldn't go there again and make a pig of myself. But a year is a long time in which to fulfill a promise, I never, that I remember, missed a donation party at the Methodist Church.

Vatican Feels the Pinch of Shortages

By EDMUND LAUKA

Vatican City (AP)—Six years of war have left their mark on the Vatican, though outwardly the Holy See has changed but little.

The great dome of St. Peter's still dominates the Roman skyline as it has for more than 300 years. The colorful Swiss Guards, whose multi-hued uniforms have fascinated tourists for generations, still patrol the gates. Bernini's magnificent colonnade stretches its arms toward the Capitol as in the days when all Rome was Pontifical territory.

But inside the Vatican — in the Secretariat of State—in the tasks and problems which now confront Pope Pius as spiritual ruler of the Roman Catholic world, the change wrought by the war years is evident.

The Holy See now must review the social, economic, political, moral and psychological situation of every country where there are Catholics.

Poland provides a striking example. Until recently it was considered the most important Catholic country in Eastern Europe, and the Holy See's relations with its government were unexcelled.

Today Poland has no diplomatic relations with the Vatican, its government has declared the Polish-Vatican concordat annulled and accuses the Vatican of having violated it.

Deeply concerned Vatican diplomacy faces the task of restoring its position in Poland, a problem complicated by the fact that Soviet Russia, with which the Holy See never has been on cordial terms, now is the dominant power in Eastern Europe.

In Italy, the Vatican is watching attentively the development of new political forces which may determine the Vatican's position there. A communist victory, a recent pastoral letter asserted, would not create a favorable atmosphere for the Church.

The Church's position in Spain also might change, should the Franco regime fall. In Germany, Bulgaria, Hungary and Romania the status of the Church is still unclear But the Vatican is studying their reports, and in the Secretariat of State, laying the basis for a policy in any contingency affecting the Church's interests.

Within Vatican City the standard of living has declined.

The Vatican pays no customs and has to feed only a few thousand persons and clothe an even smaller number—Swiss Guards and Papal gendarmes. Yet its food problem has been serious, for the Vatican is a state within a territory of another power which was at war for five years.

Formerly the Vatican provided tea, coffee, sugar and cigarets in abundance for its citizens. Now they are classed as luxuries and Vatican dwellers have been forced to forego them, unless they wished to pay Rome's exorbitant black market prices.

Before the war, Vatican prelates bought their clothes in shops specializing in clergymen's apparel. Stocks dwindled and prices increased. Many priests, as their garments became shabbier, reflected that the vows of poverty were being imposed by force of circumstance. The scarcity of shoes was a special problem. Not every priest aspired to join the barefoot orders.

• • •

As the devaluation of the Italian lira continued, the Vatican began to increase the salaries of its civilian employees, generally equivalent to those of Italian civil servants. But the cost of living outdistanced these gradual adjustments.

The Vatican administration then arranged to import flour, olive oil and fats from the country in its own trucks to save its employees from threatened malnutrition

Vatican truckdrivers performed their tasks at considerable personal risk. The hoods of their trucks were painted white and yellow so that both Allied and German pilots could see they were neutral machines. But several drivers were wounded by machine-gun bullets from planes which did not recognize the color markings.

The Vatican also experienced a minor air raid. On November 8, 1943, a lone airplane, whose markings were not recognized, circled the Vatican and dropped a small bomb which caused only slight damage.

Before the war the cardinals "in curia"—residing in Rome—received an allowance of $5,000 a year, which at the pre-war exchange rate was 100,000 lire. This allowance was to pay, among other living expenses the maintenance of a private automobile and chauffeur. Gasoline was distributed by the Vatican tax free.

The rising cost of living and devaluation of the lire soon made themselves felt on the cardinal's purse and the allowances were raised to 192,000 lire yearly, almost twice the amount in lire but equivalent to less than 40 per cent of their former allowances in dollars.

One cardinal was given special permission from the Pope to dispense with his car and manservant (Vatican custom decrees that a cardinal must not leave the Vatican unless accompanied) since the expense was too great.

The war period and the German occupation led the Vatican to increase its guards and to prohibit entrance to anyone who was not known or had no important reason for entrance. This policy has not been changed.

During the war the Pope often received officers and soldiers, but curtailed private audiences which might have occasioned speculation.

The liberation of Rome was received joyously. Since then the pontiff has become more accessible for private audiences and during them often discusses the Vatican attitude toward world problems.

International politics are no longer taboo in the Vatican press although the Osservatore Romano is written in an indirect style designed to give the reader an impression of the Vatican's policy or reaction rather than to constitute a concrete declaration.

Today, the average Vatican dweller is just as worried about the coming winter as the average Italian. The fuel shortage will make itself felt especially in the Vatican's vast high-ceillinged salons and lack of nourishing food is likely to be felt at the prelates' tables, however frugal they may be, in much the same degree as in hungry Rome.

Washington Spotlight

By CLYDE BLACKBURN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Washington, Nov. 30 (CP) — Widespread strikes inspired by the C.I.O. drive to win a 30-percent wage-rate increase has seriously hampered reconversion throughout the United States, but the strikers find management in a good position to withstand a long siege.

There is a feeling among neutral observers here that the union may be making a mistake and the C.I.O. may lose out to the A.F.L. as a result.

Industries making automobiles and parts, radios and such household conveniences are assured of an almost unlimited market as soon as they can get into production.

If they were making a lot of money now they would have to pay it out in excess profits taxes but that will not be the case later. They can afford to wait.

Those most concerned are the great mass of consumers anxious to spend their accumulated earnings and savings on new cars and the like—and they will not think well of unions that delay their opportunity to buy.

The A.F.L. has taken the stand that higher wage levels can be worked out eventually and without government aid but the C.I.O. does not want to wait and it probably assumes the government it worked so hard to elect last November will be helpful or at least friendly.

Many here believe the C. I. O. will antagonize the consuming public and Congress as well as the administration and that it might hasten returns of John L. Lewis and his 500,000 United Mine Workers to the A.F.L. fold.

That latter contingency would mean Mr. Lewis would be headed for greater power than he ever has held and relegate the C. I. O. to a place far in the rear as an influence on labor.

Already there are proposals before Congress to enact strict laws against strikes and signs that the Democratic administration is growing cool toward its former political ally.

Most observers agree that the best the C.I.O. can hope to get for its workers is about half the thirty per cent wage increase it is demanding and probably less.

A reporter for the Washington Daily News decided to find out how much red tape he would encounter if he tried to find out how much red tape the government used. He phoned a treasury official who came right back with the information that the government buys yearly 61,000 spools of 72 yards each at 31 cents a spool and uses it for typing up government documents.

Industry is in a sound condition to meet a long strike even if it does slow up reconversion and as much as it might prefer to get right to work.

HAMILTON TIGERS BEAT PATRICIAS IN DONNYBROOK

Seven Major Penalties and Two Match Misconducts Handed Out

(By The Canadian Press.)

The first clash of the two Hamilton Senior O.H.A. contenders developed into a donnybrook and when the smoke of battle cleared, the Tigers, defending champions, had whitewashed the Patricias 3-0. Two goals were scored and most of the many heavy penalties were incurred in the hot middle period, with Robertson, Laurent and Conick each bulging the twine for a counter.

The officials handed out seven major penalties, two match misconduct sentences and a 10-minute misconduct award all told. The teams had only three men on the ice for a five-minute spell and the police had to do a clean-up job after the encounter.

In the other senior fixture of the evening Mohawks made their debut at Owen Sound and came out on the short end of a 4-1 score against Toronto Staffords. The visitors breezed into a 3-1 lead in the first chapter, there was no score in the second and Toronto added its fourth tally in the final round.

Staffords scorers were Don Willson, Jack McLean, Ken Dixon and George Mara, while Boddy did the honors for Owen Sound.

In the Junior "A" series, Toronto Young Rangers built up a 2-0 margin in the first stanza at Barrie but couldn't hold it, the match ending up 2-all in overtime. The Flyers counted one in both the second and third frames, Richardson getting them both. Pidherny and Ringer did the counting for Young Rangers.

The Falcons went back into a two-way first-place tie with St. Michael's by measuring Toronto Marlboros 4-1 on St. Catharines ice. It was not until the third period that Marlies could connect for a marker, after the homesters had contrived a 3-0 lead before the close of the second period.

Falcon snipers were Tom Smelle, Peterson, Delory and Auger, the last-named being a near 200-pounder from Shawinigan Falls, Que. Allwell did the lone trick for Marlboros.

Donald A. Smith Given Scholarship By OHA Executive

Toronto, Dec. 1 (CP) — The Ontario Hockey Association announced last night after an executive committee meeting that Donald A. Smith, 17, from Saltfleet high school in Stoney Creek, has been awarded the 1945 O.H.A. scholarship to the University of Toronto. Smith now is enrolled in the first year of the medicine course at the university.

The committee, noting an outbreak of fisticuffs in a junior A game between Barrie and Oshawa this week, warned participants in future flareups will be "severely dealth with" by the executive. Special attention was drawn to players Joe Lund of Barrie and Bus Gagnon of Toronto Young Rangers, each of whom have drawn three major penalties in the young season.

It was ruled all players from last year's Barrie junior A club remain the property of this season's junior A team. Waterloo juniors were given permission to change their club name to Waterloo Hockey Association.

Tavistock intermediates were given permission to use three intermediate players from Stratford.

Visitors at the meeting included J. L. Fulton of Timmins, Bob Crosby, Timmins, Max Silverman, Sudbury and Norman Dawe of Montreal. The Western Ontario Association was represented by Tom Gregg of Wingham.

LUCKY 13

Woolley, England (CP)—No. 13 is a lucky number for this little hamlet in the Cotswold Hills. Thirteen men from Woolley went into the First Great War and all returned safely, Thirteen also fought in the Second Great War and they, too, returned unhurt.

Victoriaville Stars Open Year With Win

Cornwall, Dec. 1 —(CP)—Victoriaville Stars opened their Provincial Senior Hockey League season here last night with an 8-1 victory over Cornwall Cougars, and pulled into a second-place tie with Cougars and St. Hyacinthe Saints, eight points behind the pace-setting Lachine Rapides.

The Stars led all the way in a rough game in which 15 penalties were handed out, Valleyfield players took up 10 of these.

Bourdon with two goals, led the scoring for the Stars, scoring in the first and last periods. Singles came from Planche, Prefontaine, L. Savard, Thuot, L. Bouchard and Malette. M. Bouchard scored the only goal for Cornwall midway through the second period.

SPORT SHORTS FROM BRITAIN

London, Dec. 1 — (CP)—Gordon Richards, perennial champion jockey of Britain — this year was the 18th time in 19 years—hopes that next season he may realize his one remaining ambition, to win the Derby.

He has three of the country's best horses to choose from—Edward Tudor, Khaled and Radiotherapy. "All three are good," he said, "but so much depends on how they winter. I can't say which I like best at the moment. It would be wonderful to win my first Derby at Epsom and I think I have a bright chance of bringing it off."

The little man who rode his 3000th winner this year said he has no intention of retiring from the saddle.

"Steve (Donoghue) went on until he was a bit over 50 and other jockeys have done the same. As long as stables will give me rides I will keep on. When I do finish I hope I shall have a nice little stable of horses to train. I hope that won't be for a long time yet."

The most-travelled soccer fan in the country is H. A. Dason, of Eastbourne, Sussex, who has hardly missed a home game played by West Ham first or second teams in more than 30 years, and travels well over 6,000 miles a season to watch his favorite teams play.

"Apart from one or two matches when the rockets (V-2s) were particularly troublesome, I have not missed a game at Upton Park for over 30 years," Mr. Dason said.

Born a short distance from West Ham's grounds, this super soccer fan was bombed out and moved to Eastbourne, 150 miles from Upton Park.

Yachting was popular in Holland during the German occupation, because it gave Netherlanders good security against being overheard by the Gestapo, according to H. J. Van Balen, general managing director of the Royal Dutch Touring Club. He was in London for the meeting of the Alliance International de Tourisme.

The Dutch Touring Club was able to carry on most of its activities — motoring, cycling, skiing, yachting and camping, Mr. van Balen said. He added that many members of the underground were enthusiastic yachtsmen, for they could discuss plans in safety out of earshot of shore.

The British amateur lightweight wrestling crown went to a "Bevin boy" — A. Ward, of London Ashdown Athletic Club, when he took 14 minutes to win a fall from L. Dimmock, a fellow club member.

In bantamweight final R. Taylor, Bradford, Northern Counties champion, defeated W. Kelly, Tyldesley, in five minutes 52 seconds. (A "Bevin boy" is a young man directed to work in one of Britain's coal mines).

The golf course at Hoylake, scene of many golf championships, will not be ready for next year's open or amateur events. The course, much of which was taken over during the war for military purposes, has been cleared but is not considered "fit for a championship meeting in 1946."

ARMY AND NAVY GRIDIRON BATTLE TO DRAW 102,000

Army Has Been Made Favorites Over the Middies by 27-Point Margin

By MURRAY ROSE

New York, Dec. 1 —(AP)— The regular football campaign closes out with a sock finish today as all-conquering Army clashes with unbeaten Navy for the United States championship and the teams still in the running for remaining bowl vacancies get a last chance to show their wares.

About 102,000 fans will jam Philadelphia's Municipal Stadium to see whether Navy's pepper-up gridders can stop the colossal grid machine put together by coach Earl Blaik at West Point. The cadets, with eight straight victories this year and 17 in a row to their credit over the last two seasons, have been made 27-point favorites to turn this traditional battle into a run-way.

About 100,000 spectators were looked for in Los Angeles' Memorial Coliseum where the Trojans of Southern California will attempt to knock U.C.L.A.'s Bruins out of the way and clinch the Rose Bowl spot against Alabama.

The Trojans need only a tie or a victory to win the Pacific Coast conference's championship and the automatic nomination for the Pasadena classic. Should the Bruins upset the dope, however, the bid will go to Washington State's Cougars unless U.C.L.A.'s triumph is overwhelming. In that event the conference's nominating committee might be inclined to award the prize to the Unclans because of their prestige-winning decision over St. Mary's.

A number of southern teams including Tennessee, Georgia, Louisiana State and Miami still were in the battle to grab the open Orange Bowl spot against Holy Cross.

Toronto, Dec. 1 (CP)—Just a few more words on today's Grey Cup final, and we'll go quietly.. If Toronto Argonauts trim Winnipeg Blue Bombers as almost everyone expects they will, it would constitute something of a record for Tom Bainbridge. This Toronto boy had never played football until last season when he was with the Montreal Navy team which defeated Hamilton Wildcats 7-6 for the Grey Cup. Two Canadian titles in his first two football seasons thus will be Tommy's record come sundown tonight—if Argos win.

Bainbridge teams at inside with other comparative newcomer to the gridiron pastime. His partner is Vern Goyer, 225-pound player from Belleville, Ont., who knew nothing of the sport until he took it up with the Navy at Halifax little more than a year ago. Which seems to be a good place for a pat on the back to the armed services for inducing more Canadians to enter competitive sport.

Incidentally does anybody remember the star of that surprise Navy victory over Hamilton last year?

Probably nobody does, but his name was Johnny Taylor. He's a frail 19-year-old kid from Montreal's West Hill High School and if he never hits the headlines again, he deserves a boost. He scored Navy's only touchdown, fell on a loose ball for a second major score which the officials disallowed, and aided Jack Wedley and Steve Levantis in tackling Joe Krol behind the Hamilton line for the winning point.

Around The Circuit: Alf (Vancouver Sun) Cottrell blames Eastern Canada for overlooking the West in its Davis Cup cogitations, and points to Phil Pearson and Jimmy Skelton of Vancouver as players to beat some men mentioned in Montreal as possible Davis Cup material. Cottrell quotes a Vancouver tennis authority as saying the eliminations of the Canadian Davis Cup team should be held in Winnipeg.... H. L. Keenleyside, Canadian ambassador to Mexico, has suggested to the Royal Canadian Golf Association that one of two players from Mexico be invited to play in the Canadian amateur golf championship at Edmonton early next summer. This would constitute a reciprocal gesture, for Nick Wisnock of Burlington, Ont., recently participated in amateur championships at Mexico City.. Merritton Hellcats, Dominion senior basketball champions last season, will have to be revamped for their appearance in the new professional basketball league. From their title team they've lost Sal Maglie, Matt Mazza, Joe Rodriguez, Lou Martinez, Sal Sepia and Bob Gauchet.

17TH EAST-WEST CLASSIC TO BE PLAYED IN SNOW

Ground Conditions Will Suit Bombers From West More So Than Argos

By ALAN HARVEY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, Dec. 1 — (CP)—After the strangest buildup in Grey Cup history, football's 17th East-West classic unfolds today in snow-flecked Varsity Stadium with Toronto Argonauts seeking to demonstrate two-touchdown supremacy over Winnipeg Blue Bombers in the first post-war National final.

Any result less conclusive than a 10-point edge for Argos would be a distinct shock to the speculators, who established the home team overwhelming choices against the Winnipeg Club which headed east without the usual fanfare after playing only two games under Canadian rules all season.

There was scattered support from their small following for the Western champions, but the consensus was all for the powerful gridiron machine which skyrocketed into prominence by taking the measure of the best teams in the east. The east knew what Argos had and it seemed more than enough against the unknown quantity from out of the west.

An unusual silence descended over the hotel lobbies where western supporters gathered in the past to extol the qualities of great Winnipeg teams. A. H. (Bert) Warwick, the quiet churchman, author and scoutmaster who coaches Bombers, informed his hotel telephone operator he didn't want to be disturbed.

The one vociferous note was supplied by club president Arthur Chipman, who said he felt "in all seriousness" his team had the stuff to beat Argos.

Teddy Morris, 35-year-old Navy Petty Officer in his freshman season as Argo mentor, countered:

"We're a good ball club and we're ready for them."

As the Canadian Rugby Union announced overnight that all but 175 tickets had been sold, assuring a sell-out of Varsity's 19,000 capacity, small hillocks of snow covered the field despite the work of scrapers who crossed and recrossed the gridiron. Stadium officials said sunlight today will assure a "fairly dry" footing for the first Winnipeg-Argo meeting since 1938.

DALLAS TEXANS DEFEAT OMAHA

(By The Canadian Press)

Dallas Texans defeated the 3rd place Omaha Knights of the United States Hockey League 5-3 last night to renew their fight up the league ladder. It was the only game of the night.

The Texans gave a point-a-minute performance in the second period for their second, third and fourth goals. Peter Kapusta had given them a lead with the only goal of the first period when he swarmed in on top of the net to score on passes from Peewee Reed and Bucky Skinner, who had drawn goalie Harvey Jessamin off balance.

Then, Don Morrison, the standout for the Knights, tied it after 6:02 of the second frame with a close-up shot while Nakina Smith was in the penalty box and Dallas was playing a man short.

The tight-packed trio of Dallas goals was scored by Kapusta, Skinner and McBride.

Shabaga scored the last Dallas goal at 12:39 of the third, McBride assisting.

TORONTO LEAFS HAVE A CHANCE TO MOVE UP

Play Chicago Black Hawks at Home and Back in Chicago on Sunday

(By The Canadian Press)

The swirling struggle for National Hockey League leadership may be snarled tighter than ever by a four-game weekend program which affords Chicago Black Hawks a favorable opportunity to improve their lot.

Hawks, now tied for third place with Boston Bruins a point behind Detroit Red Wings and three behind the leading Montreal Canadiens, are the only team of the top four with two weekend games in prospect. They play Maple Leafs in Toronto tonight and take over the host role against the Toronto club Sunday.

Canadiens entertain New York Rangers Saturday and Boston is at home to Detroit Sunday in the only other games scheduled during the weekend. Should a double victory for Chicago be coupled with a Montreal loss to New York, Hawks would jump into undisputed possession of first place no matter how the other clubs fared.

On the other hand if Chicago split with Toronto and Detroit lost to Boston, both the Hawks and the Bruins would sweep past Red Wings into second place.

Toronto and Rangers are tied for fifth place six points behind the joint holders of third place, but considerable interest still attaches to the Toronto home game Saturday. It will mark the first appearance in the Leaf nets this season of Frank McCool, who left for his Calgary home the day before the schedule opened following a salary disagreement, and then relented.

What's Doing in Sport

(By The Canadian Press)

The Major Baseball Leagues' winter meeting at Chicago Dec. 10-12 will deal with a proposal from three clubs for unrestricted night games next season, it was announced yesterday by Leslie M. O'Connor, assistant to Commissioner A. B. Chandler. The clubs wanting plenty of arc-light contests are Washington Senators, St. Louis Cardinals and St. Louis Browns. Included in the agenda is the proposal of Chicago White Sox to lower the waiver price from $7,500 to $500 to establish a "fair" price for an unwanted player.

The major owners will also hear the demand of minor circuits for higher rating and better operating privileges.

Out of the U. S. Navy only two months, Herman Keiser, Akron, O., pro, yesterday grabbed the midway lead at 136 in the Orlando, Fla., $10,000 golf tournament. In second place one point behind were Sam Snead of Hot Springs, Va., and Ky Laffoon of Chicago.

Colony Boy, owned by Maine Chance Farm, splashed to victory yesterday in the 40th Walden stakes, defeating Marine Victory, while Mrs. Ethel D. Jacobs' Stymie registered a six-length win for $21,600 in the 2½ mile Pimlico cup. Both were features of the closing Pimlico card.

Kenneth C. Sherman of New London, Conn., has invented an automatic pin-boy for bowling alleys which the player manipulates by pressing two buttons. The electrical device, which sets up the pins, after clearing the alley, is being tested at the Groton, Conn., plant of the Electric Boat Co., which made submarines in wartime.

Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 847

By SAM GORDON

The Kibitzer

Among my hates are selfish skates. In any game, you can spot 'em. My green blood cooks when dealer looks to see the card at the bottom.

Dealer should avoid glancing at his bottom card. Even when he picks up the pack after it has been cut. Or at any time before the entire deal has been completed.

The laws of bridge provide no remedy or penalty against dealer's premature look at the bottom card. It is listed only as one of the improprieties. Another way of saying: "Don't be a boor, you boor."

What prompts a dealer to commit such an offence? Selfish curiosity or impatience. But it is also unfair to opponents, to his partner, and to his own piece of mind. He might fumble and make a misdeal.

Picture your partner taking a bold or hasty squint at the bottom card. Suppose it is a little one and he subsequently misdeals. There is no telling what an opponent may be thinking of it.

In an honorable game of bridge, ethical players attach no suspicion to others. But almost anything can happen in a game of coffee-housers.

A coffee-house is a deliberate unethical act. Like dropping the voice at the end of a bid to warn partner to stop. Players like that are not above accusing each other of almost anything.

Kibitzing such a game, I saw a dealer take a peek at his bottom card. He thought he saw there the ace of spades. He finished dealing and picked up his cards. No one else touched his cards.

The hand he picked up was the one you see here:

♠J 6 4 2
♥J 8 6 2
♦J 7 4
♣J 6

There was no ace in it. And do you know what? When I left, he was accusing one of his opponents of having stolen the ace of spades from him.

To err is human; to do it purposely is a crime.

In Manhattan

By MICHAEL O'MARA

Canadian Press Staff Writer

New York, Dec. 1 (CP) —What most New York critics will nominate for whatever awards are offered the biggest turkey of the theatrical season opened here last week—and closed again with commendable brevity. It seems a shame too; the comedy had such a promising title—"marriage is for single people."

It had nothing else, though; and at this writing it seems unkind to list its cast—which may have needed the work badly.

A pleasanter evening is provided by the musical, "The Day Before Spring," produced by John C. Wilson, with book and lyrics but A. J. Lerner and music by Frederick Loewe.

The show is competent, although not world-shattering. Melodic tunes, excellent sets, well-paced production and a reasonably sound bit of singing and acting by Patricia Marshall and Bill Johnson in the principal roles makes it refreshingly dissimilar to the recent ruck of worse-than-average song-shows to arrive here.

The plot concerns a college reunion and an attempt by a youthful matron to recapture a campus romance. It's standard stuff, but pleasing enough. The show needs tightening-up in places, and with that accomplished may run for some months.

Headed for early curtains, on the contrary, seems to be "A Sound of Hunting," a drama by Harry Brown, returned serviceman who wrote the brief best-seller, "A Walk in The Sun."

Like the book, the play is set in Italy—in a dugout at Cassino, where for months stubborn German resistance turned aside Allied thrusts. It's a study in battle heroics, with some good lines, well-delivered by an all-male cast topped by Sam Levene.

But Mr. Brown has failed to convince civilian play-goers that his dialogue is not far too glib to put in the mouths of men under fire. Soldiers in action may talk like that; he should know how they talk. But New York critics almost to a man charged the playwright with making his soldiers talk too smugly, too brashly and with too much foresight.

German General Goes to Death By Firing Squad

Aversa, Italy, Dec. 1 —(AP)— German Gen. Anton Dostler was shot by a firing squad today for ordering the execution of 15 United States soldiers captured behind the German lines in Italy in March, 1944.

Dostler, the first German general to die for war crime participation in Western Europe, was convicted in October by a court martial, which disregarded his defence plea that in ordering the executions he was carrying out the commands of higher officers.

Holding himself stiffly erect in the prisoner stockade, the general died without flinching before a firing squad of United States soldiers.

The World is Like That

By Kathleen Norris

CHAPTER 4

"Oh, darling, I'm so sorry! But I have an engagement I can't get out of."

Yelling at the other end of the line of course. They were always yelling in the Partridge house.

"Mother says then come for sup-p-per!" finally screamed Sissy.

"I surely will, if I can." Jocelyn hung up the receiver.

Now she had to do something about it. Now she must definitely find out what Kent's plans were. This was Saturday, at ten minutes to ten. By Monday he would be gone.

Fever burned in Jocelyn's veins. She sat quietly at her desk in the office and tried to concentrate, to think quietly. Was Kent upstairs, in his studio? The advertising agency for which he worked was on the top floor. She could telephone. Better, she thought, with her pulses suddenly hammering, better to go up. Her absence from the office for a few minutes would not be noticed.

Trembling in a sudden ecstasy of hope, she went up.

No, Mr. Dunham wasn't in. He might be in later, to get his things. "We're losing our darling," said Jean Pettigrew, who was common.

Jocelyn said she would leave a message, said she would not; asked that Mr. Dunham telephone her when he came in.

"I'll tell little Kentsy-wentsy!" promised Jean. Jocelyn knew she was laughing, deep down inside, at the stenographer who had such a crush on handsome Mr. Dunham. Well, it didn't matter what girls like Jean Pettigrew thought!

Then to wait. And how she detested waiting! This was a quiet, empty Saturday morning; the office staff was almost idle. Jocelyn's only moment of real occupation was when Philip Fordyce came in, to dictate a letter to his wife, who was in New York. They had been divorced for many years, and Janet Fordyce had been married twice since her divorce, but there was a child, Norma, their only interest in common now. Norma must be sixteen or seventeen, Jocelyn calculated, as she dutifully took down the dictation; the letter was about the child.

All the world knew about young Norma Fordyce, for her grandfather had been the great Lockey, inventor of the Lockey car, and had left the bulk of his enormous fortune to his only grandchild. His daughter had been richly benefited, too, in his will, but Janet's extravagances and her matrimonial ups and downs had considerably impoverished her interests. Norma's wealth, on the other hand, left in the original investment in the great motor company and handled by her father, had increased by leaps and bounds, so that today she was one of the conspicuous heiresses of the world, followed by newspaper and social sleuths wherever she went, proclaimed as the potential glamour girl of all glamour girls, and already bidding fair to satisfy a sensation-craving public with a diet of steady eccentricities.

She was a beautiful, wild little creature, who had been consigned at the time of her parents' divorce to her father's care, but with a promise that under proper circumstances she might spend three months each year with her mother. Circumstances had not, unfortunately been favorable to either course, and much of Norma's time, since her smallgirl days, had been spent in boarding schools and camps and in trips with tutors, nurses, governesses, maids.

Usually letters concerning Norma went through the office of the Lockey family lawyers, Jocelyn supposed; today's note was the first with whose contents she had ever been made acquainted. It was brief.

"Just say 'Dear Janet, I'm delighted of course that the child's coming to me,'" dictated Philip. "I've gotten hold of Mother, and we're opening the Burlingame place. There are lots of nice kids here and she ought to have a fairly decent time,'" the letter concluded. "And sign it 'Phil,'" said Philip. "I haven't time to wait for it."

Jocelyn smiled at this, involuntarily, and looking up expectantly for further directions, saw that he was smiling back.

"She's on the loose again," Philip explained. "Something's gone haywire with her schooling, I don't know quite what it's all about. Her mother took her to some place in Florence last September, and she's run away — she's in New York now. Janet cabled some French woman she knew to get hold of her and bring her over, but of course Janet doesn't want the responsibility of her. She's probably going to be married again. It's an Italian count this time, I believe. He has estates that need about a million dollars' worth of painting and papering, that's all. She wrote us about it last week. She wants money."

To this, marveling, Jocelyn could find nothing to say. After a smiling moment and a little shake of her head, she went back to the letter.

"You're opening the Burlingame place?"

"Yes, my mother'll be here. She's in Florida now, but she'll come. And we're trying to get an old governess for Norma; she was Janet's governess, as a matter of fact. Miss Sanderson. She'll keep the kid in line."

"The Florence school wasn't so good?"

"She hated it. Climbed over a wall and cut her arms on broken bottles so that we had to get her into a hospital. She's a sweet handful, that kid. I hope she marries young. She'll have a month with her mother, and Janet'll see that she gets some clothes and see all the good shows, and then she'll be shipped out here. After that Janet will go to Palm Beach, I suppose. She wants to be married at Netty Roger's place."

"What——" Jocelyn's shadowed purple eyes danced, and a deep dimple appeared in one cheek. "What, if I may ask, was the matter with this last marriage?" she asked delicately.

"Well, Count von Sturnberg kept threatening to kill people," Philip answered with a laugh. "It made her nervous. Every time she was away from home, he suspected her."

"Oh," Jocelyn murmured, almost involuntarily.

"She keeps hoping to find happiness," the man began seriously, and stopped. "Well, perhaps all of us do!" he added with a sigh. And in another moment he was gone. Jocelyn looked after his departing form sympathetically. Everyone liked Phil Fordyce. He was a gentleman and a sportsman, polite and rich and appreciative and handsome and clever. He played magnificent golf and bridge and polo and belonged to clubs. He had been everywhere and had talked familiarly with governors and a president or two.

He rarely became mad about anything, and when he did, it was impressive. He dressed almost too well. All the appointments of his office were magnificent—silver, crystal, ivory, polished steel hammered into polished bronze.

It was now twenty minutes past twelve. No word, no sign from Kent. Jocelyn telephoned his office; he had not come in. She began to tremble with anxiety and nervousness, and presently, with a sudden reach for the telephone, a sudden agitated jerking over the dial numbers, she called Una Booth.

"Una, this is Jocelyn. How is everything?"

"My dear, this great furry cat is pressing himself right against my mouth! Tipsy, get down!"

Jocelyn felt an instant chill. Una was sparring for time.

"Una, what are you doing today?"

"Well—" Was she really disengaging the cat, or was she looking at Red for advice? "We have no plans, we've been talking of everything," said Una laughingly, after an almost imperceptible pause. "Red's out at this minute, but when he comes back I suppose we'll make up our minds!"

"Horrible about Kent's going, isn't it?"

"Kent and Lilian. It's awful."

Another hint of hesitation. Jocelyn felt a rueful, scornful twist come into her own expression. Una never bothered much about Lilian. This was a new attitude.

"They go Monday," Jocelyn said. The statement fell flatly into silence.

"I know; it's rotten!" Una said. And then briskly, as if she had found at last the swift way out of the conversation, "We ought to do something quite drastic about it, oughtn't we? Lilian's gone, you know; I said good-bye to her yesterday. I'll tell you, Jocelyn, I'm just awake and everything's fuzzy. We were out at a Press Club party last night and got home at six. But I'll tell you, let's —— Where'll you be this afternoon? If I can stir up anything——"

"Kent said something about going over to Covey's," Jocelyn put in eagerly, as the other woman's voice again hesitated for a second.

"Well—" Another little flag in the conversation. "Well, suppose I telephone you?" Una asked.

"They're going over there without me," Jocelyn thought. Aloud she said: "I was going to go to Sausalito. But if there was any plan for today, of course I'd put it off. So do telephone me, Una."

"I'll do that very thing!" It was too spontaneous; too carefully sincere; too obviously relieved.

Jocelyn hung up her telephone and sat quite still, feeling a little sick. She had done all she could do, and it was no use. Now there were blank hours ahead. The Booths were notoriously dilatory; they idled about in their studio for half the day; they might get around to telephoning Kent at about three; they might put it off until later.

They lived in an untidy apartment back of some old buildings on Post Street; the studio jutted into a garage and had two rooms that impinged upon a flat occupied by the French laundry people who worked downstairs. It was a sunless, gloomy place in the daytime, but Jocelyn had had some wonderful happy evenings there, when she and Una had cooked the dinner, the men had poured red wine, played on the old piano, and done quick sketches of the girls' heads. Lilian hated the place and in a quiet way disliked the Booths and their "influence" on Kent. But that made Jocelyn love it all the more, and there had been happy times when she had known that Kent had liked it the better for his wife's avoidance of it.

Well, those times were over. But something—surely something was left?

Why hadn't Una said: "Come right up here, Jocelyn; we'll get hold of Kent and and make him do something?" Why hadn't she said that? It would have been so simple, then. Jocelyn, who knew the state of the Booths' finances, could have stopped for a few pounds of sausages, for a couple of pink cold boiled crabs, for Red's favorite white-iced devil's-food cake. She could have joined them and conspired with them, and it would all have been safe and companionable and happy. If Kent evaded them all three, then they would have company in misery at least.

As it was, she walked home from the office nervously, restlessly, feeling that unless something happened to bring him into the scene during the next two days she would go out of her senses. She stayed in her room, waiting for a telephone call. It did not come, and at four o'clock feeling faint and weary and desolate, she followed a sudden impulse, dressed herself and started to walk to the Booths' studio. She would go in on them carelessly, explain that she had an errand in their neighborhood to do.

The sudden thought that Kent might be there made her heart jump with fear and joy and brought color to her cheeks. Everything would be heaven; everything would be utterly blissful and right. Kent might look up from his favorite chair with his lazy smile and say, "We need you, Joy. We're all going to Covey's to cook supper."

THOSE ELIGIBLE TO VOTE AT MUNICIPAL ELECTIONS 1945.

For Mayor, Aldermen and Public Utilities Commissioners, all persons whose names appear on the Voters List.

For Members of Board of Education all those who appear on the Voters List except Separate School supporters, indicated wherever possible by the letter "S".

In voting for Aldermen, SEVEN are to be elected.

In voting for School Trustees, FOUR are to be elected.

SEWAGE DISPOSAL BY-LAW

Only those who appear on the Voters list as property owners, designated with the letter "O". Property owners may vote ONCE IN EACH WARD in which they own property, but NOT IN EACH SUB-DIVISION OF THE WARD.

If a man and his wife are marked on the List as joint owners, they each have a vote on this question. If the husband or wife only is marked with an "O" the other party cannot vote.

Dominion Holds Strong Position in Flying World

Canada's post-war aviation plans, seen through American eyes, are set forth in the following article written by James J. Strebig, aviation editor of The Associated Press, after a visit to the Dominion.

By JAMES STREBIG

New York (AP)—Canada, straddling the great circle flight routes from the United States to Europe and the Orient, hopes to become as important in the air as it is on the airways.

Government policy for achieving that goal is based on a three-point program:—

1. Continued improvement of its transport system to meet the needs of a vast and thinly populated country.

2. Maintenance of an aircraft manufacturing industry strong enough to bear rapid expansion in an emergency.

3. Development of aviation research facilities through its National Research Council.

Canadian airmen generally are solidly behind those aims, as outlined by the Dominion's top man in aviation, Reconstruction Minister Howe.

But there is a disagreement with the plan because it involves a non-competitive program for air transport.

Some opponents of Mr. Howe's plan call it monopoly. Others, who favor nationalization of public services, say it does not go far enough. Some believe it will retard growth of peacetime aircraft manufacturing because if each carrier is exclusive in its field it will not be spared to replace obsolete plans.

Many, including Mr. Howe, take the attitude that in any event Canada cannot expect to compete in world markets for planes against countries which have been building transports for years. The Dominion has but one native craft in that field, the Noorduyn Norseman.

Plan Outlined

The Canadian air transport plan briefly is this:

The government will own all main line air services, both domestic and international. Feeder lines and charter services — this latter being largely the "bush" flying which means so much to mining and trapping—will be privately owned and operated, but there must be no competition. That is, there may not be two air lines between the same two points.

The government is prepared to subsidize feeder services—as well as overseas flying—when necessary.

Virtually all of Canada's scheduled air services now are owned by its two large railroad systems.

Trans-Canada Air Lines, which operates the trans-continental services, is owned by Canadian National Railways, which is owned by the government.

Canadian Pacific Airways, which operates 57 of the 68 routes not on T.C.A., is owned by Canadian Pacific Railway.

The government has decided air and surface carriers must be divorced, although the order has not yet been issued.

Canada has done a remarkable job in developing main line air transport, largely under the direction of Herbert J. Symington, T.C.A. president. Secondary services have been saved, as Mr. Howe himself says, by the support of the C.P.R., which took over many half-starved small operations.

Opposition members in parliament have asked what would happen to those small operations when C.P.R. is forced to sell the property.

T.C.A. has no major problem in a divorce. It still will be owned by the government and will have by decree the best routes in Canada. This point raises a big question for C.P.A.'s future: What will happen when a secondary or feeder route is built up to main line proportions?

Take as an example the C.P.A. route from Montreal to Quebec and on up the St. Lawrence river. What if T.C.A. should decide that the Montreal-Quebec segments is a main line route and take it over, leaving the less juicy segments for the independent operator?

Mr. Howe told me in an interview that T.C.A. would use around 100 two-engined transports for domestic services and 50 four-engine planes on transcontinental and international routes.

To Build Aircraft

Canada expects eventually to supply its own aircraft. In the meantime it is converting U. S. Army C-47s (Douglas DC-3 type) for T.C.A. to supplement the Lockheeds which have been standard equipment.

For overseas operations, T.C.A. will continue to use converted Lancaster bombers, which carry only 10 passengers. Canadair, Ltd., at Montreal is working on a modification of the DC-4 Skymaster for eventual use on trans-ocean flights. This plane is expected to go into service in 1947.

It will have more power than the original Skymaster, and the fuselage will be lengthened slightly. Canadair engineers expect cruising speed of more than 300 miles-an-hour.

Noorduyn Aviation, Ltd., at Montreal is building a post-war model of its Norseman on a three-a-month schedule, compared with a pre-war average of one plane a month. During the war it reached a peak production rate of 50 a month to fill U. S. Air Force orders for 750.

Norduyn also built 2,800 "Harvards" a training plane. At present the company is designing a new type trainer for the R.C.A.F. in competition with other designers. A commercial version is under consideration.

Canada never has had an aircraft engine industry. There appears little expectation one will be developed immediately, but work is being done on a turbi-jet project at Montreal.

The Dominion is giving a great deal of attention to research. The National Research Council has built a new laboratory of 17 buildings outside of Ottawa, its budget for the last fiscal year was $1,958,993.

Projects are largely those involving problems peculiar to Canadian flying, such as icing, aircraft skiis and floats. One of the current projects attracting interest is a tailless glider which very closely resembles a flying wing built in the United States. A one-third scale model will be flown soon at the laboratory.

Mess Room Chatter Of Canada's Airmen

With the R.C.A.F. Overseas —(CP)—Frank Sinatra had better watch out for Flt. Lt. Don Ackerman of Saskatoon. While Don was talking—not singing—to 80 girls of the R.C.A.F., Women's Division, on the Ninth Victory Loan campaign at Torquay, England, one of the young things stood up, groaned softly and passed out in a dead faint.

Ackerman said he didn't know if she bought any bonds or not.

Four encores were given by LAC, Earl Dick of Winnipeg when he appeared before a packed house as guest artist of the Municipal Symphony Orchestra at Torquay, England. The audience liked his singing of "Celeste Aida" and later of "Passing By", Rubenstein's "The Astra," and "Come to the Fair."

Dick served as a radar mechanic until shortly before VJ-Day when the Entertainment Branch people called for him to sing at camp concerts. He now is on his way back home.

He studied voice with Agnes Kelsey of Winnipeg and was soloist at Westminster United Church in that city.

More than 500 airmen and 200 officers of 418 Squadron, the famed "City of Edmonton" Mosquito outfit, are still receiving recognition from the western city that adopted it in 1944.

The squadron was officially disbanded in September, and now all members have been given a large blue and brown crest showing a Mosquito on a Maple Leaf background with the words "City of Edmonton Squadron" around it.

• • •

Flt. Lt. G. W. (Tommy) Thompson of Saskatoon, squadron adjutant for 2 1-2 years who is in charge of distributing the crests overseas, said "Hundreds of our fellows have grand memories of the good things, parcels and cigarets, the city sent, and this crest is a happy end to a very happy association."

• • •

"Canada Club," Hamburg, open to all ranks, is the latest addition to the recreational facilities being organized for personnel of 126 Wing, R.C.A.F., of the British Air Force of occupation in Germany.

The clubs was praised by several hundred Canadian officers and airmen who attended the opening at the Phoenix Hotel. Canadian Legion War Services were responsible for the enterprise.

TO THE SHAME OF OUR SOCIETY—

We pass to the underpaid teaching profession the responsibility of imparting to our children and "know how" to go out into the world and earn. It is truly said "the man who sells can make more than a teacher."

Also, in ignorance or thoughtlessness, we neglect to make certain that the kid's Visual capacity is adequate for either his absorption of the teaching or the possibility of the teacher's efforts showing results.

Investigation of an Optometric Visual Analysis will convince you of the difference from the sale of a pair of glasses after a "brush-off" miscalled an examination.

WHY THE STRIKE at BROWNS' BREAD?

In the simplest possible terms I want to tell the story of what is happening at Browns' Bread. It is my duty to do so and, to the best of my ability, I want to make the facts so clear, and the implications of those facts so obvious, that they will be easily grasped and understood.

Let me begin by saying that Browns' Bread is not, and never has been, opposed to unions. It needs to be clearly understood that the Company's difference with the A. F. of L. Union is not based on an anti-Union attitude. Browns' Bread is over 50 years old; and in the entire history of the development of this Canadian Company there is no trace of Company opposition to the establishment of voluntary employee organizations—Unions freely formed to represent the men and women of Browns' Bread. If you have noticed that I speak of voluntary organizations and freely formed Unions, then you already have an idea of the tremendous problem by which this Company is confronted at this moment. Frankly, the issue is the Union Shop.

WHAT IS A UNION SHOP?

Let me explain what a Union Shop means to employees in actual practice. I can best do so by quoting, as briefly as possible, from the draft copy of the Union agreement under the heading, "General Provisions for Union Recognition and Membership," and which the A. F. of L. Union, through its representatives from Chicago, hopes to compel this Canadian Company to sign. Here, in part, are the demands of the "Union Shop":

> "The Employer will employ and continue in employment . . . only members in good standing in the Union."
>
> "The Employer agrees that all work performed in its plants, agencies or establishments which are within the jurisdiction of the Union, shall be performed solely by members of the Union . . ."
>
> "The Employer shall engage all new help . . . through the office of the Union . . ."

Brief as these quotations are, what is happening is crystal clear. Our employees are forcefully being divided into two classes—Members and Non-Members of the Union—"Members" with all the rights, and "Non-Members" who would have no rights whatever—not even the right to work. You will notice, by the way, that the difference between a Union Shop and what is called a Closed Shop calls for a certain amount of purely technical hairsplitting which leads to a great deal of confusion. To avoid any possibility of such confusion, let us confine our attention to the Union Shop. The Union Shop demands, made by the Union, are such that, under them, all our present employees would be required immediately to join the Union in order to retain their employment and any new employees would be required, at the expiry of 30 days, to join the Union in order to remain in the Company's employment. Moreover, all members of the Union must continue to pay dues and remain in good standing in the Union—or forfeit their jobs.

Briefly, then, what we are trying to do is to protect the democratic freedom of the individual to do whatever he likes about joining an organization—to join or not to join, as he pleases.

WHAT IS THE PROBLEM?

Browns' Bread, employing about 750 Canadians with 558 eligible for Union membership, is face-to-face with a problem in human relations which cannot be regarded as of purely local and temporary importance. As recently as November 6th, in the course of the Conciliation Meetings, it was admitted by both the legal counsel and the business agents of Locals 264 and 847 that, of our entire staff, only 367 are actually members of the Union. Here, then, is the problem: What is to happen in a democracy to men and women who do not wish, for personal reasons, to join an organization? In particular, what is going to happen to the approximately 200 eligible men and women now employed at Browns' Bread, who have not seen fit to join the Union? Many of our employees have been with us for 20 years and more. After long and faithful service, are they to be forced to choose between the alternatives of submission to Union dictation, or instant dismissal?

Let us admit, as we must, that when compared with the sum total of Canada's vast industrial activities, what happens in Browns' Bread may appear so unimportant as to have no real significance, except, of course, to the Canadians concerned. But the principle involved actually strikes at the very roots of freedom and democracy. Simply stated, the principle is that of the "Union Shop" involving the right of a Union to compel and force employees of a Canadian Company to join the Union—or lose their jobs.

WHAT HAS A UNION SHOP TO DO WITH COLLECTIVE BARGAINING?

This Company is admittedly at a loss to know why the issue of the Union Shop has been injected into what is fundamentally a simple matter of naming a Union as the collective bargaining agent at Browns' Bread. There seems to be a certain confusion of ideas in the minds of the strikers themselves. To make my meaning clear, let me refer to the United Steel Workers of America who have published and presented to the public a book entitled "Collective Bargaining in Canada," written by J. L. Cohen, K.C., who was counsel for that great Union. On page 71 of that book are these words:

> "It should be made clear at the outset that designation of a particular Union as the collective bargaining agent of a given group of workers has no relation at all to the issue of closed shop or Union shop. It is upon this point that thinking upon the issue of labor relations so frequently and so repeatedly goes astray."

I would commend these words to the serious attention of the public in general. I would like the striking employees of Browns' Bread, also, to give them more than passing notice—to re-read them. Here is a competent authority on labor relations speaking on behalf of one of America's great Unions. What does he say regarding the relation between collective bargaining. on the one hand, and the "Closed Shop" or "Union Shop," on the other? He affirms, with authority, that collective bargaining—to which, remember, this Company has always agreed—has no relation at all to the issue of closed shop or Union shop.

Obviously, it was never intended in a democracy that collective bargaining would automatically entail the sacrifice by employees of their individual freedom. Clearly, the demands of the Union cannot be justified. I am most anxious that the people of Canada should have every opportunity to consider and weigh the possibilities of what would happen to democracy if any section of our national community is coerced into giving up the freedom now enjoyed by the individual.

WHY WE CAN'T GIVE IN TO UNION DEMANDS

We are determined to protect our employees against discrimination. The man or woman who is discriminated against because he or she does not belong to a Union—or for any other reason—has lost every vestige of freedom and has been denied his inalienable rights. That this is also the Government's point of view is clear from the Labour Gazette (March, 1945—No. 3, Vol. DLV) prepared and edited by the Department of Labour, Ottawa, Canada, which sets forth the Government's official attitude toward all such encroachments on personal liberty:

> "Broadly speaking, except when provision is made for preferential treatment, as in the case of War Veterans with overseas service, all citizens of Canada have equal rights in the matter of employment in Government undertakings. As Crown Companies are owned by the public, their Directors are expected to be careful to see that no provision is included which would create discrimination as between one employee and another, or which would have the effect of excluding any citizen from employment therein because he does not belong to a particular Union."

Am I mistaken in believing that this defines a fundamental democratic principle? It is Canada's voice surely, speaking through the Government regarding a question which affects every Canadian because it so profoundly concerns his rights and liberties as an individual. If this is a sound principle for Crown Companies it is equally sound for privately owned Corporations and their employees.

I have tried to reveal the root of the present disagreement. The whole question boils itself down to this—We believe it is contrary to the interest of the employees of Browns' Bread to be compelled by force to pay dues to, and to bow to the dictates of a Union—or any other political or economic organization — which seeks supreme power over their lives through coercive measures.

I submit, in all sincerity, that what is happening at Browns' Bread is not only contrary to public interest, but it denies to Browns' Bread employees their fundamental rights as citizens of our Canadian democracy.

SAYS ARMY GROUP POSSESSED POWER OF LIFE OR DEATH

Yamashita States He Was Helpless To Intervene In Prisoners' Behalf

Manila, Dec. 3. (AP)— Lt.-Gen. Tomoyuki Yamashita declared at his war crimes trial today that one of his army groups had the power of life or death over prisoners and he was helpless to intervene.

The former Japanese commander in the Philippines made the startling statement when his counsel called him back to the stand to counter damaging testimony by the prosecution's rebuttal witnesses.

Yamashita said the 35th Army Group operating east of Manila, where many atrocities for which the prosecution seeks to hold him responsible were committed, had authority to appoint courts martial and try prisoners of war and internees.

The army group was vested with this power at the time of its formation, the general testified, and he was without authority to take it away.

Weather Oddities Come to Light

Toronto, Dec. 3. (CP)—Several unseasonable Ontario weather oddities came to light over the weekend.

In Wiarton, Mrs. Ruth Ferrin and Mrs. Alvin Winch picked pansies from the garden of Mr. and Mrs. Doran Robson. Near Teeswater, raspberries appeared on bushes of W. D. Simpson, Culross Township.

Bears, which usually den up for the winter by this time of year, are still on the move. Alvin Rydall shot an 18-month-old, 150-pounder at Colpey's Bay in the Bruce Peninsula. Eli Robbins shot another bear at Pike Bay in the same area.

A six-foot arctic owl braved weekend wintry weather at Mildmay, and Jack Kunkel shot it. A fellow owl fell near Salem to a bullet from the .22 rifle of Bert Hew.

On the Edward Baetz farm in Normandy Township two geese are sitting for a new hatch of goslings, due to meet the world Tuesday.

INFLUX OF 'TEEN-AGE GIRLS ALARMS U. S. AUTHORITIES

Buffalo, N. Y., Dec. 3 — (AP) —'Teen-age girls have been entering the United States from Canada "in alarming numbers" since the end of the war, United States Attorney George L. Rrobe said Sunday. He said jobs were as scarce for girls of this age in the United States as in the girls' home areas.

Early Vote Light, Heavier Polling Expected Late

According to information received from some of the city polls about eleven-thirty this morning, Belleville ran true to election form and recorded a light early morning vote.

This, however, as has been proved before, cannot be judged an indication of the attitude of the electorate.

For women must wash, and men must work. The heaviest vote of the day, if past election history can be judged a criterion usually takes place between four and six o'clock with a large number of six o'clock workers polling their votes that hour on to the deadline of seven p.m.

Potential aldermen, trustees and mayors, however, were out early today with vehicular transportation for those who needed it. The weather was not exactly conducive to a large vote as a number of people appeared to be hesitant to walk on slippery streets to the polls. This, however, was largely overcome by the different candidates' transportation methods.

To the man on the street today was just another day with time out for voting for his favorite candidates. There were no street corner arguments. The barber shops, usually the gathering place of the lads who take their civic elections more or less seriously, had their respective conversations garnished a little with election flavor, but generally speaking the city pursued the quiet Monday tenor of its way, waiting for things to happen.

Tonight, however, there should be a sharp flurry in city hall quarters. At least, those aspiring for office will be there, if nothing more than to see how they appeared in the eyes of the electorate. If the weather remains inclement it is not at all likely the City Hal auditorium will be overflowed as a great many people will remain at home in the comfort of fireside and radio and get their results via telephone.

Speaking of telephones, the usual service will be given to the general public by the Ontario Intelligencer. Call 98 or 99 for results—but do not call before 8.00 o'clock. The polls close at seven p.m. and no results will be available until an hour later.

8,500 WORKERS IN WINDSOR AREA RETURN TO WORK

Called Out Nov. 5th In Sympathy With The Strike for Union Security at Ford

Windsor, Ont., Dec. 3 (CP) — Practically all of 8,500 workers who participated in a strike, called Nov. 5 in sympathy with the strike for union security of the Ford Motor Company of Canada, returned to their jobs today as more than a dozen automotive plants reopened. Union leaders said the remainder of the sympathy strikers would be back to work by Friday.

Plants which reopened this morning included: Chrysler Corporation of Canada, Limited (with a number of employees still to return), General Motors Corp., auto specialties, Bendix Eclipse; Backstay Standard; Canadian Auto Trim; Champion Spark Plug; Colonial Tool; Dominion Forge; Eaton-Wilcox-Rich; Gar Wood; Kelsey Wheel; McCord Corp.; Motor Products; Sealed Power; Truscon Steel; Walker Metal Products and Windsor Tool and Die.

Back to Work at Oshawa.

General Motors Corporation at Oshawa announced that all its 1,600 to 2,000 employees, laid off Nov. 15 because of a shortage of parts, would be back at work on Wednesday, following reopening of its Windsor plant. Passenger line employees returned to work today at Oshawa. The firm here makes engines for the Oshawa factory.

The reopenings came after several plant unit meetings voted unanimously Sunday to follow the back-to-work recommendation of Local 195, United Automobile Workers (C.I.O.), which called the strike in sympathy with Ford Local 200. The situation at the Ford plant, where 10,000 men have been out nearly three months, remained unchanged. A union shop and compulsory check-off system are among workers' demands.

The plant reopenings were forecast last night by Alex Parent, President of Local 195 who said "some of the 20 plants involved in the sympathy strike will have all their men back on the job tomorrow and others will be resuming full production by Wednesday, and by Friday all the 8,500 strikers will be back at work."

Financial Aid Given.

In the meantime the welfare of Local 195 will continue to operate until the men receive their first pay. Financial aid also will continue to go to the Ford strikers, said Mr. Parent.

Meanwhile, a number of Royal Canadian Mounted Police constables, brought here on Nov. 4, are being replaced by special recruits signed up in Toronto because the R.C.M.P. men are required to attend criminal court cases throughout Ontario.

Pickets continued their patrols in front of the Ford Company gates and offices today. George Burt, Canadian Director of the U.A.W., visited the lines yesterday and said no new developments took place during the weekend.

Canadian Engineers Make Radar Equipment 3 Months Before Plants

Montreal, Dec. 3— (CP)—Canadian Engineers, guided only by scale photographs, produced radar equipment three months ahead of plants which had the original blueprints as a guide, G. K. Sheils, Deputy Minister of the Munitions Department, disclosed today.

Mr. Sheils, in an address prepared for delivery to the Montreal Canadian Club, reviewed Canada's war production record and placed new light on the Dominion's top performance in the radar field.

Radar did more than even the atomic bomb to win the war. For some time after the United States had entered the war Canadian-built radar equipment guarded approaches to the vital Panama Canal and to other important North American points.

Other Canadian-made sets made possible the North African landing, helped smash the Italian navy, kept watch over the Atlantic and Mediterranean and helped to win the Battle of Germany.

The story of Canadian radar manufacture dated back to 1938 when the Defence Department and the National Research Council started taking an interest in the then highly secret development. Attempts were made to obtain models from the United Kingdom, but by that time all available supplies were needed there and by 1940 Britain turned to North America for additional production.

A group of British experts was sent to the United States to arrange for production and en route they paused in Canada, but they told Canadian engineers they could not spare their blueprints.

"Our engineers were not easily daunted," said Mr. Sheils. "With nothing but scale photographs to work from they, told us they could produce radar — and they did.

"To their everlasting credit and to the credit of the workmen who co-operated so wholeheartedly in the project, the Crown Company, Research Enterprises Ltd. at Leaside, Ont., without the original blueprints, turned out its first radar set three months ahead of the factories which had the blueprints."

However, Canada's contribution was not restricted to radar. Shortly after Pearl Harbor, China, desperate for supplies, turned toward the United States for weapons, but the first transports to reach China carried the slogan "Made in Canada" and held Bren guns and ammunition produced in Ontario and Quebec plants.

IRAN PETITIONS SOVIET TO PERMIT TROOP MOVEMENT

Wants to Move Into Azerbaijan Province to Put Down Insurrection

Tehran, Dec. 3 — The Iranian government urgently petitioned Soviet Russia today to permit transportation of Iranian troops to trouble-ridden Azerbaijan province, where armed Democrat Autonomists were reported to have seized police and government officials.

Soviet military authorities in Azerbaijan — which borders Russia — have prevented Iranian reinforcements from entering the province on the ground their presence would cause further fighting and bloodshed.

In a note handed to the Soviet Embassy, the Iranian foreign ministry said government troops were needed in Azerbaijan to restore order and promises they would not be used for aggressive measures against the populace.

The note requested that the Soviet Embassy inform the government "as soon as possible of the steps to be taken with Soviet authorities to insure the freedom of action of proper officials in the internal affairs of the northern provinces as well as for transport of security forces of the Iran army in general and that body of Iranian troops in particular now held up by Soviet military authorities at Sharifabad en route to Azerbaijan."

The communication, generally regarded in diplomatic circles here as conciliatory in tone, expressed the Iranian government's satisfaction with Russian assurances of non-intervention in the international affairs of Iran and with assurances of Russian respect for tri-partite agreements concerning Iran.

The Iranian note followed publication of reports here that the Governor of Maragheh, 50 miles south of the main Azerbaijan city of Tabriz, had been killed by "rebels who entered the town several days ago."

Three official United States observers just returned from a trip to Azerbaijan estimated that the Autonomists have approximately 4,000 men under arms in the province.

The observers said conditions in Tabriz were "superficially normal," but armed Autonomists had established numerous roadblocks outside the city and were demanding identity cards of all travellers except Soviet military officials.

The British Embassy, meanwhile, denied reports that British and United States reinforcements had been moved into Iran.

SEVEN OF FAMILY BURNED TO DEATH IN NAPANEE FIRE

Six Died in Frame Home as They Slept While Daughter Dies in Kingston Hospital

Napanee, Dec. 3—(CP)—Fire apparently originating in an overheated stove or stovepipes struck early Sunday morning with terrifying suddenness in a two-storey home on the edge of Napanee and took seven lives.

Six died in the flames in the house, overtaken by the fire as they slept about 4:45 a. m. They were laborer Eddie Fox, 53; his wife, 53; two sons, Ralph 10; and Marshall, 22; Marshall's 23-year-old bride, the former Millicent Hooey of Toronto and Robert Bonnard, 68, brother of Mrs. Fox.

A daughter, Jean, 17, managed to jump from a second-storey window but was so badly burned she died in Kingston General Hospital.

Another daughter, Irene, and a son, Tommy, escaped to safety though both were burned.

Edgar Fox, veteran of the First Great War, had lived in this house for 25 years. Only recently the family had welcomed Tommy home from service in the army. Tommy first spotted the fire when he awoke in his bed on the ground floor of the dwelling, but had no opportunity to rouse the family. He burned his hand in an attempt to do so.

Burned Like Match Box

Fire Chief Frank Mills, told of the blaze in Fredericksburgh, on the edge of Napanee and beyond the jurisdiction of the Napanee fire department. "It burned like a match box," he said. "It seemed to me the house was in ruins in 15 minutes."

The jurisdictional point delayed arrival of the Napanee fire department but the fire chief said he believed no amount of speed could have saved the cottage. Normally the Napanee fire department does not cross the Napanee River—as it would have to do to reach Fredericksburgh—without permission of the Mayor and the chairman of the Fire, Water and Light Committee.

Tommy Fox told how the family retired about 10 o'clock Saturday night. He heard nothing until he awoke about 4:45 a. m. Sunday—"I don't know why"—and saw a patch of ceiling burning.

Called to His Brother

"I went to the foot of the stairs and called to my brother Marshall and told him to help me as I only thought it was a small fire," said Tommy. "My brother said "all right, I'll be right down." That was the last I heard or saw him."

Tommy tried then to quench but it was no use. He climbed on the blaze with a bucket of water a shed and attempted to holler at the family through windows—"but all I could hear or see were the flames.

His sister Irene jumped to the snow-covered ground. Then came Jean, badly burned. Tommy was able to break her fall somewhat.

Tommy told too of his Dad's dog, Pal, trying to drag out his father.

"Our black collie tried to grab Dad by the collar," said the youth. "When he couldn't make it the dog just lay down across Dad and waited for the end."

Dr. Karl Haushofer, Geopolitics Teacher, Near Death by Stroke

Nuernberg, Dec. 3 (AP)—Dr. Karl Haushofer, whose teachings of geopolitics to the Hitler clique almost caused him to be among the Neurnberg war crimes prisoners, is near death at his home near Munich. Seventy-six, he suffered a stroke.

GERMANS SHOW HATRED AGAINST U.S. OCCUPATION

Convinced Military Administration Is Suffering From Lack Of Policy

By JAMES F. KING

Frankfurt, Dec. 3 —(AP)— German resentment against United States occupation methods is developing gradually into bitter hatred which is giving rise to increasing talk of resistance, a survey made by United States intelligence officers has revealed.

An outstanding source of resentment, the survey found, is the conviction that the United States military administration is suffering from a lack of policy which the Germans hold responsible for much injustice and confusion.

This conviction, it was said, is shared by many of the clergy who profess pro-Allied sympathies.

Results of the survey, undertaken in an effort to obtain some light on "the German view," were embodied in a 20,000-word report made public yesterday.

In general, the investigators found that the Germans seem to feel that they have suffered enough, whatever their crimes.

"Whatever material losses were inflicted on other countries, Germany has lost more," is the way the average German seems to feel, the report said.

It pictured Germany as a land of groaners, and quoted one civil servant as saying, "the only thing Germans would be able really to agree on would be some form of resistance."

Make Formal Protest.

The report disclosed that the council of the Evangelistic Church in Germany had made a formal protest to the Inter-Allied Control Council charging injustices in the program for eradication of Nazis from public office.

"This campaign as we see it in the American zone will not exterminate Hitlerism," the protest said. "Indeed danger exists that Hitlerism will win new adherents."

Both clergy and laymen were reported of the opinion that United States policy is "resentful of the church's position as a defender of rights and suspicious of the church as an educational force."

The clergymen also protested against "the freedom accorded Poles and other foreigners when they take their revenge on the German people for evils which the Nazis inflicted on them."

There has been some talk among Germans of organizing vigilante groups to combat depradations by displaced persons, the survey said. There also has been talk of organizing similar groups "to punish fraternizing women."

Call Ontario Intelligencer For Election Results

The Ontario Intelligencer as is its usual custom will give a special telephone service tonight to relay the civic election results to city residents.

An augmented editorial staff will be on hand and extra telephones have been installed.

The general public is reminded that the polls close in the city at seven o'clock and NO RESULTS will be available until eight o'clock.

Call 98 or 99 for the election results, but do not call before eight o'clock.

Four Bandits Engage in Wild Volley Of Gunfire, Rob Store of $125

North Bay, Dec. 3 — (CP) — Four armed bandits held up the store of Albert Giroux of nearby River Valley early today, exchanged a wild volley of gunfire with Laurier Giroux, son of the owner, and finally escaped in a car with about $125.00 in cash and about $25 worth of cigarets.

About five miles from the store, the four men ditched the car and stole a truck. Provincial Police are now combing all roads leading out of the vicinity in search of the robbers.

Members of the Giroux family were in bed when the bandits entered the store, and Albert Giroux said he thought they were motorists seeking gasoline. His son, Laurier, went downstairs and found himself confronted by four armed men, on the point of leaving after having cleaned out the till.

Grabbing a gun which was kept nearby for emergencies, he fired about five shots at the retreating men and they returned them with a volley of gunfire, bullets burying themselves in the walls and narrowly missing young Giroux. The gunmen were unmasked.

Military Tribunal Hears Evidence Of German Guilt

Why U.K., France Were Led To Sign Munich Pact in '38

By WES GALLAGHER

Nuernberg, Dec. 3. (AP)—Hitler was not bluffing when his threats of war in 1938 led Britain and France to sign the Munich Pact, secret German war plans introduced at the international war crimes trial of 20 leading Nazis disclosed today.

Documents laid before the international military tribunal showed that the Munich pact—by which the Czech Sudetenland was handed over to the Nazis —was signed only two days before the date set by the German High Command for four armies and the air force to prepare for a blitz invasion of Czechoslovakia.

Not only were plans complete for the invasion of Czechoslovakia —with the help of Hungary—but the German air force expected France to join the fight and had prepared detailed plans for attack in the west, the evidence introduced by Allied prosecutors made plain.

Relaying Hitler's "unalterable decision to smash Czechoslovakia by military action" to commanders of the German army, navy and air forces, Field Marshal Wilhem Keitel, chief of the High Command, was quoted in an official directive as ordering that "its execution must be assured as from Oct. 1, 1938, at the latest."

Detailed plans for the blitz invasion and an agreement that Hungary would join in the attack left little doubt at the trial that the cold-blooded invasion would have been carried out if Britain and France had not signed the Munich Pact Sept. 29, 1938—two days before the deadline set by the High Command.

Plans for the bombing of Prague without warning were made by Col. Gen. Gustav Jodl, German army chief-of-State, while Sudeten Germans were ordered to stir up unrest and Hungary had promised to be ready to "take part in the conflict by October first," official German documents disclosed.

As the third week of the historic trial opened, prosecutors presented German army high command orders revealing that the conquest was planned in 1937—two years before the actual invasion and at a time when Hitler was assuring the world he had no desires for additional territory.

Pretext of Friendship

The Nazi plotting was carried on under a pretext of "friendship" through the Locarno Pact and other treaties. Hermann Goering nodded in agreement as a prosecutor quoted the former No. 2 Nazi as assuring the Czechs that "I give you my word of honor" that Germany had no aggressive intentions toward their country.

The German High Command plan for the blitz invasion of Czechoslovakia, drawn June 24, 1937, said "the necessary conditions to justify such action politically and in the eyes of international law must be created beforehand."

Hitler's calculated plans to stir up unrest among Germans in the Sudetenland were made plain by a directive amending the "case green" invasion plan calling for propaganda war to intimidate Prague officials by threats and to "direct national groups such as the Sudeten Germans to support the German forces and to influence neutrals into our way of thinking."

Eliminate Opposition

Also disclosed were plans to eliminate opposition to the invasion in Hungary and Poland by dismembering Czechoslovakia among the three countries Poland got the Teschen-Boehmen area and Hungary took over the province of Ruthenia after Hitler finally moved in.

Relating a conference between Hitler and Admiral Nicholas Horthy, Regent of Hungary, in mid-summer of 1938, one document showed that Horthy favored the dismemberment of the little country but a fellow minister opposed it.

"Whoever wants to join the eating must help in the cooking," Hitler was reported as saying.

Italy, also, was aware of the conspiracy, according to a German foreign office memorandum, which said that "Attolico (Italian Ambassador Bernardo Attolico) added that he had made it unmistakably clear to Italians what our intentions are regarding Czechoslovakia."

A note initialled by Foreign Minister Von Ribbentrop, another of the score of Nazi defendants, said that Mussolini was to be one of the first to be notified as to the actual date of occupation of Czechoslovakia.

Other Foreign Office memorandums read into the evidence showed that Hungary definitely decided to join Germany in the partition of Czecho-Slovakia. They quoted the Hungarian foreign minister, Kolman von Kanya, as telling Von Ribbentrop that his country "would be ready as far as armaments were concerned to take part in the conflict Oct. 1 of this year (1938.)

Earlier Von Ribbentrop had assured Hungarian diplomats that Yugoslavia would not dare to go to the defence of the Czechs and said that "England and France would remain tranquil — England would not recklessly risk her empire."

Memorandum Signed by Jodl.

The prosecution then introduced a memorandum signed by Col.-Gen. Jodl, which he said showed complicity in "shameful fabrication . . . as an excuse for war." The Jodl memo said:

"Operation Green will be set in motion by means of an 'incident' in Czechoslovakia which will give Germany provocation for military intervention. Fixing of the exact time for this incident is of the utmost importance. It must come at a time when weather conditions are favorable for our superior airforce . . . and at an hour which would enable authentic news of it to reach us."

"Even warning to diplomatic representatives in Prague is impossible before the first air attack," Jodl told Hitler in the plan, which the Fuehrer promptly approved.

The four-power tribunal took great interest in a detailed German study on how to deal with all possible violations of international law involved in the Czech invasion.

Signing at Munich.

Field Marshal Keitel, according to another German document, introduced as evidence, was ordered on Sept. 26, 1938, to move his assault forces up to the jumping-off places for the Czechoslovak invasion. Next day Britain mobilized her fleet and Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain joined French Premier Edouard Daladier at Munich, where they finally gave in before Hitler's threat of war and signed the Munich Pact Sept. 29.

Citing the growth of the Nazi party into a powerful fifth column among the Sudeten Germans, an official Czechoslovak report filed with the court asserted: "Few people knew that Henlein (Konrad Henlein, Nazi leader in Czechoslovakia) went on Hitler's payroll . . . in 1933."

Declaring that the evidence tells the "inside story" of the Munich Pact, Prosecutor Alderman said the mobilizing of Germany's armed might was "a trap set by these people who are here on trial."

CHILDREN WARNED AGAINST SLEIGHRIDING ON CITY STREETS

Reports of city children taking advantage of icy conditions on local street grades for sleighriding brought warnings from the police department over the weekend. Several calls were received at the police station to the effect that children were using Church St., Patterson St. and Albion St. hills for sleighriding with officers being detailed to warn the children against such practices.

"Children using city streets for sleighriding are placing themselves in danger of accidents from vehicular traffic," commented Police Chief Walter Probert as he warned local children against such practice.

MINOR BLAZES KEEP FIREMEN BUSY

Minor blazes at four different addresses kept the local fire department comparatively busy over the weekend. Firemen were called to a South Church Street address on Sunday to extinguish a blaze in a brooder house when the brooder stove became over-heated, while they also answered an alarm to 214 Dufferin Ave., to extinguish a blaze under the living room floor which had ignited from the fireplace. Two other alarms answered were to Foster Ave., where a car was reported afire, and to Queen Mary School grounds where ashes dumped at the foot of a tree had ignited the stump.

Christmas Cigars In Short Supply Say Tobacconists

So you think you're going to smoke cigars for Christmas? Well—you may get the odd one, but brother don't go around promising the old man, the boss, or the father-in-law a box.

For they just "ain't" to be had, that is, in quantities, so tobacconists of the city say.

It's going to be a tough winter on the inveterate cigar smoker, and it may be that he'll have to resort to rolling his own from the overcoats of the winter cabbage if he cannot adopt himself to the common "fag" or the old dudeen.

It doesn't mean that cigars are going to disappear altogether. There will be the occasional one that will be passed over the counters. If you are not fussy as to quality or price, and it is rumored there may be an occasional handout of the kind that politicians and those seeking office passed over when looking for election bait.

For the chap who smokes the occasional weed in cigar form, the season won't be so bad, but to those who absorb from six to ten a day and you would be surprised to know how many men do that little thing, it's going to be a bit nerve-wracking.

FOUR TORONTO HOMES ROBBED

Toronto, Dec. 3 — (CP)—Robberies of four different Toronto premises Saturday night and early Sunday netted thieves $20 in cash, $350 in bonds, four tires, a Gladstone bag and miscellaneous articles of clothing and jewelry.

The tires were stolen from a service station, the cash from the offices of a steel products firm and the remaining loot from breakins at two private residences.

DENIES UNION RUMOR

Washington, Dec. 3 — (AP)—The United Electrical Workers (C.I.O.) said Sunday General Electric and Westinghouse Electric Companies are "abandoning" 15 government-built war plants costing $132,000,000 and erecting new factories in small-town, low-wage areas. A Westinghouse spokesman denied the assertion.

Public Invited To View Exhibits At Dairy Show

A cordial invitation for every resident of the city and district to visit the British Empire Dairy Show being held at the city hall today, Tuesday and Wednesday was expressed today by James I. Irwin, honorary president of the show.

Judging of the 250 cheese on show at the exhibition has now been completed and with decorations and prize cards in position, the show was declared open for the public on Monday morning.

Decorated in a motif of green, yellow and white, the exhibition room presents a delightful picture to the visitor, the symbol of peace being cleverly depicted on a colorful background which shows the dove of peace flying against a rainbow. The colored rainbow again is indicative of the calm following declaration of peace.

Exhibition officials were high in their praise of the artistry of the two men, Don Lee and Walter Baker, responsible for the preparation of decorations at the cheese show.

Although there were 250 cheese entered in the show, judging was completed by Saturday afternoon with prize lists completed and cards in position for the formal opening on Monday. Judges for the exhibition were Garnet Bain, Thomas J. Hicks, D. W. Beattie and Eugene Kuisnel.

Eighteenth annual convention of the Central Ontario Cheesemakers' Association is scheduled to get underway at the Quinte Hotel on Tuesday morning, while the various sessions will be concluded Wednesday evening with a cheesemakers' banquet at Bridge Street United Church Sunday School Room.

16-Year-Old Held for Theft Of a Shotgun

Sale of a double-barrelled 12-gauge shotgun to a Marmora resident by a local youth was shortlived over the weekend when just as the sale was completed the vendor, one James Mole, aged 16,, was arrested by Inspector Clair Hayes on a charge of stealing the gun.

Saturday morning Jack Hillier, Front Street, reported the theft of a shotgun and ten boxes of shells and gave police a description of the youth thought responsible. The youth had been given permission to stay overnight at the Hillier residence but in the absence of the owner had disappeared with the shotgun and shells.

Over the weekend Inspector Hayes followed Mole to Marmora where he apprehended the youth as the sale of the gun was complete. On his way north the youth had carried the gun and two heavy suitcases, one of which he had left in a hen coop just west of Foxboro.

EDITOR TAKES NEW POST

CANADIAN BOOKS POPULAR

Montreal, Dec. 3 — (CP) —Acceptance of Canadian books in the literary market reached its highest peak during the war years, Roderick S. Kennedy, National President of the Canadian Authors' Association, said Saturday night in an address at the closing session of the Association's annual meeting.

GEN. VOKES DELAYED

Amsterdam, Dec. 3 — (CP) — Maj.-Gen. Chris Vokes, Commander of the Canadian Army Occupation force in Germany, was held up for two hours Saturday at the German frontier when British guards refused to allow him to cross the border into Holland until he received permission from the headquarters of occupation force.

Precipitation Greater in '45 Than Last Year

Although precipitation during November 1945 was slightly greater than that received during the same month last year, the snow conditions experienced were far from the equal of those last year.

According to statistics given out by officials of the Belleville Water Purification Plant, there were but 8.2 inches of snow during the month just closed, while one year ago the snowfall measured exactly 14 inches.

Rainfall this year at 2.20 inches was almost one inch greater than that received last November. Total precipitation received last year was 2.71 as compared with 3.03 inches this year. Precipitation fell on 24 days this year as against 19 days last November.

Mean temperatures experienced during the two months were exactly the same, 37 degrees with a high of 63 degrees. Low temperature this year was 15 degrees as compared with a balmy 20 last year.

Suggests 4-Club Committee To Avoid Duplication

A suggestion by "Bud" Trill, president of the local Y's-Men's Club that the four service clubs in the city each appoint two men to a special committee which would meet once each month to discuss projects being planned has been put before members of Rotary, Kiwanis, Kinsmen and Y's-Men in this city.

According to its progenitor the above plan would tend to avoid duplication of service club work being undertaken by the four local clubs and would also tend to avoid confusion regarding possible dates for tag days, concerts, or any other project being planned. The matter will be discussed by each of the local service clubs at future meetings.

Racing Pigeon Club Formed In This District

Pigeon fanciers of the Belleville and Trenton district have formed the Trenton and District Racing Pigeon Club and will hold about six races this coming season, it is announced following their organizational meeting held in Trenton last week.

President of the new pigeon racing club is Les Farrell of Trenton, with Perce Robertson of Trenton as vice president and secretary treasurer Ross Newton, also of Trenton.

Formed with the view of racing homing pigeons against combined competition and to create interest of the general public in this fine sport the club is now desirous of communicating with persons in the Bay of Quinte district having racing Homing pigeons in order that greater competition in races may be created.

London, Ontario, will in all probability end this season's young bird races, it is stated, this distance of 250 miles being considered the right distance at which to test the stamina and instinct of a young bird.

Prizes for the six young bird races to be held within the club during the season will be trophies and diplomas which will be presented to the owner of the winning birds.

Motor Car Used For Tethering Post

City housewives who come downtown shopping these days are using unusual—and dangerous—tethering posts for their children a casual observer noticed on Front Street one day last week.

Apparently not caring to take her child into the crowded store with her, a local mother had tied her toddler to the front bumper of a parked car and then had gone blithely about her shopping. After some little time the owner of the auto came from across the street and stepping into his vehicle, started the motor and was about to move away when a passing pedestrian called to him.

Getting out of his car he was surprised to find the tethered youngster. He untied the child and while holding the tether in his hand the mother nonchalantly emerged from the store. "Thanks for waiting for me," smiled the mother to the puzzled motorist as she moved up the street.

STEEL INDUSTRY FACES SHUTDOWN

Cleveland, Dec. 3 — (AP) — The "most disturbing consideration" at the moment in the steel industry is "the prospect of a general shutdown, perhaps by the end of the year," because of the steelworkers' strike vote, the magazine Steel said Sunday.

SOUVENIRS FROM OVERSEAS

Lt.-Col. Rowan C. Coleman, D.S.O., M.C., of Montreal, officer commanding the Lincoln and Welland Regiment, passes out British pennies to his nephew "Butch" Coleman, son of Jim Coleman, sports columnist of the Toronto Globe and Mail, at the dockside Tuesday night in Halifax, shortly after he disembarked from the Canadian Pacific liner, Empress of Scotland. Looking on with amusement are Col. Coleman's parents, D. C. Coleman, chairman and president of the Canadian Pacific Railway Company, and Mrs. Coleman. Col. Coleman fought with the British First Army in Tunisia and with the Canadians from Sicily through to Northwest Europe. He was twice wounded and twice decorated.

Knights Hold District Meeting

The regional meeting of District No. 3 of the Knights of Columbus was called to order by Br. Maurice Callaghan of Belleville, who welcomed the guests. District Deputy George Lee of Belleville took charge of the meeting.

The representatives of the various councils were as follows:—Brockville, Grand Knight Br. John Requa; Smiths Falls and Perth, Grand Knight Br. Ray McParlan; Trenton, Past Grand Knight Br. McNabb, and Belleville, Grand Knight Maurice Callaghan.

Reports were given by the Grand Knights of the attending councils. It was made known that the Major Degrees would be held in Brockville in late March, 1946.

Speakers of the evening were Squire Ted Boyle and Squire David Peets of the Belleville Circle of Columbian Squires. Rt. Rev. Monsignor Nicholson thanked the speakers and stressed the ideals of the Order which forms the foundation of the Church and State.

Br. Urban S. Hughes, R.C.A.F., Mt. View, told of the work of the Knights of Columbus Canadian Army Huts. He thanked all the councils for their magnificent support which made these Huts possible during the war.

Past State Deputy A. B. Collins of Belleville paid tribute to the Past State officers of the district.

State Deputy Thos. McGee outlined what the Knights of Columbus were expected to do as members of this great brotherhood.

The meeting was closed by Grand Knight Br. Maurice Callaghan who again thanked the speakers and guests for helping to make the meeting a success.

Refreshments were served at the close of the meeting.

Canadian Soldier Executed in July For Murder

Ottawa, Dec. 3 —(CP)— Pte. Harold J. Pringle of Flinton, Ont., was executed by a firing squad in Italy last July after court-martial conviction of the murder of a fellow-soldier, Defence Headquarters disclosed Saturday. It was the first case of such an execution in the Canadian Army in the Second Great War.

Headquarters said in a statement that Pte. Pringle, member of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, was tried by general court-martial in the field in Italy in February of this year for the murder of Pte. J. N. (Lucky) McGillivray of New Waterford, Cape Breton, N.S., on or about Nov. 1, 1944.

The court-martial found him guilty and sentenced him to "suffer death by being shot." The proceedings were duly reviewed and confirmed and the execution took place at Avellino, Italy, July 6, 1945.

IN MEMORIAM

SMITH — In loving memory of our dear Dad, William Smith, who passed away December 2nd., 1943.

One there is who wants to help thee,
Lead thee all the way,
Fear thou not, His love will keep thee
Through each toilsome day.

—Always remembered by his son, Bill.

SMITH — In loving memory of our dear Dad and Grandfather, William Smith, who passed away December 2nd., 1943.

Tears in thine eyes today,
Gladness tomorrow;
All through life's hidden way
Come joy and sorrow.

—Always remembered by Ivy, Harold, June and Ronald.

SMITH — In loving memory of our father, William Smith, who passed away December 2, 1943.

Gone, dear father, gone forever,
How we miss your smiling face,
But you left us to remember
None on earth can take your place.
A happy home we once enjoyed—
How sweet the memory still—
But death has left a loneliness,
The world can never fill.

—Fondly remembered by son, Clifford and Family.

SMITH — In memory of William Smith, who passed away December 2nd., 1943.

The rolling stream of life goes on,
But still the vacant chair
Recalls the time, the voice, the smile,
Of him who once sat there.

—Ever remembered by Ida Luffman.

STORE AT CEDAR GROVE BURNS; FAMILY ESCAPE

Toronto, Dec. 3 — (CP)—The general store and residence of Arthur Offen and Son in the hamlet of Cedar Grove, some 15 miles northeast of here, was destroyed with contents by fire of undetermined origin early Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. George Offen and their four children, asleep in the second storey of the building, were roused by the cries of the baby, Wendy. The entire family escaped from the burning residence in night attire.

Loss was estimated at more than $15,000.

East, West Europe Are Different Worlds

Western Europe is today in a condition which may be compared to that near the end of the fourth century, Marcel Wallenstein writes in The Kansas City Star.

At that period Rome, tottering in decay, had been divided into two sections, the western administered from the old capital in Italy, the eastern from Constantinople. Hordes of virile barbarians were gathered on the northern and eastern frontiers for an assault on the decadent Western civilization. The Huns invaded Europe in 375. Rome was sacked by Alaric, king of the Goths, in 410. Roman legions departed from Britain the following year after an occupation of four and one-half centuries.

Followed the period known in history as the Dark Ages, centuries during which learning and the arts retreated to monasteries, superstition battled with the forces of light until the eastern hordes had been in part assimilated.

Europe Abhors Vacuum

If the analogy is admittedly inexact, it is close enough to stir the imaginations of students of history. The decline of Rome was followed by a vacuum which can no more endure in politics than in the science of physics. In the fourth and fifth centuries the vacuum was swiftly filled from the East. Why should it not happen again?

The old foundations in Western continental Europe have gone — the Austro-Hungarian empire and its successor, the German Reich, dominated by Prussia, are no more. Italy is a negligible quantity, stripped of nearly everything which makes a powerful political entity. France, for centuries the chief factor of the European continent, with a population of less than 45 millions at home and what appears to be a failing grip on its empire abroad, cannot be reckoned as one of the most powerful world forces.

Britain, the island power on the edge of the European continent, has been woefully drained by two wars within the span of a generation. The population of the United Kingdom is today 45 million. The Empire of which Britain is the centre is not only divided by oceans, but its component parts are under-populated by the races sufficiently virile to constitute a powerful defence force.

After Stalin What?

Russia, a single world power, remains in Europe. Russia is a dictatorship, nominally a collection of Socialist states functioning under a council of the Communist Party, itself subservient to the will of a single individual whose decisions are final. This man, Stalin, approaches the final years of his life. He speaks of approaching death, not only to his familiars, but to statesmen of other nations. No one can foresee what will follow Stalin.

As constituted, the collection of races known as Soviet Russia is not predatory. There is no disposition on the part of Stalin or his associates to overrun Europe, or even to communize the western parts, although the latter intention is feared as to the Balkan lands and Hungary. Russia has living space, raw materials, nearly everything required by a nation.

Then why should the West fear migration from Russia?

British Foreign Policy

The answer, at least in part, lies across the narrow stretch of water that separates an island from a continent. Never in modern times have the British been content to live adjacent to the continent dominated by one power. Repeatedly the British fought France to prevent such domination. Twice again the British fought Germany for the same reason. But even more important, it is doubtful if the British and Russian system can continue to exist side by side, and it is doubtful if other political systems can live in peace as neighbors to the Russian dictatorship.

Each side may be willing and even painfully anxious to make compromises; each may detest war and its accompanying starvation and poverty. Each may honestly endeavor to continue as a peaceful neighbor. This may be true, even if recent events have made it appear otherwise.

But even so, world forces, and the divergence between the mode of government, life and thought threaten a collision at some future time.

Stalin The Prophet

In the new Russia the state is God and Stalin, secretary of the Communist Party and marshal of the immense armed forces—and Stalin only—is the prophet of that deity.

Any neighboring state exalting the liberty of the individual immediately finds itself at cross purposes with the god-state.

Liberty of the individual is the cornerstone of British life and politics. Freedom to vote, worship, buy and sell, speak and write are guaranteed in the unwritten British constitution, beginning with the Magna Charta, and continuing through many acts of the freely elected members of the House of Commons.

Here, then, are two powers with diametrically opposing systems. Those who believe the presence of a Labor or Socialist government in Britain will ease any strain between the two powers should have heard the exchanges between Ernest Bevin and Molotov, opposing foreign officers at the abortive meeting of ministers of the five powers in London. Never before had they been so uncompromising and bitter. The uncompromising attitudes of Molotov and Bevin are symptoms.

Policies Don't Change

Governments come and go in Britain, but foreign policy administered by a selfless and anonymous civil service continues. Something of the same may be said for Russia, but in that country it is an Asiatic rather than a European conception.

Here, then, at the two ends of Europe are the protagonists. Between them lies a territory occupied by a collection of nations reduced for a long period to weakness, divided by national aims, fears and problems. There is not today among them sufficient power to combat a threat from the East. Something resembling a vacuum lies between Britain and Russia. It will be filled, possibly, by makeshift political structures of a temporary nature. The certainty is that the vacuum cannot continue.

Voters to Decide Proposed Works Of Seven Millions

(By The Canadian Press)

Voters in several Ontario cities decide today on proposed public works and other post-war projects involving a total expenditure of nearly $7,000,000 — a Kitchener plan calls for a $1,650,000 Kitchener-Waterloo hospital—and a dozen will choose their mayors for 1946.

Cities with mayoralty contests are Hamilton, London, Brockville, North Bay, Stratford, Belleville, Peterboro, Welland, Kitchener, Kingston, Niagara Falls, Brantford and Sarnia.

A week ago Galt, Sudbury, Cornwall, Guelph, St. Thomas, Woodstock and Chatham elected their mayors by acclamation and in those cities interest today centres on the choice for other municipal offices as well as money by-laws and other civic questions. Windsor's mayor is about to start the second half of his two-year term but in that city ratepayers are to vote for other municipal offices.

Ottawa, which also elects its mayor for a two-year term, has no election this year.

Toronto, St. Catharines, Owen Sound, Timmins and Sault Ste. Marie hold their elections in January.

Fixed Assessment

Candidates elected in Kingston today may hold office two years. Coupled with the usual voting for mayor and aldermen is the decision on a by-law which would give successful candidates two years in office.

The question of fixed assessments goes before electors in two cities. Stratford's concerns a $10,000 assessment for a new industry, Canadian Wooden Aircraft, and Sarnia, which also votes an a bus franchise, considers a fixed assessment for a proposed new hotel.

Brockville electors will decide on a bus franchise. In Hamilton, voters are to rule on a three-platoon system and a 48-hour week for city firemen.

Besides its proposed new hospital, Kitchener is to ponder expenditure of $450,000 for a civic auditorium which would include a skating and hockey ring.

Woodstock votes on a transfer of property with the Canadian Legion and on institution of daylight saving time from May 1 to Sept. 30 each year.

Spending projects up for decision include:

Hamilton — $1,300,000 for purchase of electric street railway from Hydro Commission; $500,000 for parks improvement.

Niagara Falls — $563,000 for sewers; $575,000 for Collegiate addition; $150,000 for new city hall.

Other large expenditure votes come up for decision in Galt, London, Belleville, Peterboro, Welland and North Bay.

Coroner Shares Man's Suspicions

Peterborough, Dec. 1 (CP) — Frank Mumby, whose wife's body was found frozen in the snow outside their home at Crowe's Landing early Thursday said Friday night he is not satisfied as to the manner of her death, and Crown Coroner Dr. H. G. Carleton said he shares Mumby's suspicions.

At his home Mumby said: "She went to the store at midnight and didn't come back. I stayed awake all night with our boy, Norman, and kept looking out the door for her. It wasn't until morning that I looked out the upstairs window and saw her body in the snow."

The body, he said, was found on the opposite side of the house to the usually-travelled path from the main highway and he could not understand what she was doing there.

Mumby said he found one of her shoes, the lace missing, just outside the back door. The other has not been found, nor has the flashlight which he said she carried when she left for the store.

"I'm not satisfied," said Dr. Carleton, who performed the postmortem and ordered an inquest. He has sent some of the woman's organs to Prof. Joslyn Rogers of the University of Toronto, for further examination.

Who'll Live Longest?

By HELEN C. BENETT
(in "This Week" Magazine)

Are you one of those who are looking for a vocation that will last a lifetime and a lifetime that will last. As a discharged veteran, you've had all the adventure and faced all the danger you care to. You're figuring on getting the kind long time. Who'd be your best adviser?

The life-insurance actuary—for it's his business to calculate the mathematical chances of survival according to occupation, age, ancestry, blood pressure and behavior.

The actuary has reduced most of these factors to easy decimals; but he's a little cagey when he talks about jobs. All he will say is that a number of extensive surveys indicate that you're safer in some jobs than in others, and that his statistical studies will give you a good idea of which vocation to choose as the less risky.

A cautious fellow, the actuary, mit himself absolutely on this job-safety matter, he is the absolutest authority there is on the subject. And you can bet your life on his advice, which is, generally, as follows:

Surveys and insurance experience show you're more secure in a profession than in a trade. The desk is safer than the workbench.

And the pulpit is safer than the desk.

The actuaries say that ministers are about tops in longevity. However, there is something to the saying that the good die young in the peculiar phenomenon that, between 25 and 35 ministerial mortality seems to be higher than that of laymen. But, if a person gets over that hurdle, his expectancy thereafter is above average.

• • •

Next to being a sky pilot, the profession of sky surveyor is recommended by actuaries for longevity. Mortality among astronomers is 20 per cent under that of the general public and only five per cent above that of ministers.

The odds are also in your favor if you go into law. Lawyers don't appear at the final bar of judgment until much later than their clients. However, if the law should lead you into politics, head for the Cabinet or the Supreme Court, but don't run for President—or even for Vice-President.

Figures show that Cabinet members for the past 80 years have lived longer than the average for men their age, and Supreme Court Justices do still better. But Presidents go down twice as fast as men their own age, and Vice-Presidents are almost as bad off. Even defeated presidential candidates show a high morality.

A job as a teacher is a comfortable risk, with a death rate well under the average, while the work of a writer, an architect, a civil engineer or a life-insurance actuary is also much less lethal than that of the average factory worker or wage earner in general.

If your object in life is to outlive other people, don't be a doctor. Their expectancy is less than that of almost any other profession. It's a grim fact that physicians, who have done most to extend the lease on life for humanity in general, have been among those least benefited by the extension.

• • •

If you select a trade instead of a profession, seek your safety indoors rather than out. Anyhow, one of the safest of trades, though from the two most comprehensive surveys made in 1928 and 1937.

A job as fur dresser rates as one of the safest of trades, through a cigar-maker also has a healthful situation with a low mortality factor. A barber is unlikely to be sheared off early, and a bellhop's job also ranks among the safest, or did in 1937. (That, however, was before the average age of bellhops went up to 88. A survey made today would be different.)

If you prefer working under the sky instead of under a roof, your best bet is being a farmer, who, though not as saf eas a fur dresser, has a 15 per cent edge on the average. Wo west, young man. Or stay east and raise flowers or trees, both of which are low-morality crafts. Or run an amusement park—that's healthy too.

In your search for safety, the job to flee from—though not in a car—is that of motor cop. The patroller of highways and giver-out of summonses, is 317 per cent more likely to get his own final summons than the average motorist. This is due almost entirely to the chance of accident when pursuing speed maniacs, and a high percentage of danger from homicide by highjackers and other types of mortality.

Miners and stokers have slightly less perilous jobs, but even these occupations more than double the odds against you.

There are some oddities indicated by these two surveys. For example, mixing drinks as a bartender is seemingly riskier than mixing explosives, and preparing food as a cook is safer than serving it as a waiter. While tree-raising is one of the least lethal of outdoor occupations, tree-felling is one of the chanciest. Run a stationary engine in a power plant and you have one of the safest of jobs, but be a lineman for the same system and you face a mortality rate 2-and-a-third times the average. Weave wool and you're safer than most people, weave cotton and you're 33 per cent less safe than the average. And the guy who's there at the payoff— the undertaker — isn't very safe, either.

"BRAVE HARVEST" TELLS LIFE STORY OF E. CORA HIND

Work and Achievement of Woman Agriculture Expert Told in Absorbing Chronicle

Winnipeg (CP) — Acclaimed wherever the language of agriculture is spoken, the work and achievements of E. Cora Hind, one of Canada's foremost authorities on grain and livestock, have been recorded in a biography of Kennethe M. Haig, of Winnipeg.

The book, "Brave Harvest" (Thomas Allen Limited) is not only the life story of a woman whose name became known around the world for the uncanny accuracy of her crop surveys, but an absorbing chronicle of Western Canada's march from the primitive economy of pioneering days.

Miss Hind, for 41 years agricultural editor of the Winnipeg Free Press and dean of Canadian newspaperwomen when she died October 6, 1942, throughout her career worked with fanatical zeal for the advancement of western agriculture.

The story is related that Miss Hind's inspection method was "to stop her car, march into a field, spin around three times with her eyes shut and grab a stalk of wheat." But those who accompanied her on inspection trips recall a different technique. She would travel hundreds of miles in a day, climb through or over fences, make excursions among stooks or standing grain, take sample heads here and there, examine and thresh them in her hands.

An outcry developed in 1913 that her estimate was far too low and would "ruin the credit of the country." Suggestions were made that her reports be suppressed. A week later the Dominion government's official estimate gave the probable yield slightly less than Miss Hind's estimate. When the crop was garnered she was correct almost to the bushel.

Miss Hind, however, had her fingers on the pulse of all the departments of agriculture, covered conventions of the leading farm organizations, attended shows and livestock fairs. Hers was a familiar figure, attired in high boots, breeches, buckskin coat and cowboy hat, tramping through the show rings of the country.

Admired Pioneers.

The first woman typist west of the Great Lakes, Miss Hind arrived in Winnipeg August 7, 1882. Shortly after the turn of the century she watched the torrent of immigrants coursing into the Western wilderness. Within ten years the population of the Prairies more than doubled, bringing new settlers from 33 countries.

She paid glowing tribute to those early pioneers for their brave struggle against adversity and fortitude in the face of "suffocating loneliness." She witnessed the hardships and setbacks from a ringside seat, saw ruin and devastation lay their withering touch on grain fields and livestock.

"Never did E. Cora Hind find agriculture dull; never did she find it anything other than thrilling—a partnership with God."

In a tribute following the death of Miss Hind, a personal friend wrote: "She used to come to Ottawa three or four times a year and her routine never varied. In the course of three days she would see perhaps sixty people, beginning each day at 7 a.m. and knocking off at midnight. She was never content to talk with the higher-ups. She always sought out the men who were doing the actual work—scientists in their greenhouses, pathologists in their labs. Strangely, whenever a new idea was being born—crested wheat grass, breeding regulations and so on—Miss Hind turned up to give a hand. And she usually stood guard until the baby was firmly established."

Moira — Rev. Carrie Hazzard and Rev. Lois Richardson of Camden, New Jersey, spent a day recently with Mrs. M. Hazzard.

Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Clarke are visiting Mr. George Post.

Mr. Charles Morland is erecting a new barn to replace the one recently destroyed by fire.

Mr. and Mrs. Garrance Bird, and family, of Port Arthur, are visiting with Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Morland.

Messrs. St. Clair Post and Milton Thompson have returned from hunting, having met with fair success.

Mrs. Frank Hammond spent a few days last week with her daughter, Mrs. Kenneth Thompson.

A very successful auction sale was held on Tuesday at the home of Mr. John Morton, with Mr. Phil Carr as auctioneer. Mr. Morton has rented his farm to Mr. Donald McInroy.

"Oh dear no—I never have maid trouble. I give them crisp, delicious Grape-Nuts Flakes every morning!"

"When our maid's friends visit her and see those malty-rich, honey-golden Grape-Nuts Flakes on our shelves, they just insist upon coming to work for us!"

"Why that's wonderful! And I can understand why the dears work so well—getting all those carbohydrates for energy, proteins for muscle, phosphorus for teeth and bones, iron for the blood, and other food essentials Grape-Nuts Flakes give them."

"Exactly, darling! Grape-Nuts Flakes, you know, are made of two grains—not just one! Wheat and malted barley are skilfully blended, baked and toasted, to achieve that heavenly flavor and make Grape-Nuts Flakes so easy to digest."

"I'm going to pick up a giant economy package of Grape-Nuts Flakes on my way home."

for CATARRH,

BRONCHIAL ASTHMA, ANTRUM, SINUS ALSO CATARRHAL AND BRONCHIAL COLDS!

What is LANTIGEN?

Lantigen is a specially prepared dissolved vaccine and has been used successfully in the treatment of various diseases. Lantigen is not a patent medicine. Lantigen is a bacterial vaccine in a dissolved state, is devoid of drugs and safe to take. Lantigen is a natural aid. It is produced from the bacteria which are peculiar to the particular disease requiring treatment. In the preparation of Lantigen the organisms are destroyed by a process of dissolution thus releasing the active principles from the bacterial bodies. Being in a completely dissolved state the vaccine is operative locally by absorption into the tissues of the tongue, tonsils, throat, and the intestinal tract and is further operative by means of its distribution throughout the system. More than 150,000 people in Australia have enjoyed relief from the distressing affects of catarrh and allied conditions.

Welcome Cheese Makers and Empire Dairy Show

On Tuesday, December 4th., the annual convention and British Empire Dairy Show of the Central Ontario Cheese Makers' Association will open in Belleville. The Dairy Show was cancelled a year ago because of proper stage facilities for the exhibition of cheese but now that the victory has been won and the war is over the convention and exhibition of cheese will take place. About two hundred and fifty cheese are on view in the show and these will demonstrate the type of cheese required for export. The Cheese Makers' Association looks forward to the time when normalcy will return when there will be competition with other countries to contend with and hence stress is laid upon quality.

The association has had a fine record during its eighteen years. During the war a magnificent work has been done for the Allied cause by the cheese makers and factories and the entire dairy industry. They served well and now with victory come their products are still of the first importance for the world weakened by war and these will play no small part in the rehabilitation and recovery of the world from these post-war conditions of today.

The emphasis placed upon food today shows that the production of food, among which cheese is of very high value and importance, will play no little part in speeding readjustment in war-stricken Europe and elsewhere.

The history of the Central Ontario Cheese Makers' Association proved its importance and that of the British Empire Dairy Show in improvement of quality and finish.

The cheese industry has been a vital factor and one of the great tools of the Allied war effort.

Belleville as the centre of a great dairying district and a shipping point from which moves so great a volume of cheese is proud of the association and the British Empire Dairy Show which have brought a reputation to this entire district. We extend a welcome to the cheese makers and all attending the convention and exhibition and predict an expanding future.

Scottish Home for General Eisenhower

The Scottish people have a fine sense of appreciation and have shown it in a very appropriate manner. They have presented a suite of rooms in Culzean Castle to General Dwight Eisenhower as a mark of their high estimate of the war service he has rendered the United Nations and the cause of liberty. The castle is on the famous Firth of Clyde.

Such a gift is in keeping with the spirit of hospitality which has been a mark of the Scotch all through their history. General Eisenhower who handled the Western Front assault on Nazi Germany is the type of man who feels the honor which has been bestowed upon him of having a home among the people of the Scottish race.

Careful Driving

Motorists are now in the season in which they must take the greatest care to avoid accidents. Roads may become slippery with little or no warning by change in the weather and the driver must ever be on the watch.

One matter requiring the exercise of care and caution concerns the condition of tires. The tread may be so worn as to have little grip or traction on an icy pavement or piece of road or the tire may be so old and used as to blow out when the car is making headway at a good rate of speed.

Accidents at this time of year easily endanger lives or limbs not only of the driver and his companions in the car but also of pedestrians and other people in other cars. A skidding car easily can do much damage when the ordinary control is gone.

Drivers of motor cars are in charge of vehicles with a great capacity for giving pleasure but there is also a capacity for disaster if an accident should happen and unless the driver is constantly on the alert, especially at this season of the year. The slightest deviation from constant watchfulness and alertness may be the cause of an accident.

Pedestrians, too, have a duty also to be on the lookout when crossings are slippery.

Resting Bench

(New York Times)

What this country needs is more resting benches. Science has provided us with so many labor-saving devices that we are exhausted trying to keep up with them. Of course, there are places to rest. There are park benches, for example, that are made of lattice-work two by fours bolted into cement underpinnings. When a man gets up from one of them after half an hour he feels like a Venetian blind. There are overstuffed chairs, good to look at and reasonably comfortable in use, but when a man struggles to rise it consumes all the energy he has just restored.

Time was a generation ago when there was a resting bench on the south side of every well-equipped barn. It was made of planed white pine, a two-inch plank, and had four sturdy white-oak peg legs. The countryman never bothered to paint his resting bench; he liked the soft gray weathered color. On a sunny day in late fall or early winter it was good to have a few minutes relaxation after noon dinner on the bench. The hens came around scratching for hay seed and bits of gravel. Shep, the shaggy collie, curled up at the farmer's feet and got his forty winks before the afternoon's work in the wood lot began. Resting benches have gone out of fashion. But since there seem to be cycles when the favorites of yesteryear come into their own again, perhaps the plain comfortable benches will once more be seen on the south side of barns.

British Industry "Research-Minded"

The federation of British industries have begun a survey of industrial research throughout the country. The results are expected to show that British industry is carrying out research on a far greater scale than is generally realized. Questionnaires are being sent to all manufacturing concerns carrying out research and development, and to all research organizations servicing industry.

A bill has been introduced to the House of Lords by Lord Barnby, aiming at the creation of research institutes in Britain for every branch of industry. The object of this bill is that by the creation of such research institutes, every industry shall be constantly improved and modernized to such an extent that British production can successfully compete with any overseas trade. The costs entailed by this research work, would it is proposed, be covered by contributions not exceeding one per cent of each proprietor's turnover.

No Surplus of Wood

There is no surplus of wood. It is a valuable farm crop the supply of which is constantly dwindling, says Chicago Daily News.

Thousands of acres of marginal and eroded lands could well go back into trees with profit to their owners. In Illinois and elsewhere, state nurseries make it easy for distributing seedlings at cost.

Reforestation and soil conservation point the way to the farm program of the future. They are necessary to guarantee not only an abundant food supply but better housing and the innumerable useful articles made from trees.

THE UNATTAINED DREAM

Winston Churchill confessed his one unattained ambition is to play the kettle drum.—News Cable.

To each some happiness denied,
  A goal withheld from one and all,
Some joy, forever put aside,
  Which age will tenderly recall.
A carpenter, the priest would be
  And to the hammer risk his thumb.
Now, Winston Churchill tells that he Had hoped to play the kettle drum.

One William Lyon Phelps, of Yale,
  Unto an audience dared to own
That he had longed to run the scale
  Upon the bleating, slide trombone.
But unto books his days were tied;
  Life-long his lips to tooting dumb.
His wish, as Churchill's wish denied
  To play upon the kettle drum.

Thus high and low are like in this,
  As all discover, soon or late:
For joys we gain are joys we miss.
  For man there is no perfect state.
Not all our dreams fulfilled can be.
  To each must disappointment come.
Phelps never pressed a trombone key
  And Churchill missed the kettle drum.

Mr. and Mrs. Earl Jones and Miss Marion Jones of Ivanhoe, are visiting their cousin, Mrs. Storms, Grier St.

At a meeting of Oxford Lodge, No. 17, Sons of England, the officers for the ensuing year were elected as follows: President, J. V. Dack; vice-president, T. Renouf; chaplain, W. Rose; secretary-treasurer, H. A. Lennox; committeemen in order given, R. G. H. Barlow, W. Edmonson, W. J. Parrish and A. Jenkinson; inside guard, W. Follwell; outside guard, W. J. Bennett; recording secretary, W. J. Savage.

Mr. Vincent Hudgings of this city, has been accepted as a teacher by the Toronto School Board and will commence his duties on January 4th. next.

30 YEARS AGO

DECEMBER 3rd., 1915

Members of the Cannifton Lodge, L.O.L., No. 2320, elected the following officers at a recent meeting: Arthur Latta, Master; Harry Tweedy, Deputy Master; Ernest Chambers, Chaplain; William Cole, Recording Secretary; William Clarke, treasurer; G. F. Reed, Financial Secretary; Frank Pound, Director of Ceremonies; Harry Pound and William Waterhouse, Lecturers; John Ritz, Roy Wilson, J. E. Shorey, E. W. Brown, Joseph Ray, Committee; Zera Vanvalkenburg, Inside Tyler. The officers were installed by District Master G. F. Brown.

Mr. J. H. Brown of St. Paul, Minn., is visiting his sister, Mrs. W. A. Watts, after an absence from the city of thirty years.

Mr. Kenneth Bunnett has returned home after spending three months in Western Canada.

40 YEARS AGO

DECEMBER 3rd., 1905

Mr. William J. Ward will leave here shortly to reside in Toronto.

Mr. Harry Maye left today for Montreal, where he has accepted a position.

Mr. W. C. MacLean is home from Winnipeg on a visit to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Donald MacLean, Alexander St.

Mr. Geo. I. Thomas has left to spend the Winter at Los Angeles, California.

Mr. Joseph Demarsh has left to spend some time in Guelph.

Mrs. William J. Osborne, of Fredericton, New Brunswick, is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Phippen, Bridge St. East.

50 YEARS AGO

DECEMBER 3rd., 1895

After the close of the regular meeting of Camp Rob Roy, Sons of Scotland, the members adjourned to the restaurant of James Fleming, where a sumptuous repast had been prepared for them. Chief A. Matheson presided for the first part of the evening and later turned over the chairmanship to Mr. Donald MacLean, vice-president of St. Andrew's Society, who performed his duties in a most capable and pleasing manner. An impromptu program was given which was much enjoyed. Brother Col. W. N. Ponton was particularly happy in his response to the toast to the Army and Navy volunteers. Brother Allen McFee gave a recitation in his old time form and inimitable manner. Songs by Brother Carstairs of Stirling; Brother Milne, Brother McIntosh and Brother Lithgrow and one in the Gaelic by Brother Donald MacLean filled up a most enjoyable evening.

The Tweed stage came in on runners today.

CLUBBY HOLLYWOOD FOURSOME

Red Skelton, LEFT, recently released by Uncle Sam from the army, is seated in a Hollywood spot with the present Mrs. Skelton by his side. Across the table from them is his former wife with her new husband, Director Frank Borzage. They had been married the preceding day. HAPPIEST ROMAN OF THEM ALL

The Rome of today is a place of unhappiness, lack of food and fuel with fears of the hard winter ahead causing apprehension from the most humble up to the government heads and to the Vatican itself. Yet this young Roman is happy as a setter puppy as he splashes himself in his bathtub, delighted with the effects he creates by tossing the water about. Ignorance, indeed, is bliss.

Says Russians to Have Atomic Bomb in 5 Years

Testifying at the atomic bomb hearing in Washington, D.C., Dr. Irving Langmuir, associate director of General Electric Laboratories, and one of America's leading scientists, said that in his opinion Russia will be able to produce atomic bombs in three years, and perhaps make them faster than the U. S. can. He based his belief on what he knows of Russia through his visits there.

Nazi General Shot By Firing Squad

Aversa, Italy, Dec. 3 (AP) — Nazi Gen. Anton Dostler, shouting "Long live Germany," died before an American firing squad Saturday for ordering the execution of 15 American soldiers captured behind German lines in March, 1944.

The 54-year-old general, first high German officer to die for war crimes in Western Europe., was executed in the firing pit of a prisoner-of-war stockade two miles from Aversa. Asked if he had anything to say, he barked "No," but immediately afterward shouted in a high-pitched voice, "Es lebe Deutschland."

Quickly a black hood was placed over his head and the order to fire was given. Every bullet went into the white patch pinned over his heart. Capt. A. N. Liberman of Bangor, Me., a medical officer, pronounced him dead at 9:11 a.m., two minutes after the 12 riflemen fired.

Dostler was convicted in October by a United States court-martial, which disregarded his defence plea that he was carrying out orders of his superiors to execute the Americans. Thhe Americans were captured near La Spezia after they had landed behind German lines in a daring attempt to blow up a railway tunnel.

Royal Navy Hunts For Pirate Lairs

London, Decv. 3 (Reuters) — One of the greatest pirate hunts of the century is being carried out by British sea, land and air forces among the coves and islands of the South China coast, Noyes Thomas, special correspondent in Shanghai of the Sunday newspaper, News of the World, said.

Thomas added: "Royal Navy ships, including submarines and assault landing craft, Fleet Air Arm reconnaissance and fighter planes and RAF Spitfires, are taking part in it.

"Men of a commando unit have sailed as a guarding party in at least one submarine.

"Pirates, whose favorite lair is still the notorious Bias Bay, are using sailing junks similar in appearance to those used through centuries by their outlaw ancestors.

"But now ancient-looking craft are fitted with powerful engines, are armor-plated and heavily armed. Some, it is believed, are equipped with radio receiving and transmitting apparatus.

"During the Japanese occupation, pirates, free from interference, and finding it easy to acquire arms, intensified their activities.

"When the navy arrived back in Hong Kong it was found the pirates were even operating at night among ships and junks lying in harbor.

"There have been many exciting chases and gun battles. Now the pirates no doubt realizing the odds are against them, are thought to be moving to less profitable but safer hunting grounds outside British territorial waters."

Address Dr. William Brady, care of this Newspaper.)

OILY SKIN, BLACKHEADS AND PIMPLES.

The talk printed here recently closed with a promise of more on the same subject, blackheads and pimples, and so back to acne now (acne being the medical term for oily or too oily skin, comedones or blackheals and pimples), for, as I well remember when I had it, it is at least as important as any complaint you oldsters can inquire about. The trouble is that the kids who are in the acne age —the 'teens—get little if any better instruction and advice about it than I got when I had it. It is for this reason that I took the utmost pains preparing the pamphlet on Acne (Blackheads and Pimples) (for copy send a stamped self addressed envelope—ask for it in writing, not with a clipping). I want every boy or girl who reads this to know that if the pamphlet does not answer satisfactorily any question in your mind in relation to the nature and significance of acne, I'll be happy to answer your question by mail —but please remember, make it short, ask your question directly (it is confidential, you know) and inclose stamped self addressed envelope for my answer.

From a careful review of standard textbooks, ranging from the late great Pusey's Principles and Practice of Dermatology published 35 years ago to the Suttons' (father and son) Introduction to Dermatology, published five years ago, it seems fairly evident that nobody knows whether the character of the diet has anything to do with the occurrence of excessively oily skin, blackheads and/or pimples—I mean it seems to be a lowly one-horse-and-buggy doctor.

For example Pusey opined that "an excess of starchy foods may cause increased sebacceous secretion, and for this reason starches, as well as sugars, should be reduced in acne patients." Sebaceous secretion means sebum, skin oil, in reasonable amount of which is constantly secreted or produced by the sebaceous (oil) glands in the skin, and poured out upon the skin surface through the same orifices or mouths or "pores" from which sweat exudes. This skin oil is essential to keep the skin soft, smooth, warm and to keep the complexion clear and beautiful—and don't forget this, girls. The Suttons, on the other hand, say nothing about starches and sugars or sweets; on the contrary, they mention that "Crawford and Swartz have presented adequate evidence that a carbohydrate diet has little to do with the disease (acne)." Carbohydrate means any form of starch or sugar. As a matter of fact Crawford and Swartz found that a diet rich in carbohydrates actually benefited their acne patients.

Numerous authorities frown on the acne patient's indulgence in chocolate. I can't understand why. Maybe because it is so good to eat —remember how the old timers inflicted castor oil, worm medicine and numerous unpleasant tasting remedies on us kids just because they imagined medicine so repugnant had to be good for us?

QUESTIONS and ANSWERS

Toy Returns Envelopes Out

Correspondents who hope for an answer by mail should comply with instructions. A stamped self addressed envelope means a standard envelope, not a toy or doll size envelope. How can we mail a 3½ by 5½ inch blooklet or pamphlet in a 3 by 4 inch envelope?

No Ambition

Son, just turned sixteen, has no ambition whatsoever, seems tired all the time. (Mrs. H. C.)

Answer—My crystal ball is temporarily out of commission, but it will at least do no harm to see that your son get a suitable iodine ration. Send stamped self addressed envelope for pamphlet "The Iodin Ration" (iodin is my spelling for this particular purpose.)

Canker Sores

Kindly send pamphlet on canker sores, as I suffer from repeated canker sore in mouth and on tongue. (O.D.)

Answer—Touch each sore once daily with mixture of Mild Tincture of Iodine and glycerin (half and half) on wisp of cotton on toothpick. It smarts momentarily, seems to relieve later. Take internally 100 milligrams of niacin (formerly called nicotinic acid) twice daily for several days. Avoid brushing teeth. Rinse the mouth gently after food with warm boric acid solution.

INFORMATION ROUNDUP

The nickname "Frisco" is seldom applied to San Francisco by residents of that city.

Residents of San Francisco generally object to the curt nickname on the ground that it lacks dignity as well as distinctiveness, there being villages and towns named "Frisco" in Colorado, Louisiana, North Carolina, Oklahoma, Texas and Utah.

Besides, they point out, San Francisco was named after a saint and it is unbecoming to abbreviate the name.

In 1905 the California legislature appealed to President Theodore Roosevelt and the U. S. Post Office Department discouraging the practice of designating the Golden Gate city "Frisco" in addressing mail.

The nickname has been vigorously condemned as an abomination in San Francisco by press, radio and civic organizations. This campaign against the use of the nickname attracted so much attention at one time that the St. Louis and San Francisco Railway, commonly called and widely advertised as "the Frisco Line," was obliged by public opinion to omit that term from its advertising and office window display in San Francisco.

Oddly enough, this railroad does not run within 1500 miles of the Golden Gate city. When the railroad was started westward from St. Louis the promoters hoped to push it all the way to the Pacific coast with terminals on San Francisco Bay. Although the road has branches running to Pensacola, Florida, Birmingham, Alabama, and Menard, Texas, it never got farther west than Ellsworth, Kansas.

Editors, reporters and copy desk men throughout the country, who require a shorter word than "San Francisco," have not been so deferential to local pride and the nickname continues to be widely used.

VICAR TURNS HIS SWORDS INTO PLOUGHSHARE

I preparing his service, the Rev. J. H. Parsons came to the passage in the Bible, "And their swords shall be turned into ploughshares." He looked up and saw before him on the wall of his study four cavalry swords, souvenirs of the First World War. He decided he would make them into a ploughshare as a symbol to youth to look forward to the pursuit of peace. Here, Rev. Parsons and John Moon, a farmer, examine the cavalry swords-ploughshare in England.

PROGRESSING WITH CANADA SINCE 1868

The annual value of Canada's mineral production has increased from less than 10 million dollars in 1868 to approximately 525 millions.

SINCE Penmans first began manufacturing Knitted Products in 1868, they have kept pace with each new requirement of Canada's expanding population and economy. And Penmans are still looking forward with Canada. Today Penmans are planning Knitted Products which will continue to fulfill the demands of Canadians for high quality and sound value in Knitted Outerwear, Hosiery and Underwear.

'A Mike Can't Talk Back'

(From Editor and Publisher, New York)

Dear Mayor LaGuardia:

As has been your custom in recent years, you made some unkind and unfair statements about newspapers during your radio talks last weekend. Not only is your memory short, Mr. Mayor, but your statements sound like those of a Monday morning quarterback whose team took a licking in Saturday's game.

"You can't convince me that the newspapers are on the level," you state, adding that radio "is the hope of the world."

Do you remember 1933, Mr. Mayor, when you were a relatively obscure Congressman campaigning for the chief executive's job in America's largest city? You gave very few radio talks in those days and it was the New York newspapers that played up your past good record of public service. You were supported by the Times, Herald Tribune, World-Telegram, Mirror and Post—and what's more you were elected with 254,000 plurality over O'Brien and McKee.

Do you remember 1937, and your re-election? You won by 454,000 over Mahoney and you were editorially supported by those same papers including the News. The Journal-American and Sun remained editorially neutral in that mayoralty campaign because of your New Deal tieup. In those days, too, Mr. Mayor, you used very little radio time compared to now, but it was more than in '33.

In 1941, you were elected again, this time over O'Dwyer, and you were supported by the same newspapers. Your radio time increased that year. You had been a good Mayor—as a matter of fact the News called you at that time "the best mayor New York ever had." And you probably were.

Meanwhile, something had happened to you, Mr. Mayor. Phenomenal success and popularity must have gone to your head. A change came over you and you couldn't take suggestions and criticism. Newspapers were the only ones that dared point out some of your mistakes — and instead of taking some of this constructive criticism you decided to fight back at the newspapers. Your press relations broke down. It has never recovered.

Radio didn't criticize you, did it, Mr. Mayor? Of course not! It isn't built that way, so you like it. It can't talk back.

In December, 1941, you started your weekly radio talks over WNYC. In this 1945 campaign, although you didn't run for office, you spent more money for radio time than ever before—$36,000—for your own candidate, Newbold Morris.

Doesn't it seem strange, Mr. Mayor, that with more money spent in radio than ever before your candidate still lost? Does it occur to you that your bad press relations in the last few years might have had something to do with it? That and the revived Tammany machine.

You say: "Of course I like radio. I can talk to a mike and I can't talk to some publishers." What you should have said in your peevishness, Mayor LaGuardia, was that you like radio because a mike can't talk back and some publishers can and do.

Isn't that true?

Dry Troops Leave Ship, Seize Tugs

Cape Town (CP)—Australian and New Zealand soldiers, indignant and disappointed at not being allowed ashore at Cape Town after the long voyage from England, invaded tugs lying alongside their ship, the Aquitania, and went ashore.

The men, bound for Australia, formed up into orderly parties once they were on land and marched into the city where they were given a great welcome. In a few hours only 1,000 of the 4,000 men remained aboard and the liner's sailing was postponed a day.

The soldiers spent thousands of pounds buying gifts in Cape Town shops, packed soldiers' clubs and drank the city dry of beer by midday.

The future of Italian prisoners, many of whom wish to remain in South Africa, is the subject of widespread discussion in the newspapers. Farmers, particularly grape growers in Cape province, want to retain the Italians and at least 5,000 of them have expressed a desire to make their homes in the Union.

The government is considering the advisability of allowing a number of selected prisoners to settle here and defence headquarters has been instructed to ask all prisoner-of-war camp commandants to obtain reports from employers on the prisoners' work, general deportment and capabilities.

Should the government decide to allow them to remain the reports from camp commandants would be scrutinized by the department of external affairs and the department of the interior. Settlers would be selected from farmers and certain artisans.

The housing shortage in the Union is becoming more critical daily and veterans' organizations have decided on drastic measures to meet the situation.

At Krugersdorp the Springbok Legion installed a number of ex-soldiers and their families in vacant houses after the owners had refused to rent them. The Legion announced it had adopted "expropriation" tactics used recently by vigilantes in Brighton, Eng., and stated that action will be taken in Johannesburg said the Reef if the government housing commissioner does not exercise his powers to take over empty promises.

The South African Legion says that the situation is rapidly reaching the explosion point as more people are released from the services. The housing section of the Johannesburg branch of the discharged soldiers demobilization committee has been forced to close its doors to further applicants because it cannot deal with the thousands of requests already on its books.

• • •

The Union government is considering a plan to help selected children to come to South Africa from Allied countries in Europe. The aim is to encourage immigration of children who lost their parents during the war and to arrange for their adoption in this country. The plan has the dual object of helping to relieve distress in Europe and of building up South Africa's population.

The Johannesburg city council has elected the first woman mayor ever to hold office in the city. She is Mrs. Jessie McPherson, well-known labor councillor, who is the first labor mayor in 25 years.

Looking Ahead in Ottawa

(By the Ottawa Bureau of The Canadian Press)

Ottawa, Dec. 3—(CP)—Arrangements are being made for the first movement of Japanese from Canada to Japan in January, providing a ship can be obtained.

Not all Japanese who signed for repatriation to Japan will be sent, however. Canadian-born Japanese who changed their minds about going before the fall of Japan will be allowed to stay. Canadian-born Japanese who changed their minds since VJ-day will have their cases reviewed.

Even on this modified policy—the original intention was that those who asked to be sent back to Japan after the war would be given no chance of changing their minds—will be attacked in the commons when Labor department estimates come under review.

Several members will contend the government has no right to deport any Canadian citizen against his will and that there should be no distinction between Japanese who are citizens by birth and by naturalization.

Wages:. Basic wage control measures are expected to remain in effect for some time but modification of the regulations on some particular phases is considered likely.

Labor Minister Mitchell outlined the general policy in a statement to the co-ordinating committee of the Dominion-Provincial conference last week when he said it would be necessary to continue "for a considerable period" some regulations arising from the war, and he particularly mentioned wage control.

Cases currently being dealt with by the National War Labor Board differ in many cases from those handled a year or more ago. At that time most applications concerned basic wages of large groups of employees. Many of the cases now being ruled on involve small groups within a plant and in several instances individuals.

Approval of holiday with pay plans also comes within the scope of War Labor Board, being considered a measure which effects earnings It is thought likely there may be some revision of the procedure in ruling on holidays and possibly overtime provisions.

The matter of general increases is regarded by the government as an integral part of the anti-inflation program and control is not likely to be lifted entirely until price control measures are also abolished. So far there is no indication of when that is likely to come.

PICTON

Salvation Army Corps Observes 61st Anniversary

Picton, Dec. 3 — Picton Corps of the Salvation Army observed its 61st anniversary with special weekend services. The Corps here was opened in November 1884 by Staff Captain Maddon and it was the 74th Corps to be opened in Canada. First meetings were held in the old town hall. Today, the Corps has a splendid hall which was recently enlarged following a fire, and has a very large membership. Adjutant M. Bride and Lieut. Morgan are officers in charge.

On Sunday three services were held in the hall, with Major J. J. Smith of Kingston and the S. A. silver band from that city in attendance. Major Smith delivered challenging addresses.

Following church services, an open musical program was given in the theatre. Mayor N. McKibbon presided. The Kingston S.A. band delighted the crowd with their fine music.

Dollars are getting back into 'civvies' too

HUNDREDS OF MILLIONS of dollars have gone to war in the last six years in the shape of investments in Victory Bonds. Life Insurance Companies have invested for their policyholders over one and one-half billion dollars in Victory.

Life Insurance dollars will soon be getting back into "civvies" again. As full peacetime conditions return Life Insurance funds will again finance such socially useful enterprises as the building of highways, bridges, harbours, elevators, etc.

Such "public works" are well named, for they do provide work for vast numbers of the public. Dollars so employed create thousands of jobs, build up the country, and at the same time offer the utmost security for policyholders' funds.

45¢ This portion of every dollar invested by Life Insurance companies is in bonds issued by the federal and provincial governments. The remaining 55 cents is invested in other bonds, securities, mortgages, etc. Besides developing the country, Life Insurance funds for more than a hundred years have guarded the homes of Canada from want and privation.

Refreshments were served by the hostess and her assistants.

Scouts, Cub Pack Hold Sale Of Handicrafts

True to the training which has been their since joining the local Boy Scout movement in Belleville members of the 1st Belleville Boy Scout Troops and Cub Pack, are not waiting for benefactors to supply the funds which next Summer will take them to their annual Summer camp.

Just this was proven on Saturday afternoon when members of the two troops, under the direction of their leaders, Scoutmaster Henry Nicholls and Cub Pack Akela, Mrs. Evelyn Goodier, held a sale of handicrafts in the St. Thomas' Church Parish Hall.

Fine examples of Scout handicraft and creative effort were in evidence on the specially arranged tables, ranging all the way from hand made picture frames, model houses and stuffed toy creations, to fine examples of jig saw handicrafts. All creations sold during the afternoon were made by members of the 1st Belleville Scout and Cub Pack troops.

During the sale Scout and Cub Pack members in their traditional uniforms served tea to those in attendance. Pouring were Mrs. Langman, Akela of the 4th Belleville Troop; Mrs. Kemp, Akela of the 2nd Belleville Troop; Mrs. Mark Vanner, Mrs. Arthur Smith, Mrs. Sisler, and Mrs. Norman Edwards. Winners of two draws were Miss Betty Hubble, South John Street, who won the bassinette, and Mrs. G. Scott, who won the fine colored picture painted by Scoutmaster Henry Nicholls. All K.P. duty was done by the Scouts and Cubs.

Proceeds from the sale will go toward supplying the necessary funds for next year's camping, it was stated.

STROUD'S GIFT SHOP

Just Desserts

The rule of ending the meal with a sweet or savoury varies with the country or locality. Those people who expect a sweet to top off their meal pose a problem for the homemaker. This is doubly true now. She has had to cope with restricted sugar supplies the past few years, but added to that is the apple crop failure and decreased supply of fruits, both home and commercially canned. Granted, these are both temporary situations, but situations from which we are not apt to find relief for many months. The home economists of the Dominion Department of Agriculture suggest that rather than alter family specials and bring down the disparaging remark . . "This isn't as good as usual" . . . you try these tested recipes which can be made with supplies on hand. They may be new to you, but because of their different character, they will be accepted. In fact you may soon find them added to that list of family favorites. Such a dessert is Oat Peel Pudding.

Oat Peel Pudding.

1 cup rolled oats (quick cooking).
1/2 teaspoon soda
1/4 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon cinnamon
1/2 cup raisins (optional)
1/4 cup peel
2 eggs, well beaten
1/3 cup light molasses
2/3 cup water
1 1/2 tablespoons lemon juice (1/2 lemon).

Mix rolled oats with soda, salt, cinnamon, raisins and peel. Combine the eggs, molasses, water and lemon juice. Add to the dry ingredients and turn into top of double boiler, lightly greased. Cook over boiling water, about 1 1/4 hours. Six servings.

Fruit French Toast

2 eggs, beaten slightly
3/4 cup canned fruit juice
1/4 teaspoon salt
6 slices bread
3 tablespoons fat
Canned fruit, drained

Blend beaten eggs, fruit juice and salt. Dip both sides of each slice of bread in egg mixture. Melt a little fat in frying pan, and brown on both sides in hot fat. Serve at once on hot platter, garnished with drained canned fruit. Six servings.

Gingerbread Shortcake.

1/4 cup fat
1/2 cup sugar
1 egg
3/4 cup molasses
2 1/2 cups sifted pastry flour or
2 1/4 cups sifted all-purpose flour
1 1/2 teaspoons baking soda
1/2 teaspoon cloves
1 1/2 teaspoons cinnamon
2 teaspoons ginger
1/4 teaspoon salt
1 cup hot water

Cream fat until fluffy, gradually cream in sugar. Add beaten egg and molasses and beat well. Mix and sift dry ingredients, and add alternately with the water, combining lightly. Bake in a greased cake tin in a moderately slow oven, 325 degrees F, for 50 to 55 minutes. Makes gingerbread 8 x 8 x 2 1/2 inches. When baked, split, fill with applesauce, drained canned fruit or thick custard. Six servings.

Women's Activities

CANNIFTON RED CROSS

The Cannifton Red Cross Auxiliary held their monthly meeting in the Sunday School rooms on Wednesday with a good attendance. Three quilts were completed during the course of the day and at the end of the meeting it was decided that a donation of $35 should be sent as a donation to the Belleville headquarters.

MELROSE W.I.

The Melrose Women's Institute held their regular meeting at the home of Mrs. Leslie McLaren.

The guest speaker, Mr. Macklem Public School Inspector, was introduced by Mrs. Roy Badgley, his topic being "Township School Areas". This subject has been discussed in various townships recently.

It was decided not to have the annual supper and bazaar. A social evening is to be held instead in the Township Hall some time in January.

Mrs. Clare Weese, social leader, opened her part of the meeting with community singing. A reading was given by Mrs. C. Hagerman.

Mrs. Arnold Reilly favored with an instrumental piano selection.

A reading "Are They Ready for School", followed by the topic "Democracy in the School Room", was given by leader, Mrs. Clare Weese.

Mrs. Harry Murphy conducted an educational contest. Mrs. A. Masters scoring the highest points.

Delicious refreshments were served by conveners.

ALLAN'S MILLS W.I.

A committee was formed to purchase material and pack boxes for the boys overseas who will not be home before the New Year.

The date of the next meeting has been changed until late December. The Christmas program will be in charge of Mrs. John McKeown, Mrs. Morley Barlow and Mrs. Geo. Williams.

Mrs. Thos. McKeown was in charge of the program on Canadian Industries. The motto, "Fair day's work for a fair day's pay", was given in a splendid paper by Mrs. John McKeown.

Mrs. A. Burkitt gave a paper on the topic, Mining Industry of Canada.

Mrs. W. J. Barlow gave the current events. A humorous reading was given by Mrs. Thos. McKeown and a contest was put on.

Refreshments were served.

WEEKLY RATION FASHION for a twosome

SUN.	MON.	TUES.	WED.	THUR.	FRI.	SAT.
Meat Ring	Lamb Chops	Eggs a la king	Veal Cutlets	Steak and Kidney Pie	Fish	Sausages
Group C 3/4 lb. 3 tokens	Group C 1/2 lb. 2 tokens	unrationed	Group B 1/2 lb. 3 tokens	Group B 6 oz. 2 tokens	unrationed	Group D 1 lb. 3 tokens

3 tokens for lunch problems or next week's roast.

Menu planning need not be fog-bound by meat rationing. Within the bounds of a twosome's weekly ration there is much scope for gastronomical enjoyment and satisfaction. In planning the purchases it will be found useful to translate the ration in terms of tokens, eight of which are equivalent to the coupon available to each person weekly.

With hospitality a week-end keynote, an extender dish is suggested as ration economy for Sunday's dinner guests. A meat loaf can be tastefully made from 3/4 lb. hamburger with added egg, bread crumbs and suitable seasonings. To give this old friend a new guise, bake it in a ring mould, turn out on serving platter and vegetable-fill the centre. Lamb chops make delectable eating for two tokens on Monday. And eggs are suggested as the basis for Tuesday's protein dish. Hard cooked eggs combined with fresh mushrooms, now market-plentiful, and a good cream sauce, and served on a mound of hot noodles is indeed a regal dish which only needs to be rounded out with a green or yellow vegetable for eye appeal and nutritive satisfaction. Wednesday's veal cutlets will bring you to the middle of the week with half your ration still intact. For Thursday two tokens worth of round steak supplemented with unrationed kidney will provide the makings for a steak and kidney pie. And for a top with taste, add some celery seed to the pastry or biscuit dough. Friday is an opportunity day for fish to appear on the bill of fare. Three tokens are ration currency for one pound of sausages, a double duty purchase which will provide Saturday's dinner and glorify Sunday's breakfast. The week's expenditure of thirteen tokens will leave you with three as a contribution to luncheon problems or next week's small roast.

Questions and Answers

Q.—There are many housewives, like myself, who have been experiencing difficulty buying shortening. Since we do a lot of baking, don't you think the Prices Board should ration shortening?

A.—Rationing shortening and lard would not make it easier to buy. There are many persons like yourself who do no home baking but who nevertheless would be entitled to ration coupons. In setting the ration then, the Prices Board would have to divide the amount of available shortening among all ration book holders. This would probably result in a very small ration. Moreover, it is neither advisable nor practical to set up rationing machinery in the case of temporary shortages.

Q.—I have been discharged from the armed forces. Will I receive a ration book?

A.—The Army Demobilization Unit will give you an application form RB-64D when you are discharged. This should be completed in detail and taken or sent to your local ration board. A ration book will then be issued to you immediately.

Q.—Are Christmas cards under the price ceiling?

A.—Yes. No Christmas card may be sold at a price higher than 25 cents. Dealers may charge extra for printing the name and address of the customer on a 'personal' type of greeting card.

Q.—Do W.P.T.B. rentals regulations apply in rural areas? Is the length of notice to vacate the same in the country as it is for city tenants? I am a tenant of a house only and do not want to rent the farm. Recently the owner sold the farm complete and wants us to vacate so that the new owner can take over.

A.—Properties used solely for agricultural purposes do not come under the Prices Board rentals regulations. But other housing accommodation does. In your case, as you rent the house separately from the complete form, you would come under the provisions of the general freezing order and therefore cannot be given notice to vacate.

Q.—Are retailers allowed to sell seed potatoes at higher prices than table stock?

A.—If seed potatoes are correctly labelled with the Department of Agriculture tag that they are certified seed, these potatoes, when sold by the bag in original containers and not broken up, may be sold at a higher price than ordinary table potatoes.

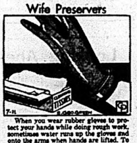
Q.—Last week I purchased a two pound jar of jam and the grocer took two ration coupons. Was this too many?

A.—Each preserves coupon buys 12 fluid ounces of jam which is usually referred to as a one pound jar. So your grocer was quite right in taking two coupons for a two-pound jar.

Q.—I would like to report a 'racket' in some stores where clerks are tearing out more coupons than enough to cover a purchase. I have had additional coupons taken three times in this manner.

A.—It is up to you as a shopper to check coupons removed at the time you are buying rationed goods. Don't leave it all to the busy clerk who may make the odd mistake.. Know what coupons and how much they buy. Storekeepers are doing their level best to make rationing work smoothly. It's up to the consumers to do their part, too.

Wife Preservers



When you wear rubber gloves to protect your hands while doing rough work, sometimes water runs up the gloves and onto the arms when hands are lifted. To prevent this, turn the tops of the gloves back for about one inch, and in the fold thus formed put a ring of absorbent cotton. This will effectively catch any water which would otherwise run down your upraised arms.

Are you wearing your neighbor's corset?

You may wear the same size dress as your neighbor . . . but you can't wear her corset. Why? Because two women wearing the same size seldom have the same proportions. A Graduate Charis Corsetiere takes ALL your measurements ...prescribes your corset from as many as 77 models in a single size! No wonder Charis fits your waist, your hips, your tummy. No wonder women cheer for Charis.

MOIRA

Friends Honor Family Before Their Departure

Moira.—On Friday evening a large crowd of friends assembled at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Morton to bid them farewell before their departure for Belleville.

A short program consisted of songs by Gordon and Beverley Foster, a solo by Evelyn Emerson, a duet by Mrs. Angus Mumby and Mrs. Nelson Welsh and a piano solo by Mrs. James Vanderwater. Mr. Stewart then called Mr. and Mrs. Morton forward. An address of appreciation was read by Mrs. Nelson Welsh and Mr. Clayton Vanderwater and Mr. Nelson Welsh presented an end table and two lamps. Mr. Morton replied.

A pleasant evening was then spent and refreshments were served.

At the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ross Ketcheson, the Victory Class entertained the Endeavor's Class of West Huntingdon. Mr. Elmer Post acted as president. The meeting was opened by a song service.

A reading by Mac Sarles, a solo by Mrs. Fitchett, "Lead Me Home", a reading by Margaret McCurdy, "The Way Things Work Out". Mr. John McCurdy was the guest speaker taking as his topic, "The Mounted Police". Marion Hammond and Joan McCurdy sang a duet. A reading was given by Irene Moorcroft. Delicious refreshments were served.

Ladies Guild Holds Bazaar

Picton, Dec. 1.—A record number of ladies attended the bazaar and tea sponsored by the Ladies' Guild at St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Friday afternoon. There were more than 200 ladies present for tea which was served at quartette tables. The long tea table was centred with 'mums and presided over by Mrs. Stanley May and Mrs. H. L. Vancleaf. Mrs. W. V. Rylott, president, welcomed the guests and Mrs. J. W. Reid, received the fees. General arrangements were in charge of Mrs. Milton Gilmore, Mrs. S. Wells, Mrs. Bert Biddle, Mrs. H. L. Vancleaf and Mrs. J. W. Reid. Members of the Guild served.

There were several booths with attractive offerings. Mrs. A. F. Minaker and Mrs. C. D. Wilson had charge of the pantry shelf; Mrs. David Sayers and Miss Eleanor Friend convened the fancy work, and Mrs. E. Brooks and Mrs. George Ovens, the touch and take table. There were many tea parties, the whole event proving a success both socially and financially.

PLANE RETURNS FROM WARSAW

Ottawa, Dec. 3. (CP)—After a 9,000-mile round trip, a Royal Canadian Air Force Flying Fortress returned here Saturday from a mercy flight to Warsaw with 2,500 pounds of penicillin donated to the Polish Red Cross by The Canadian Red Cross Society. The plane carried 9,000 pounds of mail on the return Atlantic crossing.

The Experts Say

By HELEN BANNERMAN

Ottawa, Nov. 30 — (CP)—The shortage which makes it impossible to use a lavish hand with butter got the agriculture department home economists busy devising substitutes and they have emerged from their testing kitchen with the suggestion that buttered bread crumbs be used to dress up cooked vegetables — it provides butter flavor without much butter.

Melt a half tablespoon of butter and add half a cup of fine, dry bread crumbs. Stir over heat until the crumbs are well browned. Sprinkle over the cooked vegetables.

Broccoli is one vegetable greatly improved by this added flavor. Three pounds will serve four persons.

Remove the large tough leaves and the tough lower portions of the stalks. Split each stalk lengthwise into halves or quarters, depending on size. Wash well and soak one hour in salted water (2 tablespoons to a quart) to help remove insects. Drain and tie in a bunch. Cook heads up in boiling salted water for 20 minutes.

The nutrition division of the health and welfare department is busy now making preparations for a dietary, clinical and biochemical survey to be started in British Columbia early in January, lasting an estimated six weeks.

Both urban and rural areas will be covered, including the metropolitan area of Vancouver and sections of the Fraser and Okanogan Valley. Division officials plan to follow up the findings with an educational campaign based on their conclusions.

Although the work is primarily educational and local it is also expected to contribute to the scientific knowledge of general trends in the nutrition status of the whole Canadian population.

Don't wash your precious eggs until just before using them and you will save the protective film on the shell which helps keep it fresh . . . A cracked egg is a casualty which can be used. Wrap it in waxed paper with the ends twisted tightly and it can be cooked handily.

In slicing hard cooked eggs dip your knife in cold water and the yolk won't crumble.

It's hard to keep dust out of the linen cupboard and it always seems to settle on the towels and sheets at the bottom of the pile. Reason: they seldom get used. Freshly laundered sheets should be placed at the bottom and less recently laundered linens brought to the top.

There's no searing of roasts in up-to-date households. The main item of the Sunday dinner goes into the oven at room temperature and cooks slowly at moderate heat. High temperatures shrink and toughen meat.

Lovely lingerie was never lovelier than the present crop. A beautiful duo consists of a pale pink sheer gown and full-length coat. Pale blue satin bows are scattered across the bodice of the high-waisted gown and the yoke of the coat, which has a soft sleeve caught at the shoulder with ribbons. Hog Producers Greatly Interested In Market Scheme

Picton — Prince Edward County hog producers are taking a great interest in the proposed hog marketing scheme. Of 1800 producers, some 1100 in the county have already registered. Voting takes place the end of next week. Each person registering has been mailed a ballot. The scheme appears to meet with general favor here.

Close Air Station.

Preparations are under way for the closing of the RCAF station at Picton. Since it reverted to the RCAF a year ago, it has been known as No. 54 Reserve Equipment Maintenance Unit. Its personnel, which numbered 350 six months ago, now totals 160. It is expected most of these men will receive their discharge, leaving only a security guard to look after the great amount of equipment stored in the various hangars. Tentative date for closing the station has been set for December 20.

This air station, located on the mountain, on the south side of the town, was opened in 1940 as a Conversion Training Centre. Many famed United States and Canadian pilots took refresher courses there. In 1941, it was taken over by the Royal Air Force and hundreds of air gunners and navigators received their wings there. On their departure, with the close of the Commonwealth Air Training Plan, it reverted to the RCAF.

Blizzard.

Prince Edward County was swept by a blizzard all day Thursday; some roads being blocked. The main roads are open but are heavy, and in spots are slippery, due to the fact that rain froze the previous night. Garage were kept busy hauling stalled cars and there was a number of minor accidents.

Store Hours.

Hours for observance by local stores during December were recommended at a meeting of the Chamber of Commerce. Under the plan, stores would remain open all day Wednesday, December 19, on the evenings of December 20 and 21, and on Christmas eve, in addition to the usual hours of business. It was also recommended that Boxing Day be observed on December 26.

Temperance Federation.

The annual banquet of Prince Edward Temperance Federation was held Wednesday night at Picton United Church. Supper was served by the W.C.T.U. The guest speaker was Rev. R. A. Whattam, of Toronto, who reported on the work of the Federation.

Film Library.

Popularity of the Film Library, in charge of local council, was revealed by reports given at the monthly meeting by Miss Kathleen Keech, librarian. The projector, purchased ten weeks ago, has been used forty-five times. Pupils at both the public school and the Collegiate have had pictures shown. A splendid library of films is on file here and many have been trained as operators.

Trampled by Cow.

Mrs. George Foster, who resides in Sophiasburg Township, suffered a broken ankle and severe bruises, as a result of being kicked by a cow she was milking. In falling, she was trampled by the cow next to it. She was admitted to hospital for treatment.

Marmora

Marmora — Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Nayler are visiting relatives in Lindsay.

Mrs. Joseph Judge is visiting her sister, Mrs. Thomas Harper and Mr. Harper, at Port Huron, Michigan.

Mr. and Mrs. Norman Nayler of Red Lake, who have been visiting Mr. and Mrs. H. P. Nayler, left on Wednesday to visit relatives in Western Ontario.

Born — In Marmora Township on November 19th., 1945, to Mr. and Mrs. William Empey, a daughter, Aileen Arenne.

Mrs. Percy Kennedy, of Lindsay, is visiting Mr. and Mrs. H. P. Nayler.

The teachers of St. Paul's Sunday School met at the Rectory on Thursday evening. Preliminary arrangements were made for the holding of the annual entertainment in the Town Hall, on Thursday evening, December 20th.

Distance, Not Weather, is Main Hardship at Isolated Eldorado Rich Uranium Deposits Discovered After Hazardous Exploration

Edmund Bolger, Eldorado mine manager, shows kiddies where uranium was first discovered along Great Bear Lake in the region of the Arctic Circle.

EDITORIAL NOTE: This is the third of a series of articles by a famous Canadian Writer on the Eldorado mine and Canada's part in the development of atomic power.

By LESLIE McFARLANE

Port Radium, outpost of the atom, is no frigid settlement struggling to survive in a land of perpetual snow and ice. Many towns and cities elsewhere in Canada endure weather quite as cold. The average mean temperature of the Mackenzie Valley, in fact, is about equal to that of Port Arthur. It seems a good deal meaner at Port Radium because the winters are longer.

In the winter of 1944-45, the lowest temperature recorded at the R.C.C.S. station at the mine was 39 below zero F. In July of this year the mercury climbed to 79 degrees. In the depths of the mine the temperature stays between 32 and 40 degrees the year round. Food supplies for the entire camp are kept in a storage vault hewn out of the rock in the mine.

The Arctic winds that sweep across Great Bear Lake in the darkness of the winter months are bitter. And because freeze-up comes early in October, with break-up in late June, the ice on Great Bear freezes to a depth of six feet. Dig two or three feet under the muskeg of the Barrens and you'll strike ice the year round.

The enemy of Port Radium is not cold weather but distance. Distance reflected in the high cost of every article brought in from Edmonton 1,000 miles away, with air freight at 55 cents a pound. Water transportation is cheaper at $100 a ton now as against $400 a ton in the early days of the mine.

The families living at Port Radium stock up with cases of canned goods and staples brought in by boat during the short summer. Occasionally they order other supplies by air express but most of the routine food purchases are made at the Eldorado cook-house. The mine commissary is the local department store, where clothing is sold at cost and tobacco and chocolate bars sell at Edmonton prices. The commissary shows a profit of about $200 a month. This money goes into a recreation fund. It helped pay for the billiard tables in the community hall, for the books in the library, the projection machine and the movies that are shown every Friday evening, for the bowling alleys now being installed, and for the curling rink being built this winter.

Some of the married women work for the Eldorado Company. Mrs. Charles Belec is a stenographer in the mine office, Mrs. Henry Howard works as an assistant in the mill laboratory, Mrs. Robert Powell, a trained nurse, is a hospital assistant and Mrs. Arnor Thorgilsson is assistant postmaster and storekeeper. The others are fully occupied looking after their homes and babies. They have few complaints about life in the sub-Arctic other than the general regret that there is "no place to go" and that radio reception in this northern latitude is not so good. They keep busy and happy and, like women in all small communities, create a social life of their own. They give little teas and parties, all belong to the Port Radium branch of the Red Cross, which raised $1,000 last year.

The wrappings of the presents which arrive from "outside" do double duty at Christmas. Most of the gifts exchanged are home-made. Mrs. Howard's presents—pottery pieces which she made from local clay baked in the ovens of the assay office—were the admiration of the camp last year. Christmas trees are scarce, but the stunted little spruce of the region do nicely, their brown cones painted in bright colors. A string of lights on the community hall tree astounded a group of wide-eyed Indian visitors last season. The Indians couldn't understand why the "candles" didn't set the tree on fire.

The Christmas program this year will differ little from that of last season. A Christmas party and tree for the youngsters, in the recreation hall. Special Christmas dinner for the men, in the cook-house dining hall. Air express charges bring the cost of a five-pound chicken to $4 at Port Radium, but there will be Christmas poultry in every home. And on Christmas Eve, according to tradition, there will be a party at Manager Ed Bolger's house, with a good deal of visiting around thereafter. But Christmas Day will not dawn—for there is neither dawn nor daylight at that time of year. The Day will merely arrive by the clock.

At Easter the women of Port Radium hold their own version of an Easter parade. They don their best parkas and stroll on the rocky slopes above the settlement. Last Easter the community was visited by a priest. This was a big event, and after mass an Easter breakfast was served at the home of Mrs. Howard, a non-Catholic. She made waffles for her guests and the menu also featured fresh eggs flown in from Edmonton for the occasion.

There is neither church nor school at Port Radium. Like scores of youngsters on isolated ranches and in the remote places of Alberta and the Territories, the children of Port Radium study the correspondence courses sent out by the Alberta Department of Education. Although there is no school there is education; and although there is no church there is religion. If there is one thing that strikes the visitor most forcibly it is the essential decency of the settlement, the scrupulous respect for the rights and feelings of others.

There are none of the cliques and petty feuds that so often develop among isolated groups when people know each other too well. The people get along together. Quarrels are rare; malicious gossip is unknown.

A sociologist might point out that the population is hand-picked. One enters Port Radium only by authority of the Eldorado management. Good health, cheerfulness and the temperament to cope with abnormal conditions of life in the sub-Arctic are among the necessary qualifications. There is more to it than that, however. The people are dependent on each other. They sense that the little sins of backyard gossip and selfishness are more dangerous in an isolated settlement than elsewhere. Otherwise, life in Port Radium would be intolerable. So there is goodwill and tolerance, the religion of the Golden Rule.

If this aspect of life in Port Radium seems treated at undue length the writer has no apologies. It is one of the dominant impressions. And perhaps there is an analogy. The atom is split when disruptive forces are greater than the binding forces. So it is with a community, with the world. People are beginning to realize in these first months of the atomic age that the world community cannot afford to continue a dog-eat-dog existence any longer, that world brotherhood is no longer a distant ideal but an immediate necessity. Port Radium may be a little object lesson in human relations.

Edmund Bolger, Belleville-born mining engineer who manages the Eldorado Mine, says that he did not know what use was being made of the pitchblende concentrates from Eldorado until the secret was revealed in August.

"I only knew that the job was important. We were promised top priorities on men and materials. I didn't take that too seriously at first but when I found that the priorities really worked I knew we were part of something big. Maybe some of us did a little guessing. If so, we didn't dare talk about it."

Ed Bolger says Eldorado has ore in sight for several years to come. In the meantime Emil Walli, who managed the mine in its early years, heads up the exploration division seeking out new pitchblende deposits. Field crews make use of a prospecting device perfected by the National Research Council. It is a portable apparatus containing a Geiger-Mueller tube which detects the presence of radio-active ores to a depth of several feet. Through a set of earphones the prospector can hear a series of tiny ticks as the rocks literally speak their secrets. Use of the "Geiger box" is restricted to field crews of the exploration division and the Canadian Geological Survey Branch of the Dominion Mines and Resources Department.

Eldorado is not, of course, the only source of pitchblende in the world. Before the Great Bear Lake discovery the major supply came from deposits in the Belgian Congo. Uranium from this source was used, in fact, to supplement supplies of Great Bear Lake uranium in the American-Anglo-Canadian atomic research program that culminated in the atomic bomb. Nevertheless, the Eldorado deposits are among the richest yet found in the world.

The story of their discovery has been re-told many times. In the brief period of fifteen years, however, the tale has been so embellished that some of the current versions contain far more fable than fact.

In 1929 Gilbert LaBine was managing director of Eldorado Gold Mines, a private company originally established to operate a gold mining property in northern Manitoba. This find was petering out and LaBine, an experienced prospector, set out to look for another property. At Hunter Bay, a northeasterly reach of Great Bear Lake, he staked claims on a copper discovery, planning to return the following year.

As he flew south from Hunter Bay at the end of the season he saw "gossans", masses of oxidized rock that indicated mineralization in the Echo Bay region, and decided to check the area on his way back to Hunter Bay the following year. In March, 1930, he picked up E. C. St. Paul, an old friend and fellow prospector, at Red Lake. On the 28th of that month the two men flew from Fort McMurray to the head waters of the Camsell River. The plane made two flights to land their 1500 pounds of supplies and a small sectional canoe. The two prospectors made their own sled, then set out to follow the shoreline of Great Bear Lake, to work north through the Echo Bay country to the original stakings at Hunter Bay.

In the meantime Charles LaBine, president of Eldorado, Shirley Cragg, a company director, and a man named Seaberg were to await the break-up, then start from Waterways by canoe with supplies, to meet Labine and St. Paul at Hunter Bay in early summer.

Gilbert LaBine, president, Eldorado Mining and Refining, a Crown company.

The two prospectors worked their way northward. There were bays in Great Bear Lake more than twenty-five miles deep, unmarked on any map. Glare ice on the lake made travelling difficult and the two men equipped themselves with steel creepers to hold their footing on the slippery ice. Occasionally they had to detour around enormous pressure cracks. Sometimes they prospected as far as ten miles inland. By the time they reached Conjurer Bay on May 1st their prospecting had been without result. By the time they reached Echo Bay on May 16th, St. Paul had been stricken snow-blind by the dazzling monotony of ice. They pitched camp in the lee of the bay and St. Paul remained in their tent while LaBine explored the shoreline.

Within an hour LaBine had discovered silver on a small island near the jutting promontory now known as LaBine Point. Then he went across the ice to the point to investigate a picturesque showing of stained and colored rock. It was there he discovered a vein of pitchblende, heavily impregnated with silver. He went around the point and there he discovered an even more spectacular vein of that same silver-bearing pitchblende ore.

As remarkable as the discovery itself was the fact that LaBine recognized it. Few prospectors could have identified the pitchblende readily, but it happened that LaBine had once prospected some radio-active deposits in Lanark county in Ontario, and this had led him to make a study of uranium ores.

LaBine and his helper staked two claims, not wishing to use up all the staking privileges of their licences and feeling that there might be more deposits in the thirty miles between Echo Bay and Hunter Bay. They found nothing in those thirty miles. They did, however, find themselves caught up in a prospecting rush to the Hunter Bay area. Big mining companies were sending parties in by air. Without a plane of their own and with only a takedown canoe to buck the treacherous waters of Great Bear Lake, with Charles LaBine and his party delayed somewhere on the Mackenzie, they couldn't get back to Echo Bay. They heard news that rival prospecting parties were exploring down in the Echo Bay region. It wasn't until mid-July that LaBine was able to engage a free-lance pilot, W. J. McDonagh, to bring him back to the scene of the find. There he found one of the big outfit prospecting parties camped on the point.

The rival prospectors had seen LaBine's boundary posts. They kidded him about his "silver" find and went away without staking anything for themselves. LaBine and St. Paul promptly used up their licences in staking eight more claims. When the other members of their party arrived in August they worked feverishly. The samples they brought out for analysis when they flew out to Fort McMurray in September showed that 100 milligrams of radium, worth $7,000, could be recovered from one ton of the pitchblende ore.

Even then, LaBine found that the world wouldn't believe him. People scoffed at the radium story. A promoter's myth! As for copper and silver, how could it be mined at a profit 1,400 miles from railhead? Not until Hon. W. A. Gordon, then Minister of Mines—a Haileybury neighbour of LaBine—sent in Hugh S. Spence to report on the discovery the following year, did the world believe.

"Beyond any question", reported Spence in his preliminary report, "the deposits at LaBine Point constitute a very valuable source of radium. The two main veins can be expected to yield at least several thousand tons of high-grade ore. Underground exploration can be expected to materially increase the tonnage."

That settled it. The world believed. And Eldorado has justified LaBine's faith ever since.

(The next installment of this series will tell how the Eldorado Company conquered obstacles of transportation and marketing, how Canada took over the property as part of the secret research project in the development of atomic energy.)

Fire Destroys Barn, Livestock Of Elmer Collier

Picton — One of the most disastrous fires in the county this year destroyed a barn and all its contents, owned by Elmer Collier, at South Bay, early Friday. Included were eight cows, three horses, three hogs, 40 hens, the season's crop of hay and grain, and miscellaneous articles.

Cause of the fire is unknown. Mr. Collier and family were not aware of the fire until the barn was nearly consumed by the flames. Sleeping in the east end of the house, they were not aware of the outbreak until they arose at 5.45 a.m. They had last been at the barn early the previous night. The house is 600 feet from the barn and was not endangered, though a blizzard raged at the time.

The fire was first noticed by a neighbor, John Rose, about five o'clock. He rushed to the barn to see if he could release any of the animals, but this was impossible. The barn was a fine one. Loss of about $9,000 is partly covered by insurance.

The barn had recently been wired for electricity.

Britain Needs 34,000 Nurses

By JAMES McCOOK
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London (CP) — Britain, faced with a new emergency, has a slogan to meet it—"Put the 'sing' in nursing."

About 34,000 nurses are needed at once. Aneurin Bevan, the health minister, has appealed for more men and women to enter nursing services and has announced a code under which the conditions of those engaged in nursing will be improved.

The code, which the minister said had been approved by hospitals and institutions consulted, means substantial changes. Under it, nurses would not be called on for work which is not an essential part of nursing, and ward sweeping, polishing brass, washing trays and washing up crockery would be left to the orderly or domestic stuff. Fittings and equipment which caused unnecessary labor should be eliminated.

Trained staff who so desire should be allowed to live outside the hospital or institution.

"It is recognized that in hospital work discipline during duty hours is essential," said a health ministry statement.

"No unnecessary rules, however, should be maintained, and the reason for necessary regulations should be explained to nurses. In their off-duty hours, nurses should have the same unrestricted use of their leisure as any other member of the community. There should be no unnecessary restrictions on smoking in their own quarters, for instance, or wearing mufti or having visitors of either sex. At mealtimes nurses should be regarded as being off-duty, and be free of all unnecessary regulations."

Other Changes.

Otherwise, the code calls for:

Training on modern standards of nursing education, allowing students adequate time for study and essential practical work, as well as reasonable recreation and relaxation, with lectures so arranged that off-duty hours and sleep for night nurses are not interfered with.

Adequate pensions on retirement.

A 96-hour fortnight for hospital nurses.

A minimum of one complete off-duty day a week, with arrangements for periodic week-ends leave of absence. "Arrangements for late passes for student nurses should be based on modern standards such as are applicable to girls in training colleges for other professions.

Four weeks' leave a year with pay, exclusive of sick leave.

Three good meals a day besides a mid-morning snack and tea.

A well-furnished room for every nurse with libraries, recreation room and guest rooms.

A nurses' representative council in each hospital to discuss staff affairs and make recommendations to the matron and thru' her to the appropriate committee of the hospital governing body.

British Troops Arrest 70 Steel Magnates in Raids

Iserlohn, Germany, Dec. 1 — (AP) — British troops arrested between 60 and 70 steel magnates in a series of raids last night in the Ruhr industrial area, it was officially announced today.

Those arrested included such prominent figures in German heavy industry as Heinz Gehn, chairman of the Duetsche Edelstahlwerke; Walter Schwede, director of the Reichsvereinigung Stahlwerke, and Friedrich Von Buelow and Dr. Edward Hudremont, directors of Krupps.

Others rounded up included Rudolf Siederleben, managing director of Otto Wolff K. G.; Arthur Hennecke, director of Mitteldeutsche Stahlwerke and of Friederich Flick K. G., and Dr. Guenther Henle, director of Kloeknerwerke A. G.

A senior British officer described the raids as part of the application, by the Allied Control Commission, of the policy of eradicating German militarism and Nazism.

The weight of heavy German industry was behind the Nazi party, even before its accession to power," he said, "and the authority and destructive ambition of the party before and during the war years were, to a large extent, derived from the existing strength and ambition of German industry."

Consider Income Tax Law Change

Ottawa, Dec. 3 (CP) — Consideration is being given to changing the Income Tax Law as it affects married couples working for wages.

Up to 1942 if a married woman earned more than $660 a year her husband was considered as single for income tax purposes. This caused many married women to leave war industries and return to their homes.

The Income Tax Act was changed so a husband whose wife earned more than $660 would continue to be considered as married for income tax purposes. The wife was taxed as a single person.

Finance Minister Ilsley said the change was made as a war measure and he thought a return would have to be made to former taxation system. He did not know whether it would be brought into effect for 1946 or not.

MARMORA

Hunter Obtains Count in 10 Mins.

Marmora — Sanford Lawrence added to his list of interesting hunting experiences in the open deer season just over. He is a member of the Otter Creek Hunt Club which came out from their headquarters, the Bear Camp, on the 23rd, with their quota of deer and five bears. The first bear, a large one was shot by "Sandy" Lummis, of Belleville. Two days later Sanford came across a she bear and three cubs in a den. The cubs were medium sized. He shot one of the cubs, then the mother and after that another cub and while waiting the exit of the third cub from the den, looked up to see a buck standing on the summit of a cliff. He fired at the buck and brought it toppling down beside the mouth of the den. With that the cub emerged and four bear and a cub were Sanford's count within ten minutes.

Toronto Leafs Soundly Beaten By Black Hawks on Saturday But Come Back to Win Sunday

Montreal Canadiens Defeat Rangers While Boston and Detroit Tie During Weekend

(By The Canadian Press)

Montreal Canadiens lengthened their lead in weekend National Hockey League action and a new contender—Chicago Black Hawks—moved from third place to share the runner-up's spot with Detroit Red Wings.

Canadiens defeated New York Rangers 4-3 in Montreal Saturday to assume a three-point margin on the field, while Chicago's 8-2 victory in Toronto the same day notched Hawks up to even terms with the Wings, who tied Boston Bruins 2-2 in Boston Sunday.

Bruins, despite an undefeated record stretching back to Nov. 10 when they lost to Canadiens, were in fourth place one point behind Wings and Hawks.

In the fourth weekend contest, played at Chicago Sunday, the Hawks lost a chance to move closer to Canadiens by dropping a 5-3 verdict to the Toronto club they downed so decisively the previous day. The Toronto triumph Sunday pushed Leafs into fifth place, 2½ games behind Boston and a game ahead of the tail-end Rangers.

The highlight of the four weekend games, which drew a total of 56,904 cash customers, was the unfortunate fate which befell two netminders. At Montreal Chuck Rayner entered the Ranger nets to replace Sugar Jim Henry, who had suffered a knee injury, and within seven minutes Canadiens scored three of their four goals. After that splurge Sugar Jim came back to perform brilliantly the rest of the way.

McCool Unfortunate

Forty-eight seconds from the end, after New York goals by Grant Warwick, Edgar Laprade and Mac Colville offset Montreal scores by Murph Chamberlain, Glen Harmon and Joe Benoit, Benoit sniped a picture goal to break the 3-3 deadlock and win the game.

The other unfortunate netminder was Frank McCool, making his first start of the season for Toronto. As his defence disintegrated before him, the man with the stomach ulcers was scored upon eight times in a scrambly game. George Allen got two of the Chicago scores, with the other six distributed among Max Bentley, Clint (Snuffy) Smith, Bob Hamill, Bill Mosienko, Alex Kaleta and Doug Bentley.

Sweeney Schriner and Gaye Stewart with his season's 14th goal were the Toronto marksmen.

Chicago led Leafs 2-1 at one stage in Chicago Sunday with 2 goals by Max Bentley against one for Mel Hill of Leafs, and went ahead 3-1 early in the second period on Mosienko's tally. But they were finished then, and Bob Davidson and Ted Kenney scored for Toronto to tie the count 3-3 entering the last period. In that frame Ernie Dickens and Syl Apps counted to provide the two-goal margin for Toronto.

Boston, unable to beat Detroit in a scheduled game on home ice in two years, saw that jinx extended when Mud Bruneteau lashed a drive into their net at 16:48 of the third period to tie the score 2-2. Harry Watson counted the other Detroit goal. Bill Shill and Don Gallinger were Boston snipers.

Hockey's Big Seven

(By The Canadian Press)

Max Bentley of Chicago picked up three goals and three assists during the weekend to take a firmer hold on the National Hockey League scoring race leadership with 23 points made up by 15 goals and eight assists. Linemate Bill Mosienko scored twice and was awarded four assists to take over sole possession of second place with seven goals and 13 assists. Toe Blake of Montreal was held scoreless and dropped to third place with 16 points, two ahead of Gaye Stewart of Toronto in fourth place with 14 points, all goals. Boston Bruins' Bill Cowley and Don Gallinger are tied for fifth berth with 13 points each. Cowley was also held scoreless during the weekend while Gallinger notched a single tally. Clint Smith of Chicago earned one goal and assist to climb into a two-way fight for seventh spot with team mate Max Kaleta who tallied one goal for a total of 12 points.

Chips Off The Sports Block

By GEORGE H. CARVER

Our Vern Goyer was in the thick of the fray for the Scullers and did a bang-up job in the line, if you can believe one commentator. Vern was in on plenty of players and on several occasions hurled his 246 pounds of brawn at potential Blue Bomber open field aspirants. The kid, it appears, has made good. He will probably be home within a week or so when it is expected he will don the sweater of the Belleville Redmen Hockey Club.

• • •

Redmen on Spot

Tonight the Belleville Redmen face one of their toughest assignments of the current Van Horne series down Kingston way. They meet the hitherto undefeated Kingston Ordnance, the squad who pulled the hockey teeth last week of the Locos, thus far touted as sure-fire winners of the loop. The Red-sweatered lads, who are rapidly gaining a large following in the Limestone City rink can go into a first place tie with Ordnance if they win tonight. The squad is expected to be at full strength with possibly a few new faces on deck. The bus leaves the Hume Arena at 6.30 sharp and there is room for a few interested fans who may care to go along. See Frank Butler.

The Juniors

Management of the Belleville Junior hockey team, represented by Secretary Wally Berry entered the local youngsters in a "B" grouping at the O.H.A. meeting held in Toronto on Saturday. Picton and other squads of this district entered their teams in "C". Groupings will be announced after a special meeting to be held in Toronto next weekend. Incidentally the Belleville management have been asked to reconsider their decision regarding a "B" grouping. It appears that if they enter a "C" group with a "B" rating, they must win the league in order to continue in the "B" playdowns. Perhaps the locals might be doing the right thing by changing their grouping to a "C" for there are no 'B' teams in the immediate district, and that means a few exhibition games to while away the time until playdowns come along. They have until the weekend to make up the honorable mind. More about that later.

Special.

Aside to the telegram senders and well-wishers. Thanx a million, "Joe's" a nine-pounder and everything is fine. The old man is slowly recovering.

Maple Leaf Autumn.

Chicago Black Hawks were the "fall" guys in Toronto on Saturday night. They waited until the Leafs came tumbling down in the third period, then unsheathing their scoring talons went to town on Hap Day's hapless ones and turned a close game into a rout. The Leafs wilted like a stiff collar on the 12th of July in that third period debacle and even some of their most rabid fans were disgusted. With apologies to Cec Perdue, "The Loose Leafs got their refill, when they brought back La McCool, but Happy Days are not here yet, for the pucks poured in the gool."

Too Much Power, Ergo Argos

Toronto Argonauts football flak which zipped through the air with the greatest of ease to find targets at practically every point aimed at, grounded the Winnipeg Blue Bombers, first football edition to come out of the west in years, and buried them beneath a score of 35-0 to win the Dominion football title and the Grey Cup on Saturday.

• • •

Argos went to town early and scored twelve points in the first quarter. The Bombers, it appeared by that time had devised some system of defence against this strange attack strategy of the Easterners, and tightened up to hold the Scullers scoreless. Mid game comment from both east and west experts foresaw a tight close game in the second half—but they hadn't reckoned with the Morris lads.

• • •

Argos opened up and by the time the smoke had settled had romped over the Winnipeg line for four more touchdowns and a sweeping defeat for the Bombers. The close-in playing of the Winnipeg tertiary proved duck-soup for Messrs. Krol, Myers, Smylie and Doty. They hurled forwards with abandon and before the Winnipeg defenders could get near their man he was away for pay dirt—or very close to it.

• • •

The Winnipeg line provided something of a surprise as the experts figured the 200 pound huskies of the scullers would plow through them at will. That however, was not the case and several times the Blue and Gold line held and sometimes threw the Argo plungers for losses. But it was the uncanny lateral passing and running of the Argonaut backfield that eventually told the story. The Argos had a powerful team throughout and are worthy Dominion champions.

TORONTO ARGOS DEFEAT BOMBERS BY 35 TO 0 SCORE

Winnipeg's Adherents Demand Revamping of Western Style of Play

By ALAN HARVEY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, Dec. 3 — (CP)—The most lopsided defeat for a Western Canada representative in a 22-year span of Grey Cup competition lifted Toronto Argonauts to dizzy heights of adulation today and prompted demands from Winnipeg's own adherents for a revamping of the western style of play.

The call for conformity with Eastern standards came from Winnipeg line coach Bill Nairn after Argonauts, taking the wraps off a diversified running and passing attack, smothered Blue Bombers 35-0 Saturday before 19,000 fans in Varsity Stadium for the fourth Canadian title in as many attempts since 1933.

So conclusive was the result of this 17th meeting between East and West in a National final that Nairn frankly told reporters Winnipeg must learn to play "the type of ball they play in the East."

Score Six Touchdowns

And Argonauts, who just coasted over the snow-sheathed gridiron for six touchdowns, four converts and a single, looked to their young club as slated possible to become the greatest football club of modern times. Almost all the players who figured in the slashing triumph which marked the Argo return to football after a three-year lapse are expected to return next season.

But it was apparent the beginnings of another gridiron dynasty had already sprouted.

Bombers simply could not cope with Argos. The pattern of destruction emerged plainly in the opening moments when young Fred Doty, after dashing 24 yards, shook big Doug Smylie loose for a 10-yard touchdown sprint just inside the touchline.

Simply Froze Ball

Some 90 minutes and 4 touchdowns later, the impression crystallized when speedy Billy Myers, one of the game's brightest stars, blasted 70 yards downfield on the game's last play for a brilliant touchdown. The spectators spilled inside the playing field after that spectacular stroke and for the convert Myers merely froze the ball which he wanted as a keepsake.

Both Smylie and Myers accumulated one other major score in between, both on forward passes from Joe Krol who accounted for one touchdown himself on a 60-yard gallop after a pass interception. The other Argo major went to Royal Copeland, who swept around left end 13 yards after a previous touchdown effort was called back by the officials.

New York, Dec. 3 (AP)—Al Hoosman, the big heavyweight who came out of the army to get the benefit of Jimmy Johnston's publicity efforts, may get his first real test tonight when he faces Lee Savold at St. Nick's... And that leads you to wonder what about the rest of the new boxing talent that supposedly was being developed in service bouts... Nat Fleischer of the Ring magazine has the answer. He says the newcomers are performing "beyond expectations" though, naturally, they're nowhere near the top yet ...Fleischer ventures a prediction that either Howie Brodt or Laverne Roach, marine middleweights, will be a world champion some day. They both look exceptionally promising... Then there's Johnny Ebard, spotted by Joe Louis as a great prospect overseas. He has grown up to a heavyweight.. And there also is Marcus Lockman, who uses the tag of "Kid Chicken." He's a lightheavy who won a handful of titles in Australia and New Guinea... They're just a few examples of service boxers who have done well since getting out.

One of the newest souvenirs at Madison Square Garden is a real home-run softball... Some years ago when the Garden tried girls' softball as an attraction, Tom Lockhart of the hockey staff gave the ball to an army friend who was going to Berlin as an attache at the American Embassy... The officer wound up in a German prison camp, where the one softball proved to be a main source of entertainment. It was battered lopsided and sewed up more than once by the camp doctor after coming apart at the seams. When the officer was released, he brought the ball back and presented it to Lockhart again.

JACK DEMPSEY AT ARENA WED. NIGHT

There is still only one Jack Dempsey. Away from the glare of Broadway's lights for almost four years: away from the coast-to-coast mob that knew him when he was banging that left to the belly and right to the chin: away from the ink that was his as a famed restaurateur Dempsey is back in the ring and turning them away.

No, no, he isn't fighting. He's long past that. Right now he's making a tour on Ontario and Quebec cities as a wrestling referee. And turning them away wherever he stops. Not that the customers actually expect him to uncork old Iron Mike on the grapplers, it's just that he's Dempsey. That's enough.

What's the old Manassa Mauler doing on the mat? Well, it's like this. He's been a Commander i the U.S. Navy supervising th teaching of commando tactics—back-alley fighting to youse—t the gobs and making a fine job o it.

During his hitch, which incidentally carried him at least 50,000 miles to war theatres, his respect for wrestlers grew daily. Their strength, their litheness their absolute disregard for bodily harm, their contempt for anything human opposed to them, amazed him. They are, he'll tell you, the best blankety-blank jungle fighters the world ever saw. "That's all those fellows wanted" he says, "just to come to grips with a Jap or two, or 12. And they did. And how they handled them!"

Anyhow he's back on Civvy Street and giving the world a cold, calculating glance out of a pair of eyes that have lost not one spark of their keenness.

He leaped with alacrity at the chance to tour the mat circuits. Both to renew old acquaintances and some of the friends he made in the Navy, and to pick up a few yards of that folding stuff; which he is accomplishing. He turned them away in Montreal—14,000 was the total and another 1,000 turned away—and sold out Ottawa.

Canadian Sport Snapshots

By ALAN HARVEY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, Dec. 3 (CP) — Definition of an amateur, courtesy Canadian Intercollegiate Athletic Union:

"One who engages in sport solely for the pleasures and the physical, mental and social benefits he derives therefrom, who receives no material remuneration, either directly or indirectly and to whom sport is nothing more than an avocation.

"The spirit of amateurism carries with it more than this statement implies. It stands for a high sense of humor, fair play and courtesy on the part of the participants, hosts, guests, officials and spectators. It stoops to no petty technicalities to twist or avoid the rules, or take an unfair advantage of opponents."

Nice, high-sounding stuff, even if it seems a bit Victorian for the 20th. Century. The quotes are from an Intercollegiate "creed" drafted at Kingston, Ont., by college sports officials and approved by the board of governors. It appears to serve fair notice that the colleges, as the last stronghold of amateurism, are prepared to attempt to withstand the allurements of professionalism.

Cynics will scoff; possibly. But perhaps it's just as well that one adult branch of sport should seek to maintain the old standards.

Certainly the trend is all the other way, with the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association openly omitting the second letter in its title and Canadian football discussing the pros and cons of a professional—or semi-professional—league to replace a set-up which is amateur only in name.

Elmer (Montreal Herald) Ferguson cites this incident as one of the "most acid bits of humor" in the National Hockey League this season. When Montreal Canadiens took the ice for a recent game against the Chicago Black Hawks, the scoreboard already showed New York Rangers leading Detroit Red Wings 4-0. Canadiens had just played a rugged game against Detroit the night before, so one of the Montreal players shouted to Coach Dick Irvin: "I wonder how Jack Adams (Detroit manager) feels now?"

Irvin soon knew. Halfway through the second period Chicago led Canadiens 4-0, and Irvin admitted: "I know how Adams feels."

Manager Art Chapman of Buffalo's American Hockey League Bisons has rejected a $10,000 offer from two N.H.L. teams (names undisclosed) for rookie Tom Cooper, who came to Buffalo by way of St. Catharines, Ont., and Saskatchewan.

LESSON NO. 855
By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

The oddest notions get around among bridge players. Some of these ideas are obviously impractical. Some are even downright silly. But there will always be players to believe them.

Some unskilled player will state an opinion as if it were a fact. The next player will repeat it as if it were a rule. And others will accept it thereafter without any attempt to determine its value.

Take the case mentioned in this letter: "My partner opened with one no-trump and I passed. They all told me that a one no-trump opening was a demand and I should never pass it. Even with my poor hand."

This was the hand:

♠10 7 3
♥9 8 3
♣9 6 5 4 2.

A "demand bid" orders partner to make some kind of a responding bid. Even if partner has nothing, he is expected to do something other than pass in answer to a "demand."

If an opener can try for game without values in partner's hand, he can start with a two bid. That is a demand for partner to help reach game. Because the opener has enough for both.

But it is pointless to employ a demand bid that serves no useful purpose. More than that, it is dangerous. Because the bidding should not be any higher than the pair can fulfill.

When a player starts with a bid of one, he may have only five tricks. Unless partner has some values to show, they have no game. An unforced responding bid should be reserved for showing values.

In answer to an opening bid of one no-trump, if partner has no more than two tricks, the pair can just make one no-trump and no more. It would be unwise to be in a higher bid under such conditions.

No, kids. An opening of one no-trump is not a demand bid. It is a bid that expects partner to pass unless he has more than two tricks. Anything else does not make sense.

If a rule does not make sense, get it out of your system.

KANSAS CITY NOW IN FIRST PLACE OF U.S. LEAGUE

Beat Tulsa Oilers 7-5 While St. Paul Was Defeated Twice Over Weekend

(By The Canadian Press)

Kansas City Pla-Mors drew up into first place in the United States hockey league with a 7-5 victory over Tulsa Oilers, while the former league leaders — St. Paul Saints — dropped back by virtue of two weekend defeats at the hands of Minneapolis.

The Millers defeated the Saints 6-5 in their Sunday meeting after a Saturday 5-3 victory.

Trailing 5-4 at the end of the second frame, Kansas pulled into a tie early in the final period on a goal by Johnny Harms. But McDonald, the league leading scorer, and Andy Chakowsky scored two more markers in the dying minutes of the game to cinch the victory. Doug Stevenson, Kansas goalie, blanked the Oilers in the final period.

In the St. Paul game Sunday, Ernie Trigg's goal after less than a minute of overtime, decided the issue and sent the Saints spinning back into second place. The home team had come from behind to take a 4-3 lead at the end of the second period. Strobel and Johnson scored for the Millers in the final frame and Joe Schack's marker at 18:37 tied the game up.

Omaha's 5-2 victory over Fort Worth Saturday saw the Knights take a two-point lead in the first period and stay in the front all the way. Connie Poitras put the Knights into a 2-1 lead early in the first and Roy McBride, who joined the Rangers Saturday after being purchased from Dallas, powered the first Ranger goal unassisted. Gordon Howe, assisted by Fred Gibbons and Winkie Smith gave the Knights a 2-1 lead at the end of the first and Gordon Petrie made it 3-1 in the second. In the waning minutes of the last frame, Eldy Kobussen, another new recruit for the Rangers, scored on a set-up by McBride.

A 6-5 victory for Dallas over Fort Worth Sunday made little difference in the winner's standing, but served to put Fort Worth more firmly in the cellar.

What's Doing in Sport

President Abe J. Greene laid down the law to a coterie of ring champions and contenders following yesterday's meeting of the National Boxing Association in New York. He announced Ike Williams of Trenton, N.J., had been given until Jan. 1 to defend his lightweight title and warned Freddie (Red) Cochrane, welterweight champion to get busy. Cochrane had passed up Tippy Larkin, Jimmy Doyle and Ray Robinson to take on Marty Servo in February. The N.B.A. recommended the Larkin-Doyle-Robinson trio to fight for the right to be designated No. 1 contender for the welterweight crown in order to clean up that division.

The association notified three returned champions they would be given until June 1 to sign for a title bout. They were Gus Lesnevich, lightweight; Tony Zale middleweight; and Manuel Ortiz, bantamweight.

Detroit Lions earned second place in the western division of the National pro football circuit yesterday with a 14-3 victory over Green Bay Packers at Detroit. Early in the season the Packers had overwhelmed the same Lions 57-21.

H. Roy Hamey, 42-year-old head of Kansas City Blues in the New York organization, yesterday was elected president of the American Association at Columbus in succession to George M. Trautman who has become vice-president and general manager of Detroit Tigers. Hamey was given a three-year contract.

At the postponed meeting Saturday at Montreal, the Canadian Lawn Tennis Association ratified a decision to enter a team in the American zone playdowns of the 1946 Davis Cup competitions. Canada is grouped with the United States and the Philippine Islands, with Australia defending the trophy against the winners. R. N. Watt of Montreal was re-elected president of the C.L.T.A.

Cornwall Cougars Badly Whipped By Sherbrooke

Sherbrooke, Que., Dec. 3—(CP)—Sherbrooke Randies skated thru an entirely disorganized Cornwall Cougars club here yesterday to sweep to a 14-1 victory in a Provincial Senior Hockey League game.

Cote and H. Carnegie paced Randies with three goals apiece followed by McIntyre and Leblanc with pairs. Fourteen penalties were handed out, including two 10-minute misconducts and a major.

Cougar's only goal came at the six-minute mark of the opening period when Bouchard took Larabee's pass to beat goalie Courteau. From then on it was Sherbrooke's game.

Randies built up a 5-1 lead in the first period on goals by P. Courteau, Leblanc and H. Carnegie while McIntyre slipped home a pair. Four more were rapped past goalie Bates of Cornwall by Cote, Ranger, Leblanc and H. Carnegie in the second period.

The Sherbrooke team went wide open during the final period to score five goals started with Dube's tally 30 seconds after the period got underway. Cote slammed home two more while singles came from the sticks of H. Carnegie and Labarre.

H. Carnegie picked up the major penalty in the final period while linemate McIntyre was given a misconduct along with Cornwall's Bonneville in the 1st period. Bonneville was sent to the penalty box twice on minor charges.

Defeat Oshawa Generals 5-3 While Galt Spills Hamilton by 9-1

(By The Canadian Press)

St. Michael's assumed undefeated leadership in the O.H.A. Junior "A" series by overpowering the Generals 5-3 in the Saturday night game at Oshawa although the students had to come from behind in the second period to accomplish victory after Pogue had given the homesters a 3-2 advantage. The Collegians wound up the mid-frame with a 4-3 lead and added the only counter of the third stanza. The game became scrappy toward the close.

Costello of St. Mikes was the only double scorer of the contest, the other goals for the winners being distributed among Powers, McLean and Sandford. The Oshawa players to click were Bauer, Marshall and Pogue.

The other Junior "A" fixture of the evening proved a 9-1 runaway for Red Wings over Hamilton Lloyds at Galt, the locals punching out four counters in the first period, adding one more in the second and outscoring the visitors 4-1 in the third session.

Pavelich was right on the beam with 3 goals to his credit while Jim Uniac, in his second start of the campaign, and Wiseman each registered a pair. McBride and Hodgson accounted for one apiece. Hamilton's lone marksman was Ketula. The visitors produced a new goalie in Wilson Frogley who turned in a reasonably good performance against the speedy Galtonians.

HORNETS SCORE DOUBLE VICTORY DURING WEEKEND

Every Team in Loop Played Pair of Games With Even Split

(By The Canadian Press.)

Pittsburgh Hornets scored a pair of victories over the lowly New Haven Eagles in a heavy American Hockey League weekend schedule in which all eight clubs played two games on consecutive nights. The Hornets were the only team to emerge with a perfect record as they whipped the Eagles 5-3 last night and 7-3 Saturday.

Cleveland Barons and Indianapolis Capitals each managed to collect three points, the teams battling to a 3-3 draw last night after having won their Saturday fixtures when the Barons upset Providence Reds 4-2 and the Caps beat St. Louis Flyers 6-4.

Other contests saw Buffalo Bisons run wild against St. Louis last night to win 12-4 following the 7-1 setback they suffered at the hands of Hershey Bears the previous night, and the Bears drop a 4-2 decision to Providence Sunday.

Pittsburgh's clean sweep lifted them to within two points of Indianapolis at the top of the western division standings while the same margin separates the leading Hershey club and Buffalo in the eastern section.

Goalie Baz Bastien, down from the Toronto Maple Leafs, and forward Wally Wilson paced the Pittsburg attack against New Haven, Bastien turning back the Eagle sharpshooters with a great netminding job and Wilson scoring three goals in two games. Marcel Bessette and Don Metz were also big factors each picking up a pair of markers for Hornets while George Pargeter and Joe Bell notched two counters apiece for the New Haven cause.

Bisons Tied.

The Buffalo Bisons tied two Buffalo Memorial Stadium scoring records last night in routing St. Louis 12-4. The Bisons equalled their own team scoring record and the 16-goal total tied the previous mark for one game. Murdo McKay and Len Halderson each collected a trio of markers and Vic Lynn fired two in the Buffalo scoring avalanche.

Indianapolis Caps overcame a two-goal deficit to gain their 3-3 deadlock with Cleveland. Pete Leswick, who has earned a point or more in every Indianapolis home game this season, tallied the tying goal in the final period. Johnny Holota and Jud McAtee rammed in the other Cap tallies and Ben Sprout, Leo Casparini and Roy Kelley clicked for the Barons.

Gino Rozzini was the big gun when Hershey defeated the Bisons Saturday night with two goals to his credit. Ken Smith, Bill Cupolo, Bill Gooden, Jack Drummond and Bill Jennings were the other Bear marksmen with the lone Buffalo counter going to Roger Leger. Providence Reds showed a form reversal in beating the Bears 4-2 last night and marked the first Red victory over Hershey this season.

By HYE BOSSIN

The most pointed way of earning a living in Hollywood is probably that of Tony Gomez, an American citizen of Spanish descent.

He hurls knives at screen celebrities; chews gum like mad to keep his nerves conditioned and confuses everyone when he tries to explain why he charged a mere $25 for missing Errol Flynn in the Technicolor adventure classic, "San Antonio," then upped the levy to $50 for hitting actor Monte Blue smack in the middle of the back. Most of Blue's spinal area, of course, was protected by a hidden board.

"It's like this," says Tony. "When I miss Flynn I miss him by inches. So, if I miss the miss I still miss Flynn by an inch or two. See?

"On the other hand, if I miss the board in Monte's back, well, everybody might be missing him for some time to come. Naturally, that puts a great strain on me. I have sympathetic nerves. So, I have to charge more for hitting than for missing. Otherwise I wouldn't be able to sleep nights."

Fortunately for everyone concerned, Gomez has never missed a miss nor failed to hit a hit in all the years that he has been making life miserable for celebrities of the cinema.

Six ex-gondoliers who haven't been able to work at it since the canal concession at Ocean Park, Venice, California, was closed are at their ancient trade in the Venetian sequence in "Escape Me Never" . . . Alan Ladd has settled his troubles with the studio for $75,000 per picture . . . Katina Paxinou recently wired $200 to a niece who lived in Greece throughout the German occupation and got this reply: "Thanks for the money. It was just enough for one slightly used but excellent pair of shoes" . . . Paul Henried, another imported star, got a request from his mother in Vienna for $160 in a hurry—she had a chance to prick up two pounds of lard on the black market. . . A crashing, smashing western is "Dakota," which features John Wayne, Vera Hruba Ralston, Ward Bond and Mike Mazurki.

The greatest sentimental picture of the year is the one featuring the further adventures of Father O'Malley of "Going My Way." It's called "The Bells of St. Mary's" and Bing Crosby shares the honors with Ingrid Bergman. It has a type of humor and sentiment entirely unlike "Going My Way" or any other film. . . Charles Korvin, who stars in "This Love of Ours" with Merle Oberon, may take his place among those players nicknamed for a physical feature—"The Body," "The Look," etc. Korvin has a marked cleft in his chin which makeup men strive to hide but which the gals on the lot refer to as "the great chasm" . . . "Husband Shoots Wife" is a harmless headline when it refers to Merle Oberon and Lucien Ballard. He's not only her husband but her photographer also and he filmed her latest, "This Love of Ours" . . . Overheard: "He suffers from an ingrown hangover."

CHAPTER 5

Or he might say that they would have to dine in town; he could not get away in time to go to Piedmont. Suppose they dined at some Italian place on Columbus avenue. Then tomorrow they could get an early start for Covey's, and have lunch there on the porch in the winter sunshine, looking down at the great panorama of the cities and the bay and the far blue mountains of Marin.

It would be the last of Kent for a long time. The last of him for all time, in one way. When he had lived in Portland for a while with Lilian's people, Lilian's old friends, Lilian's influences continually about him, he would not be the same person any more. Kent was impressionable, emotional, changeable. No, she'd never have Kent back. But this good-bye time with him she must have, and then she could be good, then she could go on.

"We've never done anything wrong. God, let it go right just this one time!" she prayed, as she walked along.

There was nobody at the Booths' studio. The shock of it stunned Jocelyn. Then she quietly went away.

But which way now, and why? It was twenty minutes before five o'clock. Jocelyn, unconscious of where she walked or what she passed, went home again. When she got to Mrs. Buck's it was quite dark. The house smelled, as it always did, of boiling sprouts and furniture oil and furnace warmth.

"Jocelyn," said Phyllis Buck, in the hall. "There was a telephone message for you."

Jocelyn stood quite still. Everything inside her—heart, mind and soul stood still.

"It was from Mrs. Johnson," said Phyllis. "They're away this weekend and if you're going to Sausalito you can have their car. It's in the garage."

"Oh, thanks."

"Phyllis!" called her mother. "Did you give Jocelyn her message?"

"I just did, Mom."

"I mean the one that came just after she went out. From that Mrs. Booth."

Jocelyn, halfway up the stairs, stood stricken to stone again. There had been a message from Una, then? What? What?

"Your friend Mrs. Booth telephoned," Mrs. Buck said heavily, appearing stout and wrapped in her bedroom door, "and said they were going out of town and she would telephone you tomorrow afternoon or Monday.

"Thanks," Jocelyn said, proceeding upward to her room. She could not analyze the meaning of it; she was too confused. She went in and shut her door and sat on her bed. They had gone to Piedmont, then to Covey's? Hadn't they tried for her? Hadn't they wanted her? If she had been here, Una hardly could have telephoned her without including her in the plan.

They'd gone over to Piedmont, and she'd missed them. The bitterness of it swept over her like a vertigo. She wished it were not too late to go across the bay to her aunt; the distraction of the big family, however unsympathetic to her mood, would still have been a tonic.

Quite suddenly she began to pack an overnight bag; there was a twenty-minute ferry service to Piedmont, and she could get a taxi to take her up to Covey's. She would find them all there, with a big fire of logs blazing in the low cabin room, and dinner not half ready. She could go in laughing triumphantly, "I had your message, Una, and decided that since this devil is really leaving us Monday . . ."

The joy of getting there, of really seeing him and hearing his voice and answering his nonsense! She had been following him, hungering for him for so long!

Quickly, calmly, she packed. It was good to be determined, to know exactly what she was going to do. Phyllis, seventeen, and a great admirer of the beautiful older girl, came into the room.

"Oh, you are going across the bay? What kind of a car is it?"

Jocelyn looked at her, not comprehending.

"I mean the Johnson's car, that they said you could have."

"Oh?" Jocelyn had forgotten that detail. Of course, she had a car. She could drive straight from Bush street over the bridge to the cabin in Piedmont; that made it all the more explainable, all the simpler. "I had Ann Johnson's car, and I thought I'd come over and see what you all were up to."

Fifteen minutes later she was on her way. She stopped at a big market, bought a dozen doughnuts—dark rich doughnuts, chocolate bars, a dozen enormous golden oranges. She bought an evening paper, and hummed with delight and triumph as the little car crossed the gigantic bridge across the dark waters of the bay.

Once on the other side she had merely to drive steadily along the brightly lighted magnificent roads to Oakland, on toward the Piedmont hills. Undulating Oakland avenue, straight ahead, and then Coolidge until you came to the school and then past the Tunnel road and up a slanting cut.

She leaned from the car under the bright lights of an oil station.

"I think I'm off my road. Which way to Wickson Street?"

The white-clad young man got out a map, after observing, "You have me there," they looked at it together. He said, "May find those roads pretty muddy. We had a regular cloudburst here today."

"We didn't have any rain in the city at all. But it felt heavy and muggy. Like rain."

The car clock said five minutes of seven. It would take her only twenty minutes to get up the grade; she would arrive at exactly the right minute.

She knew this road. It was fun to follow it up and up, finding fewer and fewer houses as the hill rose, finally coming out on the ridge and seeing the warm squares of light that were Covey's windows. The lane that led from the broader road into his place was indeed soft and muddy; the car lurched and bumped on holes; Jocelyn turned it about in workmanlike fashion and backed it into the empty shed that served as a garage. Her heart rose on a wave of deep thankfulness and joy; Kent's blue car was already there. They were here, no question of that now!

She picked her way in almost pitch blackness to the front door, carrying her bag and her packages. Rain fell thickly; the windows gave her the only light she had now; it was not bright enough to save her stepping into a pool of ice-cold water here, or into the soft sinking earth of a flower bed there. Covey had done little in the matter of cultivation, but there was a path, and there were finally firm wooden steps under wet feet, the doorknob in her wet glove.

She dropped her bundles in the dark hallway; shed her hat and gloves. Pushing her bright hair into a damp cap as she opened the door of the cabin's one big room, she called challengingly, "Hello, everyone!"

There was a good fire roaring on the open hearth, and an oil lamp was lighted. The dear shabby chairs, the long table, the curtained bunks. The line of books were all half revealed; she loved every inch of the place. The warmth of it was delicious after the bleakness and darkness and wetness outside.

No one was in sight. The rest of the house consisted merely of a small tiny kitchen, walled, as this room was walled, in raw pine, and a bathroom. In summer weather a canvased back porch could be used as an additional bedroom; in winter Covey merely drew an old corduroy curtain across the center of this room. Women took the berths on one side; men those on the other, and if a good deal of hilarious conversation went on across the curtain, it did not tend to make visits to the place less enjoyable to the artist's lighthearted friends. Tonight, Jocelyn reflected, she and Una would take their turn at the bathroom, washing shudderingly in its icy chill, but with hot water and fragrant soap and Covey's mismated towels to aid them, and then snuggle under their warm blankets and watch lamplight and firelight shine on the walls and faded rugs and the backs of books, and listen to the rain on the low roof.

When the men returned from their ablutions there would be the usual nonsense. "Girls, don't hesitate to call us at the least alarm in the night." "Don't worry, we won't." "Anything alarming you, Jocelyn?' "Only you, Kent." "This is very distressing to me, Jocelyn, you know what a stickler I am for conventions." I know, Red. We both feel for you deeply, don't we, Una?"

Then laughter, and their light out, and the men's light out, and finally, "Oh, hush up, both of you! We're sleepy!" and then the silence and the dying glow of the burning logs, and once again the delicious soft rustle and patter of rain overhead.

Jocelyn had stayed here several times under those conditions. They were perhaps the happiest times that she and Kent ever had had together. They had expressed wonder sometimes, that those who loved each other did not find some such place as this in which to be happy. So little money was needed, and so many persons had that much money! A garden, trees, a wide glorious view, wild poppies spangling the hills in May, Michaelmas daisies thick beside the lanes in autumn. And French bread and cheese and good hot coffee, and the utter peace of dreamless sleep and quiet days. . .

And love, they had always said. A man and a woman loving each other desperately, completely, gloriously. She in faded Chinese coolie smocks; he in a daubed shabby jacket and worn cords, and sunrises and sunsets and the whitewash of summer moons and the delicate frosts of winter mornings theirs forever and forever!

Just to be back in the beloved room brought back the old dream, and it was as if he loved her as much as ever he had, as if she were happy again. She turned from where he was standing, rain spattered, and with her hands stretched to the fire, when he came in from the kitchen, and the light made an aureole of her gold hair and shadowed her eyes as she laughed at him.

"I had to come! I had Una's message, and I knew it was my last chance. But what a night! I went up to Red's and no one was there, and I'd telephoned and everything was all mixed up. But when I got back to the house Una's message was there, and a message that I could have the Johnson's car. It all seemed to fit too nicely. Instead of going to Aunt Nell's, I came over here."

He came over to her, and the look she loved was in his eyes. Rain pattered overhead, and the fire crackled, Kent smiled, and for a moment his arms were about her, and heaven was in her heart. He did not have to speak, and there was a moment of silence.

When he did speak it was amusedly, tenderly, as she had feared never to hear him speak to her again.

"What are you apologizing for?" he demanded. The tone rather than the words caressed her; seemed to enclose her in sweetness and warmth and safety again. She drew back from him laughing, bewildered, her soft gold hair still disordered and damp, her cheek still fresh and chilly from the cold and storm. "When have you had to apologize for coming where I am?" he asked.

All so much better than her most radiant dream! Jocelyn's face bloomed into sudden radiance.

"But I couldn't get hold of Una, I wasn't sure they were here!" she explained. And as his expression, still amused and tender, took on a new note of mischief and triumph she added, in dawning surprise, "Why aren't they here?" And then with a shocked and half-delighted laugh, "They aren't? Oh, Kent!"

"Oh, Jocelyn!" he returned in the same tone. And again she was jumbled against his heart, and she felt his kisses on her hair and her temples. Outside, high above the low roof, in the dark, the wind roared, and branches creaked and swished, and on the shingles and dripping from the eaves they could hear the steady pattering and splashing of the rain.

TORONTO STOCK EXCHANGE

Toronto, Dec. 3 —(CP)— Mining groups and industrials posted wide index gains at mid-day on Toronto Stock Exchange and Western oils were weaker. First-hour trade was heavy and the market then turned quiet, to show turnover of 1,760,000 shares for the first three hours.

Base metal stocks were strong on the promise of a better price for silver. Smelters gained 1½, Noranda firmed 1¼ and Hudson Bay added 1½. Sherritt, Waite-Amulet and Golden Manitoba posted gains.

Higher prices ruled in the gold group for Frobisher, Kirkland Lake, Osisko Lake, Astoria, Harker, Campbell Red Lake, Bevcourt, Inspiration, Premier and others.

Ford A advanced nearly a point to 29⅛ and the liquor stocks, Hiram Walker and Distillers-Seagram, firmed 1½ to 2 points. Papers, utilities and foods ruled strong.

NEW YORK STOCK EXCHANGE

New York, Dec. 3 —(AP)— Strength of assorted aviations featured today's stock market although favorites were to be found in almost all departments.

Dealings picked up speed after a quiet start and, while losers appeared here and there near the fourth hour, gains of fractions to two points predominated. New highs were plentiful.

Pan American Airways, in the wake of its argument with Britain over fares, opened about an hour and a half late, up 3½ on a 25,000-share block. It subsequently retreated moderately.

In front most of the session were Aviation Corp., American Airlines, U. S. Steel, Chrysler, General Motors, United Aircraft, Glenn Martin, Montgomery Ward, Santa Fe, Great Northern, Loew's, Du Pont and Engineers Public Service.

Distillers Seagrams led Canadian issues at mid-day with a two-point gain. Lake Shore was up ⅛ and Canadian Pacific and Hiram Walker unchanged. Dome Mines eased ¼.

LIVESTOCK

Toronto, Dec. 3 — (CP)—Cattle trade was active on beef cattle with prices 15 to 25 cents cwt. higher, up to mid-session on the livestock market here today. Calves and hogs were steady. Lambs and sheep were strong.

Receipts reported by the Dominion Marketing Service were: cattle 3,600, calves 800, hogs 700, sheep and lambs 1,000. Unsold from last week were 1,200 head of cattle, mostly stockers.

Prices in the trade included:

German Colonel, 2 Aides Convicted Mistreating POW

Wuppertal, Germany, Dec. 3—(AP)—Col. Erich Killinger, 52-year-old German prison camp commandant, today was sentenced by a British military court to five years imprisonment and two of his aides received prison terms for mistreatment of R.A.F. fliers in a "sweat-box" camp.

Killinger and two staff officers —Maj. Heinz Jungle, chief interrogation officer, and Lieut. Heinrich Eberhardt, were charged with mistreating airmen in hot, asbestos-lined cells in an endeavor to make them disclose Allied secrets.

Jungle was sentenced to five years and Eberhardt was sentenced to three years. Two defendants, Major Otto Boehringer and Lieut. Gustav Baurer-Schlichtegroll, were acquitted.

Defence counsel pleaded for leniency in sentencing Killinger, on the grounds of his age and the fact that he has a wife and three children.

FOUR TO APPEAR

Simcoe, Dec. 3 (CP) — Four young men charged with the $33,000 armed robbery Sept. 12 of the Langton, Ont., branch of the Imperial Band of Canada were due to appear today before Judge G. A. P. Brickenden at the opening of county court and general sessions of the peace.

The men are Dominic Minnille, 30, Ottawa, and Gerald Blackburn, 28, William Vance, 26, and Gail Hastings, 23, all of Windsor. They were arrested by provincial police, had a preliminary hearing Nov. 2, and elected trial by judge without a jury when they appeared again Nov. 13.

HOGS

Toronto, Dec. 3 —(CP)— Grade A, dressed, delivered, were unchanged to farmers $17.50, to truckers $17.65, at Stratford, in the only bacon-hog markets to report early today.

APPEAL OVER VALIDITY OF CANADA TEMPERANCE ACT

London, Dec. 3. (CP Cable)— Sir Cyril Radcliffe, K.C., supported by C. R. Magone of Toronto, today opened the appeal to the Privy Council of the Ontario Government against the validity of Canada Temperance Act 1878.

Presentation of the case is expected to take a full week and it will be some time after that before the judgment is made known.

PEACEMAKING POLICEMAN ASSAULTED

Toronto, Dec. 3 (CP)—The role of the peacemaker had its usual outcome last night for police constable A. Barfield. P. C. Barfield intervened in quarrel between a man and woman on a downtown Street. The man set upon him and was joined by two others.

After knocking the policeman to the roadway all four fled. One man later was arrested and charged with assault.

Truman Seeks Recommendations To Solve Strikes

Washington, Dec. 3. —(AP)— President Truman asked Congress today to set up a fact-finding board to make recommendations for solving labor disputes in "important nation-wide industries" and to ban strikes or lockouts during Federal consideration.

Recommending a system of handling reconversion labor troubles patterned after the Railway Labor Act, Mr. Truman told the legislators the Board should deal with disputes in such widespread industries as steel, automobile, aviation, mining, oil, utilities and communications.

The President said he was appointing such a board on his own authority to deal with the General Motors-United Automobile Workers (C.I.O.) dispute.

"While this Board will not have the statutory powers which I hope the Congress will soon authorize," Mr. Truman said, "I am sure that the American people will expect the employer and the employees to co-operate with the Board as fully as if appropriate legislation had already been passed.

"In the meantime, I am asking both parties to the dispute to display the same kind of patriotism as they displayed during the war. I am asking all the workers to return to work immediately, and I am asking the employers to proceed energetically with full production. I make this appeal on behalf of the American people to their fellow citizens who are now responsible for this major obstacle holding up our reconversion program.

"In connection with the threatened strike involving the United States Steel Corporation and the United Steel Workers, I am appointing a similar board. The public will expect full co-operation with the board by both sides. I am making the same appeal to the United Steel Workers to remain at work pending the report of the board's findings and recommendations."

Mr. Truman's outline to the fact-finding legislation said it was "not applicable to small industries or to small local disputes in large industries." He added:

"The objective should be to cover by legislation only such stoppages of work as the secretary of labor would certify to the President as vitally affecting the national public interest."

SOAKED WITH EXPLOSIVE, WAR PLANT BUILDINGS BURNED

Flames leapt 100 feet into the air as demolition crews set fire to 35 frame buildings, used by Defence Industries, Ltd., at Ajax, near Pickering, Ont., during war years for making explosives. Because the walls and floors were dangerously impregnated with high explosives, the buildings were condemned. Here the T.N.T. building goes up in smoke.

HOWLING NORTHEASTER STRIKES U. S. EAST COAST

Here is a view of some of the wreckage left in the wake of the ripping northeaster that hit the U. S. eastern seaboard. This photo was made at Winthrop, Mass., where big tides and heavy seas did considerable coastal damage. The winds, which sometimes reached hurricane force, brought rain and snow. Note great concrete slabs in foreground here. They were tossed about like cookies by the heavy seas. Many deaths were reported.

Control Board Of Industries Is Dissolved

Ottawa, Dec. 3—(CP)—Dissolution of the Wartime Industries Control Board, the wartime body mainly responsible for the distribution of war materials, was announced today by Munitions Minister Howe.

The minister's announcement followed closely the resignation last week of J. G. Godsoe, chairman of the board and co-ordinator of controls. The board ot its peak had 20 members—munitions department controllers and senior officials of other departments—but it had been reduced to seven as the work tapered.

"The board was the central agency of the department of munitions and supply, which directed the supply and distribution of raw materials and services, particularly important to the war effort, and it is a real tribute to the effectiveness of its work that the board can be dissolved so soon after the cessation of hostilities," said Mr. Howe.

It had been the policy of the board and its members to institute controls only when the supply situation made such action necessary to the war effort and to remove them as soon as conditions permitted, said Mr. Howe.
Steady With Elimation .... :...

In keeping with this policy the supplies and machine tools controls had long since disappeared and since the end of the war individual controls had been elimated with all possible speed. Controls abolished included aircraft, chemicals, metals, oil, ship repairs and salvage, steel and transit. Controls remaining are rubber, coal, construction, timber, motor vehicle, power and priorities.

"The restrictions imposed on these remaining controls have been steadily relaxed to date, and those remaining will be removed just as rapidly as may be accomplished without disruption of the economy," said the department.

The fundamental job the wartime industries control board raced was the regulation of Canadian industry to assure a maximum of raw materials being made available for efficient war production. Composed at one time of 19 departmental controllers and other senior officials the board had to fit the programs complicated mosiac of industrial of individual controllers into the regulation.

Youth Arrested On Five Charges After Long Probe

Culminating police investigations which had continued since last January Robert McCoy, aged 20, of this city was arrested on Front Street Friday night by Sgt. Douglas Ellis of the local police force. Police stated McCoy was wanted on five charges involving two charges of burglary, two of shop breaking and one of theft.

Identification of a small wrench which McCoy was believed to have stolen gave investigating officers the clue which led to his being charged with the five above offences. Officers were preparing to leave for North Bay to arrest McCoy when he returned to Belleville only to be picked up by local police.

McCoy is charged with entering Moxam and Woods garage and the Schuster Coal Office, and of entering the residence of Earl Godfrey, St. Paul Street.

BURNED BY TURPENTINE

Kingston, Dec. 3 — (CP)—Mr. and Mrs. Francis D. Paige of nearby Portsmouth suffered burns yesterday when a can of turpentine which Mr. Paige was using to clean paint brushes caught fire.

Mrs. Paige was burned about the hands and legs, and Mr. Paige received severe hand burns. Firemen said the interior of the house was badly damaged.

Kingston firemen directed by Chief V. C. Brightman fought the blaze for two hours.

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop was smoking to himself in his private chair, and ma said, William, I've been worrying about the atom bomb.

I'm not surprised, the atom bomb is probably the most widely distributed headake in modern history, pop said. Have you decided what to do about it? he said, and ma said, Well, the big question is, shall we share the secret with the rest of the world, including Russia, or shan't we? What do you think, William? she said.

I think the same, pop said. I mean shall we indeed, or then again, shan't we? he said, and ma said, If we do share it, naturally everybody will have to sign an iron bound agreement not to use it against anybody else, we must insist on that, naturally.

Naturally, pop said, and ma said, But then suppose the agreement terned out to be a proverbial scrap of paper and we woke up one morning to find the atom bomb on our own doorstep? What then, William? she said.

Then we'd be lucky if we even found the doorstep, pop said, and ma said, And then on the other hand suppose we absilutely refuse to give up the secret, what then?

Let them sue us, pop said, and ma said, But I mean suppose they decide to go ahead and invent an atom bomb of their own and start bilding planetariums or whatever it is you need for the purpose?

That's a distinct possibility which has been pointed out by all the experts and most of the laymen and a fair proportion of the laywomen, pop said, and ma said, But William, dont you see, I mean that's just it, I mean what are we going to do?

We'll probably just keep on worrying for the present, my dear, pop said.

Former Nazi Leaders Termed "Murderers and Robbers" By British Prosecutor Shawcross

By DANIEL DE LUCE

Nuernberg, Dec. 4. (AP)—The 20 once-mighty Nazi leaders on trial for their lives before an international tribunal were excoriated in the name of the British Commonwealth of Nations today as "murderers and robbers" personally and individually accountable for breaking the world's peace.

Opening the British case against Hermann Goering, Rudolf Hess, Joachim Von Ribbentrop and their fellow members of the fallen clique, Sir Hartley Shawcross, attorney general of the United Kingdom, said that the defendants had piloted Germany into "aggression, naked and unashamed" and plunged the world into an appallingly costly war.

'No Mere Willing Tools' Charged

"These men were no mere willing tools", Sir Hartley said. "They are the men whose support had built Hitler up into the position of power he occupied. They are the men whose initiative and planning perhaps conceived and certainly made possible the acts of aggression made in Hitler's name."

The attorney general's 30,000-word address introduced the British citation of proof that the accused were guilty of crimes against the peace. The United States has concluded its presentation on the first of three other counts in the indictment—that the Nazis engaged in a conspiracy to wage a war of aggression. Two remaining counts, charging war crimes and crimes against humanity, are to be prosecuted jointly by Russia and France.

Sir Hartley first sought to show that the Hitler gang violated established international law through aggression and preparation for aggression.

Then, step by step, from the long-concealed words of the Nazis themselves, he traced the German course of broken treaties, violated frontiers and ultimate carnage and misery.

"Their lust and sadism," he said, "their deliberate slaughter and degradation of so many millions of their fellow creatures that the imagination reels incomprehensibly, are but one side only of this matter.

"Perhaps their guilt as murderers and robbers is of less importance and of less effect to future generations of mankind than their crime of fraud—the fraud by which they placed themselves in a position to do their murder and their robbery. . .

"Should it be taken as a precedent of behavior in the conduct of international relations, its consequences to mankind will not less certainly lead to the end of civilized society."

Sir Hartley said the chief nations, forced to defend themselves against an outlaw Germany, therefore have established a tribunal so that the conduct of the Nazi leaders "may be exposed in its naked wickedness" and "in the hope that the coincidence of good sense of all the world will see the consequences of such conduct."

British Attitude

He said the British Empire was determined to prove "that the waging of an aggressive war is not only a dangerous venture but a criminal one," and that "persons who, in violation of this law, plunge their own and other countries into an aggressive war, do so with a halter around their necks."

It is Britain's view, Sir Hartley said, that this Tribunal shall apply "not the law of the victor but the accepted principle of international usage," and shall finish "what the law of nations itself constituted an international crime before this Tribunal was established."

Agreements Signed by Germany Outlawing War

He cited agreements beginning with the Hague Convention of 1899 and down through the years to the Locarno and other treaties signed by Germany — treaties outlawing war as an instrument of national policy.

Mentioning particularly the Kellogg-Briand Pact, signed at Paris in 1928, Sir Hartley said it "has in no way been modified or replaced by the Charter of the United Nations."

"The Pact of Paris is the law of nations. This Tribunal will enforce it," he declared.

"The victorious powers," he added, "in thus interpreting, declaring and supplementing the existing law, are content to be judged by the verdict of history."

He turned then to a detailed analysis of German moves and motives, asserting: "From the moment Hitler became Chancellor in 1933, with the defendant Von Papen as vice-chancellor, and with the defendant Von Neurath as his foreign minister, the whole atmosphere of the world darkened."

"Treaties," Sir Hartley said, "seemed no longer matters of solemn obligation, but were entered into with complete cynicism as a means of deceiving other states of Germany's warlike intentions."

"International conferences were no longer to be used as a means for securing pacific settlements but as occasions for obtaining by blackmail demands which were eventually to be enlarged by war.

"So patent, indeed, did this eventually become, that to be invited by the defendant Ribbentrop to enter into a non-aggression pact with Germany was almost a sign that Germany intended to attack the state concerned."

It was in 1937, Britain's chief prosecutor declared, that the German War Ministry issued a "directive for unified preparation for war" which said Germany "need not consider an attack from any side but must be ready for "military exploitation of politically favorable opportunities should they occurr.

Euphenism for "Aggressive War."

"That phrase is no more than a euphemistic description of aggressive war," Sir Hartley said.

Referring frequently to documents such as the "Green Plan" for the rape of Czechoslovakia, "foiled partially or at least delayed by the Munich agreement," Sir Hartley said Hitler and his pack "considered and accepted" the possibility that their aggressions might draw Britain and France into war.

"To force the neighbors of a state to take up arms to defend it against aggression in order to fulfill their obligations to it, is to initiate aggressive war against those neighbors themselves," he said.

"As far back as September, 1938, plans for an aggressive war against Poland, England and France were well in hand," Sir Hartley charged. "While Hitler, at Munich, was telling the world the German people wanted peace and had no more territorial problems in Europe, the staffs of his armed forces were already preparing plans."

The British Attorney General said that Hitler issued a directive July 16, 1940, "to eliminate the English homeland as a base for carrying on the war against Germany," first by destroying the R.A.F. and then by invasion.

When the effort failed Sir Hartley continued, Hitler, "turned back to the east and on June 22, 1941, German armed forces invaded Russia—without warning, without a declaration of war."

This had been contemplated, the prosecutor declared, in a Hitler order of Nov. 12, 1940, which said: "The German armed forces have to be ready to defeat Soviet Russia in a swift campaign before the end of the war against Great Britain."

Secret Means of Cracking Jap Code Given Britain by U.S. in Jan'y 1941
—General Miles

Washington, Dec. 4 — (AP)—Maj.-Gen. Sherman Miles testified today that the United States in January, 1941 — 11 months before the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor — gave Great Britain the secret means for breaking the Japanese code.

Gen. Miles, Chief of United States Military Intelligence at the time, told a Senate-House inquiry into the Pearl Harbor disaster that "I can't answer, offhand," whether Britain in turn relayed to Washington information she subsequently got from decoding Japanese messages.

The inquiry also heard that the late President Roosevelt informed the Philippine High Commissioner on Nov. 26, 1941, that the "next Japanese aggression might cause an outbreak of hostilities between the United States and Japan."

A message read into the record disclosed that the president said 11 days before outbreak of the Pacific war that there were "no clear indications" of where the Japanese might direct the military strength they were massing. It added, however:

"Advance against Thailand seems the most probable."

In this connection, the president said:

"I consider it possible that this next Japanese aggression might cause an outbreak of hostilities between the U. S. and Japan."

Mr. Roosevelt noted that the Japanese were strongly reinforcing their garrisons and naval forces in the mandated islands "in a manner which indicates they are preparing this region as quickly as possible against a possible attack on them by U. S. forces."

Deaths of Thousands Of Russian Prisoners Meant Nothing to Keitel

The Associated Press submitted a written list of questions to Field Marshal Wilhelm Keitel, chief military figure among the 20 German defendants in the Nuernberg war crimes trial. His counsel, Otto Nelte, read the questions to Keitel, noted his answers and returned them.

By DANIEL DE LUCE

Nuernberg, Dec. 4. (AP) — Field Marshal Wilhelm Keitel, Hitler's military shadow for seven years, said today the German invasion of Russia, for which he signed his name on many orders, was "a preventive-defensive war."

Answering a list of questions submitted by The Associated Press, the 62-year-old professional soldier shrugged off responsibility for such tragedies as that in 1941 when "very many" hundreds of thousands of Russian war prisoners "died of exhaustion."

He cited no individual instance when he opposed Hitler's war plans, and said that if the international military tribunal let him go free he would retire to his country estate in Brunswick province and write a book called "My Memories of Seven Years With Adolf Hitler".

The coldly ,self-righteous tenor

The coldly, self-righteous tenor dismay even his legal defender, Otto Nelte, who said:

"The Field Marshal lost one son in the war, another was taken prisoner in the east and a third is in an American prison camp. But he comes of a long line of soldiers and nothing that has happened to Germany or his own family has changed his opinions."

Keitel was asked concerning the German treatment of Russian prisoners.

"I think the question concerns the transporting of Russian prisoners to Germany" was Keitel's answer. "In the encirclement battles of the summer of 1941, hundreds of thousands of prisoners were taken, many of whom were already completely exhausted because of the encirclement. Because of the destroyed railways it was impossible to transport these masses directly to Germany. Besides, many of these completely weakened and half-starved people were no longer fit to march.

"Transport could only be started after the railways were put in order. For the same reason and because of the gigantic masses of prisoners, there were also food difficulties. Many thousands of these soldiers escaped; but unfortunately, very many also died of exhaustion."

Asked what explanation he could give for the preparation of "plain barbarossa" the outline for the Russian invasion drafted seven months ahead of time and initiated by him, Keitel answered:

"About this, I wish at this time merely to say that after the fruitless conference between (Russian Foreign Commissar) Molotov and Hitler, although diplomatic negotiations were still continuing, reports constantly reached the high command of the Wehrmacht that preparations for war were noticeable on the Russian side—for example: The construction of 60 big airports near the demarkation line (in Poland). Hitler, therefore, believed he had to take corresponding preparatory measures which led to the attack of June 22 1941. It was a preventive-defensive war."

To the question of what was behind his counsel's hint Saturday that he may have acted mercifully toward French Gen. Henri Giraud and the latter's family—although a prosecution witneses, Erwin Lahousen, swore that Keitel had demanded Giraud's murder—the accused responded:

"I personally evinced that respect for Gen. Giraud which in my opinion one owes a courageous general. It goes without saying that, on the order of the Fuehrer, every means had to be employed to recapture such an important war prisoner. We then tried through negotiations with Vichy to bring about Gen. Giraud's voluntary return to imprisonment.

"I personally gave orders that Gen. Giraud, who had come for a conference to a part of France occupied by us, be given safe conduct for his return to unoccupied France. We undertook no measures of any sort to exert pressure on his family who lived in unoccupied France."

To the question, "were you ever in opposition to any of the Fuehrer's war plans?" Keitel answered:

"I must observe that I never figured in the strategic war plans of the Fuehrer. These he discussed exclusively with the leadership staff of the Wehrmacht (co-defendant Col. Gen. Gustav Jodl was chief of this sectional staff, while Keitel officially was chief of the Wehrmacht High Command.) Obviously, I had knowledge of them."

Asked if the Wehrmacht High Command, of which he was at least titular chief, was responsible for starvation conditions in crowded and unsanitary prisoner-of-war camps inside Germany, Keitel said:

"The Wehrmacht High Command was responsible for the care of all war prisoners in the home area until August, 1944. At that time, the Fuehrer handed over this task to the commander of the home army — Heinrich Himmler."

YOUNG MOTHER AND DAUGHTER BURNED TO DEATH

Believed Woman Poured Coal Oil on Wood to Get Fire Started

London, Ont., Dec. 4 (CP)—A young mother and her daughter are dead after a fire which completely destroyed their McGillivary township farm home shortly before eight o'clock this morning. The victims are Mrs. Otto Darling, believed about 21, and her two-and-a-year-old daughter Patricia.

The fire is believed to have started when the mother poured coal oil on wood in the kitchen stove in an effort to start it going.

At the time of the fire the husband was outside collecting wood. So rapidly did the flames spread that he was unable to re-enter the house in an attempt to save his wife and daughter.

The bodies were found in the basement of the home. Only the walls of the two storey brick home were left standing.

CHARGES LAID

Troonto, Dec. 4 — (CP)—Police last night laid charges of forgery, uttering and theft against three men arrested in connection with the theft last month of 68 pay cheques valued at $2,700 from the Dominion Bridge Company office in West Toronto. In custody are Harold Thayer, 40; Oliver Bourie, 31; and Martin Moreau, 35.

Secrecy Surrounds Arrival

New York, Dec. 4 — (AP) — Secrecy shrouded the scheduled arrival here yesterday of Tyler Kent, 34, former American Embassy clerk whom the British imprisoned on charges of revealing the contents of coded messages between the late President Roosevelt and Winston Churchill, then Prime Minister.

CONSERVATIVES HEAR BRACKEN, PREMIER DREW

Speakers Claim "Secret Order-in-Council Govt." Exists in Ottawa

Toronto, Dec. 4 — (CP)—Progressive Conservative leader John Bracken, in a criticism of the Federal Government, told the Ontario Progressive Conservative Association at its one-day convention here that "a secret, order-in-council government" still exists in Ottawa.

He spoke last night after Premier George Drew of Ontario sounded the belief of his government in the ability of the people to govern themselves and the association had given solid support to its provincial and federal leadership.

Mr. Bracken declared the Dominion government needed "to shake off its lingering war mentality and get its thinking adjusted to conditions of peace" while Col. Drew said:

"We recognize that the basis of democracy is freedom of speech, freedom of worship, freedom of association, and freedom of communication. If those four freedoms are assured, all other freedoms can be established by the concerted action of a free people."

During a general meeting yesterday afternoon, Col. Drew was congratulated on his June election victory and the "sound and progressive policies" of his government. Mr. Bracken as Federal opposition leader was pledged the "full support and co-operation" of the Ontario Association.

HOUSE APPROVES BIG CREDITS TO ALLIED COUNTRIES

Ilsley Presents Bill To Loan 750 Millions Under Export Credits Insurance Bill

By D'ARCY O'DONNELL
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, Dec. 4 — (CP)—Many Allied countries, their own industries disrupted by war, are looking to Canada for assistance during the reconstruction period, and the government plans to extend that help through long-term export credit loans, Finance Minister Ilsley told the Commons yesterday.

He made the statement while outlining details of a loan plan which would aid rehabilitation in devastated countries and at the same time enable Canada to re-establish, develop and expand her export trade beyond pre-war limits.

To accomplish the two-fold purpose he sought and obtained approval of a resolution to a bill which would increase from $100,000,000 to $750,000,000 the amount the government might loan to Allied countries under the provisions of the Export Credits Insurance Bill.

Approval of the legislation by parliament was all that was delaying completion of loans totalling more than $400,000,000, said Mr. Ilsley. The remaining $250,000,000 would be needed to cover loans now being negotiated.

Outlined Conditions

Mr. Ilsley outlined the conditions under which the credit loans are made and said that the time for their repayment varied from five to 30 years, with interest rates ranging from 2¼ to three per cent.

The government was urging the borrowers to pay in cash at one-fifth or one-sixth of the cost of the goods they desired. This was to provide Canada with foreign currency needed for Europe.

"It has not been our policy to ask for any commercial or other concessions as a consideration or condition for these loans," said Mr. Ilsley. "We regard them as standing on their own feet, justified by the terms of interest and repayment together with the manner and extent to which they themselves promote Canada's trade interest in the short run and the long run.

Help Future Trade.

"In one or two cases we have taken the opportunity of suggesting exchange of most favored nation privileges in commercial matters, to help develop our future trade, and even of suggesting other improvements in commercial policy or arrangements, but these have only been incidents or by-products of our discussions and not conditions of granting the credits.

"I should add, however, that I would not wish to give the House the impression that we would not in any case attach conditions relating to commercial or exchange policy to the granting of credits, as there may well be cases where such conditions are of real importance to Canada, perhaps of more importance than the terms of the loan itself."

Mr. Ilsley said France had agreed to give Canada favored nation treatment but it was considered impractical to enter into general trade discussions while arranging credits.

Among the things the borrowing countries were purchasing were wheat, trucks, tires, leather, farm machinery, railway equipment, road transportation equipment, metals, chemicals, general machinery, electrical equipment, fertilizer and prefabricated houses.

Purchase of Goods.

All money loaned under the legislation would be spent for the purchase of Canadian goods.

Frank S. Follwell Re-elected Mayor, Two New Aldermen

Board of Education Will Also Have 2 New Members

In one of the closest mayoralty elections fought here in years, Mayor Frank S. Follwell, was reelected to the office of chief magistrate of the city over ex-mayor Jamieson Bone in the civic elections held here yesterday. His majority as released by city hall statisticians Monday night is 112.

Mayor Follwell polled 1777 votes in yesterday's election as against 1665 cast for his opponent. Last year Mayor Follwell received 2992 votes.

The city electorate turned thumbs down on the proposed by-law giving the city permission to raise $367,000 for the installation of a sewage disposal plant. It was defeated by a vote of 888 against the bill and 597 for it.

Five Alderman Re-elected

Five aldermen were re-elected in the aldermanic contest which saw fourteen aspirants vie for the electorate favor and two new faces will be seen in the council chamber. Elected are Major Robert Graham DSO, who resigned his seat on the council in 1940 to join the armed services with 1497 votes; Aldermen E. Ormonde Butler, 1396; Alderman Charles Hyde, 1275; Alderman Newton Wilbur, 1231; Alderman William Harvey, 1192; and Alfred Chamberlain 1164, and Alderman-elect Claude Tice, with 1074 votes.

Defeated candidates were Alderman Jack Allin and Messrs James Lazenby; Charles McKenzie; George Brown; Everett Wood; Jule Bentley and Clare Ridley.

Mr. Harold Seldon, a newcomer to educational circles swept into the lead of the polls for election to the Board of Education early in the evening and headed the four trustees-elect with a vote of 1685. Also elected were Miss Josephine Tickell; Mr. B. C. Sisler, and Mr. H. B. Fetterly. Two newcomers aspiring to a seat on the board Messrs Enos David and Alex Nathan; were defeated.

Woman on Board

Miss Tickell, said to be the first woman to sit on the board in a number of years and the third member of the feminine gender to grace the board since its inception finished second in the polling to Mr. Seldon amassing 1377 votes. Mr. Sisler received 1155; Mr. Fetterly, 987, while the defeated candidates, Messrs. David and Nathan received 901 and 823 respectively.

There was no electoral worry about the commissionership for the Public Utilities, Mr. Wotten being given an acclamation at the nomination meetings held last month.

While a few of the candidates blamed it on the apathetic attitude of the ratepayers, the majority felt that it was the inclemency of the weather that brought out well over four hundred voters less than the election of last year. If the mayoral vote can be cited as a barometer, last year 3,858 voters wended their way to the polls while this year some 3442 cast their votes in the civic election.

Liberty Ship With 541 U.S. Troops Loses Propeller, Tug to Rescue

New York, Dec. 4 — (AP) — A seagoing tug and possibly other ships sped today from Bermuda to the aid of the Liberty ship Henry Ward Beecher, carrying 541 homeward-bound American troops, which earlier radioed for assistance after losing its propeller about 340 miles northeast of Bermuda.

Naval officials here said the navy tug Restorer was on its way to the stalled vessel, which was not believed in serious danger, within two hours after the first distress call at 2:26 a.m. E.S.T.

The Henry Ward Beecher, bound for Newport News, Va., from Marseilles, France, was reported in a well-travelled sea lane. Her first call for help was heard by other ships in the area and it was believed at least some of them also were on their way to give assistance.

Weather was reported moderate in the area.

16 MOTORISTS FINED FOR OVERTIME PARKING

Charges resulting from overtime parking constituted a considerable portion of the morning's court docket today with no less than 16 local motorists paying the conventional fine and costs for parking more than the regulation one hour. Also seven inebriates paid the customary $12 for drunkenness.

A former Hamilton youth, James Mole, age 16, was remanded until Friday for sentence following his plea of guilty on a charge of stealing a shotgun and ten boxes shells from a Front Street resident.

R. McCoy Given 20-Day Term

Sentenced to twenty days in jail as result of being convicted on five charges ranging from theft to breaking and entering, Robert McCoy, age 20, of this city, will receive his liberty in time to enjoy Christmas turkey.

Pleading guilty to all five of the charges when he was arraigned in city police court Tuesday morning before Magistrate T. Y. Wills. McCoy was sentenced to 20 days in jail on one of the charges and placed on one year's probation on the others pending restitution for some of the property stolen.

Early in the year the residence of Earl Godfrey, St. Paul St., had been entered on two occasions, while the premises of Moxam and Woods service station and the Schuster Coal Company office, had been entered on another occasion with articles reported stolen. From the Godfrey residence $30.63 in cash, two watches and a rifle had been taken, while an electric drill was stolen from the service station and gasoline ration books and other articles from Schuster's.

The youth also pleaded guilty to stealing an automatic revolver from H. J. McFarland's parked car back in 1943.

Mrs. Frank Lough, Foxboro, Injured

Mrs. Frank Lough, aged 62, Foxboro, is in Belleville General Hospital suffering from severe lacerations about the face and possible fractured leg as result of injury received in a two-car crash which occurred one mile south of Foxboro late Monday afternoon.

Mrs. Lough was riding as a passenger in her husband's auto when the car was in a sideswipe collision with a local Christian Electric and Hardware delivery truck. Mr. Lough was driving north from Belleville when in meeting the Christian Electric and Hardware truck, the latter vehicle is reported to have skidded on the slippery pavement.

Passenger in the delivery truck, Howard Mantle, of Charles Street, received lacerations about the mouth in addition to loosened teeth when he was thrown forward into the dash. Driver of the truck, Ralph Leavens, South Park St., received only minor bruises.

According to Provincial Police who investigated the accident, the Lough car was almost a complete wreck while the truck was damaged to the extent of approximately $200.

Importance of Retaining British Market for Canadian Cheese Stressed At Opening Session of Convention

Opening session of the Eighteenth Annual Convention of the Central Ontario Cheese Makers' Convention was held in the Rotary room at the Quinte Hotel Tuesday morning with approximately 75 members of the association and ranking dairy officials present.

The Cheese Makers' Convention is being held in conjunction with the British Empire Dairy Show which is now being held at the city hall.

President of the Cheese Makers' Association, Mr. Harold Henderson of Campbellford expressed appreciation for the splendid turnout of members and officials, and later announced the appointment of resolution and nominating committees, members of which will report at this evening's meeting.

Social Organization Needed.

Chief Dairy Instructor for Eastern Ontario, Mr. Frank Robinson of Kemptville expressed the need of social organization among cheese makers, indicating there would be better feeling among the makers if social groups in the different communities were organized.

Mr. Robinson asked if the best service possible was being received by makers from their cheese instructors. "Makers should feel free to ask questions of their instructors, and to discuss with them their problems," he said.

Mild criticism of Ontario Cheese Producers' policy, or lack of policy, was heard from the speaker who asked "when is this association going to settle down and do something."

Comments on Policy.

Mr. Robinson commented briefly on the Cheese Producers' Association policy of collective buying of cheese makers' supplies, of insuring cheese while it remained in storage in the different factories and of artificial insemination, suggesting that a program for the eradication of extraneous matter in cheese would be an ideal project for the association.

"After all," he said, "the job of producing clean milk is one for the producers and is not the job of the cheese maker."

In closing the speaker expressed the opinion that Canada should strive to retain its British export market for cheese instead of casting about for further markets on this continent.

Col. Vanderwater, chairman of the Hastings County Agricultural Committee, spoke on the value of such committees to agriculture and also advocated a concerted program to advertise the nutritional value of cheese as a manner in which to encourage the domestic use of cheese in the post-war period.

Donald Howes, Atwood, Wins British Empire Championship For Highest Scoring Cheese

Bert Jones Wins Echlin Memorial Trophy for Best Cheese From Eastern and Central Ontario

Again repeating performances of previous years cheesemakers of Western Ontario were successful in winning the top awards in the open classes at the British Empire Cheese Exhibition which opened here Monday and will close Wednesday.

Winner of the British Empire Championship for having the highest scoring cheese at the exhibition was Donald Howes of Atwood, Ontario, whose cheese entered in the June open class scored 98.5. Mr. Howes' cheese scored full points on texture, closeness, color and finish and made 43.5 points of a possible 45 for flavor. Howes' July entry also took first prize with 98.1 points with Leslie Adair, Britton, winning the August open class with 98.2 points. Howes won the T. Eaton Co. Ltd., silver sandwich plate for the highest scoring cheese.

F. D. Harrison, of Burgessville, took first in the September class with 98.2 points, while the October open class was won by C. H. Stockman, of Tavistock, with 98.3 points.

In recent years Donald Howes, this year's winner, has been a consistent prize winner at the Belleville show, being a runner up in 1943 when Calvin V. Smith won the championship, while in 1942 Howes won the local show.

The John Echlin Memorial Trophy awarded to the maker exhibiting the highest scoring cheese from Central or Eastern Ontario was won by Bert Jones from Tweed, his prize winning cheese scoring 97.7 points, failing maximum points only in texture and in flavor.

Auguste Hebert of Ste. Sabin, Ste. Bellechasse, Quebec, won the Silver Challenge Cup for the highest scoring October cheese from Quebec, he also winning the J. D. LeClair Challenge Trophy for the highest scoring cheese from Quebec.

The J. P. Griffin Challenge Shield awarded to the dairy instructor in Central Ontario whose group won the greatest amount of prize money in the regular classes was won by George Pollard of Stirling, while the $20 special for the instructor in Central or Eastern district showing the greatest aggregate increase in entries over that of 1943 was won by W. P. Moore of Campbellford.

Max Remington of Newburgh was awarded the F. A. Morgan Memorial Trophy for having the highest aggregate score in classes one to five, inclusive.

F. D. Harrison of Burgessville won the Silver Challenge Trophy for the highest September cheese, and also won the Gold Medal and Diploma. Gold Medal and Diploma of Honor was won by Leslie Adair of Britton, while the Silver Medal and Diploma of Honor went to Harold Elliott of West Huntingdon. Fourth Place Bronze Medal and Diploma of Honor went to Donald Howes of Atwood.

Other special prize winners included C. H. Stockman of Tavistock who won the Amateur class. Prize winners in the C. Richardson special included F. D. Harrison, Burgessville, Leslie Adair, Britton, C. H. Stockman Tavistock, Fred M. May, Atwood, and William Henderson of Picton. Donald Barker of Warsaw, Ont. won the Bank of Commerce Silver Tray for having the highest average score on cheese scoring 94 points or over for the period May 1st to October 31st. This prize was for the competition by Central Ontario makers only.

Winners in the various classes and scores made were as follows:

Merchants to Keep Stores Open Only 2 Evenings for Holiday Trade, Friday and Saturday Dec. 21, 22

Belleville merchants will keep their places of business open only for two evenings prior to Christmas it was decided at a representative meeting of local merchants at a special retail merchants' division meeting of the Chamber of Commerce held Monday evening. President of the merchants' division, Mr. James G. Galloway, acted as chairman for the evening.

The matter of Christmas shopping hours was gone into very thoroughly from all angles and due to the current comparative shortage of goods, it was decided that two "open" evenings would be sufficient. Evenings on which local stores will remain open will be Friday and Saturday, December 21st. and 22nd.

Wednesday afternoon, December 19th. local stores will remain open, it was decided.

On the Monday evening immediately prior to Christmas local stores will close as usual at six o'clock, while Belleville merchants will also observe Boxing Day, the day following Christmas.

James Texts Employs New Service Manager

Appointment of Mr. Jack Sherwood, late of Oshawa and the Royal Canadian Navy, as manager in charge of service, sales and equipment for The James Texts, Front Street, was announced today by Mr. Virgil James.

Mr. Sherwood, who was discharged from the Navy two weeks ago after three and one-half years honorable service in Canada and Newfoundland has assumed his new duties.

MR. JACK SHERWOOD

Previous to his joining the Navy in 1942 as an armament artificer Mr. Sherwood, who is thirty years of age, was associated with the General Motors Corporation in Oshawa and was in charge of office equipment for that company. Prior to that he was with the Underwood Typewriter Company where he received valuable experience in the maintenance and repair of typewriters.

After joining the senior service three and one-half years ago, Mr. Sherwood received extensive training in Canada. Later he was sent to Newfoundland where he served as an artificer for two and one half years. His work in the service included repairs and maintenance of gunnery instruments, range-finders, binoculars, sextants, etc. He was discharged with the rank of chief petty officer.

Mr. Sherwood hobbies with golf and a spot of fishing occasionally when time permits. He is married and has one son.

HOUSE APPROVES

The amended bill is scheduled to come up for debate during the day.

Wants Park Area

Extension of Canada's system of national parks through the development of new small parks was proposed by G. R. Webb (PC — Leeds).

Mr. Webb asked consideration for creation of a park area in the Rideau Lakes district of Ontario. He said many of the existing parks lacked adequate accommodation. On the St. Lawrence river island parks, docks and wharves were in a poor state of repair. With Canada anticipating a big tourist business the parks should be put in good condition.

First reading was given to a bill providing for increased payments to Alberta under Dominion-Provincial tax agreements, as a result of the Alberta government's decision to pay full interest on its bonds.

Study of health department estimates occupied the morning sitting, while estimates of the resources department were tackled in the evening.

Requests Made

Health Minister Claxton said his department was undertaking a survey of the medical records of all Canadian blind as the basis of a preventative program.

Requests came from various parts of the House for increased assistance to the blind and for some form of help to cripples unable to earn their livelihood.

Recent speeches of Maj.-Gen. Brock Chisholm, Deputy Minister of Health and Welfare, were criticized by Hon. Herbert Bruce (PC — Toronto-Parkdale). Dr. Bruce was referring particularly to an address made by Gen. Chisholm at Washington Oct. 23 in which he spoke of the conception of right and wrong as a "poison which prevents human beings from attaining emotional maturity and causes periodic wars.

The Senate also met and gave final reading to a bill bringing subscriptions for war memorials under the provisions of the War Charities Act. Constitutionality of the bill was upheld by Senator J. W. de B. Farris (L—British Columbia).

To The Public Utility Users of Belleville

It has been with a considerable degree of pleasure and satisfaction that I have had the opportunity to serve as one of your representatives on the Public Utilities Commission for the past two years and by virtue of an acclamation I look forward with great optimism to another term on that Board.

At the time of my election to this office, I maintained and urged that the profits from all publicly owned utilities should only be used in one or more of three ways:

1st. For expansion and improvement of service;
2nd. Held as reserve for unforeseen contingencies;
3rd. Returned to the Consumers who created them.

With the co-operation of fellow Commissioners, this program has been fully carried out and no doubt those principals will be the policy of the future.

Through good internal management and sound business judgment by Commissioners who served in former years Belleville can proudly say that it now has its finest and best material assets in the various departments administered by the Commission.

These utilities will, no doubt, expand and improve along with a progressive and forward-looking Belleville, and with this end in view I hope to render some degree of satisfactory service through my continued term of office.

Thanking you,

F. R. Wotten

CHAIRMAN BELLEVILLE UTILITIES COMMISSION.

FRANKS. FOLLWELL

Not Much Public Interest

At that public interest was not apparent to any extent by attendance at the City Hall. True, the telephones in the editorial rooms of the Ontario Intelligencer, maintained a steady ringing and buzzing for upwards of three hours, denoting that Mr. and Mrs. Taxpayer were perfectly content to remain at home by the family hearth and obtain their information by this method.

But interest, if it can be judged by the appearance of the taxpayers at the City Hall was comparable to that of other years.

While the office of City Clerk Wilfred Holmes was the centre for the aspirants to civic government who cordoned tabulators Harold Bateman, Claude Tice and Cliff Matthews shortly after the first returns began to trickle in about 7:50, there was little or no apparent interest outside. A handful of interested ones lolled in the corridors or on the street. Later the crowd increased somewhat and interests that bordered on excitement began to become apparent as the mayoralty fight resolved itself into a close one.

First Returns at Eight

Shortly after eight o'clock when the first returns began to trickle in,' it was learned that Mayor Follwell had established a slim lead of some sixty-six votes.

Two more polls boosted this lead to 88.

The mayor gradually forged ahead as the next two polls came in and at the eleven-poll mark had a majority of 131.

At the thirteen poll mark however, ex-Mayor Bone showed signs of strength reducing his opponent's lead to 100..

Bone supporters gradually cut into the Follwell lead and at the fifteen poll mark, the mayors lead was cut to 90.

Here the tide of electoral fortune changed again and the mayor started to regain his lead. With four polls to go he increased his majority by a fairly substantial amount. He held this lead and near the end had a majority of 168.

Gained Some Strength

Some time later when final official figures were tabulated it was shown that ex-Mayor Bone had gained some voting strength but not sufficient to overcome his opponent's margin.

The electoral Dame Fortune threw her smiles hither and yon in the first returns insofar as aldermanic honors are concerned.

First one then another forged into the lead but gradually Major Bob Graham, D.S.O., one of Belleville's most distinguished military sons took the front position and from the halfway mark was never headed. He led the polls with a vote of 1497 and was closely followed by Alderman E. Ormonde Butler who finished with 1396. At the other end of the list Alderman-elect Claude Tice, who was running for the third time, finished 15 votes ahead of Alderman Jack Allin, who received a count of 1059.

Newspaper Offices Busy

Perhaps one of the busiest places in the city was the editorial room of the Ontario Intelligencer. A battery of telephones manned by an augmented staff gave forth with a shrill cacophony shortly after seven-thirty. It was apparent that the greater majority of voters were content to stay home and get the results via phone, for calls came in at the height of the proceedings at the rate of eight per minute. This was maintained for nearly three hours so some idea of how many calls received can be gathered from these figures.

Unsung heroines of the evening were the switchboard operators of the Bell Telephone Company who rendered yeoman service in their expert handling of the hundreds of calls that came through their office.

Came the Speeches.

After the excitement of the election had subsided somewhat and the handshaking had ceased, a number of the elected and the defeated retired to the City Hall auditorium where a smattering of the electors were assembled.

Mayor Follwell acted as chairman and in his remarks stated that although his majority in this election was small, "we live in a democratic country where the right of majority rules."

"I personally feel," he said, "that with my election the people of Belleville favor a progressive program. I hope everybody realizes that Belleville is a progressive city, but it cannot remain progressive unless the program laid down by its government is backed up by its residents. The mayor cannot do the work alone, neither can the City Council, the Parks Board, the Utilities Commission, or any other organization unless they are backed by the people who live here."

He thanked his supporters and tendered them his best wishes for the coming season.

Surprised at Small Vote

Major Bob Graham stated he was surprised at the small vote cast.

"I have seen a lot of country since I joined the army, but I think Belleville is the best place I have seen yet," he said. "I am a young man and will do my best to advance the interests of this city."

He had served to the best of his ability as a councillor for a number of years, Alderman Butler told his audience. He thanked them for their support and promised he would continue to serve them in the future as he had in the past.

Alderman Charles Hyde was glad to be re-elected, and hoped that more worthwhile legislation would be brought in next year. He would support any worthwhile measures or recommendations that would go to the betterment of Belleville.

He had received the results of the election at his home. Alderman Wilbur said, and was very pleased at the results. He had tried his best last year and would continue to give his best in the coming year.

Served Thirty Years

Alderman Harvey stated he had served the city for thirty years as a member of the council and the Board of Education. He had run once for mayor and had been defeated but for all that he thought Belleville was the best city in the world. "Everybody is my friend," he smiled, "and the vote tonight has proved it. I am going to carry on as always and as usual will give my best to the interests of Belleville." He congratulated the two new members of council and "hoped they would feel at home," and give some constructive criticism to council.

He would continue to advance the policies he had always adopted, Alderman Chamberlain said, and "I would like to see the harbor made attractive and tourist traffic brought to Belleville."

He hoped the Federal government would see fit to continue to carry on the improvements they had promised.

It was three times "and in" for him. Alderman-elect Claude Tice stated. "I am a newcomer, have a free mind and a free will and will do my best for two years, which I hope will be acceptable to all.

He deemed it a great honor to be elected, inasmuch as his father had served six years as alderman and four years as mayor. "I feel honored because it was my ambition to follow in his footsteps. Now that hope has been realized."

The first of the defeated candidates to speak, Charles Mackenzie stated he had more votes this year than last and maybe next year he would get more.

George Brown felt he had been the victim of circumstances. He was not good looking and didn't get his picture in the paper. Then the newspaper printed his name wrongly and today he had had car trouble. "I lost this time, but I'll be in there slugging again next year," he smiled.

Everett Wood, said he appeared again as a defeated candidate. He thanked all who supported him, and in humorous vein added, "my wife will thank those who did not support me."

Clare Ridley hoped that the council would live up to its slogan of being progressive. "I think I have something too," he said, "and I hope some day to give it to Belleville. I am young and will be in there in the near future."

Mr. Harold Seldon, who headed the candidates for the Board of Education and who was the only one of that body present said he had located here 11 years ago on the advice of a salesman friend. He had found Belleville a friendly place and had built up a fairly prosperous business. "A few years ago I decided to go into this Board of Education so this year I stuck my neck out—and got it."

BANCROFT

Failure of One To Qualify Means Extra Election

Bancroft, Dec. 4 (Special—Failure of one aspirant to qualify in time will result in a new election for council in the township of Wallaston, according to reports received from that municipality. Richard Gunter, Coe Hill general merchant, was nominated for council at nomination meeting held more than a week ago and as result only three councillors were officially elected on Monday.

In one of the closest fights for reeve in years Reeve Leen Gordon was returned to office with a majority of only three votes over Charles Rollins. Councillors elected were Amos Batchelor, Harry Faul, Albert Ingram. School board elected for Wollaston were William McCaw, William Garrett, James Higman and Roy Hannah.

In Faraday township John McKenzie was elected reeve with a majority of ten votes over William Kelusky. Council elected were Leslie Young, John Anderson, L. Robbins and Melville Vader.

R. E. Neil was elected as reeve in Marmora with a majority of nine votes over Vincent Lynch, while Fred Wells was named hydro commissioner.

In Deseronto, Wessman was elected mayor with a majority of 85 over Ed Roach, while Kirby defeated Campbell for the position of reeve with a majority of 112.

ITALY'S PREMIER

Naming of Alcide de Gaspari shown, as premier of Italy ended the week-old Italian cabinet crisis. The six parties of the Committee of National Liberation agreed on naming him the next premier. He will head a coalition government. Gaspari served as foreign minister in the government of Premier Ferruccio Parri, whom he succeeds.

Three Newspapermen Elected to Office

Toronto, Dec. 4 —(CP)— Three newspapermen were elected to office in civic elections in Ontario yesterday. Tim Brophey, a Windsor Star reporter, was elected to the Board of Control at Windsor where he has been an alderman. J. F. Grainger, general manager of the North Bay Nugget, was re-elected as alderman at North Bay. At Belleville Claude Tice of the Belleville Ontario Intelligencer was elected as an alderman.

BANK BANDITS CAPTURED

Manila, Dec. 4 —(AP)— Four armed Manila youths staged the biggest bank robbery in Filipino history today and were seized eight hours later along with their loot of 339,000 pesos ($199,500.)

Manila police said the four youths marched into the Filippine Bank of Communications, held up two clerks, scooped up the money, and fled in a jeep.

STAIRCASE IN GEN. IKE'S SCOTTISH HOME

Here is a view of the main staircase at Culzean Castle, ancient home of the Kennedy family in Scotland, part of which has been given to General Dwight D. Eisenhower by the National Trust for Scotland as a tribute from the Scottish people. The staircase leads to the General's apartments. The gift is for the General's lifetime, and it is hoped that the great soldier will hold reunions here with British comrades in arms whom he led so well in the victory in Europe.

Exit Permits to Canadian Women

Ottawa, Dec. 4 — (CP) — The National Employment Service has been issuing labor exit permits "fairly freely" to Canadian women, but whether or not they are allowed to go into the United States depends on U. S. immigration authorities at the border, an N.E.S. official said yesterday. He was commenting on reports that a large number of teen-aged girls were going to the United States.

Municipal Elections

In the civic elections on Monday, Belleville voters did not turn out in so large numbers to cast their ballots as they did last year. The votes cast this year in the mayoralty election were 416 below the number cast a year ago, yesterday's total vote in this contest being 3,442 against 3,858 in December 1944. This would seem a fair comparison of the interest in the two elections. Whether the weather conditions, the lack of motor transportation and the fact that for the first time only seven members of the council were being elected as against fourteen were causes, it is difficult to say. If, however, the votes cast were fewer, the interest in the results was very keen, as hundreds upon hundreds of inquiries an hour were answered by the news room staff of the Ontario Intelligencer, which furnished the results as they came in from the city hall from before eight o'clock to eleven o'clock.

Mayor Follwell was again elected, this time for a second term. His opponent Ex-Mayor Jamieson Bone ran a close contest with a minority of 112 votes.

One of the interesting features of the election was the support given a former council member, Major R. J. Graham, D.S.O., who led the poll. Ald-elect Graham was a member of the city council at the time he left on military service. The only actual newcomer to the city council ranks is Ald-elect Claude D. Tice, city editor of the Ontario Intelligencer. Mr. Tice has now taken a step following in the footsteps of his father, Ex-Mayor George O. Tice, and the alderman-elect's election came just twenty years after the time his father was first elected to the council.

The aldermen of the present year up for election for the now general two-year term were E. O. Butler, Charles Hyde, Newton Wilbur, William Harvey and Fred Chamberlain who were re-elected and J. C. Allin who was defeated, coming just below the line of successful candidates. Alderman Clarence Clapp retires at the end of this year and did not offer himself for re-election.

In the Board of Education contest, two new candidates led the successful four. Harold Seldon, druggist, was ahead for the trustee poll and Miss Josephine Tickell came second, followed by Lt.-Col. B. C. Sisler and H. B. Fetterly. Miss Tickell enters the Board of Education with a record of service in teaching of secondary education and of interest in matters of education. It is interesting to note that as a new member of the board she follows in the footsteps of her father, the late Joseph L. Tickell, who was a member of the Board of Education for many years.

The money by-law submitted to property owners to authorize the council to spend $367,000 for a sewage disposal plant was defeated by 304 votes in a total vote of 1,458. Last year on the money by-law respecting the esplanade 1,440 property owners voted.

Christmas Shopping Days Passing

Business days between now and Christmas are becoming fewer steadily as day after day slips by with rapidity.

Much trading remains to be accomplished though many citizens have already done some or most of their purchasing of gifts and necessities for the Christmas season.

One again the desirability of shopping at the earliest possible date is emphasized and is understood by many persons. There is a larger buying public this year for there are many thousand more buyers than there were last year. So many servicemen and service women have come back to Canada and are already a part of the Dominion's life. As one of the most natural results of their homecoming it is their delight in participating to the fullest measure in their first Christmas at home. They will be buying gifts and taking part in everything that appeals to them at this period of the year.

These buyers are probably the most keen of all and will not need any urging to buy early. It will be natural for them to buy at an early date for even shopping has a novelty of appeal to them after being so many years away from the inside of a Canadian shop until a short while ago.

The early buyer has a choice of a larger selection and has more time to pick and choose what he or she prefers and has the satisfaction of being able to select from a larger number of gifts.

This Yuletide will be one long to be remembered and to make choice of gifts early in the season will remove the necessity of later anxious shopping tours and inevitable congestion of buyers.

Phantom Fleet

(Port of London Monthly)

Dummy ships, known for security purposes as Fleet tenders, were quickly brought into use at the outbreak of the war by adapting merchant ships to resemble "R"-class battleships and an aircraft carrier.

The transformation was accomplished on the instruction of Mr. Churchill, as First Lord of the Admiralty, by fitting elaborate superstructures of plywood and canvas, suitably painted. For nearly two years these phantom ships hoaxed enemy reconnaissance aircraft and bombers. They were also bait for U-boats, and kept the enemy guessing as to the strategic disposition of our capital ships. Three 7,900-ton ships — Pakeha, Waimana and Mamari— belonging to the Shaw Savill and Albion Co., Ltd., were used. The two former were converted into the 33,500-ton Battleships Revenge and Resolution, and the third became the 12,000-ton aircraft carrier Hermes. Their holds were filled with thousands of empty barrels to give greater buoyancy in the event of their being hit by bombs or torpedoes.

By 1941 these dummy warships had served their purpose. The Mamari (alias Hermes) had by then been wrecked off the Wash. The other two, stripped of their camouflage, continue today to sail the seas for their owners.

Danger of Hoarding

(Detroit Free Press)

The end of all food rationing, except sugar, does not mean there is a sudden abundance of meats, canned fish, butter, cooking fats and the like. There is not yet enough for all. There most certainly will not be if an upsurge of hoarding begins.

As Secretary of Agriculture Anderson set forth in his announcement, the decision was made, in great part, because continuation "would require a completely new rationing system" and possibly new books.

This throws responsibility directly upon the consumer. It will be up to household meat market shoppers to limit purchases strictly to need, and to accept with good grace whatever informal rationing systems are instituted by retailers.

This is little enough to ask in view of the short supply and of an end to the nuisance of keeping check on ration coupons.

Forbidden Coal

(Toronto Saturday Night)

Coal is front page news today.

It is difficult to realize that there was a time when coal was highly unpopular. Legislation was introduced to prevent its use.

In the reign of King Edward I coal was regarded with the deepest suspicion and disfavor. Its use was forbidden in London.

The penalty against infringement of this law was most severe — a large fine or even the suspension of a business. One Londoner was convicted and sentenced to death for breaking it.

In Such Little Time

(Montreal Daily Star)

There is word from archaelogists in London that "civilization" is really two thousand years older than they once thought; that is, between seven and eight thousand years old. As a matter of fact, we would, offhand, have said it must be even older. Eight thousand years seems such a little time to have developed the mess we're in.

MOTHER COUNSEL

"Let us smile the hurt away!"
So the mother used to say
When with cut and bruise I came.
And, my Nellie said the same
To our children, day by day:
"Let us smile the hurt away."

As she'd take them on her knee,
This her counsel used to be:
"Come, be brave and smile again!
Soon will pass away the pain.
Dry your eyes! Go back to play,
Now you've smiled the hurt away."

So we move along the years,
Out of laughter into tears;
On the way, encountering care
And the losses all must bear;
Trying, time and time again,
With a smile to hide the pain.

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS.

20 YEARS AGO

DEC. 4TH., 1925.

Mount Pleasant Road is to be closed to traffic from Great St. James Street to the top of the hill.

Mr. Henry Wilton of Kingston was in town today.

Mr. Hillis Fowlie of Franklin, N.J., is home on a visit to his parents at their home on Charles Street.

Mr. Ed. A. Thomas is in Toronto today and will remain there until tomorrow in order to attend the annual meeting of the Ontario Hockey Association. It is likely that the Belleville Club will act on their franchise and put a team in the Intermediate series. There are some real good players in town and a good team can be secured which will do credit to the city. Players like Whalen, Boland, Goyer, Weir, Hagerman, Hibbard, Green and others are eligible to play and they are all ready to uphold the prestige of the Belleville Club.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Goodwin of Montreal are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Ackerman, Ann Street.

30 YEARS AGO

DEC. 4TH., 1915.

Mr. H. P. Lee of Campbellford has come here to reside and will be the superintendent of the United Cigar Stores at Belleville, Trenton, Port Hope and Oshawa.

Once again C. W. Thompson and W. C. Farley have been appointed auditors for the County of Hastings. Mr. T. Montgomery of Rawdon has been appointed an officer to certify to accounts presented by the district representatives of agriculture.

The Hastings County Council has made a grant of $1900.00 to the 80th. Battalion.

The Misses McHugh of New York City are visiting relatives here.

Prof. S. E. de Champ of Toronto University addressed the members of the Women's Canadian Club in the auditorium at the high school last evening.

40 YEARS AGO

DEC. 4TH, 1905

The "Help the Hospital Fund" we are pleased to report is growing like weeds on a vacant lot in West Belleville in summer time.

At a meeting held at Hotel Quinte, a curling club was formed with the following officers: Patrons, Thomas Ritchie and Col. S. S. Lazier; President, M. Wright; Vice President, Arthur E. Lewis; Secretary-Treasurer, J. D. Clarke; Committee of Management, J. F. Wills (chairman), Dr. Perry G. Goldsmith, Arthur McGie, Frank Dolan and Fred Quick. The annual membership fee was set at $5.00.

A heavy blast was set off on Bridge Street East and the concussion had the effect of breaking a large plate glass window in Charles Clapp's confectionery store front. The damage was paid for by the company doing the work.

Lewis Morrison and his excellent company will be the attraction at the Carman Opera House on the evening of Dec. 16th, in "Yorick's Love."

Frank Bull went to Hamilton yesterday.

Misses Annie and Blanche Swayze will leave tomorrow for New York City.

Mr. J. A. Vandervoort left today for New York City on business.

Mr. L. W. Yeomans of this city was elected one of the Vice Presidents of the Retail Druggists Association which was formed in Toronto yesterday.

GEN. DUTRA HOLDS EARLY LEAD

Rio de Janeiro, Dec. 4 —(AP)— Gen. Eurico Gaspar Dutra, supported by former President Getulio Vargas in Sunday's Brazilian presidential elections, held a substantial early lead today over Gen. Eduardo Gomes on the basis of scattered unofficial returns.

Communist candidate Yeddo Fiuza was running third.

Returns from 15 of 20 states and Rio de Janeiro federal district gave Dutra a total of 69,783; Gomes, 37,832; Fiuza, 26,699.

Dutra was believed to be benefitting from the well-organized political machinery of the ousted Vargas.

ATTACKS BRITISH, U. S. NEWS AGENCIES

Moscow, Dec. 4 —(Reuters)— The Moscow Journal, New Times, formerly War and the Working Class, yesterday published a 4,000-word article by Nikolai Baltisky, Soviet writer, attacking news agencies and newspapers in Britain and the United States. He accused them of lying sensation-mongering, political distortion, attempting to spread capitalistic influences and anti-Soviet tendencies.

Says Nazi Element in Argentina Will Attempt 'Putsch'

Buenos Aires, Dec. 4 — (AP)— The English-language newspaper Standard yesterday quoted Emilio Troise, president of the Committee against racialism and anti-Semitism, as saying taht Nazi elements in Argentina would attempt in a few days " a 'putsch' similar to the firing of the Reichstag in Germany."

Sao Paulo, with a population of 1,380,000 is the second largest city in Brazil, and the third largest in South America.

Increase Forecast In Price Ceiling Of Newsprint

Washington, Dec. 4 (AP) —The office of Price Administration plans to announce soon an increase of at least $5 a ton in newsprint ceiling prices, it was learned Monday.

An official who asked that his name not be used said the increase "might be a little more" than $5.

Although the purpose of any price boost would be to restore earnings of United States mills to pre-war levels, the increase would apply to Canadian as well as domestic producers.

This policy always has been followed in the case of newsprint price adjustments.

Canadian mills produce about three-quarters of the newsprint used in the United States.

WELDING EQUIPMENT STOLEN

Galt, Dec. 4 —(CP)— Robbers early Sunday stole welding equipment from the Sturtevant plant here, transported it half a mile to a bread plant and used it in an attempt to open the safe there.

The attempt was unsuccessful after the safe's handle was burned off. The thieves failed to force the strongbox.

An employee reporting for duty at the bread plant early Sunday discovered the attempted robbery.

Belgian Toy Prices Cut 30 P. C.

Brussels, Dec. 4 (AP)—In response to an appeal by the Ministry of Economic Affairs, all stores throughout Belgium have agreed to reduce the price of toys by 30 per cent for the first post-war Christmas.

YULE SHOPPING TOUGH IN TOKYO

Kimonas Scarce as Hen's Teeth and Lacquer Ware Also Hard to Find

Tokyo (CP)—There'll be chopsticks and fans under some of America's Christmas trees this year, but not the lavish kimonos and shining lacquer ware the man in the occupation forces here wish they could send the folks back home.

That's because there's nothing much left to buy on the Ginza — once Tokyo's gaily-lighted shopping district where yen-laden pre-war tourists bought Oriental gadgets for Aunt Nellie and Uncle Bob. In fact, there's nothing much left of the Ginza, itself, except some piles of rubble, dotted with an occasional building left standing. But to these few unharmed stores shoppers flock daily, coming out with a lavish supply of chopsticks and fans but little else.

Kimonos, which top the fighting men's shopping list, are as scarce as hen's teeth (and so are the hens, for that matter). Industrious Japanese—if they can secure the silk—probably will whip up some for the holiday trade, but right now it doesn't pay to try to do your shopping early. Too, bazaars are in the planning and stalls will be set up along the streets, ready for buyers.

Paid High Prices

First comers to Tokyo snapped up the few available kimonos, paying around 1,000 yen for the lavish ones (15 yen to the dollar). In outlying communities there are still a few kimonos to be had from Japanese women willing to sell their private stock, but stores have few. In mountain-hidden Nara, typical off-the-beaten-path village which was untouched by the war, the local shop-keeper had but two which he sold for 350 yen each.

Scarcity of kimonos springs from the fact that in wartime Japanese women substituted a two-piece slack suit for their time-honored kimonos, mostly because ration points on kimonos were so high.

Nearly as hard to find as kimonos, is lacquer ware. Tokyo shops have some, but Kyoto stores are fairly well stocked mostly with pieces dug out of family attics for the uniformed tourist trade.

Gift wrapping stands, so far, are out because paper is limited but wooden boxes can be had for the asking. Mailing home is a problem right now, as even air mail is bogged down while prisoners of war are flown back.

Most essential to the Christmas gift-seeking soldier is an English-Japanese conversation-dictionary. An everyday scene in Tokyo stores is a group of holiday-minded men saying in their labored Japanese:

"Ikura deska? Ikura deska? Which in English means, "How much?"

Old Country Letter

By JAMES McCOOK
Canadian Press Staff Writer

British trains are so crowded that even on an overnight journey sleep is abandoned and tales are told.

First, the travellers speak about food and their experiences with rationing.

They say country life is best because a few extras can sometimes be obtained, but the dreary restricted fare of the cities has made them weary. They add that British people expect to enjoy some of the fruits of victory by next spring and if they do not, there may be trouble for the government.

They speak little of war experiences, but there's a private from London with 6 1-2 years service who is going to the little island of Stroma, off the northern tip of Scotland, where he hopes to live. After Dunkerque, Calais, Holland, Belgium and Germany he wants a place where he and his family can spend their time quietly. His wife is from Stroma and he never wants to see London, his home, again.

There's a Scottish distillery man, bluff and cheerful, who becomes sad when he speaks of the troubles of his industry, how soldiers and supplies were quartered in highland malthouses that produced Britain's most fruitful source of foreign exchange in years past. He has trouble obtaining supplies even when production is permitted again.

They speak of Canadians, Americans, Norwegians, Poles, Czechs, Frenchmen and Belgians who have trained in Britain and have married here. They feel close to the Canadians because most of them have a sister, a cousin, a brother or an aunt somewhere between Halifax and Victoria. They add it's a pity that it takes a war to bring the United States and British peoples into close association so they are able to see how much alike they are in many ways.

UNTIL TWENTY-ONE

When under the influence of alcohol a dipsomaniac—that is, a person with dipsomania, a morbid and uncontrollable craving for alcoholic liquor or beverage, whether as a regular daily indulgence or for periodic bouts—is not a rational or reasonable person. It is futile to appeal to his or her better nature and unwise to depend on his or her protestations or promises. Notoriously unreliable is the dipsomaniac's indignant assertion, between bouts, that he or she can take it or let it alone and therefore needs no treatment or help from any one. Occasionally a dipsomaniac, with the help of the right sort of friends, associates, family, physician, psychiatrist, spiritual adviser, and especially Alcoholics anonymous, if he or she is fortunate enough to get in touch with a group and attend their meetings, can and does succeed in letting it alone for the rest of life. But family and friends of the addict should never rely on the unaided will power of the addict alone to break the habit. The very fact that he or she craves alcohol proves that he or she hasn't sufficient will power for that.

It seems to me that the two reasons why young people begin drinking are plain enough:

1. Because their parents, teachers, aunts, uncles, grandparents, physicians and spiritual advisers, if any, have failed in their duty to give the children the advantage of a pledge against the use of alcohol or tobacco.
2. The young person is afflicted with an inferiority complex.

Right here, lest any reader accuse me of being inconsistent because I advise the use of ale, beer or wine by elerly folk and at the same time pretend to advocate total abstinence, let me say it is none of the layman's business what a doctor prescribes or advises for patients or clients—and that means you.

It is easy for parent, guardian, teacher, doctor or pastor to duck the pledge—signing ceremony, especially if he or she happens to be fond of tippling. It is a sin against the child, however. More than ever before, as it seems to me, the child today needs every bit of help parents and other responsible people can give, to keep him or her from going the wishy-washy way, taking the weakling's refuge in alcohol.

Taking the pledge should be an annual ceremony, beginning, say, on Mother's Day, or on the child's birthday anniversary, or on some such occasion, and the first pledge should be given when the child is ten years old or thereabouts. Each year thereafter the child should renew the pledge or at least be reminded of it in some way. But the pledge should be "until 21" in every instance. I tell you, folks, the boy or girl who takes such a pledge is lucky. It will help the kid over many a hurdle which might otherwise put him on her out of the race.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

Boy in Danger

Boy, 14 last July, has leg cramps after he gets in bed at night, after a strenuous day.... he has been but on the football team and we are anxious to help him make good (Mrs. H. C.)

Answer—As you describe him, the boy is physically too big for his years and to let him compete with youths of his own size but years older is, to endanger his heart. If the boy goes in for football at all before he has reached college age, it should be only under the regular observation of your physician. Send ten cents and stamped self addressed envelope for booklet "V-I-T-E Spells Youth."

Gray Hair

Our family has received untold benefit from your teachings. I have followed your advice about restoring prematurely gray hair for nearly a year. As you say, my health is so much improved that I no longer worry about my hair.

(Mrs R. S.)

Answer—My advice is about preventing premature graying of the hair and other manifestations of premature aging. It is given in the booklet "The Hair and Scalp" —for copy send ten cents and stamped self addressed envelope.

INFORMATION ROUNDUP

What are the correct clothing colors for baby boys and girls?

According to a traditional color scheme, which is of unknown origin, baby boys are properly dressed in pink clothing and baby girls in blue, although in some parts of the country, particularly in the Southern States, this symbolical color arrangement is reversed and baby boys are dressed in blue and girls in pink.

One writer says that blue was chosen as the proper color for the clothing of girls because that was the color associated in Christian art and literature with the Virgin Mary and the Royal House of David to which she belonged.

At any rate, blue and pink have become associated with babies.

When friends are notified that the stork has paid a visit to a home the announcement cards are often decorated with blue ribbons if the baby is a girl, and with pink ribbons if it is a boy.

Apparently, however, this traditional color arrangement based on the sex of the child is giving way to more practical considerations.

Because of shortages during the war mothers have been compelled to buy such clothing materials for their babies as they can get without reference to color or the sex of the prospective wearer, with the result that pink and blue are now used interchangeably for boys and girls.

Blue has been associated with youth in art and literature since time immemorial.

NEW PEAKS IN TOTAL ASSETS ANNOUNCED BY B. C. GARDNER, GENERAL MANAGER, IN ANNUAL REVIEW AT 128TH ANNUAL MEETING

Montreal, Dec. 4—Canadians will continue to expect more in the way of government facilities and assistance in the future than they did before the war, and, while there is a place for such measures in Canadian economy if they are soundly conceived and wisely administered, "Government can distribute no benefits that individuals, through their labour, do not provide," President George W. Spinney of the Bank of Montreal said at the bank's 128th annual meeting yesterday.

The general manager, B. C. Gardner, reported to shareholders on what was probably the most active year through which the bank had passed, and outlined economic developments in Canada and other countries as they were likely to affect the future of Canada's oldest banking establishment.

Mr. Spinney said that nothing was further from his intent than to argue that social security measures are without value to the community, "but we deceive ourselves and others if we accept and promulgate the idea that security can emanate effortlessly from Government, acting in the role of benevolent and bountiful provider."

"Life on this planet being as it is," he said, "someone has to plough and reap, to plan and build, to exercise qualities of initiative, foresight and daring; and only this totality of productive effort can provide a real and enduring basis for material welfare and economic security.

"I see no reason to believe that there can ever evolve an economic system so ingeniously contrived that everyone will have a high living standard and social security waiting for him as a matter of right, whether he works hard for it or not."

In a review of the broad situation facing Canadians at the start of the long-talked-about post-war period, Mr. Spinney said many problems remained to be solved but added that few countries could step from the realm of planning to performance under such favorable conditions as Canada enjoyed.

"We have a population which is intelligent, adaptable and not undermined physically by the strain of war," he said. "Our productive equipment has not been reduced to twisted wreckage. While our material resources have to some extent been taxed by abnormal wartime demands, by any reasonable standard of comparison we are richly endowed.

"We have a long tradition of stable government within the framework of democracy. Our monetary system is sound and we have been spared the hardships and injustices of uncontrolled inflation. We live on the best of terms with our neighbors. I do not seek to minimize the difficulties of our transitional period, but I do suggest that our problems and responsibilities are in the main those of a 'have' nation, in sharp contrast to the well-nigh appalling tasks, which confront many of the 'have-nots'."

Controls Need Watching

One problem facing Canadians was the task of maintaining wartime controls where necessary during the transition period, while at the same time keeping a close watch to see that such controls did not remain so long as to hinder a complete reconversion to a peacetime economy.

Necessity for maintenance of some control, Mr. Spinney said, lay in the fact that inflationary pressures now are, if anything, more intense and more fraught with potential danger than at any time during the war. The need for continuance of checks against inflation remained as a challenge to the good sense of Canadians and "the manner in which we meet that challenge will determine whether we tackle the tasks of reconstruction against a background of stable monetary conditions or in the turbulent atmosphere of inflationary boom and subsequent collapse."

At the same time, he said, Canadians should not lose sight of the fact that just as an expanded productive activity is the basis of material welfare, so is it also the ultimate safeguard against inflation.

Production Through Competition

"I know of no better stimulus to production than healthy competitive effort, free from unnecessary restrictions, seeking to fulfil the myriad desires of consumers, both at home and abroad. Such creative effort is the peculiar genius of private enterprise and from it must come the impulse upon which Canadian income and employment depend."

Mr. Spinney said that the need for flexibility and imagination was as great in financial institutions as in any other business, and assured shareholders that the Bank of Montreal was keeping this in mind in the conduct of day-to-day business.

"It is an axiom of sound banking that protection of depositors' funds must always remain of the first importance; but a bank, if it is to fulfil its function, must not only provide ample and undoubted protection to depositors but must, within its appropriate sphere, serve the credit needs of the community.

"To this end, our policy is to see that our lending facilities and other services are made as broadly available as they can possibly be; and as part of this policy new methods and adaptation of old ones to meet new conditions are constantly being studied. In my view, risk-free banking is hardly banking at all; and if we are to maintain a progressive outlook we must meet new conditions with courage and confidence."

Mr. Spinney noted that the Bank had provided more than $19,500,000 for taxes during the war years, and added that general costs of doing business showed an upward trend.

"In spite of higher operating costs and substantially higher taxation during the war years," he added, "our charges for banking services to the public have not been increased, and in some cases—particularly in connection with lending rates—the charges have been reduced. Banking services, therefore, in contrast to most other services, have not in any way contributed to higher production costs, higher living costs or higher prices."

Business Background Reviewed.

Mr. Gardner told shareholders in his address that the pattern of general business activity in Canada was, to an increasing degree, becoming influenced by the processes and problems of reconversion. Indices of production and employment had been declining since mid-year, but indications were that the contraction in economic activity had been "of a very moderate nature."

"Recorded unemployment is beginning to show an increase, but here again the percentage of unemployed in relation to the working force is still less than the normal degree of unemployment resulting from people being temporarily out of work while moving from one occupation to another," he said.

"While further contraction of economic activity must be expected before the reconversion process is complete, the immediate outlook has its reassuring aspects. Retail trade continues at very high levels. Accumulated demands for consumers' durable goods and for housing are potent influences tending to cushion the shocks of the adjustment period. It is noteworthy also that according to Government data, there had been a considerable transfer of workers from wartime to civilian occupations well before the end of the war itself."

Farmers' Incomes Above Pre-War Levels

Mr. Gardner said that, because of lower yields of wheat and other crops, it was probable that cash income from the sale of farm produce this year would be moderately below the record of 1944, but that farmers' incomes generally would continue substantially above pre-war levels.

In the "very important field" of export trade he found the outlook "complicated." He said it is apparent that for some time to come much of Canada's export trade would have to be financed by credit arrangements between the Dominion Government and the governments of other countries; and "this emphasizes the urgency of re-establishing conditions in which the processes of trade may be restored to a real and mutually advantageous exchange of goods between Canada and other nations."

Mr. Gardner revealed that the Bank of Montreal, because of the importance of trade in the post-war economy, had undertaken an extensive survey of foreign banking arrangements with a view to facilitating the trading operations of its customers. Officers of the Bank had completed a tour of Latin America and the West Indies and similar surveys were being considered, particularly relating to the Far East and the Antipodes.

Record Year Shown

In reviewing the annual statement of the Bank's financial position recently released, Mr. Gardner noted that new peaks had been reached in total assets, liquid assets, deposits and holdings of Government securities. He made particular reference to the large holdings of Government securities—now totalling more than one billion dollars, and said it was a direct reflection of one of the Bank's important wartime functions—the provision of short-term, low-interest loans to the government to fill the gap in public finances when it was not possible to meet government's total wartime financial requirements by taxation and borrowing from the public.

At the same time, he said, the Bank was hopeful that, as industry resumed a more normal pattern, and as civilian business replaced government contracts, the lending function of the bank would take on increased importance and scope. Some increase in industrial credits had been noted and there had been "a welcome increase" in personal loans.

"It is not our policy to encourage people to incur unnecessary debt," he explained, "but we believe that our personal loan facilities may play a useful part in a well ordered financial program and may be used by borrowers in a manner fully consistent with the principles of thrifty and sensible management of their affairs. We have stressed these facilities in our advertising in order that our services may be available to the public on the broadest possible basis."

Mr. Gardner said that the volume of banking transactions during the year had exceeded all previous records, and added that "we welcome all opportunities within our power to extend our services to the public."

Deals not in Money Alone

"This bank," he emphasized, "does not deal in money alone. In our day-to-day dealings our managers and staff are concerned with the many human relationships arising out of the financial problems of our customers, both of large and small means but particularly the latter, who seek assistance from a reliable and trustworthy source. The problems of returning war veterans are receiving our special and sympathetic consideration."

Bruce is Critical Of Views Held By Gen. Chisholm

Ottawa, Dec. 4 (CP)— Hon. Dr. Herbert Bruce (PC-Toronto Parkdale) in the Commons on Monday criticized the publicly-expressed views of Maj.-Gen. Brock Chisholm, Deputy Minister of Health and Welfare, on the moral law and the teaching of children.

After recalling that he had defended Gen. Chisholm against attacks on previous occasions Dr. Bruce said: "I cannot conscientiously do so today."

He said he did not question Gen. Chisholm's right to hold his own private views, but declared the General's speeches derived added importance from his high government position.

These speeches had "shocked the Christian conscience of the country."

Tells U. S. Senators F.D.R. Made Decision To Use Bomb on Japs

Washington, Dec. 4 (AP) Dr. Vannevar Bush told Senators Monday that the late President Roosevelt made the decision to use the atomic bomb against Japan, even though it involved killing civilians, in order to destroy industries.

Dr. Bush testified before the Senate special atomic energy committee that other weapons as deadly, or worse, will be involved in future wars.

Aged Jap Prince Wonders Why He is Named

By RUSSELL BRINES

Tokyo, Dec. 3 (AP)—A bewildered old man with 19th century moustaches stood amid the bomb-charred ruins of his imperial mansion Monday and professed ignorance as to why he was the first member of the Japanese imperial household named as a suspected war criminal.

"I have no idea why I was named and it was very much a surprise to me," Prince Morimasa Nashimoto said in his first interview with a foreign newspaperman.

Almost as he was speaking Foreign Minister Shigeru Yoshida submitted a formal Japanese government request to Allied headquarters asking "for a reprieve" for the aged Prince, whose arrest along with 58 other suspects was ordered earlier in the day.

Standing in his garden, the 71-year-old Nashimoto described himself as a Field Marshal without a command, a Prince without influence, and a Shinto ritualist with little to do.

"I had nothing whatsoever to do with the war and nobody ever consulted me on political affairs," Nashimoto said. "I didn't actively oppose it but you can imagine how I felt....I can imagine what you think of (war time Premier Hideki) Tojo and I feel the same way."

PLUNGES INTO LAKE TO SAVE BOY SKATER

North Bay, Dec. 4 (CP)—Peter Wigston, 15, plunged into the icy waters of Lake Nipissing fully clothed Sunday to rescue six-year old Lorne Kertz who had skated onto thin ice and fell through.

With the help of another boy, Harold Yerlitz, young Wigston managed to pull Kertz onto the ice. Both rescuers suffered cuts about the hands from the sharp ice.

Say Attlee Govt. Is Hesitant

By JOHN DAUPHINEE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, Dec. 4 (CP Cable) — Prime Minister Attlee's Labor government, after trimming a large chunk of inland transport from its nationalization program, now is debating whether it will be advisable to proceed with two of the biggest sections in the public ownership campaign it promised before the general election last July.

Passenger transportation services—many of them municipally owned—and iron and steel are the industries in question. Both were specifically listed for nationalization by 1950 in Labor's election manifesto, "let's face the future."

One cause of government hesitancy clearly is the unforeseen difficulties in transfer of sprawling properties to state ownership, particularly in arriving at a "fair" valuation for compensation purposes.

The size of the problem is indicated by unofficial estimates that even with the greatest curtailment of nationalization yet hinted, at least £2,000,000,000 (about $9,000,000,000) is involved in public ownership deals.

The bill to nationalize the Bank of England already has been passed by the House of Commons and coal nationalization measure is expected to be introduced by Christmas. The intention to nationalize all British airways has been announced by Lord Winster, Minister of Civil Aviation, and Hugh Dalton, Chancellor of the Exchequer, has stated that external tele-communication will be brought under public ownership.

PENICILLIN FOR CATTLE

Manchester, England (CP) — Research scientists in Britain are using penicillin to cure dairy cattle of nastitis, one of their most serious diseases, reports the Manchester Guardian. The results are "almost too good to be true," says Prof. Scott Watson, chief education and advisory officer of the ministry of agriculture.

DEPLORE CONDITIONS

Toronto, Dec. 4 (CP)—The sub-executive committee of the Ontario Command of The Canadian Legion yesterday passed a resolution deploring "the conditions which bring about the cessation of work and strikes as a method of settling industrial disputes in this vitally important period of reconversion."

The resolution, made public yesterday, urged that work be resumed and disputing parties bargain while continuing operations.

It takes more than bricks!

SOMEDAY THAT DREAM home will be yours—if you are willing to fight for it today! Bricks may build a house, but to build a home you need more than bricks! You need security—a job—a future! And these depend on a Canadian dollar that will always buy a full dollar's worth of goods—a steady, sound dollar that's not pulled down to half its value by inflation! That's why it's necessary NOW—more than ever now—for all of us to fight and work to keep that dollar worth a dollar!

Why is it so important NOW? Because now is the time civilian goods are scarce, and money is plentiful. NOW is the time we must guard against paying MORE than things are worth . . . or buying things we don't really need. We must support rationing, observe price ceilings, and avoid black markets. If we do this, we can keep prices from shooting sky high. If we don't, some day we'll be paying a dollar for fifty cents' worth of goods. This means your dollars—those dollars you've saved to buy your home—will only be worth fifty cents! This is inflation!

And after inflation comes depression! We know what happened after the last war! It mustn't be allowed to happen again. That's why, for our own sakes, and for the returned men to whom we owe a job, a future, a home of their own — we must make sure Canada's dollar remains steady. We must keep up a constant fight against our country's enemy—inflation!

Make this Pledge Today!

I pledge myself to do my part in fighting inflation:

By observing rationing and avoiding black markets in any shape or form.

By respecting price controls and other anti-inflation measures, and refraining from careless and unnecessary buying. I will not buy two where one will do, nor will I buy a "new" where an "old" will do.

By buying Victory Bonds, supporting taxation, and abiding by all such measures which will lower the cost of living and help keep prices at a normal level.

Margaret Camp and Twilla Langman wish to take this opportunity to thank Mr. Bert Reid for his kind donation.

WEDDINGS

COWIE—McCABE

A quiet wedding was solemnized in Bridge Street United Church on Saturday, December 1, when Leona McCabe became the bride of George Cowie. Rev. D. C. Amos officiated.

Mrs. B. Baker attended her sister, while the groom was attended by his brother, Mr. John Cowie.

PARTRIDGE—THOMSON

A pretty wedding was solemnized in St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church on December 1, at 2.30 when Mary May Paton Thomson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Paton Thomson, Belleville, became the bride of Edward Lloyd Partridge, son of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred E. Partridge, Victoria, B.C., Rev. H. S. Graham officiated and wedding music was played by Mrs. John Deacon. Mrs. Blake Kerr sang "Because" and "I Love You Truly". Mauve and white chrysanthemums and ferns decorated the church.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a floor-length white sheer gown with deep shirred waist, round neck and long, full sleeves. Her fingertip veil fell in soft folds from a coronet of white flowers and she carried pink roses and white carnations. The bride was attended by Miss Dorothy Osborne, Belleville, who wore a floor-length gown of powder blue with lace bodice and double net skirt over taffeta. Her flowers were Johanna Hill roses.

The bride's brother, Mr. James Thomson, attended the groom. Ushers were Mr. Blake Kerr and Mr. Grant Locke.

For the reception, the bride's mother received in a two-piece wine dress with black accessories and a corsage of Talisman roses.

The bride donned a fuchsia suit with dark brown accessories and a corsage of Johanna Hill roses for the wedding trip to Ottawa. The bride and groom will travel to Victoria next week, where they will take up residence.

Out-of-town guests were present from Hamilton, Toronto, Kingston and Trenton.

AKEY—CLARKE

A pretty wedding took place on Wednesday, November 28, at three o'clock at Point Anne, Orange Hall, when Pastor J. L. Abbott, of the Pentecostal Tabernacle of Belleville, united in marriage Verna Kathleen, only daughter of Mrs. Theodore Clarke and the late Mr. Clarke, of Deseronto, and Morley Wallace, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. W. Akey, of Point Anne.

The bride, charmingly attired in a street-length dress of lime green crepe with hat to match and carrying a bouquet of Sweetheart roses, entered the Hall on the arm of her uncle, to the strains of the Bridal Chorus from Lohengrin played by Mrs. J. L. Abbott.

The bride was attended by Miss Norma Robinson attired in a street-length dress of fuchsia crepe with brown accessories and a corsage of yellow roses.

Mr. Maxwell Akey, brother of the groom, was best man. Messrs. Denzil Akey and Bernard Fox were ushers.

Following the ceremony a reception was held in the Hall, the bride's mother receiving in a dress of Royal blue with hat to match and corsage of roses. The groom's mother was dressed in hunter's green with hat to match and corsage of roses.

A buffet lunch was served. Mrs. Percy Akey, aunt of the groom poured tea and Mrs. J. Stapley, Mrs. C. Carter, Mrs. L. Bradshaw, Miss Barbara Sweeney and Miss Elsie Flute acted as serviteurs. The beautifully decorated wedding cake was cut with a short Nazi sword brought by Mr. Carman Masters, cousin of the groom, from the battle of Germany.

The groom recently returned from overseas was attached to the Royal Canadian Airforce and saw service in Africa and Italy.

Following a trip to Toronto and other points west, the young couple will reside in Point Anne.

Out-of-town guests were present from Deseronto, Trenton and Belleville.

Quinte Friendship Chapter Holds Ladies' Night

Companions of Quinte Friendship Chapter, No. 227, G.R.C., Royal Arch Masons, were "At Home" to "The Ladies", on Friday evening last, at the Masonic Temple. A great many of the fairer sex were present with their escorts for one of the finest social events of the season.

Mr. A. C. Wilkin, First Principal of the Chapter, in a witty address, welcomed the visitors and promised more of the kind in future. Mr. Clarence E. Meyers, First Principal of Moira Chapter, voiced the sentiments of those present for a very delightful evening.

Entertainment was furnished by that distinguished local artist, Barbara Diment, and her troupe of talented singers and dancers. Featured along with this troupe was Bill Navin, whose excellent playing of the piano, and singing, called forth rounds of applause for his fine effort.

The ladies were taken on a tour of inspection of the building, where they actually saw things of which they had heard, but really never believed to be true.

Buffet luncheon was served, followed by dancing and cards, for which favors were presented to the lucky winners.

Burrs

Burrs—The end of the week brought winter in earnest to this area with the Wellington-Belleville highway maintaining its reputation for the most and highest snowbanks numerous traffic tie ups and deviations from the regular route were the result over the weekend. COLLEGIATE NEWS

Do you realize that there are only nineteen shopping days until Christmas? It's a horrible thought, but the fact remains. Grimmer still is the realization that there are but three days until examination time. Ah! well, such is life.

Since there have been no assembly periods for the past two weeks, we have nothing of importance to record on that score, nor from the athletic department.

This will be our last issue until after Christmas, so may we of the Collegiate News' staff wish you all a very merry Christmas, and good luck in your exams.

R.G.D.

Girls' Sports

Well girls, our volleyball games are nearly all over for this year. I'm sure that we have all enjoyed the games very much, either as players or spectators. A keen sense of good sportsmanship has been shown in all these games, and I know you've all had a lot of fun while competing for the championships.

Last Monday, Nov. 26 the two top ranking tenth grade teams, met for the final play-off. An exciting game was played between XF under their captain Betty Zebedee, and XC under Chirley Warren. The final score was 17-9 for XC. Our congratulations to you, XC, for winning the tenth grade play-off. On Friday at 4 p.m., Shirley Warren's XC stars will compete with 9B for the Lower School Championship.

Also on Monday, Nov. 26 a good game was played between 13A and 11D, both being champions of their own grade. Dorothy (Cookie's) Cook's 11D players came out victorious with a score of 14-11 over Barbara Evans' 13A players.

Girls' Sports.

After four on Thursday there was a tryout of players for our girls' senior basketball team. But the turnout was not near as large as desired. Come on, girls, where's your school spirit? All the requirements for eligibility are that you be under twenty years of age last September 1, and that you get 50% on your Christmas exams. There will be more practices after Christmas so do come and try out for your team. For those interested, there will be more classes for basketball officials after the exams.

Next week there will be no sports activities because of . . . well you ought to know by now, the time-table is out.

M. C. P.

Boys' Sports.

There has been a decided lull in sports activities this week, as far as the boys are concerned, although junior and senior practices have been held regularly.

I have managed, however, to dig up the latest info. on the Grade 13 competition which I mentioned last week in this column. There are only two games remaining and the present standing is as follows: Rollins, 77 points; Watson, 77 points; Vaughn, 66 points, and Marcus, 31 points. Since this will be the last printing of the BCI News until after Christmas, I am very sorry to say that the final results of these games will be late in coming.

I would also like to take this opportunity to wish the entire school body the best of luck in their coming exams and also in the approaching new year.

R. B. B.

Coming Events.

The only sports activity for this week is the basketball practices. Monday and Thursday it's the "Juniors" and Wednesday and Friday it's the "Seniors." But that isn't all that is hapepning within the next seven days. No siree not by a long shot, or a short one either for that matter. If you have taken the trouble to look on any bulletin board you will have noticed that those heavenly Christmas exams are just about a week away. And unless my memory serves me wrong one week is composed of seven days. We know how everyone just loves writing exams. But please don't be impatient, they will arrive, never fear. Knowing how everyone loves exams and school we feel that the only sad part about these Christmas exams is that very shortly after them we are forced to take a ten day holiday. Isn't that tragic? (that they do not last ten weeks—what are we saying!!)

We think it advisable, after that unfortunate outburst, to change at once to another subject. Shortly after we come back to the Alma Mater in 1946 (Even with all our kidding we still like the place well enough to come back every year) the Elev. tor that uplifting magazine (Ouch!!) will be on its way to you, unless, of course, the operators decide to strike again—but that elevator-operators strike was in New York wasn't it? So you can be on the lookout for news of the Elevator any time from now on.

Since this will be the last time in 1945 that this column will appear in the paper we think it permissable to go a bit beyond the bounds of "Coming Events" — going beyond our bounds seems to become a habit of ours, hasn't it?—and wish you the compliments of the season. As Jimmy Fidler would put it, we wish you, you, and especially you A Merry Christmas and A Happy New Year.

Cuff Notes

Once more the creaking door has swung open and I have crept from my solitary padded cell in the sub-cellars of the Collegiate to pen these pearls of wisdom to the expectant masses. Again I defy the editor's threats and snarlings and Cuff Notes appears in the Collegiate News as in the good ole days.

What with the exams and sundry other worries, one's mind is apt to escape into the realm of poetry. If it can't get back it's your own fault, so there. Anyway, there's a poem:

We have no time to eat or drink,
Nor have we time to ponder
Exams are but a week away—
Holy Crow!

Back under your rock, O poet! Enough of this.

While talking to a 13th grade student in the halls the topic of conversation drifted to discussion and how they should be conducted. Being somewhat of an extremist and radical, mon ami suggested that each person bring some good ideas and a piece of rubber hose and make the discussion a real one . . . I regret to mention that my friend is now under close confinement for trying to instigate an uprising in the ninth grade.

SAILING

I wish I were a pirate
Upon the Spanish Main;
With blundering guns, and flyin shot
I'd make all fear my name.

I wish I were a mate
Upon some clipper fast;
With flapping sails, and foaming sea
And billows gurgling past.

I wish I were a gunner
Upon some man-of-war
Whose blazing guns had helped
To open victory's door.

I wish I were a captain
Upon a flat-top true;
With all my flying angels
Hovering o'er the blue.

Of all the things I wish the most
I wish that I could be
A proud and swaggering sailor
Whose place is on the sea.

White's District

White's District—Mr. and Mrs. Walter Jones entertained on Wednesday evening Mr. and Mrs. L. Mallory, little Miss Anne Mallory, Master Bobby Robson, Mrs. George Bilham and Miss Sylvia Bilham in honor of Mrs. George Bilham on the occasion of her birthday.

Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Jeffery opened their home on Tuesday evening for an executive meeting of White's Church Sunday School. Further plans were made for a Christmas entertainment. Mrs. Jeffrey served lunch.

Friends of Mr. Bruce Hogle extend their sympathy to him in the loss of his wife who passed away at her home on Thursday morning. The funeral service was held at the home on Sunday afternoon with interment in White's Cemetery.

Congratulations and best wishes to Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Bonisteel (nee Miss L. Palmer)

Memorial Service for PO Norman Hunt Held at White's United Church

White's United Church (Bayside) paid fitting tribute to one of its member in the person of Pilot Officer Norman B. Hunt of the 404 Squadron of the R.C.A.F. overseas who made the supreme sacrifice in an operational flight on enemy shipping off the Norwegian coast in 1944. Previously he had been reported as 'missing' but later dispatches reported him as 'presumed dead'.

"Norman" as he was best known to his many friends was born in the Bayside district and attended public School in the vicinity. He was graduated from Belleville High School having taken honors in two successive years. He was a prominent member of the Young People's Group and took an active interest in young people's activities. As a member of the church and Sunday School he maintained a splendid attendance record.

Norman Hunt enlisted in the R.C.A.F. in December 1940, and received his wings almost a year later. He left for overseas on Dec. 15, 1941, and spent over six months in the Middle East. He was reported 'missing' January 14, 1944. The news of his death was released in October 1944. He leaves a father, two brothers and two sisters and a number of relatives to mourn his loss.

Church Decorated.

The church was beautifully decorated with a wreath of red and white carnations. The young pilot officer's cap and gloves were placed upon the Communion Table which was covered with the R.C.A.F. colors. The Union Jack stood on a pedestal beside the altar. The service was in charge of the minister, Rev. A. C. McCallum, who conducted a brief devotional service. A choir of women's voices sang "Face to Face". Mr. McCallum paid the tribute to the courage devotion and sacrifice of this brave airman and said his life should be an inspiration to those who are called to preserve the ideals for which he died. "Norman", he said, "was one of our best young men, interested in the best things in life."

Hon. Flight Lieut. Rev. J. D. Patterson, chaplain of the R.C.A.F., Trenton, was the special speaker. Although he did not know Norman he said he was the type of many of his Air Force comrades who gave all they had for their country. The chaplain based his remarks upon the official citation of the Air Force. First, "They pressed home the attack", and secondly, "Their courage was beyond the call of duty". Speaking on behalf of the Air Force he extended to the bereaved family the sympathy of the officers and men.

Appropriate hymns were sung with Mrs. Alex Vandervoort presiding at the piano. Two minutes silence were observed. A large congregation was in attendance.

who were quietly married.

The November meeting of the Sunbeam Mission Band was held at Quinte View school on Thursday with the president, Milton Saylor and secretary Betty Westfall in charge. The meeting was opened with "The Maple Leaf." Edna Malcom read a synopsis of chapter one of Nyanga's Two Villages, Anne Mallory, Rose Kleinstaber, Ronald Macho, Wallace Dever and Peter Robbins recited "The Snowman." The story of Nyanga's two villages was continued, Joan Meyers, Georgina Copeland and Lauraine Elder gave a reading in parts. The meeting was closed with prayer and the National Anthem.

Bishop Dedicates New Tile Floors, Burse and Veil

Speaking from the text "Gather up the Fragments that Remain," the Right Reverend John Lyons, D.D., Bishop of the Diocese of Ontario preached an outstanding sermon in Church Church on Sunday evening. The events of the past year were reviewed and given values. "It is on these things" said the Bishop "that our future will be built."

The occasion of the visit was the dedication of red tile floors in the sanctuary and chancel. The former was in memory of the late Caroline Marshall and the latter in memory of the late Evelyn Tickell and Mabel Fry. At the same time, the Bishop dedicated a violet burse and veil which had been presented by the congregation.

The service was in charge of the rector, the Reverend J. Grant Sparling, assisted by the Reverend Everett P. Smith who acted as bishop's chaplain and Lay Reader George Meades. The music was in charge of choir master Arthur Simpson, and organist, Mrs. Calvert. For an anthem, the choir sang "Come ye Servants, the Lord," by Tye.

BANS APPLIED BUT TIPPING IS CONTINUING

Custom Seen as Likely to Last Forever, View of Calgary Writer

We estimate that if all the speeches made against tipping, all the articles written against tipping, and all the laws passed against tipping were laid end to end, they would reach from the Georgia Hotel at Vancouver to the Lord Nelson Hotel at Halifax, Richard J. Needham writes in The Calgary Herald.

That would be about the best thing to do with them—lay them end to end. Because they aren't much good for anything else. The tipping custom seems to be as deeply rooted in our society as any other custom. The more you attack it, the stronger it gets.

Degrading Custom

We make this note after reading that tips have been forbidden in the dining room of the British House of Commons. This decision on the part of the Attlee government has been warmly greeted by the Labor M.P.'s—partly because they are people of modest circumstances, but chiefly because they regard tipping as a degrading custom—degrading, that is to say, to the man who gets the tip.

Degrading it may be. But does the man who gets the tip really think so? Was the Attlee government's decision warmly greeted by the waiters in the House of Commons dining room? That is what we want to know.

We have given many tips in our time, to many people. But we do not ever recall having a tip refused. We do not ever recall a bellhop or waiter or doorman or barber or taxi-driver throwing our wretched dime or quarter right back in our face.

To Stay

We have come to suppose from this that tipping is here to stay. It is here to stay because people like getting tips. When they find something hard and shiny pressed into their palm, do they feel degraded? Not one bit. They'd probably feel degraded if they didn't get it.

Look what's happened to Juan Domingo Peron, the Argentina military boss. He had the great idea of becoming a hero to the 100,000 waiters and hotel employees in and around Buenos Aires.

Peron felt sure that the waiters and hotel workers considered it undignified and degrading to accept tips. So, by government decree, he made tipping illegal. —In restaurants, he decreed, 15 percent should be added to each bill, and divided up among the waiters. In hotels, he decreed, 12 percent should be added to each bill, and divided up among the porters and maids.

Dislike "Dignity"

Now, they all have "dignity." But they don't like it. They complain that the new system leaves them much worse off than they were before. They want to go back to the degradation—and the tips.

The Buenos Aires correspondent of the Chicago Daily News quotes one veteran waiter as complaining: "I should run around and see that everything is lovely one a $2 dinner for a lousy 30 cents. I am an artist. I graduated from the 15 percent class ten years ago. I shall have to start digging ditches or stealing pennies from blind men."

Tipping is said to be relatively rare in Russia. We don't know if there is actually a law against it, but we do know that the Soviet regime discourages it.

However, Raymond Arthur Davies recently revealed in Toronto Saturday Night that tipping was common in Russian beauty parlors—not usually with money, but with cigarets. It may well be that there is a good deal of undercover tipping in Russia—using commodities instead of cash.

Banned in 1760

It is a matter of historical fact that tipping was banned in England nearly two centuries ago. In 1760, Parliament put through a law against it—but tipping continued just the same.

In 1937, a private bill was introduced at Westminster to ban tipping on the grounds that it encouraged the employment of people at very low wages — or none at all. The sponsor of the bill pointed out (quite rightly) that when a man tips a low-paid waiter or waitress, he is really tipping the management—he is making it possible, by his tip, for the restaurant owner to keep down his wages, and thus to keep up his profits.

The bill got quite a discussion in the House of Commons. Some members defended tipping on the grounds that it rewarded efficiency. Others opposed it on the grounds that it was really a form of blackmail. The size of the tip (they said) was determined not by the waiter's skill in serving the meal, but by his skill in making the customer feel inferior if he failed to tip generously.

Bill Talked Out

Eventually, this bill was "talked out" of Parliament, and tipping went on as usual. No doubt, it will continue to do so.

We expect to go on tipping for the rest of our natural life. But—we find ourself wondering—why is it generally accepted that we always tip some people, and we never tip others?

We tip the waitress, never the salesgirl. We tip the taxi-driver, but never the bus-driver. We tip the bellhop who carries our bag, but never the movie usher who finds us a seat. We tip the boy who shines our shoes, but never the man who mends them.

Anybody who knows the reason, for this will kindly drop in and explain it to us. It is not unlikely, if we are in a generous mood, that we will slip an octagonal nickel into his outstretched hand.

500,000 Miners In Australia May Strike

By WILLIAM STEWART
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Sydney, Australia, Dec. 4 (CP Cable)—The threat of a general coal strike in New South Wales, which may throw 500,000 Australians out of work, grew more imminent as miners voted four to three in favor of a work stoppage.

The first published vote came from 5,000 miners of the 18,000 members of the miners' union.

Seamen in all provincial capitals, except Hobart, Tasmania, have already voted to support striking steelworkers by halting work on ships carrying New South Wales coal. The seamen walked off the ships at midnight last night.

In voting for the strike, to tie up two-thirds of Australia's coal supply, the seamen and miners defied P. J. Clarey, President of the Australian Council of Trades Union, who appealed to them last night not to go out.

The industrial turmoil was interpreted by Australian newspapers as a struggle for control of A. C. T. U. by the Seamen's, Miners and Iron-Workers Unions, which, the paper said, have Communists in control.

L. Sharkey, President of the Sydney Communist Party, denied at a public meeting that the Communists were behind the stoppages.

Last night's developments brought Australia's biggest labor crisis since the First Great War nearer to a head. In the dispute, moderate labor organizations supporting the government are clashing with extremists who have gained executive positions in vital workers' unions.

Free Election Held in Border Region of China

By JOHN RODERICK

Yenan, China, Dec. 4 (AP) —In Yenan and throughout the Communist Shensi-Kansu-Ningasi border region free elections are being held this month. I saw my first one Saturday.

The border region embraces more than 1,000,000 people and has representative government beginning at the village level. True representation starts there, with election of a delegate for ech 50 persons.

The village election place was a mud-walled abode primary school a couple of miles from Yenan on an old dusty, rutted road along which mule trains wound their way endlessly.

There were 52 men and women over 18—the minimum and only voting requirement—sitting on stools and benches listening to a moderator, a one-armed ex-soldier, explaining the procedure.

The people still consider themselves part of the central government, but with their own system of local self rule. They haven't set up a government of their own because of the unwillingness of the Communists to antagonize the central government.

Current elections will install a border government in which the Communist party is permitted to have only one-third of the elected officials.

Fears DDT If It's Applied Carelessly

DDT is especially effective against all soft-bodied insects, least effective against hard-boiled ones, C. H. Carran, associate curator of the Department of Insects and Spiders of the American Museum of Natural History, writes in Natural History magazine.

Caterpillars are readily killed by it, but adult beetles are difficult to kill. Flies, including mosquitoes, are among the most vulnerable, but we should remember that of the approximately 25,000 different kinds of flies found in the United States more than 24,500 are either beneficial or at least known to be harmless.

Pollinate Flowers

A very large percentage of them pollinate flowers; another substantial percentage prey upon injurious insects; while a huge group is parasitic on caterpillars, beetles, sawflies, bugs, and so on. Certain groups of flies feed on mites and other tiny creatures, and mites are not easily killed by DDT. Of course, bees and wasps are also killed but some of them are fairly resistant and practically all of them will stand heavier dosages than the more delicate flies.

It is obvious that the general use of DDT might very quickly upset the balance of nature by destroying the pollinators as well as by eliminating the parasites and predators that are chiefly responsible for keeping potential insect pests in check. It would be bad enough to eliminate our flowering plants by doing away with the insects that pollinate them, but there are indications that the effects go far beyond that.

There were stories to the effect that the island of Saipan (it was not named at the time) had been sprayed with DDT to eliminate malarial mosquitoes before our troops landed. Actually, the spraying had nothing to do with malaria control, because the disease has never been known to exist on Saipan or adjacent islands. But it is true that the island was sprayed—many times.

Pest mosquitoes were present, and so were hordes of green-bottle flies belonging to the genus Chrysomya. These had proved difficult to kill. They bred everywhere—in garbage, dead bodies, latrines, etc.—and they were caught in traps by the bushel each day. It was chiefly against these that DDT was used. Today, according to information already furnished me, Saipan island is approaching a condition of devastation. My informant stated that there was scarcely a living thing on it. No birds, no mammals, no insects, except a few flies, and the plant life was decreasing.

Toll of Chickens

It seems possible that the same may happen on the island of Okinawa. On September 16, I received a letter from an officer informing me that the insects were being kept pretty well under control by DDT, adding that chickens had died as a result of having eaten insects killed by it. The symptoms were similar to strychnine poisoning. He further added that some natives who had used DDT as baking powder had died, and that post-mortems showed nerve lesions.

In America the manner in which thousands of birds were killed as a result of spraying or dusting with DDT has been debated. The fact that chickens die from eating insects killed by it seems to give the answer. Some of us had imagined that inhalation of the spray or dust might have been responsible, but none of the experiments that have come to our notice show damage to warm-blooded animals except when the material was ingested or injected.

FINAL PROPOSALS FOR LOAN

London, Dec. 4 (CP) — Prime Minister Attlee and his cabinet considered Monday a draft of final proposals under which the United States would make a loan to Britain.

Details were not disclosed, but it was understood that the principal difference remaining between the two governments was whether Britain could waive interest payments if she experienced a "bad year" financially.

TREE TIME GLOW TWINE

San Diego, Calif. (CP)— Your Christmas tree this year can glow without electric lights if you use the colored lighting effects invented by M. J. Ralph.

The trick is application of fluorescent and phosphorescent paint applied to twine. The decoration then will glow all night, says Ralph, after being exposed to light.

THEIR ROAD TO Enjoyment

Two million or more motorists from the States visit us each year . . . thousands for the sheer beauty of our countryside. Let's see to it that our hospitality matches the perfection of our lakes and hills.

WHAT CAN I DO?

The answer is—plenty! Here are some of the things anybody can do. The suggestions come from a well-known Ontario hotelman:

1. Find out all about what your own neighbourhood offers and become a booster.
2. Write your friends in the States about Ontario, show them when they come that you're really proud of your province.
3. Try to make all our visitors glad they came, and be really enthusiastic about it.
4. If they ask for information or directions, take time to answer them fully and graciously.
5. In any business dealings you may have with them, remember Canada's reputation for courtesy and fairness depends on you.
6. To sum it all up, just follow the "Golden Rule!"

On Sidney Bay Hill, Bruce Peninsula, Ontario.

IT'S EVERYBODY'S BUSINESS . . . it's good business!

Worth his weight in gold! Actually, the Province of Ontario, in pre-war years, profited to almost the same extent from tourist business as it did from the gold mining industry. It is up to each of us to see that this business goes on growing.

This diagram, based on figures supplied by the Hotel Association, shows how everyone benefits from the Ontario tourist income. Every tourist dollar is shared this way . . . 1. Hotels; 2. Retail stores; 3. Restaurants; 4. Taxes, etc; 5. Amusements; 6. Garages.

It works both ways! They treat us royally when we visit them . . . we can't do less than return the compliment. Remember that it costs money to take a holiday, so let's see they get a good return for every penny they spend in Canada.

NHL's Official Annual Gives Interesting Data For Fans To Ponder Over During Summer

Leafs Came Within 22 Seconds of Equalling N.H.L. Speed Record for Scoring

(By The Canadian Press)

Toronto Maple Leafs and Chicago Black Hawks came within 22 seconds of equalling a National Hockey League speed record for scoring when they rapped in three goals in 46 seconds in the second period of their game in Chicago Sunday night.

This fact, for those who like statistics and records, comes to light through the N.H.L.'s official annual, whose first edition has just come off the presses. N.H.L. records are a feature of the 227-page book which answers just about any question a hockey fan can ask.

The league record for the fastest three goals was established March 15, 1932. And what a night it must have been, for Montreal Maroons, playing at home, turned the trick in the last minute of play to overcome a New York Rangers' lead and win 4-3.

The goals came in 24 seconds and scorers were Dave Trottier, R. J. (Hooley) Smith, and the late Albert (Babe) Siebert.

Maple Leafs and New York Americans share the modern record for fastest team scoring, the N.H.L. annual reveals. They tallied eight times in 4:52 minutes in Toronto March 19, 1938, with Leafs getting five goals to pace them to an 8-5 victory.

Fastest individual scoring feat is credited to Carl Liscombe of Detroit who netted three goals in 1:52 minutes against Chicago on March 13, 1938.

Red Wings hold a number of other records among the 44 listed in the annual. Their 15 goals against Rangers Feb. 3, 1944, are the highest team score for a game and that same evening veteran Syd Howe scored six times for a new individual mark while the Wings tallied eight times in one period for still another record. Rangers, incidentally, were shut out.

Montreal Canadiens' 234 goals in 1943-44 established a team record for season scoring and Maurice (Rocket) Richard and Elmer Lach brought the Habitants two more records last season with 50 goals and 54 assists respectively.

Nels Stewart, who played with Montreal Maroons, Boston and New York Americans during a long career, has the individual all-time scoring record with 323 goals. His closest competitor still in the game is Howe with 234 goals, one of them scored this season.

Herby Cain of Boston collected 82 points, 36 goals and 46 assists, in 1943-44 for still another scoring record. Reginald (Red) Horner's 167 minutes in penalties while playing defence for the Leafs in 1935-36 is a penalty record that still stands.

Chicago and Boston have a chance to go after some of these records Wednesday night at Boston in the only league game until the weekend. More important to them, however, is the fact that the winner will gain undisputed possession of second place in the standings.

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, Jr.

Columbus, O., Dec. 4 — (AP)— Leslie O'Connor's final task a baseball's handy man is to compile a "book" of the late Commissioner Landis' more important decisions — a sort of "common law" of baseball . . . and some of the wiser gents gathered here for the annual minor league conclave will tell you nothing will be done about revising baseball procedure until Leslie finishes that task about Jan. 1 . . . They may decide to do just the opposite of what the Judge ruled, but they can't even do much about that until they find out what he did rule . . . Commissioner Happy Chandler hasn't done anything about appointing a baseball promotional director and doesn't intend to do anything until he learns how much promoting the big leagues want to do. Maybe he will find out at next week's Chicago meetings.

Convention Chatter

Don't look for any big player deals this week, though you'll always hear trade talk when a bunch of baseball guys get together. Consensus is that the clubs overstocked with talent — notably the Cards, Yankees and Dodgers — will try to sell the surplus for cash and that the buyers will be cautious . . . Schoolmaster Branch Rickey staged a five-hour blackboard drill Sunday night for the benefit of his covey of farm club operators . . . story here was that it was a $10,000 boost in salary that induced Billy Southworth to switch from the Cards to the Braves . . . leading candidates for Bruno Betzel's job as Montreal manager are Clay Hopper, who piloted the Dodgers' Mobile, Ala., farm, and Al Todd, who handled the Royals part of last summer.

Chips Off The Sports Block

By GEORGE H. CARVER

"THAR'S GOLD IN THEM THAR GLOVES"

Lieut. Commander Jack Dempsey, late of the United States Coastguard who will be seen in referee action here on Wednesday night, earned more than five million dollars in his career as a boxer, referee or on exhibition tours during his pugilistic lifetime. From 1914 when he started his career as "Kid Blackie" until after he met Jess Willard in 1919, Dempsey's purses were small. But after winning the title he proceeded to make those punches worth plenty of the old mazuma.

• • •

He figured in five fistic battles where the gate went beyond $1,000,000. His actual 'cut' of the receipts from nine battles from 1919 when he defeated Willard until he completed his real career in 1927 was $2,712,079.

• • •

But since he retired from the ring after losing the title in the famous "long count" battle to Gene Tunney, the Manassa Mauler has lost none of his personality, nor his appeal to the sporting public. Canadians, too think highly of the once famous "killer" of the ring and this is exemplified by the large crowds that have turned out to watch him arbitrate at some of the big wrestling matches.

• • •

The lean lithe explosion who catapulted to fame over the prostrate mass that was Jess Willard, at Toledo, who built on that fame with sensational victories and later a disputed comeback defeat at the hands of Tunney is still big box office. And this despite the fact he's been in the U. S. Coastguard for three years, a job that too took him over some 50,000 miles to war zones teaching gobs the whys and wherefores of commando training and back alley fighting.

• • •

Now that he's once again plain "Joe on Civvy Street" La Dempsey has an eye to business. He lies back and dreams of a huge arena in Manhattan where he might take a hunk out of Mike Jacobs fight monopoly and also run a hockey team in the N.H.L. (Mebbe he could inject a little much-needed sap into the twigs of our falling Leafs up thar in Toronto.)

• • •

He's been out of action for some time, but that doesn't mean that any pugnacious pachyderm can toss him around or even get fresh with the lithe guy with the "five o'clock shadow." He isn't the lean hungry explosion that hammered Willard to a pulp; that took care of the Wild Bull of the Pampas one Louis Firpo, after that South American Primera had knocked him kicking out of the ring (The power of the press) or the smiling deadly fighter that wilted Georges Carpentier, the Orchid of France, but he is still a slim muscular bloke who will bop a pachyderm on the chops at the drop of the hat.

• • •

Dempsey tells a story of himself that is worth repeating. It seems he promised his little daughter he would catch her a Jap. He left for the South Pacific and landed on Okinawa, blood-gutted island that took a terrific toll, of lives. The Yanks were mopping up, but there was still plenty of action. Remembering his promise, Dempsey scooted after the little yellow b . . . .s. He cornered one under a house.

"Come out of there," he yelled. Out came Hirohito's henchman, gun in hand. He gave it to Dempsey. The Mauler prodded him in the back and proudly marched him back to camp.

There he showed his prize to his mates. They burst out with loud guffaws and jeers. Dempsey had grabbed a Jap all right but he was a "wizened broken down little jerk, at least 70 years of age."

WHAT, AGAIN?

O.H.A. squads will dress only twelve players during the coming season instead of thirteen as was the case last year, it was decided at the annual meeting held in Toronto over the weekend. The change was made so as to conform with the rules of the C.A.H.A. and the O.H.A. Incidentally, playing rules this year will conform to those now used by the C.A.H.A. in conjunction with those of the National Hockey League which in turn conform with those of the British Ice Hockey Association. Seems as if an attempt at universal rules is being made. It's about time. The new set-up should prevent a lot of those incidents that resulted when one or another of the associations clashed. Hockey must be getting democratic.

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, Dec. 4 — (CP)—Now that the 1945 Grey Cup final is history, there's talk of a move to ease Winnipeg Blue Bombers out of the existing Western Canada gridiron set-up, writes Tommy (Calgary Albertan) Moore:—

"Winnipeg . . . who for years have followed a selfish policy of waving a financial 'big stick' over the rest of prairie football and who did little toward building up a strong prairie circuit, will likely be on the outside when such a loop is formed next year."

Moore says Regina and Calgary, who comprised Winnipeg's only opposition this season, are "fed up" and have decided to work out a four-team circuit embracing the Universities of Alberta and Saskatchewan. "It begins to look now as though senior action is assured for 1946 between Calgary, Regina, Edmonton and Saskatoon."

Such a move might induce Winnipeg to look to the east. Toronto officials long have sought to include Winnipeg in a bigtime eastern league, with plane travel possibly providing the answer to the transportation problem.

Company Sergeant - Major George MacDonell of Stratford, Ont., captured at Hong Kong in 1941, and recently repatriated to Canada, watched Montreal Canadiens edge Detroit Red Wings 2-1 in a National Hockey League contest at Montreal and described it as the "best hockey game I've ever seen." . . . Doug (Windsor Star) Vaughan tells one on National League referee Frank (King) Clancy. Seems Clancy spends his spare time supervising the activities of a firm owned by his two uncles. Their names? Pat and Mike O'Leary . . . The Western Ontario Association for Health has decided to set up a "rating board" for men and women basketball officials. After a special three-lesson course, the arbiters-to-be will be judged by a rating board whose male panel includes Charlie Box and Johnny Metrax of Western University.

Jim (Toronto Globe and Mail) Coleman comments in rhyme on the dearth of cricket in Halifax:

"O lay a wreath on the grave of cricket,
It's death was little short of wicked.

Max Bentley Leading Scorer National Loop

Montreal, Dec. 4. (CP)—Max Bentley of Chicago Black Hawks netted three goals and three assists in weekend National Hockey League games, and stretched his lead on top of the League's weekly scoring statistics to three points. Bentley with 15 goals and eight assists, has 23 points, three more than his teammate, Bill Mosienko who has seven goals and 13 assists.

Last week Bentley headed Toe Blake of Montreal Canadiens by one point. Blake, however, was scoreless in Canadiens' only game and was forced from second place by Mosienko. Gaye Stewart of Toronto Maple Leafs added one goal to his total, bringing it to 14 for 14 points and fourth place.

Bentley's 15 goals led that column, while Mosienko qualified for the title of leading play-maker with his 13 assists.

The Canadiens are leading the way in penalties with 95 minutes against them, while Murph Chamberlain, the League's villain, has accounted for almost one-third of this total with 30 minutes, including a 10-minute misconduct, in the penalty box. Toronto is runner-up for the penalty honor with 85 minutes.

Detroit's Harry Lumley continues to lead the goal-tending department, with 27 goals against him in 12 games, while Paul Bibeault of Boston, with 33 goals against in 11 games is runner-up.

What's Doing in Sport

(By The Canadian Press.)

Army's football machine, victorious throughout two seasons, gained the rating of the best college eleven of the United States yesterday by the unanimous vote of 116 sport writers in the Associated Press poll. Although defeated by the Cadets, there was sufficient support to give the Navy second place, 10 points higher than Alabama's Rose Bowl team. Indiana trailed more than 200 points behind the southerners for fourth position in the ballot tabulation. Michigan rated sixth and St. Mary's seventh.

Once the monarchs of the college gridiron, Notre Dame's Irish could do no better than ninth with 217 points compared with Army's 1,160.

Adding five points during the week, Pete Leswick of Indianapolis Capitals climbed higher in the scoring leadership of the American Hockey League, his 33 total comparing with 27 jointly held by three marksmen in second place. The latter are Leslie Douglas of Indianapolis, Roger Gagne of Providence and Fred Hunt of Buffalo Bisons.

Since the close of the 1945 season, 19 new minor circuits have paid dues to the National Association of professional baseball leagues, making a total of 31 for next summer, it was announced by L. H. Addington, a director, at Columbus, O.

The International Baseball League at Columbus, O., yesterday approved a 154-game season in 1946, supported a baseball amendment restricting the power of the game's commissioner and re-elected George Weiss of the New York Yankee's farm organization as vice-president. President Frank Shaughnessy continues another year.

Winnipeg Blue Bombers left Toronto without the Grey Cup but with a $5,000 share of Saturday's gridiron gate after the team's trip expenses had been met. The players were reported to have got no pocket money during the regular playing season.

DEADLOCKED FOR FIRST

Toronto, Dec. 4 (CP)—Stratford Indians blanket top places in the first list of individual scoring records for the Ontario Hockey Association's senior A series, statistics showed today.

Bill Woodward and Jim Eady are deadlocked for the leadership with seven points and two Stratford teammates, Mickey McQuade and Dunc Galbraith, are tied for third with five points. Jack Ingoldsby and Don Willson of Toronto Staffords place next with four points apiece.

BELLEVILLE BOY LOSES DECISION

Toronto, Dec. 4. (CP)—Hubert Gagnier of Montreal, came back strong at Maple Leaf Gardens Monday night to score something of an upset and take a lightweight five-round decision from Larry Johnston, of Port Colborne, Ont., in a lightweight boxing match.

The crowd of 4,500 gave Gagnier little chance after the opening round but he ripped into Johnston in the second and dropped the Port Colborne puncher for a nine-count and then tossed rights and lefts to Johnston's face for the balance of the encounter.

The five-round headline bout between Pete Zaduk of Guelph and Joe Ferrier, of Toronto, in the 145-pound class was well matched. In the third canto Pete nailed Joe early and rifled him with lefts and rights to the face and had Joe's face covered with blood.

George Polmanter of Belleville, lost a decision to Dave Mitchell, Toronto, in the 130-pound class. Mike Zaduk, Guelph, lost a decision to Ken Haines, Toronto, in the 128-pound class.

Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 856
By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

An expert bridge player sometimes assumes a confidence he does not feel. There are times when he will brazenly overbid a hand that he fears will not make with what he has discovered so far.

Beneath it all, however, is that hope that springs eternal in the mind of every good player. Maybe he or his partner can pull some clever play that will make up for the lack of real values.

Also, there is a chance that an opponent may guess wrong or give away a trick with a bad lead or play. Or that an undeserved trick will be thrown his way by some unusual outstanding distribution.

There was a simple deal like this:

NORTH
♠10 9 8 5
♥A 5
♦K 8 2
♣K 8 5 4

WEST	EAST
♠K 6 3	♠A 7 2
♥J 9 7 4 2	♥Q 10 6
♦Q	♦J 10 7 6 3
♣10 9 3 2	♣J 6

SOUTH
♠Q J 4
♥K 8 3
♦A 9 5 4
♣A Q 7

A game was bid in the following unromantic manner:

SOUTH	NORTH
1 NT	2 NT
3 NT	Pass

There is nothing spectacular about that kind of bidding. South opens with one no-trump merely because he has five high cards with two sure tricks and no biddable suit.

North has no biddable suit for a takeout. His three high cards entitle him to make one raise to two no-trump. And with no more high cards than he originally promised, south should have passed.

But south looked lovingly at his jack and nine. Thinks he, one of them may help pick up a stray trick with some sort of a clever stunt. So, he stretched it to a game contract.

West started out with an opening lead of the heart four and it looked as if declarer could see his needed nine tricks. They were two spades, two hearts, two diamonds, and three clubs.

But defenders had something to say about that. They killed the contract by the skin of their teeth. I'll tell you how.

CONSERVATIVES

1500 Registered

In all, some 1,500 active association members registered for the convention, about 650 of them voting delegates. In addition to the regular slate of four delegates to each of the 90 provincial ridings, voting delegates were represented at the Young Progressive Conservatives Association and the Provincial Women's Advisory Committee, which held meetings in conjunction with the convention.

Mr. Bracken said the Federal government failed in providing "full production, full employment, a high national income and the preservation of private enterprise" during the transition period.

"The government has no adequate labor policy to prevent industrial war. Reconversion is being held up because government controls are in the way." He voiced criticism of the government's international policy, its trade program and its entry into the fields of private business.

"It is in the business of running airways and railways and it is getting into other businesses without knowing whether they will stand on their own feet or will have to be supported by increased taxes. Such government institutions never go broke. The government just charges all its mistakes up to the taxpayers."

A Big Business.

Mr. Bracken described the governing of Canada as "the biggest business in the world and the worst run.

"The government is meeting only half its expenses; it is spending twice as much as it raises in taxes — the rest it borrows and adds to the national debt."

Of its housing program, he said: "They talked about a memorial for veterans. Yet veterans are still without houses and the government's housing program is a disastrous failure."

He charged that the government would express no opinion on a national flag and "referred the matter to a committee which had no time to deal with it."

The Emergency Powers Bill was being "refurbished after a severe manhandling by the opposition in the House of Commons and by the provincial premiers in their conference last week."

The bill, if enacted into law in its present form, would mean "some unknown individuals outside of parliament and outside of the government can make regulations by which they can revoke nationality and exclude and deport Canadian citizens."

Opposed to Arbitrary Laws.

Premier Drew told the gathering that the closer government is to the people the better it will be.

"We are opposed to all arbitrary laws which deny protection to the individual by public trial before impartial judicial tribunals. We believe in the fullest measures of personal liberty within those clearly stated laws which are for the welfare and protection of our people."

He said that Canada could create international good will by maintaining wartime levels of production to supply the needs of the world.

"Everything that prevents production of any kind limits our ability to carry out our obligations to suffering people elsewhere and greatly hampers the conversion of our domestic production upon which the employment of our own people directly depends.

The general meeting earlier re-elected A. D. McKenzie of Toronto president for another two-year term to head a slate of 12 vice-presidents, a secretary and two auditors.

Belleville Redmen Assume Lead in Van Horne Series Defeating Ordnance Squad 2-1

Reds Surprise Kingston Fans With Win Over League Leading Undefeated Soldier Squad; Vern Goyer in Uniform

An inspired Belleville Redmen hockey team playing brilliantly in all three periods swept to the lead of the Van Horne series loop last night, defeating the league-leading undefeated Kingston Ordnance squad 2-1 in a game that had all the thrills and spills that go when two evenly matched squads meet.

The Red squad from the Moira River banks now hold undisputed first place in the series with four wins and one defeat. They meet Ordnance again next Monday night.

Kingston fans gasped in surprise as the Front Street "Indians" not only held the highly touted soldier squad to one goal in the first chukker but evened the series in the same period and went on to score what proved the winning goal midway through the second stanza.

From then on it was a nip-and-tuck battle with Crandall in the Belleville nets and Gardiner for Ordnance flashing brilliant plays to thwart incoming attackers. Ordnance fought desperately for the equalizer during the third period but a Belleville squad that is rapidly rounding into condition and beginning to know each other on the ice held them off and threatened on several occasions to increase their lead.

Big Vern Goyer, who played in the line for the Dominion Football Champions, Toronto Argonauts, made his first appearance with the Redmen and was a tower of strength on the defence. Vern is a smooth player and moves his 230 pounds around on the ice with speed and agility that is surprising. He levelled off a couple of Ordnance players, and after that they appeared to have a wholesome respect for the "Big Train."

Ordnance Scores First.

Ordnance started the scoring early in the first period when Ricicot, flashy winger took a pass from Tyndall and swept in on Crandall to beat him with a low hard drive. The Red team moved into the attack and at the 9.30 mark Baldwin with Tim Williams and Moher went around the soldier defence to beat Gardiner and tie up the pastime.

Play flashed up and down the ice for the rest of the period and nearly nine minutes of the second chukker had gone when the Red kid line, Don Barrett and Al and Bernie Meagher, who stood out up front for the Redmen throughout carried the rubber into Ordnance territory. Barrett swerved to the right boards and flipped a perfect pass to Bernie Meagher and the diminutive winger fired the rubber into the far corner to give his team the lead and victory.

From then on came the best hockey of the night. A desperate Ordnance squad went all out in an effort to pull the game out of the fire but an equally determined red-sweatered gang successfully held off the threat and skated off the ice winners of the game and leaders of the league.

For the Redmen the two Meaghers and Barrett stood out up front with Baldwin Tim Williams and Jerry Moher turning in sterling efforts. Both Leo and Vern Goyer went well while Crandall in the Red nets was brilliant on occasions.

Tyndall for Ordnance, whom it is stated has an N.H.L. tag was one of the best players on the ice. The elusive youngster flashed his way through the Red squad on several occasions but was outlucked. Ricicot and Gardiner were other standouts for Ordnance. The teams:

Ordnance: Goal, Gardiner; defence, Crowe, Rathowsky; centre, Tyndall; wings, Wilkinson, Ricicot; subs, Anderchuk, Durcher, Cyr, Abraham, Markle, Cross, Rodney, Keets Joblin.

Belleville: Goal, Crandall; defence, C. and J. Williamson; centre, J. Moher; wings, Williams, Baldwin; subs, Barrett, Al and Bern. Meagher, Leo and Vern Goyer, St. Louis Day, Wardhaugh, Storms.

Summary:

1st Period:
1..Ordnance, Ricicot (Tyndall) 2.30
2..Belleville, Baldwin, (Moher, Williams) 9.30
Penalty—C. Williamson.
2nd. Period:
3..Belleville, Al Meagher (Barrett) 8.45
Penalty—Bernie Meagher.
3rd. Period:
No score.
Penalties: Leo Goyer, Cyr.
Referees: Rodden and Radley.

Senate Committee To Hear Army Gen. Marshall

Washington, Dec. 4 (AP)—Maj. Gen. Sherman Miles said yesterday that the reply Lt.-Gen. Walter C. Short made from Hawaii Nov. 28, 1941 to a war-warning message from Washington was "totally inadequate."

Gen. Miles testified before the Senate-House group investigating the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor. Thursday the committee is to hear General of the Army George C. Marshall who sent the warning message.

Evidence was cited that on Nov. 27 Gen. Marshall warned Gen. Short, army commander in Hawaii, that "hostile action is possible at any moment" and to take reconnaissance and such other measures "as you deem necessary."

Filed as a reply was word from Gen. Short to Gen. Marshall the next day that the Hawaiian department was "alerted to prevent sabotage."

Teen-aged Girls From Canada Crossing to U.S.

Windsor, Dec. 4 — (CP) — An American Consulate official declared here Monday that if the number of teen-aged Canadian girls entering the United States through Buffalo in an effort to better themselves is "alarming," the number crossing the border at Detroit "must be even more so."

He was commenting on a statement made Saturday by U. S. Attorney George L. Grobe at Buffalo that Canadian bobby-soxers have been crossing the border in "alarming numbers" since the end of the war. Mr. Grobe said most were entering illegally because they enter on the pretext of a short visit.

The spokesman for the Consulate here was unable to hazard a guess at the number of illegal entries but judged it would be higher than in the Buffalo area because of the greater population in this district. However, officials said no large increase in applications for immigration visas had been noted either here or at Sarnia.

There are 192,000 Farmers in Ontario, 140,000 Would be Enough—Kennedy

90% of Ontario Farm Produce Produced by 50% of Farmers

Toronto, Dec. 4 — (CP)—Agriculture Minister T. L. Kennedy of Ontario on Sunday declared the agricultural industry in the province would be greatly benefited by a reduction in Ontario's farm population and the return to city jobs of many unfitted by lack of scientific knowledge to operate farms successfully.

"There are 192,000 farmers in Ontario now; 140,000 would be enough," said Col. Kennedy. "We should not have more than 25 per cent of our population on farms. Today we have 30.2 per cent."

The minister said a recent survey showed that "90 per cent of all produce we sell from Ontario farms is produced by 50 per cent of our farmers. The others produce only enough to live on themselves plus the other salable 10 per cent."

"Many are working in factories and are not seriously concerned about their farms. Farming is an expert business and requires training, skill and toil. The man who does not regard farming as a scientific enterprise had better go back to the city."

Col. Kennedy issued a special warning to servicemen who, he said, were being greviously misled by the "back to the land" slogan. Most servicemen, unused to farm operation, would be failures on the land, he declared "unless they are prepared to study, suffer and learn the most advanced agricultural methods."

Few Cases Reported Says Under-Secretary

London, Dec. 4 (CP Cable) — J. Parker, Under-Secretary for Dominion Affairs, said yesterday that there have been few cases of Canadian servicemen failing to provide for unmarried British mothers once they have been discharged from the armed forces but that the government is keeping watch on the matter.

Mr. Parker had been asked by Earl Winterton, Conservative, if he was aware that instances had occurred where affiliation orders made against members of the Canadian armed forces had not been carried out owing to the soldier or airman concerned having returned to Canada.

Mr. Parker said if an affiliation order was made by the court against a Canadian soldier, Canadian military authorities made deductions on the mother's behalf but these ceased upon discharge. It would be difficult to ask the Canadian government to pass special legislation for enforcement of orders made in the United Kingdom as there is no similar provision for the enforcement of Canadian orders here, he said. However, civil proceedings could be taken in the Canadian courts.

Earl Winterton remarked that this was unsatisfactory to "those unfortunate people concerned."

He added: "How can some poor girl institute proceedings in Canada? I shall take the first opportunity of raising this matter again because there is a gross injustice."

ACCUSED MAN REMANDED

Galt, Dec. 4 —(CP)— Charged with shooting at his wife with intent to murder, Joseph Johnson, 35-year-old Galt father of four children, was remanded to the county jail at Kitchener until next Thursday, when he appeared in court here Monday.

The shooting took place late Saturday. Police said he shot at his wife with a shotgun and then threatened a second shot, saying "this time I won't miss."

MINE PRESIDENT DIES

South Porcupine, Dec. 4—(CP)—Richard J. C. Godden of Toronto, president of Godden Porcupine Gold Mines Limited, was found dead in his hotel room here late Saturday. He was 65.

Coroner Frank Evans said Mr. Godden died of heart failure about 12 hours before he was found by a chambermaid.

NEARLY 50 YEARS AGO

Becquerel discovered radioactivity in 1896 when some photographic film was blackened accidentally by uranium minerals.

HEAVY REGISTRATION

Welland, Dec. 4 (CP)—Secretary-Treasurer H. D. Ovenden of the nOtario Rural Hockey Association announced today, that rule changes adopted at the O.H.A. annual meeting last Saturday will be considered at the O.R.H.A.'s 15th annual meeting at Galt Dec. 12.

Heaviest registration in some years is anticipated. Several leagues, including the North Wentworth, Tri-County and Alliston and District already are in operation.

SAFE HAULED AWAY

Sarnia, Dec. 4 (CP)— Thieves early Monday broke into the Dale Drug Store at Wyoming which houses the village post office, and hauled away a safe containing between $85 and $100.

The safe, with the bottom smashed in was found by motorists near Petrolia. Royal Canadian Mounted Police are investigating.

The World is Like That

By Kathleen Norris

CHAPTER 8

"This is a nice little hour stolen from under the gods' very noses," Jocelyn said contentedly. She stretched her feet toward the fire, and turned the aureole of her bright hair against the cushions of the old chair.

Kent, stretched equally at ease in a companion chair of shabby leather, opposite her, smiled, took his pipe from his mouth and smiled again.

It was half past nine o'clock. The rain had stopped, and when Jocelyn, finished supper dishes in good housewifely fashion, had stepped out to the back porch to invert the dishpan and hang the towels on the rail, she had seen stars overhead, and had called Kent to watch the white moon struggling in a tangle of heavy rolling cloud. Kent had braced her with his arm, and they had stood for a long while without speaking, staring up at the wild beauty of the night.

Then it had been good to come in, chilled and breathing deep, to replenish the fire and settle themselves there to rest and get warm after the strenuous work of getting a meal in a place as primitive as Covey's.

Never in all the months of their friendship had they two seemed so closely united in mood and spirit as they were tonight. It was as if they had weathered a great storm, been washed apart, and now found themselves flung safely upon a high sun-warmed beach, rediscovering each other with all the freshness of beginnings and all the seasoned joy of known delight.

"Kent, I have to go home. It'll take me an hour to drive back."

"When you go I'll go with you," he said.

"That wouldn't do any good, darling. We'd be in two cars."

"It'd be an escort, anyway. But I'll drive your car and leave mine here. I'd have to come back tomorrow anyway. I can take the train. I've not done any packing, really."

"You musn't do that. No, I'll toast for another half-hour and then be on my way. But Kent," Jocelyn said, her beautiful eyes on his, "this has been so perfect! This has been just what I needed. I've wanted so terribly just another hour with you; and to have it here, just our two selves, and the rain shutting us in, has been—well I'm grateful. And I do see," she went on a little thickly, but steadily and with a smile in the eyes that were suddenly misted. "I do see that we have to end it, Kent, and I'm going over to Aunt Nell's tomorrow to begin quite a different way of feeling. Really I am! I've no business to dream dreams and build plans about another woman's husband."

Kent was listening, his head dropped, his fine sensitive mouth biting now and then on his pipestem, his eyes moving moodily to her face, moodily narrowing as he looked into far space again. He did not speak.

"Wasn't it always a sort of lie, Kent, that we were just good friends, that we wouldn't hurt Lilian? You've kissed me, you've made me presents, we've met each other secretly a hundred times, and we've said all along that it didn't rob Lilian. But I'm not so sure!"

Still he did not speak. He had raised his eyes now and was regarding her steadily.

"So you see I've come to see it your way," she finished, gaining certainty with every word.

"I wonder if we've been a pair of fools!" Kent said suddenly in a hoarse voice.

"Fools?" Jocelyn faltered, her eyes widening.

The man spoke in a quiet, thoughtful tone, his body bent forward in his low chair, his locked fingers dropped between his knees. He looked at the fire.

"I wonder, my dear," he said, "if we haven't been fools. You're quite right. What we did take was really much more than what we prided ourselves upon not taking! Companionship, love, longing, we struggled to adjust them for months and months. Well, we kept to the letter of the law. I'm going away on Monday; we'll not see each other again for a long time. We've killed the beautiful thing, it's dying by inches."

His voice had sunk so low that she could hardly hear him. It was as if he were merely thinking aloud. "But I wonder," he said musingly again, "if we haven't been fools!"

It was her turn to be silent now. She could not speak.

"I thought I could say goodbye to you rationally and easily," Kent was presently saying. "I'd thought it all out. My promotion, going back to live in the old town, playing fair with Lilian. I don't know why that should suddenly have seemed to me important, for she's not especially happy with me. I think that after any break or change she'd very quickly readjust herself, settle down again. But anyway, I felt that she and I were very definitely in the picture, and you necessarily out of it, and that we could work it out that way. Now—"

He stopped on the word and was silent. She took it up.

"Now? Nothing is changed now. Except that we had this wonderful stolen hour and this talk."

"Everything's changed now," he stated firmly. "I know now that it's only you. That's what I've just been finding out. You're the one wonderful, perfect thing that's ever come into my life, and all that matters is that I don't lose you. I've been an awful fool, Jocelyn; I've been sitting here thinking, just these last few minutes, what a consummate fool I've been!"

He stood up and put his pipe on the low mantel, and came over to kneel beside her and take both her hands in his.

"Darling," he said, "will you forgive me? You have forgiven me, haven't you, or you'd never have come over tonight. Will you trust me that I'll not fail you again? We'll go through with it now. We'll go through with it now!" Kent repeated with a long indrawn breath. "I'll not go to Portland Monday, Jocelyn," he said, "I'll go to Reno. It's best that way, dear, and afterward we'll take whatever chances come along. I'll always be able to take care of you, even if it's only in a place like this. I'll see Lilian tomorrow, in Richmond here—"

"In Richmond?" Her sharp whisper filled the pause as he hesitated. Richmond was but a few miles away.

"Yes: she didn't go to Oregon. Her sister, who lives here in Richmond, telephoned her Wednesday that their mother is down here visiting. So Lilian went over there yesterday and will drive up with them later in the week. Jocelyn, I know she'll be reasonable," Kent said. "I think I knew all along that this was the way it must be, and I've been fighting it off—I've been trying to keep what I had and have you, too. That's over now. We'll never part again, sweetheart. And when we can—the first moment that we can, we'll be married." He leaned back, still holding her lightly by the shoulders, to smile at her. "You know that, don't you?" he said.

She looked deep into his eyes. Her own eyes were very serious. "I do know that, Kent."

"Then that's that. I'll see Lilian tomorrow. And after that I'll resign from the Portland thing and get my old job back, and we'll start from there. For love's the only thing that's true," Kent said, "love's the only thing too precious to throw away. You'll not be afraid?" he broke off to ask suddenly. "You trust me?"

"I seem to have been waiting so long to hear you say this, Kent." She leaned forward and rested her forehead against his with a long sigh, and felt his arm tighten about her, and his cheek against his hair.

"Jocelyn, I'm so happy!" he said.

"I'm happy, too."

"It's called burning your bridges behind you, you know, and I've always thought it sounded rather formidable. But a relief!"

There was a silence. And then quite without warning Jocelyn felt a great boredom possess her, and what they were saying lost all its meaning and was flat and strange. She still felt Kent's arm about her; she was conscious of the nearness and the power of him, but he was no longer he, nor she herself. They were two complete strangers. Inwardly she shook herself, trying to get her bearings again. This was Kent, she was Jocelyn; they were up in the hills alone at night in Covey's cabin.

"Say you're happy that we are going to give up everything else and live just for each other!" he was whispering.

"Happy!" she said with a smile, swallowing with a dry throat.

What on earth was the matter? All the color, all the thrill had drained out of life. She felt stupid and unresponsive. The sudden revulsion of feeling, or rather death of feeling, frightened her. She found herself speaking gently to him, affectionately, almost soothingly. He must not know how suddenly their whole castle of dreams had come fluttering down.

"I'll go now and write him tomorrow," she thought, even while her fine fingers rested against his cheek, and his words of adoration and eagerness poured on past her unhearing ears.

Why didn't it reach her? Why didn't it stir her? She looked at him with a slow smile in her eyes, with infinite pity in her heart, with her thoughts far away from him. Already he was out of her life; already the part he played was far behind her; already she had gone on in her mind to the trip back to the city, the car flying through the dark, the heavenly safety of her room again. And tomorrow she would go decorously to Sausalito and rejoice with Tots and all the cousins over the latest engagement, and feel herself free of the shadow that had darkened her life for more than a year.

"What are you thinking of?" he said, suddenly aware of her inattention, suddenly jealous.

"That I must go home," she answered mildly. "We can make all our plans tomorrow."

There was a telephone in the cabin, which was used as a fire station in dry weather. The forest rangers had placed it there; it was rarely used by Covey or any of his guests. Now it rang sharply in the lonely dark mountain night, above the swishing of leaves and creaking of boughs and the sound of the wind at the mouth of the wide chimney.

Jocelyn and Kent looked at it and at each other and at the clock. Ten minutes to ten. With a shrug the man went and picked up the instrument. It was Lilian, telephoning from Richmond, only a dozen miles away. Jocelyn heard him answering patiently; the married man again.

"I can come back here Monday, Lil, and pick up my stuff and then drive the car to Bertha's and leave it there for you. You wouldn't want to before Monday? All right. If there's nobody there I'll put the key on the top of the screen door....Yep. Tell her I'm sorry not to see her....No, no, don't you girls change your plans; you go do your shopping; that'll be all right. Bertha'll be coming up for Christmas, won't she?.... Yep. Need money? How's the tooth?"

Jocelyn went without hurry toward the kitchen, picking up her bag as she went. Kent's back was toward the room. Her hat and coat were spread in the kitchen, drying; she put them on quickly, and went quietly out the kitchen door and around the house. Her car started up almost noiselessly; there was enough disturbance in the air and among the trees and shrubs to cover whatever sound the engine made. As the machine wheeled to turn into the lane, Jocelyn turned up her lights, swept away down into the darkness, heard the mud squelching beneath her wheels.

Little Benny's Note Book

Ma didn't use her expensive Frentch soap since I wore it partly down washing myself with it exter hard on account of enjoying the lather and the smell, and she and pop were going to a party tonight, and this afternoon she was in her room sewing on her lace dress to make it fit better, and I thought, Oh boy she's sure to use that soap to wash herself for the party, and she'll find out what happened to it for sure, so maybe I better tell her and save her some of the shock.

And I said, G, ma, I hope you have a swell time at the party, I said, and she said, Thank you, no doubt I'll enjoy myself, although I'm afraid parties dont mean as much to me as they use to. Perhaps I'm not as young as I was, she said.

Sure you are, you're younger, I said. Jimminy crickits, I bet you'll be the prettiest darn lady at the party, I said, and ma said, Well, it's very nice of you to say so, I'm sure, but I'm afraid you're exaggerating.

No I'm not, ma, either, I'm just telling the truth, I said. I bet all the men at the party will want to dance with you at the same time, and they'll be fighting about who asked you first, especially with that dress and your new hair-do besides your naturel looks, I said, and ma said, Well, this is almost too much, I must say.

Sounding as if she was glad to hear it just a same, and I said, I bet the other ladies will accuse you of cheeting if you use that Frentch soap. They'll claim that you just naturelly smell so pretty and look so clean, it's not fair for you to go and wash yourself with that Frentch soap besides, I said, and ma said, Well of all the rilly remarks.

And she laughed happy, and I quick opened her soap case to show her what was left of her Frentch soap and told her the main reason why, and the result was she only got a little ways mad.

RSM Angus Duffy Takes Over Cities Service Station

It's a far cry from the bullet-swept slopes of Sicily and Italy the mud and blood of Belgium and Germany to the peaceful tranquility of Front Street, Belleville. At least so thinks the former regimental sergeant major of the famous Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment who is now plain Mr. Angus Duffy, address, "Civvy Street."

The other day Mr. Duffy relegated the glamor and bloodshed of war with its parade grounds, route marches, blaring of bands leaves and dress parades to the limbo of memory. Today, resplendent in his new "civvy suit" he is ready to tackle life with its new problems.

For the erstwhile "best-loved non-commissioned officer in the Hasty Pees" has purchased the lesseeship of the Cities Service Station at 130 Front Street. Mr. Duffy acquired the business from Messrs. Erie Mumby and Hugh Luttrell, and took over his new "business baby" today.

The new business will be known as "Duffy's Service Station" and will deal in gasoline, tires, oil, and equipment.

"I should call it 'Duffy's Tavern' " smiled the ex-R.S.M. "but that would be stretching it too far. Besides I might be sued for something or other."

"It's going to be sort of funny after all," he said. "And some of the boys of my old regiment will probably get a great kick out of it. You can imagine one of my buck privates driving up and saying "Fill 'er up" my man, and do it smartly. And I'll have to say more or less meekly 'Yes sir'."

Mr. Duffy is well known throughout the district through his military connections, and the good wishes of many of his former comrades will go to their favorite N.C.O. in this his first post-war civilian venture. He resides on Victoria Avenue.

TORONTO STOCK EXCHANGE

Toronto, Dec. 4 (CP)—Base metal stocks were stronger at noon and other groups showed no change of any consequence. Trading was in lighter volume and only —1,092,000 shares changed hands in the first hour.

Nipissing continued to advance on the expectation of a higher price for silver. It sold up 50 cents to 4.20. Smelters, Falconbridge and Steep Rock were other strong metals.

Gainers in the gold group included Frobisher, Pickle Crow, Duquesne, Senator, Eldona, Golden Gate, Premier and San Antonio. Active selling of Astoria and Jacknife but these issues down 5 to 6 cents, Bear, Sullivan Perron were down 5.

Apart from strength in the papers and liquors, the industrials were a bit easy. East Steel stood out in the heavy industrial group, showing a gain of 3 3-4 at 48. Hiram Walker gained 1 1-2 and Industrial Alcohol A was up 1-2.

HOGS

Toronto, Dec. 4 —(CP)— Prices were unchanged at bacon-hog markets reporting early today. Dressed, Grade A, delivered, Hull $17.60; Barrie $17.65; Stratford, to farmers $17.50, to truckers $17.65.

Milk for Toronto Area Shipped From Here

Belleville district farmers are viewing with appreciation the even covering of from four to five inches of snow which is covering their fields of fall wheat and rye, according to the weekly crop bulletin published by the Ontario Department of Agriculture. There is but very little frost in the ground, according to the report.

Farmers are busy in the woods getting out firewood before the snow hampers operations. As result of a scarcity of whole milk in the Toronto area, some milk is being shipped from the Belleville district to that centre, it is stated.

The same was stated to be true in Northumberland County where more cheese factories than usual are closing for assembling of whole milk for shipment to Toronto.

MARMORA

Ralph E. Neal Elected Reeve

Marmora, Dec. 4 — Ralph E. Neal was elected Reeve of Marmora village in a closely contested election on Monday, winning by nine votes over his opponent, Vincent Lynch. Following is the result: R. E. Neal, 215; Vincent Lynch, 206.

For School Trustees, D. P. Marett, H. A. Burwash and W. D. Lavender were elected by acclamation.

For Hydro Commissioner, F. R. Wells, 228; James R. Rice (defeated) 163.

Council elected by acclamation are G. H. Rennie, M. R. Lavender, L. R. Rundle and W. G. Chrysler.

Marmora, Lake Township.

In Marmora and Lake Township the result was as follows: Five contesting four seats in the council, Irwin McCoy, 250; John Wilkes, 211; George Davidson, 210; Charles Kelly, 190; Arthur Tompkins (defeated) 131.

John A. Bell was re-elected Reeve by acclamation. J. Hulsmans and Ray Bonter were elected School Trustees by acclamation. Irwin McCoy comes back after being out of council for 11 years. He suffered defeat twice in that time, once for councillor and once for reeve, by John A. Bell. Mr. Kelly has been a member of the council every year since 1930 except one. Voting in the township was light, but a heavy vote was polled in the village.

Short Speech

One of the shortest post-civic election speeches on record here was made last night in the City Hall after the final results were announced.

In the noise and hubbub that is the usual aftermath of the receipt of the final figures in the office of City Clerk Holmes, ex-mayor Jamieson Bone said to a newspaperman: "You can tell my supporters, I thank them. You can tell them my wife thanks them. I'm going home, good night."

And with a wave of his hand he disappeared through a door into the darkness of the night.

Amsterdam is Well on Its Way To Recovery Says Burgomaster

Six months after the end of the war in Europe the port of Amsterdam, though still war-scarred and badly damaged, is well on the way to recovery, the city's burgomaster writes in The London Times. Amsterdam is not, as the Germans had planned it should be in the event of an Allied occupation, cut off either from the sea or from its important hinterland. After five years of enforced idleness the port has received its first ships from overseas, and already it has facilities for receiving more.

During the occupation it was clear to the port authorities that if the Germans were ever forced to withdraw from Amsterdam they would destroy the whole port. Some of the port engineers, who were members of the underground movement, secured copies of the German plan and even of the detailed instructions which had been drawn up for the wrecking parties. The destruction of the harbor installations began early in September of last year, when the Allied forces had reached the southern border of Holland. After a few days, with the halting of the Allied advance, the work of destruction was stopped; it was not resumed. Though the whole harbor was sealed to any but Germans, the Dutch were able to make a survey of the damage, and long before the German capitulation on May 5 of the harbor and had even secretly ordered in England part of the repair materials needed.

Damage is Extensive

Though falling short of what was originally planned, German destruction in the port of Amsterdam was great. At Ijmuiden, the largest of the four locks connecting the North Sea Canal with the sea was destroyed, though the three others were left in working order. Just outside the moles here a steamer was sunk, partly blocking the entrance to the canal. Between the moles the entrance had been blocked in May, 1940, when the Dutch sank a large steamer: this obstruction had been partly removed by the Germans. Farther east, between the railway bridge on the Amsterdam-Zaandam (Hembrug) line and the oil dock, the Germans sank the hulls of two unfinished ships, one of 9,000 tons and the other of 3,000 tons. This obstruction blocked the way to Amsterdam for all sea-going vessels and for most inland vessels.

Throughout the harbor about 70 other craft of all kinds were scuttled. Among them were four floating docks (one of 25,000 tons lifting capacity), two grain elevators (across the entrance to the timber dock), several floating cranes and shear-legs, canal steamers, and barges. On the quays 180 out of 220 cranes were blown up, most of them into the docks to create more obstructions, and in this operation many of the sheds and warehouses along the quays were damaged. Only one shed, however, was destroyed — not by the German but in an Allied air raid.

Rail Lines Hit

The railways throughout the harbor were also much damaged, in part deliberately and in part when the cranes were being blown up. In the oil dock most of the tanks had been blown up by the Dutch themselves in 1940; those ten untouched or later repaired were blown up by the Germans in September, 1944. The foundations of the tanks and of the dock itself are intact.

The Coen Dock, the newest of the main docks, was devastated. Except for two stretches, together about 750 yards long, all the quay walls were blown up with sea mines. About 2,600 yards of quay for sea-going vessels and 1,950 yards for inland traffic were destroyed. Shipyards and repair shops did not escape the general destruction. At three of the four large Amsterdam shipyards the Germans destroyed the slipways and the ships on them, as well as numbers of cranes, engines, and floating docks. Much machinery and material was taken away. The Germans also intended to sink the mooring and navigation buoys by machine-gun fire, but the port authorities forestalled them. The Dutch themselves scuttled the buoys in such a way that they could easily be saved.

Much of Harbor Escaped

In spite of so much destruction, the port of Amsterdam was, even six months ago, far from being a total loss. The greater part of the harbor, especially on the east side, was almost untouched, except where cranes had been blown up. The links with the hinterland—to the east across the Ijssel Lake (Zuider Zee) and to the south as far as the Rhine — were intact at the end of the war. Since then, with the removal of the obstructions in the Rhine and Meuse, Amsterdam is accessible by water from the Ruhr downwards. Barges of up to 4,000 tons can pass through the ship canal between the Rhine and Amsterdam.

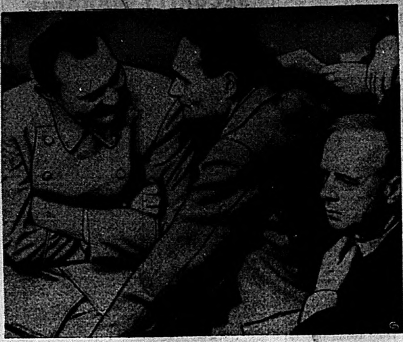
The restoration of the port began immediately. One of the first tasks was to open the entrance of the harbor from the sea. Work was first begun on the blockships west of the oil dock. With the help of the Royal Navy, the wreck of the 3,000-ton ship was blown up and removed as far as the hull of the 9,000-ton ship, which it overlapped. The larger vessel, which is only slightly damaged, is now being salvaged.

Opened New Channel

Meanwhile, a bypass channel was completed by the middle of August by dredging away the north bank of the canal for a length of 500 yards. At Ijmuiden harbor the two wrecks have been cleared away by the Royal Navy, and the sandbar caused by this obstruction and by the lack of dredging during the war is being removed. Already a channel has been cleared through which ships of a draft of 29 feet can enter Ijmuiden on a favorable tide and go on to Amsterdam.

In the harbor itself much of the damage has been made good. Quays have been cleared, and 130 of the 180 damaged cranes, many of which were below water, have been raised. Some of the undamaged cranes, most of which were on one quay, have been moved to other quays, and it is expected that new cranes will be available soon. Most of the damaged sheds have been repaired. About 8,700 yards of quay can now be used for sea-going shipping, and two-thirds of this length has sheds for cargo.

INTERESTING TABLEAU IN PRISONERS' DOCK AT NUERNBERG



An interesting little tableau in the prisoners' dock of the Palace of Justice at Nuernberg, Germany, where top-ranking Nazis are on trial for war crimes. Hermann Goering, LEFT, who succeeded Rudolf Hess as Nazi No. 2, when the latter flew to Scotland in 1941, chats with the cadaverous Hess, who has just remembered that he didn't forget after all. At RIGHT, Joachim von Ribbentrop, the champagne salesman who became a would-be empire builder, fingers nervously at his throat. Could be that his thoughts are on rope and the sinister use to which it is sometimes put.

Invalid Woman Rescued as Home Is Destroyed

Powassan, Dec. 4—(CP)—Mrs. Ada Caddem, 72-year-old invalid, was carried to safety by a boarder on Saturday night when her home in Powassan was burned to the ground. Mrs. Caddem suffered numerous burns before she was rescued. Several other persons in the house at the time escaped without injury.

It is believed that the fire started when Mrs. Caddem accidentally knocked over a coal oil lamp in her bedroom and was unable to get out of bed to right it. A boarder in the home noticed the fire and carried her to safety as the flames rapidly spread through the small frame house. Her son, his wife, and several other people in the house managed to escape in time as the fire swept through the building.

Quotes Yamashita As Saying He Expected His Force Annihilated

San Francisco, Dec. 4 — (AP) —Lt.-Gen. Tomoyuki Yamashita, on trial on war criminal charges in Manila, didn't expect Lt.-Gen. Arthur Ernest Percival to surrender Singapore in February, 1942, the one-time "Tiger of Malaya" was quoted Sunday in a mutual Broadcasting System broadcast.

MBS correspondent Robert Stewart said Yamashita told him he used "some 40,000 to 50,000 men" to defeat the British forces who he believed had "more than 100,000."

Yamashita, reported Stewart, said it was "by sheer luck our entire forces were not annihilated when he attempted to cross Johore Straits" from the Malaya Peninsula to Singapore Island.

"The British guns could have annihilated us. I expected the British guns to wipe us out to the last man, but they never did."

Yamashita said his table pounding and fist waving at the surrender parley with the British officer arose out of efforts to make an interpreter understand what he was trying to tell Gen. Percival.

Jap Field Marshal Hata Expected Name on List

Tokyo, Dec. 4 (AP) — Field Marshal Shunroku Hata, proud and unapologetic, said Monday "I will take responsibility for all operations" while commander-in-chief of Japanese forces in China.

Saying it was no shock to find his name on the new list of Japanese war leaders ordered arrested by Gen. MacArthur, the 66-year-old chief aide de camp to the Emperor told The Associated Press:

"I expected it. I feel the responsibility of the war."

Hata offered no defence for a career which reached a bloody climax when he led Japanese forces in China until December, 1943.

Mukden Lies Only 30 Miles Ahead of Troops

Chungking, Dec. 4 —(AP)— The rich industrial city of Mukden in Manchuria lies only 30 miles ahead of advancing Nationalist spearheads, Chinese Central News Agency reported Monday.

As President Chiang Kai-Shek's forces rolled northward without reported opposition, Central News said the first Government troops would be flown into Manchuria next week.

Today's report indicates an advance of 35 miles. The Nationalists Sunday reached Tahushan, 65 miles from Mukden. Central news did not specify if Tahushan had been by-passed or the Communists had withdrawn.

Press dispatches stated negotiations are "proceeding satisfactorily" on a new Chinese-Russian agreement on Manchuria.

The Russians recently agreed to defer for a mohth withdrawal of Red troops from Manchuria, thus enabling Nationalist forces to take over.

The President's son, Chiang Chung-Kuo, has departed for Changchun, Manchurian capital.

Reports of the Nationalist approach to Mukden followed a China Times statement that troops of the free-lance general, Chang Hsueh-Shih, had entered the city. It was uncertain whether he favored the Nationalists or the Communists.

There were reports the long-delayed peace talks between Nationalists and Chinese Communists would be resumed Dec. 10.

United Nations Commission Busy On Second Week

London, Dec. 4 —((CP)— The United Nations Commission has plunged into its second week of forging peace machinery faced with the necessity of reaching a decision in the highly controversial question of creating a temporary trusteeship committee.

The fate of the League of Nations mandates, which delegates to the San Francisco conference agreed should be reviewed for future disposition, hinges on the solution of the problem.

Another controversial issue — the selection of a permanent site for U.N.O. — appears headed for a showdown early this week.

Although the executive committee recommended the United States as the site, Britain, France, Belgium and the Netherlands are seeking to establish the league home in Europe.

Canada has proposed that delegates vote by secret ballot for cities instead of first choosing between the United States and Europe. The proposal is expected to be brought up for debate soon.

While the controversial trusteeship and site issues dominated the conference work, the United States delegation submitted what it hoped would be acceptable compromise to the dispute between British and American delegates and the Russians on establishing a separate secretariat for the security council.

The Soviet delegation is insisting on a separate secretariat, while the United States compromise plan suggests that the question be left up to the organization's secretary general.

British Plan Of Restricted Imports 'Interim Policy'

Rapid Relaxation Seen When Position Improves

Ottawa, Dec. 5—(CP)—Britain's policy of restricting imports of manufactured goods is "an interim policy only dictated by the present necessity," Trade Minister MacKinnon said today in the Commons, quoting a statement received from the British Government.

"As Britain's external financial position improves," said the British statement, "there should follow a progressive relaxation in import controls.

"It is the aim of the United Kingdom government that this relaxation since this will depend on many factors, particularly the extent of such financial assistance as may be forthcoming from abroad, the improvement in United Kingdom exports, and the reduction in the United Kingdom's expenditure on external commitments consequent on the war.

"The United Kingdom government hope, however, that it may be possible to proceed to a more definite policy before very long."

The statement added that certain Canadian firms had approached the United Kingdom for facilities to establish production in Britain. It was not the policy of the British government, however, to use the import licencing system to bring pressure on Canadian firms to adopt this policy.

Britons to Get Christmas Bonus Rationed Foods

By JAMES McCOOK
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Dec. 5 (CP) — The British people, condemned for years to an almost unvaried diet which some doctor say is damaging to health—are receiving a Christmas bonus of some of the tastier rationed foods.

Dr. Edith Summerskill, parliamentary secretary to the Ministry of Food, has said that Britons are faded, tired, exhausted and fed up with monotonous food, but there is obvious pleasure that their normal ration will be increased by one pound of sugar each, four ounces of chocolates and sweets, six ounces of butter and margarine, and sixpence (12 cents) worth of fresh meat and fourpence (8 cents) worth of canned beef.

The allotment gives them an extra week's ration of butter and margarine, two weeks' supply of sugar and a week's candies. Under meat rationing at present individuals can spend from seven pence to 1s 2d a week, according to age.

Earlier Sir Ben Smith, the Food Minister, announced that four instead of two ounces of butter may be taken every other week until further notice. The weekly ration of cooking fats, cut earlier this year to one ounce, has been restored to two, and the cheese ration, reduced to two ounces a week last April, has been restored to three.

INVESTIGATE RIOT

Istanbul, Dec. 5. (Reuters)—Turkish police were today investigating yesterday's demonstrations during which 18,000 students broke into an destroyed the offices and printing plant of two Left-Wing newspapers and sacked a Russian merchant's bookshop.

Ten persons were injured during the demonstrations, believed to be the result of a campaign initiated by Conservative newspapers a few days ago against the Left-Wing newspapers.

Materials Still In Short Supply

Ottawa, Dec. 5. (CP)—Canada took another step along the reconversion road last night with announcement of abolition of construction control, the organization which held a tight rein on the Dominion's building in wartime.

"Builders are no longer required to obtain construction control licences," Munitions Minister Howe said in making the announcement. But he tempered his statement with the warning that building materials still were in short supply and urged builders not to undertake projects which were not immediately required or which would not create employment.

Priorities for veterans' housing are to be maintained to ensure their needs will be met first.

Termination of construction control, established in May, 1941, to ensure the channelling of building materials and construction labor into essential projects, was in line with expectations that most the remaining munitions department controls will be removed within the next months except for some coal control, which probably will remain. essential throughout the winter.

Mr. Howe said that the lifting of Federal construction controls "does not mean that building materials are now in good supply."

RUSSIANS REFUSE ENTRY OF TROOPS INTO AZERBAIJAN

New Soviet Note Comes During Tense Political Situation and Iran Premier May Resign

Tehran, Dec. 5 (AP) — The Russians have refused, in a second note to the Iranian government to permit entrance of additional Iranian troops into the troubled northwestern province of Azerbaijan, it was disclosed today.

The new Soviet note came during a tense political situation with Iranian Premier Hakimi threatening to resign unless the dispute over the province was settled by direct negotiation with Moscow.

Iranian troops, ordered to the province which is the scene of a local autonomy movement, still were bivouacked at Sharifabed, where they were halted Nov. 20 by the Russians. Soviet troops have occupied the province since 1941, when they were sent to guard the Russian lend-lease supply lane.

The new Russian note, dated Dec. 2 and delivered by the Soviet Embassy in Tehran, said:

"...concerning the request of the Iran foreign ministry for immediate Soviet authorization for Iran troops to move northwards, the Soviet Embassy reiterates that it has given its definite answer in the note of Nov. 26."

The Nov. 26 note said the Russian refusal was based on the opinion that the arrival of Iranian government troops in the province would provoke bloodshead.

Other Notes Sent.

Both the United States and Britain have dispatched notes to Moscow on the situation, the United States suggesting withdrawal of all Allied occupation troops from Iran, Britain urging that Iranian troops be given freedom of movement. The Russians were reported to have rejected the suggestion for withdrawal of Allied occupation troops by Jan. 1.

The original Soviet note to the Iranian government said that should bloodshed break out in Azerbaijan because of the arrival of government troops, "the Soviet government would be forced to bring additional troops to Iran for their troops' protection. Since the Soviet government does not wish to send more troops to Iran, they do not deem it wise for further Iran troops to be sent to the north province."

Bormann Joined in Death Pact With Hitler Says German Aviatrix

By JAMES F. KING

Oberursel, Germany, Dec. 5—(AP)—Capt. Hanna Reitsch, German aviatrix who flew the last German plane out of Berlin, has told United States counter-intelligence investigators that the missing Martin Bormann joined in a death pact with Hitler a few hours before the German capital fell.

The 33-year-old pilot gave a graphic description of the final hours of Hitler and his companions in a reichschancellery bunker, but said she left upon the fuehrer's orders before suicides were carried out.

The army took her story off the secret list today with the comment it was "probably as accurate a description as will be obtained of those last days."

Bormann, aide to Hitler, chief of the Nazi S.A. (Storm Troops) and head of the Volksstrum, people's militia called to action in the final weeks of the war, is being tried in absentia by the International military tribunal at Nuernberg for war crimes.

The drama of the end bordered on comic opera as Russian shells burst overhead, according to Capt. Reitsch. She said Hitler berated Goering, Himmler and others as traitors while going through the motions of directing a phantom recue army that had been wiped out days before.

She Reported Further:

Goebbels, surrounded by his wife and six children, launched into bursts of oratory with all the theatrics of a ham actor. Eva Braun became disgustingly dramatic. Blank-faced Bormann kept at his desk, writing a historical record of the finish of Nazism.

As the intensity of the Russian barrage increased, the shaking Fuehrer, on the verge of collapse called for repeated suicide rehearsals. S. S. guards, charged with seeing that the bodies were destroyed, stood by.

Capt. Reitsch, who claims the world's glider record and once flew in a V-1 bomb as test pilot, said she flew into Berlin April 26, 1945, with Lt.-Gen. Ritter Von Greim, who had received a frantic call from Hitler after Goering was reported to have attempted to take over as Fuehrer.

Her story, as told through an American interrogation officer:

"Hitler asked: 'Do you know why I've called you? Because Hermann Goering has betrayed and deserted both me and his fatherland. Behind my back he has established connection with the enemy. His action was a mark of cowardice. And against my orders he has gone to save himself, at Berchtesgaden. . . prepared to rule in my place.'

"Hitler shouted: 'Nothing has been spared me. No allegiances are kept, no "honor" lived up to, no disappointments that I have not had, no betrayals that I have not experienced and now this above all else.'"

Afterwards Hitler came to her and in a low voice said, "Hannah, you belong to those who will die with me. Each of us has a vial of poison such as this," and handed her one for herself and one for Greim.

"I do not wish that even one of us falls to the Russians alive, nor do I wish our bodies to be found by them," said Hitler.

Hitler told her how he was counting on the army of a General Wenck, moving up from the south, to drive the Russians back. Later she learned Wenck's forces had been wiped out days before.

The news of Himmler's armistice bid to the Allies April 29 came as "the greatest blow of all. Hitler raged like a mad man. . . . He sank into a stupor and for a time the entire bunker was silent."

With the report that the Russians would launch an attack to overrun the chancellory on the morning of April 30, Hitler with a chalk white face went to Greim's room and slumped down on the edge of the bed.

"Our only hope is Wenck," he said, "and to make his entry possible we must call up every available aircraft to cover his approach."

Hitler then ordered Greim and Capt. Reitsch to make a get-away by plane to deliver the order, as communications had failed.

Prison Terms, Lashes For Three Men Who Robbed Langton Bank

Simcoe, Ont., Dec. 5 (CP) — Sentences ranging from two years less one day to 12 years and 20 lashes were passed on four men today who pleaded guilty to charges of armed robbery of some $33,000 from the Imperial Bank branch at Langton, Ont., September 12.

The court sentenced Gail Hastings, of Windsor, Ont., to 12 years and 20 lashes; Dominic Minnille, of Ottawa, and Gerald Blackburn, of Windsor, each to 10 years and 20 lashes; and William Vance, of Windsor, to two years less one day definite and two years less one day indefinite.

Plead Guilty.

The men this morning changed their plea to guilty after a statement was admitted into evidence against Vance yesterday. That statement, given to police by Vance, told of the plans made to hold up the bank.

After the change of plea, Judge G. A. P. Brickenden adjourned the court to study the records of the quartette. Previously F. D. Nasso, of Toronto, counsel for the 23-year-old Hastings and the 28-year-old Blackburn recommended reasonable sentences and lashes for his clients.

G. A. Martin, of Toronto, counsel for Minnille, also recommended a reasonable sentence and lashes, while A. W. Winter of Simcoe, representing Vance, said that in view of the fact his client "was just a tool of the other three", he recommended a light sentence.

Three armed and masked men entered the Langton Bank Sept. 12 while a fourth waited outside in an automobile believed by police to have been stolen in Windsor two days before. Manager James Brawley, his staff and one customer were ordered to sit on the floor while the gunmen collected the money.

Shot Just Missed Customer.

One shot was fired during the hold-up and just missed the head of Clarence Hodson, the customer.

Records showed Blackburn and Hastings had been previously convicted on a number of charges, while Minnille has a lesser record. Vance had only one minor conviction against him the court was told.

Yesterday Police Inspector Geo. Mackay said Vance made a statement describing plans to "take" the bank. The statement was allowed as evidence against Vance but not against the other three. Mackay quoted Vance as saying he agreed to steal a car in Windsor and drive the three men to Langton.

Plans to rob the bank were laid in Blackburn's apartment, the statement said. The statement said that after looking over the bank September 11, the men slept by the roadside and then drove back to Langton to perform the hold-up. Vance said he stayed in the car while the other three entered the bank.

Earlier, police testified some $8,000 had been found in the Blackburn apartment. Bank officials identified some of the United States currency alleged to have been found with the money.

LYTTELTON MAKES CENSURE MOTION AGAINST GOVT.

Declares Industry is Kept "In Sort of Whitehall Twilight"

London, Dec. 5. (CP)—Oliver Lyttelton today presented an opposition motion of censure against the Labor government with the declaration that industry was being kept "in a sort of Whitehall twilight" instead of being helped toward peacetime production.

Opening the Conservative Party's first formal parliamentary attack on the government, the former president of the Board of Trade criticized the Attlee program to nationalize key industries and charged needless delay in demobilization of Britain's armed forces.

Mr. Lyttelton declared the Labor administration believed that the breathing of war-depleted British industry could be sustained only "through the iron lung of government control."

The rate of release from the armed forces, he asserted, is only about half that of the United States because the government is "fuddling and fiddling and kowtowing to unconscionable demands". The greatest censure is justified, he added, because the demobilization policy "is utterly unfitted to the needs of the nation."

Two days of debate are scheduled on the formal motion of censure. Parliamentary observers said the move was aimed at formally criticizing the government and would not result in downfall of the government since a vote on a major government measure or a "no-confidence" vote was not being asked.

HE'S ON THE LIST

SEE COMPLETION LOAN TO BRITAIN AGREEMENT NEAR

British Mission Coming to Ottawa for Like Discussions

By CLYDE BLACKBURN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Washington, Dec. 5—(CP)—Completion of the Anglo-American agreement for financial aid from the United States to re-establish Britain's trading position today was expected to be announced within 24 hours.

End of the nearly three months of negotiations here will release the British financial mission for similar discussions with the Canadian government in Ottawa.

The Ottawa discussions were forecast when Lord Keynes, head of the British Mission, visited Ottawa on his way here three months ago.

At that time it was announced that Anglo-Canadian loan talks would await the outcome of negotiations here.

Unofficial reports today were that the United States will provide Britain with $3,750,000,000 new money and a credit of $650,000,000 against lend-lease accounts.

Details of terms for servicing the loan are expected tomorrow or Friday. It is understood the interest rate will be two per cent and repayments spread over a 50-year period starting five years hence.

Canadian Embassy officials here have been kept fairly well informed of the negotiations since they have an important bearing on the future of trade between Canada and both the United States and United Kingdom.

Canada now will work out with the British mission terms under which the Dominion will share in the restoration of Britain's war-wrecked economy.

The belief here is that the aid from Canada will be at least as generous as that from the United States on a per capital basis which would mean that Canada's loan will be about 375,000,000.

Agreement Signing

London, Dec. 5—(Reuters)—Authoritative quarters here predicted today that current Anglo-American loan negotiations in Washington may be successfully concluded tomorrow with the signing of an agreement.

It is expected Prime Minister Attlee may make an announcement on the discussions in the House of Commons tomorrow.

Of the total sum, more than three-quarters will represent a reconstruction loan and the balance will represent settlement of indebtedness on shipments sent since lend-lease ended.

In the years when Britain's exports fall below a certain level she will not be called to pay interest on the loan.

Subject of the agreement is believed to have been discussed by a group of cabinet ministers at Downing Street this morning.

NOISY SESSION IN HOUSE OVER POWERS BILL

Govt. Upholds Needs For Controls in Order To Bring About Easy Transition

By D'ARCY O'DONNELL

Ottawa, Dec. 5 (CP) — The Commons is scheduled to hear more today in a controversial debate on whether the government should be allowed to retain for another year some of the emergency powers it held under the War Measures Act during the war years.

The subject set off heated and noisy argument in the Commons yesterday as discussion continued on second reading of a bill to give the government special emergency powers for the post-war period. The Government and the C.C.F. members found themselves teamed up in support of the measure against vigorous critics in the Progressive Conservative and Independent ranks.

Strongest support for the measure was expressed by Agriculture Minister Gardiner and M. J. Coldwell, C.C.F. leader, who upheld the need for controls in order to bring about a smooth transition from war to peace.

Mr. Gardiner used much of his time in criticizing a speech by John Hackett (P.C.-Stanstead), who said that Canada could not afford to taper off in the matter of controls, nor could she get back to normal without some turbulence, some inconvenience.

"We, the members of the government believe, that by acting sensibly we can get away from this war in Canada without turbulence, and we intend to try to so conduct the affairs of Canada, in getting ourselves from the war into a period of established peace, that turbulence will not be necessary within the Dominion," said Mr. Gardiner.

"Of course, I think he is correct when he says that we cannot get away from it without experiencing some inconvenience; and this inconvenience the people of Canada are prepared to meet, even the inconvenience of the continuation of those controls which are necessary to bridge us over from the period of war into the period of peace."

Mr. Coldwell urged critics of the bill to put themselves in the position of the government and ask themselves what they would do. If the C.C.F. was in power it would do what every other British Empire country had done and pass legislation necessary to carry the country through an orderly transition period.

Among the critics of the bill were P. E. Gagnon (Ind. Chicoutimi); Maxime Raymond (BP—Beauharnois — Laprairie); Anthony Hlynka (SC—Vegreville); King Hazen (PC—Saint John — Albert); Russell Boucher (PC—Carleton); Donald Fleming (PC—Toronto Eglinton) and Maj. E. D. Fulton (PC—Kamloops).

J. F. Pouliot (Ind. L—Temiscouta) asked for a return to parliament of its full powers and Jean Lesage (L—Montmagny — L'Islet) argued that what was happening in the United States where there were no controls was sufficient proof that Canada should extend the emergency powers of the government.

The House discussed the emergency powers bill after a morning sitting spent considering a measure to increase from $100,000,000 to $750,000,000 the amount the government may loan to Allied nations under the Export Credits Insurance Act.

NOISY SESSION—Page 6

Elderly Tobacconist Beats Masked Man Almost Into Unconsciousness

Acton, Ont., Dec. 5 (CP) — In a desperate struggle in his bedroom yesterday C. K. Browne, 75-year-old tobacconist, beat almost into unconsciousness a masked man 45 years his junior. Browne disarmed his would-be robber and held him at the point of the revolver he took from the man until help arrived.

Mr. Browne is only five feet five inches in height and weighs 145 pounds. Edmund Scarr, 29, of Owen Sound, held in Milton jail on a charge of attempted armed robbery is five feet nine inches tall and weighs 150 pounds.

Browne said he received a blow on the head as he was making his bed in a room in the back of his shop. When he raised himself off the floor he was confronted by a masked man brandishing a revolver.

"This is a holdup," the gunman said.

Browne swung his fist at the gunman's jaw. The gunman hit him on the head with the butt of the revolver.

Browne slumped to the floor on his knees and began pounding Browne's head with the gun.

"I'll kill you," the man screamed.

Browne said he managed to get up and made a lunge for the gunman, hitting him with his fist. Browne then grabbed his wrist and twisted the gun from him. His assailant bolted for the door but Browne tackled him at the doorway, shouting for help.

The shouts attracted a garage mechanic and several others on the street. They entered the store to find Browne holding the revolver and standing over the beaten man. They held the man without difficulty till police arrived.

Browne was an hour late for work this morning. "I was late because I had a slight headache," he confessed. Eight stitches had been needed to close wounds in his head.

Planned German Aggression Against Czechs Reviewed

Goering Bullied Hacha With Bombing Threats

By DANIEL DE LUCE

Nuernberg, Dec. 5 (AP) — Hermann Goering shattered Czechoslovakia's last will to resist Hitler's war machine with the ultimatum that "half of Prague would lie in ruins from aerial bombardment within two hours," the international military tribunal was told today.

Prosecutors at the trial of Goering and 19 other Nazi leaders accused of war crimes laid before the court official German records and French and British diplomatic reports disclosing that Nazi pattern of threats, treachery and broken promises that crushed the Czechs only five months after the Munich pact led Prime Minister Chamberlain to proclaim "peace in our time."

In cold detail, the prosecution disclosed the ordeal of Czechoslovakian President Emil Hacha when he was imperiously summoned to Berlin the day before German troops marched across the border March 14, 1939, and was told that Prague would be bombed if the Czechs fired on the Nazi invaders.

Goering bullied Hacha with the bombing threat if he did not immediately "invite" German troops into his country, it was revealed in the report of French Ambassador Robert Coulondre read into the evidence.

The prosecution then read British Ambassador Sir Neville Henderson's report that Goering in an interview later did not deny the threat but gave as his alibi that he intended only to unleach the Luftwaffe "if German lives were lost."

Under this pressure, German records showed, President Hacha finally gave in and the Germans poured over the border without opposition the next day.

Hitler's seizure of Czechoslovakia was described as "pure international banditry" by the prosecution which introduced documents showing how the Fuehrer called Czech and Slovak leaders to Berlin.

Hungary's part in the partition of the little country was shown by a letter to Hitler from Admiral Nicholas Horthy, regent of Hungary, in which he told of plans to manufacture a "frontier incident" March 16, 1939, as a pretext for the invasion of Ruthenia, one of the Czechoslovak provinces.

Horthy, however, did not need to fake an "incident." Hitler's troops moved into Czechoslovakia March 14, 1939, and Hungary took the opportunity to seize Ruthenia with negligible opposition.

The stage for invasion was set March 13, 1939, prosection documents disclosed, when Hitler ordered Slovak Premier Joseph Tiso to Berlin and threatened to let Hungary invade Slovakia unless Tiso renounced union with the Czechs immediately. Two of the trial defendants, Field Marshal Wilhelm Keitel and former Foreign Minister Ribbentrop, were present at the meeting. Tiso gave in.

NAPANEE DENTIST DIES

Napanee, Dec. 5 — Dr. Ross V. McLaughlin, 52, dentist here for 27 years, died last night of a heart ailment. Born in Athens, he graduated from Toronto Dental College in 1917 and served in the first Great War with the Dental Corps overseas. He is survived by one daughter, Mrs. H. Gaulin, and one son, Richard, both of Napanee.

Former Archbishop Of Canterbury Dies Suddenly

London, Dec. 5 (CP) — Lord Lang, 81-year-old former Archbishop of Canterbury who was a leader in forcing the abdication of King Edward VIII in 1936, died unexpectedly here today.

An active member of the House of Lords since his resignation as head of the Church of England, in 1942, the churchman collapsed near a railway station and died before he reached hospital.

The high point in the career of Scottish-born Dr. Cosmo Gordon Lang came in 1937 when he crowned King George VI and Queen Elizabeth in Westminster Abbey. With Stanley Baldwin, then Prime Minister, he headed the forces which brought about the abdication of Edward VIII, who became the Duke of Windsor, because of the latter's love for Wallis Warfield Simpson, American divorcee.

A bachelor, Lord Lang was the brother of Dr. Marshall Lang, who was elected Moderator of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland in 1935. It was the first time in history that brothers had contemporaneously filled the roles of leaders of the Church of England and the Church of Scotland.

Lord Lang was active up to the time of his death. He spoke in the House of Lords Monday during debates on a hydro-electric program. He appeared in excellent health when he left his home, Kings Cottage, Kew Green, this morning to keep a luncheon appointment.

Lord Lang was the first Archbishop in English history to outlive his successor. He took part in the funeral of Dr. William Temple, Archbishop of Canterbury from 1942 to 1944. Present incumbent is Dr. Geoffrey Fisher.

Lord Lang's part in the abdication of King Edward was perhaps the most prominent and controversial role in his career.

In October, 1936, Lord Lang and the Archbishop of York declined an invitation to St. James Palace to a dinner at which Mrs. Simpson was to be present.

It was later reported that Lord Lang threatened to withhold comunion from Edward and that the King replied: "Please remember that I am the head of your organization."

On Nov. 17, the Archbishop presided at a secret meeting of the House of Lords which discussed the romance of the King and Mrs. Simpson. On Dec. 10 Edward abdicated.

Later in December, Lord Lang in a radio broadcast called for a return to religion, attacking Russia, birth control and Mrs. Simpson. He rebuked Edward "for having sought his happiness in a manner inconsistent with the Christian principles of marriage and within a circle whose standards and ways of life are alien to all the best instincts and traditions of his people."

He also refused to allow any form of Church of England service at the Duke's wedding. Edward and Mrs. Simpson were married in France by a Church of England curate who was sharply rebuked for performing the ceremony.

Considerable criticism of the Archbishop was raised in following months and the Bishop of Durham said: "I was always trained to believe that the Church of England is governed by the several bishops reigning in their several dioceses. I now find it is come to be some kind of novel body governed by the British Broadcasting Corporation and by two archbishops, Canterbury and York. I do not like it."

He was educated at Glasgow and Oxford Universities, graduating with a Bachelor of Arts degree from Balliol College, Oxford, in 1886.

Injunction Restraining City From Conveying Property To Legion Received by Council

City Solicitor Authorized to Take Necessary Action to Protect City's Interest

An injunction restraining the city council from conveying to the trustees of the Canadian Legion a piece of property to be used for a Community Hall was issued by George DeVuyst, and the members of the council at the regular session held on Tuesday evening instructed the city solicitor to take the necessary action to protect the city's interests. It was first decided to appoint a small committee to act with the solicitor in this matter out Ald. Armstrong was of the opinion that the whole council was affected by the injunction and that a decision should be made as to whether the injunction should be fought or not. The council was agreed that the issue should be contested. It is not likely that the case will be heard before the Supreme Court sitting at a date to be set early in the New Year. The Canadian Legion was also made a party to the suit.

Information Requested.

The Legion was instructed by the city solicitor to supply to him the names, occupation and addresses of the trustees of the Canadian Legion, Belleville oranch so that the proper by-law may be drawn to convey the property. A great deal of time was devoted to safety measures to protect the children coming to and from school in all parts of the city. An accident near Ann Street School some time ago brought the matter before council. After the discussion it was decided to put a traffic light at the corner of Dundas and Ann Streets, which will be controlled by the principal of the school and will operate only when the children are coming to and from school.

Signs Suggested.

Ald. Follwell suggested that senior pupils of the school be incorporated into a traffic patrol and under instruction from the police department in traffic control and they act at certain times of the day. Ald. Harvey thought that the Board of Education should take some responsibility while Ald. Chamberlain suggested that signs be placed near the schools limiting the speed to 15 m.p.h. and that teachers supervise the crossing of the children and take the numbers of any cars exceeding that limit and have them summoned to court.

Ald. Clapp expressed the view that traffic lights should be placed in the vicinity of all schools and work at certain times. "We have been voted in by the people to look after the safety of the children and it is the council's responsibility to control traffic within the limits." Ald. Allin corroborated this sentiment. Ald Hyde said "this is our job." Ald. Follwell stated the control had never been tried out and he was sure that it would work. "We may not get the lights for some time but I am certainly in favor of the lights," said Ald. Follwell. The Mayor was of the opinion that the council should accept the responsibility. Ald. Butler was sure one light was not enough on Dundas Street because he said "the motorist will try to beat one light." Ald. Clarke thought the main crossing for the children was at William Street.

Tenders Asked.

Tenders will be asked for the repainting of signs belonging to the city and the works regarding the complaint from James Alexander will be completed at the earliest possible date. The building by-law will be amended to prohibit the connection of any drainage, other than sewage, to the sanitary sewers. The clerk was instructed to advise J. M. Baker, clerk of Hastings, that the pumper in which the municipality was interested in will be turned back to the War Assets Corporation and that the municipality should communicate directly with this organization re the purchase of a pumper. The cheque sent by the municipality will be returned.

No-Parking Signs Refused.

Parking signs for E. Lucas at 336 Front Street, will not be granted according to a motion passed by the council. Ald. Follwell went on record of favoring this move, "because," he said, "Mr. Lucas employs a number of men, their gas is bought in the city and other taxis were utilizing stands in the city. He also pays a business tax."

Ald. Trudeau was in favor of one space but not two, while Ald. Chamberlain stated he was entitled to some consideration but certainly not four parking spaces. Mr. Lucas stated in his letter that he was prepared to purchase the no-parking signs.

Ald. Allin suggested that all taxis have a central depot and calls to be taken there.

Number of Inquiries

A number of inquiries were made by Ald. Allin asking if the city was given permission to go on the east playgrounds with a bulldozer to move the earth for the erection of a rink. Ald. Trudeau stated, "Not there by my permission", but Ald. Clapp, who is in charge of the rinks, thought that the city engineer had been in touch with the Board of Education. Ald. Harvey asked if any arrangements had been made to put a rink in Foster Ward and Ald. Clapp said that the committee had not considered that angle believing that the four rinks in the city would take care of the children in Foster Ward. Ald. Trudeau asked Ald. Clapp if the necessary men were available to supervise the rinks and Ald. Clapp stated that the engineer and foreman should provide the help.

One Tractor Arrives

Ald. Woodley asked when the snow plow would be in the city. Ald. Trudeau stated that everything possible was being done. One tractor has arrived and the other is expected soon. Ald. Follwell wanted to know why the decorated lights had not been turned on on December first when ordered by council and he thought the city should not have to pay for the delay. The Clerk stated that the Public Utilities had been notified in time. Ald. Thompson complained of the poor condition of the streets on the west hill and Ald. Trudeau stated everything has been done that could be done. Ald. Follwell stated the streets on the east hill were fine. Ald. Thompson said, "That is just what I am complaining of."

Mayor Follwell congratulated the newly-elected members of the council and expressed regrets at the departure of Aldermen Clapp and Allin. He stated their counsel had been much appreciated during his first term as Mayor. Ald. Clapp said seven years were enough for him and wished for the council success. "The voters probably did me a favor on Monday", said Ald. Allin. Several by-laws transferring property were passed.

Urgent Need for Canadian Cheese Producers to Study Export Markets Says Speaker

Well-Planned and Effective Advertising Would Help the Situation Greatly

Need of well-planned and effective advertising which would make Canadian cheese a byword throughout the Motherland and thereby greatly increase sales of Canadian cheese on the overseas market was stressed by Prof. A. L. Gibson, of Kemptville Agricultural School as he addressed the Central Ontario Cheese Makers' Association convention in Belleville on Tuesday afternoon.

Speaking on the general picture of the cheese industry in Eastern Ontario, Dr. Gibson declared there was an urgent need for Canadian cheese producers to study their export market. Very little cheese reaches the British consumer as Canadian Cheddar and its identity is practically unknown to Old Country people, according to the speaker.

Quality Must be Watched

To achieve increased favor on the British market, however, the quality of Canadian cheese would have to be closely watched and if possible increased. An improvement in the general standard of milk received at the cheese factory was needed, it being suggested that this effort should come from the cheese patrons themselves through setting of minimum standards for all cheese milk at time of delivery to the factory.

Second to milk improvement, Dr. Gibson stated there should be a general improvement or cheese factories, buildings and equipment which must be brought up to date as regards to sanitation.

Advocates Uniform Price

The price to be received by the farmer for milk for cheese manufacture came in for brief discussion by the speaker who declared this would be a large factor in deciding the future of the cheese industry. He advocated the principle of a uniform price for all milk at the farm produced under proper sanitary conditions declaring this to be the only sound basis upon which a great dairy industry could be built.

F. E. Wright, representative of the Montreal Provisions Trade Board, spoke briefly at the convention paying tribute to the part which Canadian women had played in maintaining dairy production during the war period.

Many Canadian farms and cheese factories owed much to the co-operation shown by the women for the fact that they are now "going concerns", he stated. Mr. Wright also paid tribute to the sponsors of the local British Empire Dairy Show and complimented district makers for the splendid quality of cheese shown at the exhibition.

Extended Welcome

Rev. J. Grant Sparling, rector of Christ Church, opened the afternoon's proceeding with the pronouncement of invocation, while Mayor Frank S. Follwell extended the welcome of the city to the visiting cheese makers and dairy officials attending the show. Warden of the County, J. Fred Wilson, welcomed those in attendance on behalf of the County of Hastings and likewise paid tribute to the quality of cheese shown at the exhibition.

Civic Reception Committee Needs Funds For Work

Although hostilities in Europe have been ended for several months there are many thousands of Canadian armed services personnel still overseas.

And as long as there are members of the Canadian Army, Navy and Air Force overseas, or serving outside the Dominion, local boys will continue to be returned to Canada pending their discharge. By the same token trains at Belleville will have to be met and comforts provided for these brave lads who were willing to sacrifice all that democracy might live.

At the cessation of hostilities a Civic Reception Committee was formed in Belleville at the request of the Mayor, the duties which have been to welcome home the personnel of the armed forces. Since that time this work has been carried on by the ladies' organizations of the Army and Navy Veterans and the ladies' Auxiliary of the Canadian Legion.

This work consists of meeting all trains and serving the returning boys with hot coffee, milk and sandwiches, presenting them with cigarettes and providing transportation to their homes. All this has been done "for free."

However, it has meant an expenditure of approximately $2,000 per year and funds are now needed to carry on the good work. The work is sincerely appreciated by returning members of the forces so with the inauguration of a Reception Committee Fund an appeal has gone out for donations to the cause.

Any or all donations to the above fund will be gratefully appreciated, according to committee chairman Harry Rollins. Donations to assist in the work may be forwarded to Treasurer of the fund, Newton Thompson, care of Canadian National Railways, Belleville.

MAJOR WILLIAM CROUTER McCUTCHEON, who recently received his discharge from the Canadian Dental Corp after 6 years service, 4½ overseas. Dr. McCutcheon has opened his office at 219 Pinnacle Street, formerly occupied by the St. John Ambulance. He is the elder son of Mr. and Mrs. L. W. McCutcheon, of Ottawa, both formerly of Belleville.

Cheese Makers Elect D. Rowe As President

Well-known Campbellford district cheese maker, Douglas Rowe, who each year is successful in winning awards at the British Empire Dairy Show at Belleville was elected as president of the Central Ontario Cheese Makers' Association when officers for the new year were elected Tuesday evening.

Vice president of the association is Max Remington of Newburgh, while directors are Horace Palmer of Plainfield; Thos. Heath, Stirling, Bert Jones, Tweed, Harold Henderson of Campbellford district and Gene Vandusen. Auditors are J. H. Wilkinson and John Hall.

Awards and prizes won at the British Empire Dairy Show were presented to winning cheese makers at the meeting with Honorary President J. L. Irwin doing the honors.

Guest speaker for the evening session was W. Frank Jones, prsident of the National Dairy Council, Toronto, who discussed the immediate future of the dairy industry in Canada.

Declaring that no one phase of the dairy industry could be ultimately successful at the expense of the other, Mr. Jones stated the three problems confronting the industry were the future of government subsidies, the export market, and an expanded domestic market.

Cited Increase

He cited the increase in the Canadian production of milk which had been noted from 1939 until 1944, the last year for which complete figures were available, and broke down production figures for the various branches of the dairy industry.

Speaking of the future Mr. Jones stated plans must be made to provide for greater exports and an increased home consumption of dairy products.

The matterr is not an easy one he said. "It is tied in with long-term agreements, exchange difficulties, shipping and a host of other problems.

The domestic market for dairy products depended to a large extent on continued high purchasing power he said. "High wartime family earnings had proven that Canadians could consume great quantities of milk in many forms, in fact spent a third of every food dol. on dairy products Army rations experience for instance, had resulted in consumption of about 11 pounds of cheese per year per man, compared with about four pounds for the population as a whole."

"There is a new realization of the food value of dairy products in Canada, and it is the best sign for the future of our industry. This is true not only in Canada but in other countries as well, countries which cannot possibly produce all the milk they require."

The cheese industry of Ontario and Quebec, said Mr. Jones, produced a product in demand for export, and cheese was one of the best forms in which we could export surplus milk. He asked all branches of industry to take an interest in this problem.

Representatives of both Western and Eastern Ontario Cheese Makers Associations were heard briefly at the meeting as was Mack Robertson, proprietor of Belleville Creameries.

Silent and Verbal Tribute Paid Late James Haggerty, Wm. Linn by County Council

Warden Fred Wilson Expresses Sympathy of Entire Membership in Opening Session

Silent and verbal tribute was paid to one of its former members and a county official by the Hastings County Council at the opening meeting of the December session which got under way in Shire Hall on Tuesday afternoon.

Members, at the request of Warden J. Fred Wilson, stood in silence with bowed heads for two minutes in reverent tribute to the memories of the late County Treasurer James Haggerty and the late Reeve of Marmora, William Linn.

"Today we mourn the loss of a member of this council and an official of the county," Warden Wilson told the council following opening remarks of welcome to the session. "We feel their loss heavily, indeed."

"The late James Haggerty was a tower of strength to this council and to the County of Hastings. To know him was to love him and none appreciated his work more than did this body. His counsel was always well given and as well received, for he worked hard for his native county and always had its interest at heart. He loved to be around men and especially around members of this body when it was in session."

Mourn Loss Deeply.

"We mourn his loss deeply and he will be greatly missed in this council and in this county for many a long day. We have all expressed our personal sympathy to the family and we now take this opportunity of offering our deepest regrets at his passing and our sincere sympathy to his family as a council."

Referring to the passing of the late Reeve of Marmora, Warden Wilson told his council "that we all admired and respected him. He was one of the oldest members of this body and we all had learned to look up to him and ask for his advice."

"The views of the late reeve of Marmora were always well thought out and candidly expressed," the Warden continued, "and we had learned to respect his opinions even if at times we did not agree with them."

Wardel Wilson was of the opinion that the death of the late reeve's son at Hong Kong hastened his end. "While he very seldom mentioned the fact," he said, "we know that it affected him to a great extent. Inwardly it was a terrific blow to him, one from which he never recovered. As a council we tender our deepest sympathy to the family."

Past Year Difficult.

Speaking along other lines, the warden pointed out that 1945 has been an unusual year for Hastings County. It had been a difficult one for some, especially the farmers, due to the independability of the weather.

Hastings, however, being in the main a dairying community had not fared so badly as some of her neighboring counties who rely on plant and grain crops for subsistence. "Our production of milk and cheese and butter was above that of last year due to the fact that continued wet weather kept pastures in good condition."

There is, he warned, a shortage of grain here and farmers will have to buy or import sufficient to carry them through the winter.

He urged farmer residents of the county to maintain production to the best of their ability. During the war years, he said Canada had sent millions of pounds of cheese and bacon overseas and had established a fine market not only through quantity but quality as well. "We now can procure shipping space and we have the market. Let us maintain the high quality and quantity of production that marked Canadian efforts during the years of war."

Look to Canada.

"Canadian foodstuffs will find their way to Europe and are doing so already" the warden said. "The peoples of those devastated countries are looking to Canada to supply their needs along these lines and we should put forth every effort to see that they get them even if we go short of certain supplies ourselves for a time."

"We have been fortunate in the Dominion inasmuch as we went through the war without a shell bursting on our shores. Possibly the next war, pray God it never comes, will see us less fortunate what with atomic bombs and other scientific achievements let loose on the world. Half the cities of the globe would be destroyed before the war would be declared."

Warden Wilson paid tribute to the men and women of the armed services of Hastings County who did a magnificent job. He asked members to revere the memory of those who paid the supreme sacrifice.

Strong Connecting Link.

Referring to Mr. J. O. Herity at present seriously ill in hospital, the warden pointed out that "he had always been a strong connecting link between rural and urban residents of Hastings, and a great friend of this county council." He suggested that a letter from the body be forwarded to Mr. Herity with the council's wishes for a speedy and complete recovery.

The opening session was very brief as special committees were slated to go into session. Nine applications for the position of county treasurer were read and received by members. The appointment which must be made by by-law, will be announced at the Friday afternoon session.

The Warden also spoke of the British Empire Cheese Show now in session here and urged members to visit it. He also pointed out that council should attend the cheese convention banquet as a representative body.

The warden's annual dinner is being held in Tabernacle Church on Thursday evening.

THANKS!

The management of Superior Dry Cleaners Limited on this our 10th. Anniversary, desire to thank all our customers for their patronage.

While our service during the trying war years was not as satisfactory as we would have desired we are proud of the fact that thousands of our service personnel got their cleaning requirements done at half price. And also of the fact that we have been able to re-establish five of them on their return to civilian life.

DRESS DESIGNERS GO BACK TO 1860 FOR INSPIRATION

Swing Away From Tailored Lines to Frills and Basques of Last Century Noted at London Show

By DENISE DALTROFF
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London (CP)—British dress designers have turned back the pages of history for inspiration in the swing away from the severe tailored lines of recent years.

They have brought out and combined the frills and basques of the fashion plates of the late 60s, the bustles of the 80s and the balloon sleeves of the 90s.

These designs were shown at the second of a series of mannequin parades sponsored by the Drapers' Organizer, Fashions and Fabrics. In the ballroom of the Mayfair Hotel, 126 models of spring and summer styles made of British rayon were shown at the rate of two a minute and these will be available for home and export trade.

The desire for silhouette lines was obtained by a rounded shoulder-line and emphasis on the hip-line drapery, sometimes achieved by the use of padding or a bustle. Other designs had a flared basque, a pleated sash or a full skirt gathered in and attached to the bodice at the hipline.

Low necklines were favored with close-fitting gathered bodices. Sleeves varied between the new cap sleeves which just cover the shoulder, the three-quarter length or the big dolman sleeves.

Elaborate Detail.

One frock was of pale blue rayon with gathers on the bodice spreading out from an oblong-shaped centre ruching. Black cire ribbon decorated the skirt, sleeves and bodice of a black afternoon dress, while plastic embroidered edges were used on another.

Light colored three-quarter length coats over dark skirts were a popular feature. The coat skirts were pleated all around.

Specially woven black nylon which looked like taffeta was used for an evening gown. It had a low neckline, short drawn up sleeves and the skirt was drawn-up tightly round the figure with two puffs forming a bustle at the back.

With the return of evening wear designers foresee the demand for the formal afternoon frock again and many seek to popularize a mid-calf skirt length which they say is necessary for true elegance. They predict that the favorite spring and summer shades will be light grey, lime green, lavender and black.

Bonnet-shaped hats were worn with many models while a new style of turban was introduced with small headpiece which came low into the back of the head and then spread out into a puff behind each ear.

LIE DETECTOR SHOWS HAGGERTY "NOT GUILTY" OF CRIME

Raymond Haggerty, of Windsor, Ont., attempting to clear himself of a conviction of attempted murder and armed robbery, is given the lie detector test at Windsor, Ont., by Dr. Leonard Keeler, LEFT, of Chicago, Ill., and Alex Gregory former Detroit police detective. It was the first time such a test has been given a convicted criminal in Canada. Dr. Keeler announced the test would indicate Haggerty didn't do that particular crime, but that there was no doubt he was a bad type of psychopathic.

Matron Declares Insanity's Shadow Darkened Life

San Francisco, Dec. 5 (AP) — Mrs. Annie Irene Mansfeldt, society matron charged with murdering the nurse she suspected of stealing her husband's love, testified Monday the shadow of insanity darkened her life.

Taking the stand for the first time, Mrs. Mansfeldt told the jury of seven men and five women:

As a girl she was forced to share a bed with her insane grandmother, who once sought to strangle her.

A physician informed her she should "be in an institution for the insane."

Her late husband, Dr. John H. Mansfeldt, who took his life after the Oct. 4 slaying of nurse Vada Martin, was under a psychiatrist's care after the First Great War.

Her brother-in-law became gradually insane and was committed to an institution.

Today Mrs. Mansfeldt was expected to tell her version of the events preceding the pistol slaying of Mrs. Martin.

In a tense prelude to the accused society leader's appearance yesterday, her three children — John, 14; Terry, 12; and Irene, 15—testified that their mother fell to the floor screaming the morning of the killing and appeared dazed and not fully conscious of her actions.

Defence attorneys have contended throughout the trial, now in its second week, that Dr. Mansfeldt administered strong sedatives to his wife on the eve of Mrs. Martin's death and that she was not in full control of herself

Sheriff's Officers Find Porch Jammed With Sympathizers

Toronto, Dec. 5 (CP)—Twenty friends and neighbors prevented sheriff's officers from evicting Mr. and Mrs. George Staughton from their home here Tuesday.

The officers found the front porch jammed with sympathizers and timbers blocking the front and back doors.

Staughton, recently discharged from the army, has been house hunting since he learned the six-room house the family were occupying had been sold.

The sheriff and three helpers advised the family that police reinforcements would be called.

Dewar Ferguson, acting President of the Canadian Seaman's Union, who was present, offered to telephone for 20 members of his union to join the group.

May Recommend Increase in West Wheat Acreage

By GEORGE KITCHEN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

Ottawa, Dec. 5 (CP)—Delegates to the Dominion-Provincial Agricultural Conference today will decide upon their recommendations to the Canadian farmer on how best to plan his 1946 production to meet the almost unlimited needs of the world market.

On the basis of discussions thus far, it appeared possible the conference may recommend an increase in western wheat acreage to meet the suggestions of prairie delegates that a one-year, short-term policy of increased acreage be followed to establish better Canada's position in the export market.

The Federal government's view, placed before the opening meeting Monday by Agriculture Minister Gardiner, was that wheat output could be boosted without increasing acreage if wheat was sown next year on summer fallow, land which had had a rest from production and would be more fertile.

Because of the urgent overseas demand for meat, he stressed the production of feed grains, particularly barley, and said the government's suggestions would achieve the twin aims of increasing production of wheat and feed grains.

Yesterday, the 60 delegates, representing Federal and Provincial Agricultural Departments and leading farmer organizations, heard a series of reports running through the entire range of Canadian agriculture—dairy production, tobacco, seed grains, oil-bearing crops, fruits, honey and maple sugar products.

Considerable discussion arose from a report by Dr. F. H. Lehberg, oils and fats administrator, which stressed the current world shortage of oils and fats and indicated the need for increased production of flaxseed, source of linseed oil, and of other oil-bearing crops.

This shortage, said Dr. Lehberg, reached into the employment field because of the need of paint and other industries for linseed oil and touched the Canadian home because it curtailed to production of lard and shortening.

GIRL STOWAWAYS FOUND

Boston, Dec. 5 (AP)—Two, pretty 19-year-old British girls who slipped aboard an American ship before it left Liverpool, arrived here Monday and were turned over to immigration authorities. The stowaways, Joan Scott and Mary Curtis, both of Birkenhead, were discovered in a hold when the ship was four days out of Liverpool. They explained they had decided to make their fortunes in the United States.

230 JAPS SAIL FROM SHANGHAI

Shanghai, Dec. 5 (AP)— Two hundred thirty Japanese, ranging from wrinkled ancients to babies, crowded into the dark hold of the merchant ship Meiyu Maru Tuesday and sailed for Japan—the first repatriates from Shanghai's colony of 300,000 Japanese.

BROWNS' BREAD LIMITED
OLD HOME PRODUCTS
442 EASTERN AVENUE TORONTO, ONTARIO

November 29th, 1945.

To our Customers:

On Monday last our well-known yellow and red bread wagons and trucks failed to make an appearance on the City streets. This is the first time in the long history of our Company that this has happened and we deeply regret the inconvenience caused you.

Until recently, the history and growth of our Company has been marked by a continuous record of happy labour relationships. We have never opposed the formation and establishment of voluntary employee organizations - unions freely formed to represent the men and women of Browns' Bread.

During 1944 the A.F. of L. Union organised our employees, secured bargaining rights and in due time placed before us, through its representatives from Chicago, an agreement which, amongst its clauses, included the "Union Shop." To be more specific, the proposed clauses read in part as follows:

> "The Employer will employ and continue in employment.... > only members in good standing in the Union.
>
> "The Employer shall engage all new help.... > through the office of the Union...."

These clauses we cannot agree to. Our firm conviction is that every employee should be free to join a union or to refrain from joining, as he chooses. Furthermore, we strongly protest against the idea that an employee must pay toll to an outside organisation for the privilege of working for Browns' Bread. If a man desires to do so, that is another matter. It is his privilege, but we insist that he shall not be forced to do so and certainly not by the Company.

We are convinced that the stand we have taken in refusing to yield to the Union demands is in the best interests of the Public and the Employees, as well as the Company.

We sincerely hope that the present difficulties will soon clear away and that we will once again be able to give you the service we have been so proud to render in the past.

Sincerely yours,
BROWNS' BREAD LIMITED

Scientist is Confident

While many persons are wondering about the future of the earth since the discovery of using atomic energy as revealed in the ability to construct what is known as an atomic bomb, Dr. Vannevar Bush who directed the development has predicted that it will take a long time to set up atomic controls. He sees however in the present condition of the world the nations all are wanting a long period of peace in order to recover from the results of the late struggle. In this long period of peace he declares there is time to develop the necessary control machinery. In his opinion two powers armed with atomic bombs would not think of going to war against one another because the consequences would be "too terrible."

Dr. Bush said that he knew the atomic bomb would end the war and he is confident that there is no danger of war breaking out until this problem of control can be worked out.

History is Written

The present age has seen history of its own time written in the actions of the nations at war. Records which have been made public and a vast amount of documentary detail on the events of this age will be handed down to posterity. The trials of enemy leaders accused of war crimes will become history.

Historians in past ages have had a heavy task as the periods of which they treated were largely of ages gone before, with a consequent lack of any great number of records. But today there are records which will throw a flood of light upon the deeds and the characteristics of the enemy which will enable the future historian to reach conclusions. The historian of old had to depend upon facts, traditions, to arrive at his conclusion. But in the future eras there will be plenty of information lying reposed in reports upon which the historian may draw information for his conclusions.

This has been an unusual age. It has seen history being made in a shortened period of time and history will be able to draw upon an abundance of its documents and records.

Safety in (Record) Numbers

A desperate listener, a British subject serving in a ship overseas, has written, more in self-defence than in sorrow, to ask the BBC to send him without delay the numbers of some records he had heard played in BBC overseas programs. His adventures abroad in asking for these by name have convinced him of the underlying truth of the proverb about discretion being the better part. This is what he says:—

"I walked into a record shop a short time ago and asked for "Orpheus in the Underworld." The Oriental behind the counter said: 'He's gone out, he be back plenty soon quick,' so I just had to laugh and walk out. Some weeks later I was in the Argentine and asked for the same record. The assistant went, as I thought, to look for it but came back with half a dozen vigilantes (the Argentine police), and my pals and I spent the next half hour trying to convince them that we didn't belong to any political party. We managed to get away in the end, and I decided to find out from you the number of the record and only ask for it by that."

Man's Prime

Composers, athletes, billiard champions, authors, male cinema stars, philosophers, explorers, painters, scientists all achieve their top performances in their early thirties. This discouraging news for ambitious oldsters of 40 was reported by Psychologist Harvey C. Lehman of Ohio University in the current Scientific Monthly.

Professor Lehman, 65, has long devoted himself to a very special study: at what age are man's creative powers at their peak? Talented men, he reports, keep up the quality of their output fairly well until about 50. But the peak of greatness occurs much earlier. Although there are many individual exceptions, most of the great operas, novels, paintings, scientific discoveries, etc., have been produced by men just rounding 30. This, he finds, coincides with the age at which men sire most children and break most sports records.

Averaging it all up, Professor Lehman arrived at a precise figure for the prime of life: 33.

World Speed Records Held by Britain

With the Meteor's six hundred and six miles per hour flight Britain now holds world speed records on water, land and in the air. On the water Sir Malcolm Campbell established the world motorboat record when he made his 141.74 miles per hour run over Coniston Water in August 1939. In the Atlantic the fastest passage in both directions was made by the Queen Mary: 21 hours forty-five minutes from Bishop Rock to Ambrose Light and twenty hours forty-two minutes from Ambrose to Bishop (1938). On land the world road record was won by John Cobb at Bonneville Flats, Utah, in August 1939, when he achieved a speed of 368.85 miles per hour in a British car powered by a Rolls Royce engine. The rail record is held by the London North Eastern Railway — "Mallard" which in July 1939 achieved 125 miles per hour.

Museum Not an Attic

Material objects with their associated data form the core of all museums. Their treatment and scope, however, must be adapted to serve the curator's aim. For example, the Royal Ontario Museum uses its large collections of Canadian and foreign objects for scholarly study and for popular education. The local museum must carefully restrict itself to those stored objects that illustrate the immediate environment and human history of the region. However, in areas where a single industry prevails, a more detailed treatment of one subject might be necessary.

The curator of a small museum must be a trained man who can wisely select objects. He must be courageous enough to refuse kookaburras, assegais and two-headed calves, if they are unnecessary to his purpose.

Telescoped History

(Manchester Guardian)

Statesmen and economists meet, argue and disagree, but what may have most significance for the future at this moment is hidden and unheard of — the teams of scientists in the larger countries who labor night and day to put their governments in full possession of the atomic secret. Sir Stafford Cripps did well to devote a speech to forcing the challenge of the new bomb on the world. He spoke plainly of what he called the "most disastrous discovery ever made by mankind." . . . He answered those who are sceptical about international control. It is true that not long ago schemes of world organization were properly criticized as utopian; they seemed for the future, not for the present. But, as he said, "the atomic bomb has telescoped history;" if we wish to preserve civilization we must solve now problems that until August we could linger over, waiting for the nations to grow up.

Hospital Rebuilding in London

A rebuilding scheme to cost £2,000,000 ($8,860,000) has been planned for Guy's Hospital, London. War damage through enemy action reduced the hospital to 300 beds. It is proposed to add another 700 beds. The block containing the 300 beds and the surgical block were partially destroyed during the war, but were not completely put out of action. One of the oldest parts of the building is to be demolished and a new building constructed on the site.

Empire Dead Nearly Half Million

(W. L. Clark in Windsor Star)

The United Kingdom alone had approximately the same number of killed in action as the United States in all theatres of war. The total comes to some 250,000 dead for each country.

When the British Empire dead, including civilians, are counted, it brings the British total to nearly 500,000.

There's room enough for sect and clan,
For high and low,
But from the fellowship of man
Contempt should go.

There's room enough for faith and prayer,
For meek and great,
For differing choice of garb and fare,
But not for hate.

London Letter

By FRED BACKHOUSE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, Dec. 5 (CP)—Do you want to buy 1,000 Indian birds' eggs; or maybe you have a spare bed-sitting room for a "retired Ambassador (British)?"

They tell Britain about things like these in the "personal column" of the Times of London

Otherwise deadly-serious, the empire's most dignified journal daily lets itself go in a fascinating front-page peepshow of the upper strata of British society to which most of its readers belong.

The personal column was always a source of hints of drama and heartache peculiar to 'agony' columns the world over, but paper shortage pruned it to something less than a column — to the dismay of avid readers.

Under Biblical quotation, inserted daily by The Times itself, there is still, however, a market for the curious desires of rich and conservative Britons and the not-so-high who want the ear of the "upper classes."

Like the musty perfume of a stately home of England, with its legions of faithful servants, was an announcement, by the clothworkers' company, that they were to dispense "Mrs. Elizabeth Heather's gift for £10 for six poor widows or 'decayed' housekeepers."

Combed from another issue was the appeal of a gentleman who wanted a man for "daily reading and discussion of morning papers; two hours, 10 shillings; good brains, references."

Startling among the offers of autographed cricket bats and fine sporting appeared another: "Wanted: Set of poker dice; also point 38 revolver."

Like many, this advertiser concealed his identity with a "box number," but at 15 shillings (about $3.40) for a minimum of two lines the ad was hardly likely to be an intentional joke.

Appeals for cures of curious ailments turn up in the column every other day. "Urgent," one such demand began. "During bombing over London nerves of pit of stomach and scalp have been affected, with loss of musical memory and concentration and other troubles; gentleman grateful for advice."

Sandwiched among the request for rare flies, the collection of 1,000 Indian birds' eggs ("offset?") the straight touches for a loan ("ex-guards officer needs £1,500 . . . absolutely no security"), are such quite thought-provoking ones as:

"Wanted: Life and times of Nollekins by J. T. Smith; edition cosse, 1895."

Who was Nollekins? Who wants to read about him? Those questions are unanswered.

More of The Times was the cry "semi-corpulent officer (27) wants three weeks' weight-reducing work, country (tree-cutting?) in exchange for accommodation."

This warrior soon discovered the man-power shortage. Three days later came "semi-corpulent officer is overwhelmed with hundreds of kind offers and finds it well-nigh impossible to reply at once."

MIDDLE INITIAL GIVEN

Detroit, Dec. 5 (AP)—The Federal Bureau of Investigation was temporarily non-plussed Monday when Edward Lyszczyk appeared with a friend to register souvenir pistols they picked up in Italy. His friend's name is also Edward Lyszczyk. Finger print experts solved the problem by giving one of the men a middle initial A. They didn't say which one.

Rehabilitation Subject of Talk At Kiwanis Club

Rehabilitation of the veteran was the subject of an interesting talk by E. B. "Tim" Reid of the Veterans' Affairs Department, Ottawa, to members of the Kiwanis Club at their weekly luncheon held at the Quinte Hotel on Tuesday. Mr. Reid gave a series of startling figures showing the amount of money that has been paid out to discharged veterans and the plans that have been made to rehabilitate him into civilian life. Lorne McDougall, the president, presided with Dick Kuntze collecting the fines and Vic White leading the community singing.

The president introduced the successful candidates at Monday's municipal elections and wished for them a successful two years in office. Announcement was also made of the Kiwanis party that will be held at Kiwanis Centre on Wednesday night. Norman Smith, chairman of the Vocational Guidance committee announced that Mr. Beatty of the department in Toronto would be the principal speaker for next week's luncheon.

Mr. Reid, who was introduced by Dougal Marshall, stated that the veteran should be well looked after that he should be given housing even if civilians had to give up some of their home privacy to accommodate them and now that unemployment was showing its ugly head, that businessmen should invest in veterans and he was sure that the investment would return a hundred fold. He stated the veteran was Canada's greatest natural resource and that nearly 1,000,000 of them were returned or are returning to civilian street. He told of the amount of money given the veteran on discharge, which included clothing allowance, a week's pay, gratuity, re-establishment credit, medical protection for 12 months, university training, assistance in business, land settlement and that all these were not a reward for service but to meet a specific purpose.

The speaker showed that 12,000 who were lost in the R.C.A.F. would have been university graduates had not war cut off their careers. He showed that the attitude of the government toward the veteran was to lean over backwards in his behalf. He told his listeners that 63 million had been paid out this year in gratuities and grants of $427,000 were made. The pension payment is now 90 millions annually and this is being increased at the rate of a million monthly as the veterans are discharged. He showed that the best of hospitalization is given and that soon in Canada their will be provision for 11,000 bed patients besides convalescent homes and other institutions such as vocational guidance institutions and handicraft schools Mr. Reid took issue with those who stated that the boys were not making good as students at the universities and showed that out of 3,580 who are attending the universities that only 48 had ceased training after the first year. He showed that the boys know what they want to go into and are generally making good.

In conclusion he appealed for a better understanding of the veterans' problems and stated that the boys did not want sympathy but guidance into a position where they could be useful citizens of the community. Kiwanis appreciation was expressed by Bill Hopson.

Another Vote To End Strike May be Taken

Windsor, Dec. 5. (CP)—Officials of Local 200 of the United Automobile Workers of America (C.I.O.) today studied the question of holding another Union membership vote on the negotiation-arbitration proposal to end the 85-day-old strike for a Union shop and a check-off at the Ford Motor Company of Canada plant.

Union men on the picket lines circulated petitions asking for another vote on the government-sponsored settlement plan which 5,000 strikers last week rejected by a 52-48 vote. An additional 3,500 strikers did not vote.

It is considered likely the decision on a new vote which might send the 10,000 Ford workers back to their jobs will be referred to the International Union's legal department in Detroit.

At last week's vote it was stated unofficially that the majority for continuing the strike was 350, but last night reports were current that it was under 300.

Workers who favor ending the strike point to that narrow margin as a strong argument in favor of a new vote, particularly in view of the large number of Ford employees who did not take part in the vote.

As petitions for the new vote were passed around on the picket lines, criticism arose over the manner in which the previous vote was taken.

Those favoring a return to work, pending negotiation and arbitration on Union security and other issues, claimed that many strikers were not permitted to enter the Windsor arena and cast their ballots once the meeting started.

Union leaders explained that many members left the meeting before its conclusion and cast ballots on the way out, a circumstance which made it necessary for officials to bar persons outside the hall from entering in order to prevent anybody voting twice.

KEEP COOL AND SLENDER

Men and women approaching middle age commonly develop these manifestations of long continued iodine deficiency, without apparent thyroid gland enlargement:

Chronic tired feeling and lack of former ambition or pep, a state little if any relieved by a rest or a vacation; a tendency to accumulate flabby excess weight; depression of spirits and a bleak or almost melancholy outlook; mental torpor and perhaps some impairment of the memory; graying and falling of the hair, sallow or muddy complexion, and other signs of premature aging; poor circulation as evidenced by cold hands and feet and a desire for more clothing or more artificial heat where normal persons are comfortable with light clothing and moderate room temperature.

The habit of coddling oneself, that is, wearing more clothing than is necessary for comfort and heating the atmosphere above 70, contributes to the accumulation of flabby fat. On the other hand the habit of wearing only the minimum with which one can get by and regulating the household or shop or office temperature by thermostat set at 68 or from 63 to 70 but never higher, contributes to the preservation of youthful slenderness and vite.

Here again I quote Prof. Leonard Hill, English physiologist:

"It is absurd to put on an overcoat when going out for a walk. It is good to go out and be braced by feeling cold and so be impelled to take vigorous exercise."

See what I mean?

If you are practically sewed up for the winter you needn't take offence at my teaching about coddling. This is a free country. But on the other hand if you are going to attend the football game as a spectator don't throw your long wool underwear, your wool sox and your overcoat away—you may need 'em to keep you from freezing. However, it is purely and simply a question of your personal comfort and that's all.

For everyday winter living, provided you go on living and do not hibernate, Prof. Hill's advice is excellent, and especially so if you are inclined to accumulate slacker flesh in the winter. Get the physiological principle of Dr. Hill's advice clearly fixed in mind — when you go out in the cold without your coddling you are stimulated and the muscular activity thus induced warms you up while you are burning off the superfluous. If you coddle yourself when going out you are depressed, relaxed, softened "feel the cold", you can't keep warm enough, and your body stores the unburned fuel as fat.

QUESTIONS and ANSWERS

Insoluble Mystery

Last year our boy went overseas and was seasick throughout the trip. I asked for your instructions to prevent seasickness, and on the next overseas trip he followed your instructions and was not sick at all. Now the other boy is in Japan — he, too, was seasick all the way across. He may get home before long and he wants the instructions. (Mrs. V. E. A.)

Answer—Begin two days before voyage and continue for first two days of voyage taking each morning on rising half a bottle of Solution of Magnesium Citrate. Three times a day, an hour before mealtime, take a tablet of atropine sudfate 1/200th grain. Before boarding ship or upon boarding ship place in each ear canal a cone of gauze, lightly but not tightly packed in, to dull all sounds. Wear these earplugs for the first two or three days. The trouble with this method of preventing mal de mer is that we'll never know whether it, or for that matter, any other method, is worth the trouble, for seasickness is unpredictable. Anyway, this is safer than the practice of taking proprietary nostrums that contain heart-depressing, blood-destroying acetanilide.

Emergency Emetic

Please give details of the preparation you described which produces instant vomiting. You said it should be kept in the first aid kit for use if children swallow poison. (H.R.A.)

Answer — Copper Sulfate, blue stone, blue vitriol. Keep in the emergency kit either a half dozen one-grain tablets of copper sulffate in water. If an infant or lution of six grains of copper sulfate in awter. If an infant or young child swallows poison, give a tablespoonful of the solution, or one grain dissolved in a tablespoonful of water, as a quick emetic. It empties the stomach immediately — not after a long ten or fifteen minutes, as when inevac is used.

INFORMATION ROUNDUP

"Halcyon days," meaning "a time of peace and tranquility," is an ancient phrase that came to us from Greek mythology.

According to the most usual version of the myth, Ceyx was drowned while going to consult an oracle and his body was cast upon the shore, where it was discovered by his wife Halcyone, daughter of Aeolus, the god of the winds. Halcyone threw herself into the sea, whereupon the gods, out of compassion for their mutual affection, transformed them both into birds known as halcyons, popularly identified with the kingfisher.

This bird, it was believed, spent seven days during the coldest time of the winter in building a floating nest of fishbones upon the sea, and laying its eggs. Seven days more were required for brooding. Under natural conditions such a nest could not withstand the shock of wind and waves. So the gods saw to it that during the 14 days when the halcyon was building its nest and brooding the winds ceased to blow, the sea subsided and the weather became calm.

Therefore the period of seven days before and seven days after the winter solstice, the shortest day of the year, was called "halcyon days."

In Shakespeare's I King Henry VI Joan of Arc tells the Dauphin: "Expect Saint Martin's Summer, halcyon days, since I have entered into these wars."

Later it was supposed that the halcyon or kingfisher itself had the power to calm the weather and the sea by charming the wind and waves. According to another curious belief, if a kingfisher was dried and hung up by the head its bill, like a weather vane, would always point in the direction from which the wind was blowing. Shakespeare also alludes to this belief. In King Lear the Earl of Kent says "such smiling rogues" as Goneril's steward Oswald, "Renege, affirm, and thurn their halcyon beaks with every gale and vary of their masters.

PREPARATION FOR DEATH—BRUCHSAL, GERMANY

A black hood is placed on the head of Friedrich Wust, condemned Nazi killer of American prisoners by Master-Sergeant John C. Wood, former civilian hangman, of San Antonio, Texas. Wust was one of five Germans put to death at Bruchsal, Germany, for participation in the beating to death of six U. S. fliers who were taken prisoners by the German soldiers and seized from them by a civilian mob at Russelheim in August.

Ontario Ratepayers Approve Major Expeditures for Many Municipal Works Projects

By The Canadian Press

Public works expenditures involving expenditure of more than $5,500,000 won approval of ratepayers in Ontario municipal elections Monday although in three cities plans for spending nearly $2,5000,000 met with rejection.

Ranking in interest with voting on money bylaws were mayoralty elections which saw one of the province's veteran mayors—W. J. Heaman of London—go down to defeat before Fred G. McAlister, veteran member of the Board of Education, in a bid for his sixth term of office.

Mayors re-elected included George R. Inglis of Niagara Falls, W. F. Stones of North Bay, Frank S. Follwell of Belleville, Sam Lawrence of Hamilton, N. S. Cuthbertson of Brockville.

Other successful campaigners for mayoralty positions were J. Maurice King at Stratford, John H. Matthews at Brantford, John Brown at Kitchener, H. Walker at Welland, Stuart Crawford at Kingston and William Ovens at Peterborough.

Kitchener led the way in municipal work projects. The city and its sister town of Waterloo approved a $1,650,000 hospital for the two communities. Although the hospital by-law won an easy majority, another Kitchener bylaw for a $450,000 memorial auditorium which will include a hockey rink scraped through by a narrow margin of 24 votes.

On the basis of incomplete returns, Hamilton rejected two major money by-laws. One called for spending $1,300,000 to buy the street railway system from the Hydro-Electric Power Commission of Ontario. The other was for $500,000 in parks improvements.

By a two-to-one margin Belleville ratepayers rejected a proposed $367,000 sewage disposal plant.

Niagara Falls and North Bay divided on money by-laws. Ratepayers at the Falls voted for a $575,000 collegiate addition and storm sewers costing $563,035 but rejected a $150,000 expenditure for a new city hall. North Bay approved a $250,000 hospital extension but voted againt a $20,000 grant toward a $40,000 Canadian Legion hall.

Grant For Hall

However, Sudbury approved a $30,000 grant toward construction of a $215,000 Canadian Legion hall and the town of Ridgetown approved a $15,000 grant for a similar hall. However, the Ridgetown grant is contingent on approval of a similar by-law by ratepayers of nearby Howard Township where a date has not yet been set for voting.

Leaside, a suburb of Toronto, approved spending of $580,000 for building and equipping a high school and $100,000 for a library; Galt approved a South Waterloo memorial hospital of which the city's share of the cost will be $500,000; London approved a grant, spread over six years, of $500,000 toward a $2,500,000 University of Western Ontario building program.

Other projects approved included: Peterborough, $175,000 paving program and $50,000 for purchase of industrial sites; Kingston, $75,000 for a paving program.

Vote For Community Centre

Brantford passed a $64,000 expenditure for storm and sanitary sewers and gave a majority to a plebiscite on construction of a community centre financing to be arranged when plans are finally approved.

The much-debated transfer of property with the Canadian Legion was approved at Woodstock. The transfer was passed by council last summer but Mayor Charles Burston refused to sign the documents. Also approved at Woodstock was a by-law providing for Daylight Saving Time May 1-Sept. 30 next year.

Stratford approved a 10-year fixed assessment of $10,000 for Canadian Wooden Aircraft, a new industry. Kingston approved a two-year term for Mayor and Aldermen and the successful candidates in yesterday's election will be the first to hold office for two years. Sudbury rejected a similar two-year term proposal but approved a new contract with the Hydro-Electric Power Commission involving transfer of ownership of two sub-stations. Renewal of bus contracts was approved at Kingston and Brockville.

North Bay approved a Sunday sport by-law by a vote of 2,121 to 1,688.

The Kidneys Filter the Blood

Any poisonous waste materials, which the liver has failed to eliminate from the digested food before it is taken up by the blood stream, must be looked after by the kidneys if the blood is to be rid of dangerous poisions.

When the kidneys fail there comes a poisoning of the system with headaches, tired feelings, loss of sleep and such painful ailments as backache, rheumatic pains, lumbago and other ills.

The use of Dr. Chase's Kidney Liver Pills is suggested because they help in three ways to get rid of this condition.

(1) By arousing the action of the liver which prevents certain poisons from getting into the blood stream.

(2) By stimulating the activity of the kidneys in their work of filtering poisons from the blood.

(3) By ensuring activity of the bowels in eliminating the poisonous waste materials from the body.

Surely this must be a thorough system of protecting the body against the poisons which result from the digestion of food. Such treatment is required by almost everybody at one time or another.

Using Dr. Chase's Kidney Liver Pills once or twice a week, will help to keep you regular and well and free from unnecessary pains and discomforts. 35 cts., a box.

Rotary Endorses Plan to Inquire Into Possibilities of Erecting Community Centre in Belleville

The Rotary Club at its weekly luncheon on Monday unanimously supported a motion to undertake the responsibility of forming a community committee to investigate the possibilities of the erection of a Belleville Community Centre as a war memorial.

Rotarian Newton Thompson in opening the discussion told the club that this city was in dire need of such a place where residents could find sufficient space to hold concerts, dances, meetings or anything of a community nature.

If such a centre became a reality, he said, music, art and the drama could be brought here. Nationally famous choirs and symphony orchestras could come here and add enjoyment to the city's life. "We, ourselves, have several choirs and bands. What better place could be desired to hold concerts of massed ensembles?"

The idea was born when the 'Teen-Age Club sponsored last year by the Rotary Club and which Rotarian Thompson took a keen active interest, became crowded for space.

B.C.I. Auditorium Too Small

The only available space, he said, was the Collegiate Institute and this soon became too small for the increasing crowds of young people who attended the weekly functions. As matters stand now the 'Teen-Agers cannot get the school only on nights when things of an official nature are not being done.

"Since January 12", Rotarian Thompson pointed out, the 'Teen-Agers have had thirty meetings at which over 30,000 youngsters have been present' They have a bank balance of $1,000 proof that they can pay their own way."

The proposed Community Centre could have baseball and softball diamonds, tennis courts, swimming pools and hockey rinks. Ingersoll, Peterborough, Leaside and many other places have already started drives for funds to erect such places. "Why should not Belleville put its money into a living memorial rather than in monuments of cold granite or marble?" he asked.

He suggested that a large plaque bearing the names of those Belleville boys who paid the supreme sacrifice could be placed in the rotunda of such a memorial.

His plan, he said, was not to commit the Rotary Club to the responsibility of the organization of a committee for the purpose but rather to act as a spearhead. The City Council has a committee already formed and in conjunction with this the Rotary Committee could bring in representatives of all city organizations and from this gathering form a Community War Memorial Committee.

Rotarian Macklem told the club that the Department of Education was prepared to assist financially along recreational and physical fitness lines if such a thing came about. The Department, he said, would assume one-third of the cost of the salary of a physical director, one-third of the salary of an assistant director and 20 per cent of the cost of maintenance of such a community project.

Rotarian J. B. Boyce endorsed the proposal. "This might mean a matter of raising $250,000 but this city can do it. There has been enough talk about it, now is the time for some action. It is not an impossibility but a great opportunity for the Rotary Club to do something."

He then moved that the club undertake the job of laying the groundwork for a community committee for a war memorial and his motion carried unanimously. President Mac McLean was in the chair.

Berlin Stages Anti-Vice Drive

By RICHARD KASISCHKE

Berlin, Dec. 4 — (AP) — The Four Powers occupying Germany, aided by German civilian police, are pushing a concerted drive against vice and delinquency which is bringing in about 2,500 Berlin women and girls weekly.

Up to last week 50 per cent of those examined had venereal diseases. A campaign of compulsory treatment now is reducing this to approximately 25 per cent.

In launching the anti-vice drive, military government authorities are tackling what one senior medical officer called "the greatest morals problem in the world."

He estimated there are 250,000 women of "easy virtue" in Berlin, among whom at least 60,000 are classified as professional or semi-professional prostitutes.

"These figures shock even the Germans," the medical officer said. "They reflect more than a moral breakdown — more nearly a chaos to which many factors contribute.

"To explain it, one must first of all remember that the Nazis encouraged illegitimacy to promote the birth rate. And now here's a beaten up city of 3,000,000 people occupied by armies or four nations. It's a city through which stream many thousands of refugees with many lost children.

WEDDINGS

BRANT—MARACLE

Mohawk Reserve, (Special.)—The marriage of Mrs. Martha Maracle and Mr. Alfred Brant was solemnized in Christ Church at eleven o'clock, Thursday, Nov. 29. The bride, who was attended by Mrs. John Maracle, wore a becoming frock of Queen's blue crepe, sequined trimmed, and shoulder corsage.

Mr. John Maracle was groomsman.

During the ceremony the choir sang "We Lift our Hearts, O Father", "O Perfect Love", and one of the wedding Psalms. After the wedding, luncheon was served at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Maracle. Mr. and Mrs. Brant will make their home in Belleville.

MARTIN—LEE

A quiet wedding took place in St. John's Anglican Church, Madoc, on December 1, when Helen Irene, daughter of Mrs. George Lee and the late Mr. Lee, Madoc, and John Sinclair, son of Mrs. Charles Martin and the late Mr. Martin, Belleville, were joined in marriage by Rev. W. J. Robinson.

The bride looked charming in a street-length frock of robin's egg blue with black accessories. She was attended by her sister, Mrs. Thomas Smith, Kingston, who wore lime green with black accessories.

The groom was attended by Pte. Thomas Smith, Kingston.

Following the ceremony, the couple left on a short trip to Oshawa.

GILCHRIST—DUNKLEY

On Saturday, Dec. 1, at three o'clock, Edna Emma, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Dunkley, Harold, become the bride of Arden John Gilchrist, Renfrew, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Gilchrist, in an impressive ceremony performed under an arch of evergreens with pink and white streamers, by Rev. Mr. Townsend, at the home of the bride's parents.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a floor length gown of ivory sheer and carried American Beauty roses. She was attended by the groom's sister, Miss Joyce Gilchrist, who wore pink sheer.

The groom was attended by Mr. Freeman Dunkley, Harold.

A buffet supper was served to about fifty guests, the bride's mother receiving in mauve embroidered crepe and the groom's mother in blue crepe.

For the wedding trip to Smiths Falls and other eastern points, the bride wore a beige wool ensemble, brown accessories and a green coat. On their return, they will take up residence in Renfrew.

Out-of-town guests were present from Toronto, Oshawa, Napanee and Renfrew.

GEROW—BELLYOU

A pretty wedding was solemnized at the home of the bride's mother, Centre, Ameliasburg, against a background of evergreen banked with fern and yellow and white 'mums on Dec. 1 when Margaret Gena, daughter of Mrs. Elgin Bellyou and the late Mr. Bellyou, became the bride of Norman Francis, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Gerow. Rev. J. F. Lane, Wellington, performed the ceremony. Mrs. Lane played the wedding music.

Given in marriage by Mr. Donald Morden, Wellington, the bride wore a gown fashioned with satin bodice and satin appliques on the full net skirt. Her fingertip veil was held by a wreath of gardenias. Her cascade bouquet was of white chrysanthemums, pink carnations and fern.

Attending her sister, was Mrs. Don Morden, gowned in pale blue sheer with matching headdress and shoulder-length veil. Her bouquet was of bronze and pink 'mums.

Mr. Donald W. Gerow, Toronto, was his brother's best man.

For the reception, the bride's mother wore grey with fuchsia and a corsage of carnations. The groom's mother wore mauve with a corsage of baby 'mums. Assistants were the Misses Florence and Elda McFaul and Mr. James Putnam.

For travelling to Detroit, the bride wore a green dressmaker suit with brown accessories and a muskrat coat.

Out-of-town guests were present from Toronto, Picton, Wellington, Belleville, Trenton, and Wooler.

Friends Honor Bridal Couple

White's District—The home of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Bowers and Mr. and Mrs. Albert Fair was the scene of a very enjoyable evening when friends and relatives gathered to honor the latter couple who were recently married. After a time spent in friendly chatting and community singing, Mr. Wm. Faulkner as chairman, called the gathering to order and asked the bride and groom to take seats of honor. Mrs. George Bilham read an address welcoming the bride to the community and extending the good wishes of all for a long and happy married life. They were then asked to open the gifts of china, glassware, silverware, pyrex, aluminum, enamelware and the ever useful rolling pin. Mr. and Mrs. Fair thanked one and all for their gifts and invited all to visit them. "For they are jolly good fellows" was sung. Lunch was served, then all departed for their homes.

Second Thurlow Neighbors' Aid Holds Bazaar

Second Thurlow.—With fine weather prevailing the Second Thurlow Neighbors' Aid held their first bazaar at Mrs. Frank Doxtator's home on Tuesday afternoon, Dec. 4, and it was a very decided success both financially and socially.

There were tables of "Touch and Take", in charge of Mrs. D. Leeming and Mrs. Jas. Bunnett. Vegetables, flowers, bulbs in charge of Mrs. J. Donaldson and Mrs. A. Greatrix, and sewing in charge of Mrs. P. Sprackett and Mrs. C. Keirl. The tables were well filled with generous donations and were so well patronized that in a very short time all the articles were disposed of.

Mrs. H. Grills sold tickets on a lovely layer cake donated by Mrs. J. Huff and $3.30 was realized from this. Little Miss Mabel Craig drew the lucky ticket and Mr. F. Doxtator held the lucky number.

The rooms were beautifully decorated in readiness for the Christmas season. Tea was served from the dining-room table which was prettily decorated with red candles burning and handmade rose centre piece. Mrs. Robt. Mitchell and Mrs. D. Whalen pouring tea and the serviteurs were Mrs. B. Whalen, Miss Lorena Haight and Mrs. R. Boldrick.

Those in charge of serving the plates in the pantry were Mrs. E. Vivian, Mrs. G. Craig, Mrs. F. Mitchell and Mrs. D. Atkins.

Several men also attended and spent the afternoon playing cards. A birthday cake decorated with candles was brought in by Mrs. Doxtator in honor of A. Mitchell's birthday and Mr. Doxtator's birthday which was the day previous and Happy Birthday was sung to them.

When all the day's receipts were turned in, all were glad to know that the first attempt at a bazaar had been a grand success as the sum of $41.25 was realized.

A hearty vote of thanks was given Mrs. Doxtator for the use of her home and for her efforts in making the bazaar the success that it was. The thanks of the Neighbors' Aid is extended to all, as each member very ably assisted in this worthy project.

Donations of aprons and homemade rose by two near neighbors were much appreciated.

The January meeting will be held at Mrs. Wesley Gray's Belleville.

SGT. J. LING RETURNS HOME FROM OVERSEAS

Formerly with headquarters' staff with the Canadian Army in England and on the continent during the closing phases of the European war, Sgt. James Ling, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Ling, Bridge Street, has returned home from overseas. A member of the artillery, Sgt. Ling proceeded overseas in 1941 and since then has been associated with Headquarters Staff in England and on the continent.

During a newspaper delivery strike in New York, people lined up for seventeen blocks to buy their daily newspaper at the printing plant.

FOXBORO

Mission Band Holds Meeting

Foxboro.—The Mission Band met at the home of Mrs. Ewart Sills on Saturday, with an attendance of thirteen and one visitor. Shirley Finkle and Janice Beatty sang "Jesus Loves Me" and all joined in the chorus. A recitation was given by Joan Royal and Janice Beatty gave a Bible reading on "Moses". Mrs. Clare Finkle then finished the story of "Nobody Loves Me", which was most interesting. A trio was then sung by Mrs. C. Finkle, Jean Finkle and Mrs. Ewart Sills. This was entitled "Silent Night". The election of officers then took place as follows:

President, Ruth Reed; Secretary Treasurer, Irene Atkins; Card Secretary, Janice Beatty; Pianist, Jean Finkle. Five dollars was collected by using the mite boxes.

Spiritual Quiet Day Observed

Stirling—St. Paul's of Stirling welcomed the members of Young People's Unions throughout Belleville Presbytery for a "Spiritual Quiet Day" in St. Paul's of Stirling on Sunday. Young people from all over the Presbytery gathered at St. Paul's in time for morning Worship at 11 a.m. The Reverend Alvin J. Cooper of the United Church's Religious Education Board was present to conduct worship and preached at the service of Morning Worship and led discussion group in the afternoon. The evening service was in the nature of a rally and was in the hand of the Executive of the Belleville Presbyterial Young People.

Family Honors Father on His 80th Birthday

Stirling.—The family of Mr. William Heasman gathered at the home in the Oak Hills, where Mr. Heasman, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Heasman and Mr. Harry Heasman reside, to honor their father on his 80th birthday. After a brief speech by Mr. George Heasman a number of lovely gifts were presented to the head of the family by his children and grandchildren. Mr. William Heasman spoke with pride and joy concerning the family and in gratitude for the gifts. The Rev. A. M. Laverty of St. Paul's, Stirling, of which Mr. Heasman is the Senior Elder, brought his own personal greetings and those of the Session of St. Paul's.

Among those present for this happy occasion were Mr. and Mrs. Edward Heasman, Mr. Harry Heasman, Mr. and Mrs. John Kane (Fanny) and family, Mr. and Mrs. George Heasman and family, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Heasman and family, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Carr, (sister of Mr. William Heasman) and Mr. Ernest Carr, all of Stirling; Mrs. Robert Davies (Gertrude) and family of Frankford; Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Rowe (Emma) and family, of Warkworth, Mr. James Heasman, of Toronto, and Miss Alice Heasman of Belleville.

HOLLOWAY STREET C.G.I.T. HOLD POT-LUCK SUPPER

The meeting of Holloway Street C.G.I.T. on Tuesday, took the form of a pot-luck supper with all of the groups participating.

The tables were decorated in Christmas colors and the enjoyable supper was served by candle-light.

After supper Mrs. Arnold Diits led a timely sing-song of Christmas carols.

On behalf of the girls, Miss Doreen Matthews thanked the leaders for the extra refreshments which they served.

The meeting was closed by everyone assisting in the packing of a bale to be sent to the hospital at Carrot Creek, Saskatchewan.

22 Veterans Avondale District Given Cheques

Twenty-two returned members of the armed services personnel from the Avondale District in Sidney Township were honored at a public reception at the Oddfellows' Hall last week which was sponsored by the Avondale Neighbors' Aid in conjunction with the Sidney Township Patriotic Association. The 22 returned veterans were presented with cheques for $25 from the township council.

Fred Wilson, Reeve of Sidney and Warden of Hastings County, acted as master of ceremonies, while members of his council present included Fred Campbell, Harry Morrow and R. Hunt, treasurer. Executive of the Sidney Patriotic Association were also present with Vice President Roscoe Vanderwater extending greetings from the township and paying tribute to the two district boys who had paid the supreme sacrifice.

Presentation of the cheques was made by Mrs. Stewart Lough with Mrs. Boulton making the roll call. Don White, recently returned veteran, thanked all on behalf of the veterans.

Splendid Program.

A splendid program of entertainment was enjoyed with Mrs. Windover acting as master of ceremonies. Ed. Shortt led in community singing and was also heard in several solo numbers, while Miss Bell gave two well-received readings. Jack Fenn was heard in two cornet solos with Mrs. Morley Duff acting as piano accompanist, while Barbara Diment's dancing troupe presented several well executed numbers with Mrs. Warham and William Navin providing the piano accompaniment.

Returned veterans presented with cheques were as follows: Glenn Bedell, Carl Bush, Scottie Cameron, William Christopher, Charles Emerson, George Flagler, Phillip Flagler, Major Robt. J. Graham, D.S.O., Norman Hall, Jack Livesey, Clifford Millard, Frank Millard, J. C. Morrison, Lee Morrison, Frank Marvin, William Rowsome, Edward Sills, John Sills, Basil Smith, Archie Thornton, H. M. Wilson and Donald White. Two district boys who paid the supreme sacrifice are Lyall Bedell and George Graham.

Former Archbishop

Studied Law for a Time.

Dr. Lang, who originally was expected to enter politics and studied law for a time at the Inner Temple, began his ecclesiastical career as a curate of Leeds parish church. After three years he returned to Oxford as Fellow and Dean of Magdalen College.

When 37 years of age, Dr. Lang was chosen to succeed Dr. Winnington-Ingram as Bishop-Suffragan of Stepney when the latter became Bishop of London.

Seven years later he was appointed Archbishop of York, succeeding Archbishop MacLagan.

In 1928 Archbishop Davidson, a fellow Scot, retired and Dr. Lang succeeded him as Archbishop of Canterbury and Primate of all England and metropolitan.

As a churchman, Dr. Lang worked diligently for the interests of the "average man," attempting consistently to close the gap between what he called the "frozen respectability of the church" and the masses of people.

How Your Child May Be Inviting Colds

Due to being indoors more with less chance for play, many youngsters' bowels become less regular in winter and this condition often lowers resistance and invites attack by cold germs. To help prevent such colds, keep your child's bowels regular with Children's Own Tablets. These pleasant, little tablets for youngsters 3 to 15 are a laxative and more. They also help sweeten the sour stomach that often goes with out-of-order bowels. Get Children's Own Tablets today and guard your child against unnecessary colds. 25¢ at druggists.

NOISY SESSION

The discussions brought from J. M. MacDonnell (PC—Muskoka—Ontario) and other Progressive Conservative members suggestions that Canada should participate in the United Kingdom-United States financial conferences at Washington. Mr. MacDonnell asked for a prompt declaration of what credits Canada planned to make to the United Kingdom.

Not Invited.

Finance Minister Ilsley said Canada's credit arrangements with the United Kingdom will hinge on the outcome of negotiations now being conducted between Britain and the United States. He argued it would not be proper for Canada to try to force herself into the Washington discussions when she had not been invited to participate.

In discussing the emergency powers bills, the members found themselves in a peculiar position. They had before them two bills dealing with the subject. The first was presented and debated to some extent about two weeks ago. When the Dominion-Provincial conference opened, provincial premiers objected to the wide powers the government was asking for in the bill.

Revised Bill.

The government listened to the protests and then revised the bill to meet the objections. However, the first bill was never withdrawn and members technically were not supposed to discuss the revised edition until the original bill was amended in committee of the whole.

Mr. Fleming said the Commons was faced with "a phantom bill," and Mr. Coldwell said the original bill should have been withdrawn and the new one presented.

Mr. Gardiner said he agreed with Mr. Hazen and Mr. Hackett, who had stated that if controls were not continued long enough Canada would be afflicted with the same kind of totalitarian state as she had fought against.

"I should like to say that there is a middle course between wishing to rid ourselves of controls overnight and wishing to maintain those controls for an exceptionally long period of time, which may eventually land this country in a position where we would be threatened with a totalitarian form of government," said Mr. Gardiner.

Middle Course Supported.

The middle course was supported by businessmen, people in the street and leaders of finance. These people claimed that, if all controls were taken off over night, the result would be the subsequent collapse of Canadian institutions.

The immediate removal of all controls would be "most ridiculous" and would have a "most detrimental effect on the people of this country."

Mr. Coldwell said the Conservative government of the 1930's had passed some of the most dictatorial measures that ever appeared on Canadian statute books. This statement brought a flood of protest from Progressive Conservative benches.

"My honorable friends do not like this," said Mr. Coldwell. "I am reminding them of this legislation because I am tired of this debate."

Useless Criticism.

He did not think one party should criticize another party for doing something similar to what it had done while holding office.

If critics of the bill were sincere, they would move the discussions up to the committee stage and then attempt to amend it as they thought it should be amended.

Mr. Hackett argued that, if an emergency existed now, it was not a war emergency but an emergency which arose from the totalitarian legislation enacted to fight and defeat a totalitarian people.

"I submit it is futile to enact more controls for the purpose of releasing ourselves from the controls," he said. "It does not make sense."

Romantic Evening Gown

By PRUNELLA WOOD

WONDERFUL gowns appear in the movies, now and then when the plot lets the studio designer put modern fashion onto the actresses. (Costumes in the movies are wonderful, too; but this is a fashion column for the times.)

This gown, worn by stunning Micheline Cheirel in "Cornered", is a honey for dancing belles who are in movie audiences. It is of ice blue satin, with an inset apron of matching tulle. The apron is bordered by leaf appliques of the satin, dew-starred with rhinestones. The decolletage is filled with nude sheer.

The Marry Go Round

By HELEN ROWLAND

Tipping-off the Girls

Nothing genuine is quite so glittering as its imitation; and no girl can expect a man who really loves her to be as artistic and effective in the technique of his love-making as one who is merely playing a clever game.

Perhaps, the wisest and happiest girl is one who never bothers to figure out what a man means, but just accepts what he says—and promptly forgets it when she closes the door behind him.

Nowadays, a girl has no trouble in making a man believe that she's in love with him; that is merely confirming his secret conviction.

Nothing hurts a girl's vanity so much as a man's willingness to forgive her too quickly for making him jealous of another man. It's so unflattering!

The man who thinks that nylons and permanent waves are "criticism" is entirely complimentary, of course. For example, he loves to be told that he's "too big-hearted"—but not to be told that he's top "big-headed".

The man who thinks that nylons and permenent waves are sheer luxuries deserves to be married to the woman who does not regard golf clubs, Scotch whiskey and seats at the football game as absolute necessities.

Already, these war marriages are running up against the economic problem. Sometimes it's the man's money, sometimes it's the wife's money; sometimes it's too much money—and sometimes it's no money at all, which start most of the quarrels.

It takes a man a little while to come out of his daze when he realizes that he has just been "accepted" by a girl who proposed to him

Lots of these sudden war romances die of infantile paralysis; few of them last long enough to die of old age.

Most of these playboy, night-club husbands are like embroidered guest-towels—not much use in the world except to show off to other women.

GOOD MANNERS

Here are Answers to Questions About Christmas Cards

So many letters with questions about Christmas cards are arriving daily in my mail that today I want to answer the ones that seem to be most puzzling to readers.

My favorite is this: Do you think that, in general, friends or even acquaintances prefer to receive a card with the signature hand-written or with the name engraved or printed?

My answer would have to be personal, and I infinitely prefer a card signed with the sender's handwriting. To me it seems more in keeping with the friendly, personal Christmas spirit than a card, no matter how magnificent and costly, with an impersonal greeting and an engraved or printed name. I like handwritings and "my heart leaps up when I behold" the familiar handwriting of a friend! Immediately the handwritten signature makes the greeting highly and deeply and warmly personal, like a cordial handshake. Also, and happily, I've noticed that when friends sign their cards, they are tempted to add a sentence or two of greeting or message, and this, too, is always welcome. Nothing perfunctory or impersonal about such Christmas greeting-cards; they are endearing, heart-warming!

When the names are written, is the husband's or the wife's name written first?

There is no definite rule about this. The wife's name usually comes first, particularly when the signatures have no last names, as Mary and John. But the one who signs the cards may properly feel that it is more courteous to write her (or his) name last. However, when children's names are included, the father's name always comes first—John and Mary and Janet.

Is it proper to send a card to "Mr. and Mrs. John Smith and family"?

No. The phrase "and family" should not be used on an envelope or card. If possible, send one card to "Mr. and Mrs. John Smith" and individual cards to other members of the family.

However, if you wish to send only one card to a household, make a personal bow to every member of the family, either on the envelope or on the card.

For example, you may address the envelope to:

Mr. and Mrs. John Smith
The Misses Joan and Ann Smith
Mr. Thomas Smith

Or, for a more personal touch to your greetings, address the envelope to "Mr. and Mrs. John Smith", and on the card itself, below the message, write "Love and Christmas greetings to you and to Joan, Ann, and Tommy", or "Everyone in our house sends loving Christmas wishes to everyone in your house."

When Christmas cards are to be sent to married persons, is it proper to address them to both the husband and the wife, even though you know only one of them?

Socially, yes. In other words, apply the same rule that you would if you were sending formal invitations or announcements. And, if you are married, the card should be signed with your name and your husband's (or wife's) name.

And this rule of the social world may properly be followed in most cases in the business world. Let's say, for example, that you would like to send a card to Mr. Brown, who is a business friend of yours, and whom you would very much like to have your wife (or husband) meet. This pleasant relationship suggests that the natural and gracious thing to do is to send your Christmas card address to "Mr. and Mrs. Brown" at their home address, and to sign it with your name and your husband's (or wife's) name. However, if your relationship with Mr. Brown is merely that of a business acquaintance, you may correctly send a greeting card to him only, and to his business address. Then, of course, you sign only your own name.

Is it proper to write your address on the back of Christmas card envelopes?

Yes, if you wish to, and it is a practical thing to do when you send cards to people whose address you are not certain about. It provides a return address, is a notification of your address, and it helps your friends to keep their address-books up-to-date!

When one is writing one's own greetings, either on Christmas cards, or on cards to be enclosed with presents, may the abbreviation "Xmas" be used?

Christmas is such a beautiful word, and such a beautiful-looking word, that we should write it, not use the abbreviation. Any abbreviation suggests haste, and haste isn't appreciated on and for these friendly greetings we write at Christmas-time. In looking over hundreds of Christmas cards in the New York shops this season, I was pleased to observe that comparatively few Christmas cards used "Xmas" in the printed or engraved message—a welcome sign of fine regard for the word "Christmas".

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Husband is Taking Out a Woman She Thought Was Her Friend

Dear Miss Fairfax:

My husband and I have always been very happy and have raised a family of children, all of whom are now married. Recently I have noticed that my husband seems rather quiet and doesn't have much to say. And the other day someone told me that my husband is taking out a woman who lives in the next block, and who I thought was a good friend of mine.

My husband has a good income and supports me and I certainly do not want to make a change this late in life. I am 58 years old and my husband is 60. I'm so unhappy over things as they are and have thought of exposing both of them. Is there a solution to my problem?

Unhappy.

It would not be wise to make anything of your husband's interest in this other woman, who certainly hasn't proved to be a good friend. Men no longer in their first youth often go through this "silly" age. It's something like the last call for dinner in the dining-car, or one last fling, so they look around for some woman over whom they can become "silly".

My advice is to cultivate patience and a sense of humor. Above all, don't sit around and mope—go out to visit your friends, go to an occasional movie, invite your children home to see you. Do anything that will take your mind from this worry, which, after all, may not be anything serious.

His Fiancee Wants Him to Take A Job in Town Instead of Keeping His Garage.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I'm in love with a girl who is 24 years old. I have just been discharged from the Navy and we had expected to be married very soon. My father and I own a gas station a few miles out of town, on the highway, and I want to get back into business, but my fiancee wants me to get a job in town. I hoped we could keep this business, as my father is getting older and doesn't want to go to work every day, and I thought it would be nice to live with or near my folks. My girl has visited them and they like her.

Don't you think my fiancee is very unreasonable in not wanting to help me so that we can build up a good business instead of working on a salary all our lives?

She's very jealous and sometimes a bit selfish. If I take my mother out riding too many times, my fiancee objects. Would you advise me to keep my business and stay with my parents, or shall I marry this girl and get a job working on a salary? I'm 28 years of age.

In Doubt.

A man who is ambitious and industrious would do much better working for himself to establish a business of his own. Your fiancee may not realize this, and she may be prejudiced against in-laws in general. If you don't love her enough to wait until she decides it's best to try your way, you'd better try to find a nice girl, who will go your way.

He Called Her Every Evening Until Another Girl Stepped In

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I'm 19 years old and was going with a young man of 22 who seemed to think a great deal of me until another girl stepped into the picture. She's from his own home town, which is several miles away.

His mother doesn't approve of this girl at all, because she is married and her husband is in the Army overseas. Also, the people in his town are talking about this affair. It breaks my heart to see him with her, as he used to come to see me a lot and called me on the phone almost every evening.

Do you think I should try and forget him? Shall I talk to him if he calls up. And what if he writes to me? I don't know what to do. Will you advise me, please?

Gale

You wouldn't help matters by talking to the young man who is spending his time with a woman whose husband is overseas. Any attempt to point out his mistake would only increase his resentment of you, and make him more determined to flaunt this affair in the faces of people who are talking about it.

I shouldn't think his mother would approve of the affair. There's something contemptible about the unfaithful wife of a serviceman who risked his life while he was in the Army, gave her an allowance, and whose return thanks is to drag his name through the mire. It's up to you, if he writes and begs to be reinstated in your good graces, whether to accept him or not. But better think long and carefully before you consider marrying him.

BEAUTY

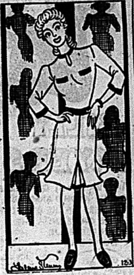
By HELEN JAMESON

Exercise and keep flexible.

Women the world over seek the magnolia and rose complexion, hair like shining silk floss, hands of lily whiteness. They chase hither and yon with stops at beautytoriums and cosmetic counters. They spend their money in the hope of finding beauty magic. What is free in the way of pulchritude help does not seem to interest them. They're funny that way.

Speak of exercise and almost all women over the age of thirty are bored to tears. And they are precisely the ones who need fibre toning; if they don't get it, the waistline may do a disappearing act, hips may expand like the spreading chestnut tree. Men who sit all day blush with shame when they have to confess that they get no exercise of any kind. Women, most of them, are shameless. They say they hustle around doing housework, or they play a game of golf now and then and that's enough. Well, then, they're not entitled to yelp and rage when youthful outlines depart and the meal-bag figure is in the offing.

Exercise has a beneficent physiologic effect, not only on the feminine shape, but on the mind and the complexion. It sends heat to the skin surface, helping the skin to function as an organ of elimination. It puts color in the cheeks. It air-washes the lungs, thereby hustling up sluggish blood streams. It is an aid to the motors of digestion, rouses appetite, increases nutrition.



The midsection must be kept flexible

Every woman who is chasing beauty rainbows, and even those who aren't, should realize that the human machine must have a certain amount of muscular activity, as well as periods of relaxation. When a happy balance is struck, life looks sweet and pretty, and one keeps within finger touch of one's youth.

There should be a time set apart each day for a brief muscle workout. Add to that every moment of outdoor recreation that one can squeeze into the day's doings. Unless there is a stated period for setting-up exercises, they just won't be done.

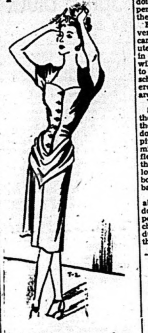
Early morning will prove convenient for the career girl, who can certainly spare fifteen minutes for the purpose of keeping in form. The housewife, in a wild panic to get the husband off to work, and the kids off to school, will have to do her exercises after the breakfast dishes are washed.

We offer a few suggestions:

Stand tall, lift the arms, touch the floor with the finger-tips, then, still in a bending position, do wide circles with the hands, pivoting at the waistline. It is the midsection that must be kept flexible. When muscles sag there, forming a little shelf below the belt, you can bet your boots you'll never line up with the bathing beauties.

Lift the clasped hands high above the head, send them down between the knees, and repeat. This is called the wood-chopping movement. Helps reduce a large bust, gives hips and thighs a vigorous workout.

Detachable Apron



Two-style black crepe dress

By GRACE THORNCLIFFE

THE APRON effect appears on many dresses prepared for late winter and early spring wear. A novel handling is given this detail in the dress shown here, for the draped apron front is detachable leaving a simple but smart basic frock of black crepe with deep, sweetly curved neckline above the front closing. Without the apron, a narrow self belt or belt of gilt kidskin may be worn. The apron section ties in a bustle bow in back.

Evening Accessory

By ALICE ALDEN

THE HAPPY return of gala, formal evening wear brings with it consideration of accessories to complement the evening frock. There are no makeshifts for evening now, but real evening accessories such as this handsome bag. Designed by the talented Josef, it is fashioned of rich, striped brocade, with tucked-in sides and a rolled edge zipper top. Like all the smartest evening bags, it is fairly large, and it looks like a nice idea for a gift.

Above is Jack Dempsey, the "daddy" of all heavyweight champions and one of the most colorful fighters ever to perform inside the squared circle. Jack's services as a referee have been acquired by Maestro Tunney, and he will be seen here in action at the Arena on Wednesday night. He will be the fifth man in the ring when that gruesome twosome Katan and Dunlop meet the flying human trapezers Whippah Watson and Patsy Flanagan.

"Yeah" growled the Katan-Dunlop chorus "Wadda we care who is the referee. They can bring along all the heavyweights they want. They don't scare us none. Who is this guy Dempsey anyway. What we want is a fair deal, and brother we're going to get it if we take the Arena apart."

That giggling you heard emanated from the Watson-Flanagan tonsils. "Those big lugs are due for the surprise of their lives tonight," they chortled. "We are rarin' to go and after the main bout there won't be any meat shortage in these parts." Better see it.

Northerners Vote In Favor Of Sunday Sport

North Bay, Dec. 5—(CP)—The electorate of this northern Ontario city has voted in favor of Sunday sport—such as baseball and hockey — but that doesn't necessarily mean it will get it.

A plebiscite asking voters at Monday's civic elections to cast ballots on the question "are you in favor of Sunday sport" was passed by 2,121 votes to 1,688. It followed similar moves by three other northern Ontario municipalities—Timmins, Sudbury and Kirkland Lake—which adopted organized Sunday athletics long ago.

The North Bay city council now is expected to seek support of other municipalities in an attempt to obtain revision of existing legislation which, unlike United States' laws, frowns on Sunday sport. Throughout most of Canada there is no organized Sunday sport.

Under the Lord's day act, a person if sport is played on Suncomplaint may be filled by any days. North Bay experienced such a complaint last summer when police took names of all players and officials involved in three Sunday baseball games. No charges were laid.

Can't Charge Admission

Toronto, Dec. 5—(CP)—Cecil Snyder, Ontario deputy attorney-general, said today in comment on a North Bay civic election plebiscite favoring Sunday sports, that today sport could be played on Sundays only if no admission fee was charged and when no complaints were made as to "profanation of the sabbath."

Mr. Snyder pointed out that under the Lord's Day act, a Federal law, no admission fee could be charged for Sunday sports—either directly or indirectly.

"I say indirectly because some years ago an organization attempted to circumvent the law by charging 25 cents for automobile-parking privileges at the sport scene," he added.

Under the upper Canada Lord's Day act of 1859, which applies only to Ontario, Sunday sports may be stopped by authorities on complaint of citizens, the deputy attorney-general added. It is "an act to prevent the profanation of the Sabbath."

"MR. SHORTSTOP," MARTY MARION, NOT FOR SALE

At One Time St. Louis Cards Had a $250,000 Price Tag Set on Player

By SID FEDER

Columbus, O., Dec. 5 (AP) — The $250,000 price tag that was dangling from Marty Marion around world series time has been torn off and "Mr. shortstop" is definitely not for sale, St. Louis Cardinals told the rest of the baseball world today.

What's more, the Cards are planning no deals involving "name" players just now, even though the collection of talent they'll have back from the armed forces alone is better than a lot of National League clubs will field as varsity in 1946 and already has made St. Louis the standout pennant favorite for next year.

Eddie Dyer, the slow-talking Texan who came out of the oil business to manage the Cardinals next season, laid all this and considerable more out on the counter for the folks to look at today at baseball's great lobby-sitting sweepstakes—the annual minor league meetings.

Dyer says that not only "Mr. shortstop", but probably the entire 1946 Cardinal infield "seems like it will stay" the same as it was in '45, with Ray Sanders on first, Dutch Verban on second and Whitey Kurowski on the hot corner. The Cards, however, are going to put a first-baseman's mitt on Dick Sisler, son of "Gorgeous George," and "take a good look at him" next spring, in the hope there's something in heredity. Dick played the outfield for the United States Navy at Bainbridge, Md.

Also back from service for infield duty are Lou Klein, who'll be "valuable as general utility man," Eddie explains, and Jim Brown.

Altogether only 10 top flight pitchers are coming back from the services to hook up with the half dozen or so dependables on hand last year, and if any deals are made, the flingers will be involved.

Looking at it right now, Dyer expects his outfield will be Terry Moore and Enos Slaughter, both on the way out of the army, with Johnny Hopp and Buster Adams alternating in the third spot, depending on enemy elbowing.

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, JR.

Columbus, O., Dec. 5 (AP)—Canadian visitors report last Saturday's Army-Navy game attracted more attention in Toronto than the Canadian championship playoff between Toronto Argonauts and Winnipeg.... Anybody want to suggest an international playoff? That's about the only post-season game that hasn't been offered to Army so far.

Inflation must be here... First the Southern Association moved up a class, the double-A leagues threaten to make it triple-A and now the Pacific Coast League has decided to become a third major circuit,—until the major league meeting next week, at least... And does anyone want to bet that the Coast League wouldn't withdraw its bid for big league status if it gets that $15,000 draft price it has been after for a couple of years?.... Might be settled for even less than that. Some smart baseballers claim it takes more than four million attendance to make a big league go while the PCL hasn't done much better than three million. They also say that $10,000 is about as high as anyone could be induced to go for a drafted player.

First trade of the minor league convention involved a pitcher who won no games and lost 12 and a .212 hitter for a hurler who looked so bad when he was sold to Portland a couple of years ago that the selling club refunded the price.... Rumors include a Phillies-Giants dicker for Vince DiMaggio and some sort of a Phils-Pirates deal, which hasn't gone far because each club withdrew its first offer after hearing what the other would give .. The Dodgers might send Luis Olmo to Cincinnati for Ray Lamanne.... You might say that trade was almost made.

Chips Off The Sports Block

By GEORGE H. CARVER

ON TOP OF THE HEAP

While a surprised Kingston crowd looked on scarce believing their eyes, the "foreign Redmen" from Belleville swept out on the ice at the Harty Arena Monday night and knocked the league-leading Ordnance squad from their proud perch at the top of the Van Horne Series loop ladder. Today the St. Louis Reds are sitting pretty on top of the heap and they are going to be tough to slam down from now on. Big Vern Goyer, dubbed by Mike Rodden as the "Big Train" fresh from his efforts with the champion Toronto Argonauts football squad, was in the pink of condition and used his 246 pounds to good advantage on the Red defence. The Ordnance lads had a wholesome respect for the big fella who proved a tower of strength to the locals.

Crandall, the new Red goalie is proving his worth and turned in another good performance. Up front all the lines went well with perhaps the Meaghers and Barrett standing out. The Redmen meet Ordnance again next Monday night.

NEW GADGETS

According to the 1945-46 rules as laid down by the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, its branches may use their own regulations regarding the number of players in uniform in any one game. In the playdowns, however, 12 players including one goal keeper and an alternate goalie can be used. Another rule states that while it is not the duty of game officials to check equipment, the referee shall check on particular equipment objected to by the coach or manager of either team. The rule emphasizes the fact that all protective equipment, except that of the goal keeper must be worn under the uniform. Penalties as set out should be imposed if rules are broken.

WITH THE HOOPSTERS

It looks like the basketball fans hereabouts are going to have a bit of a field day here this winter. According to our genial friend Ed Shortt, there has been arranged an Intermediate "A" basketball loop here for the coming season.

Entered, we are told, in an intermediate "B" hoop loop which goes into action after Jan. 1 are Belleville "Y". Mountain View R.C.A.F.; Trenton Station R.C.A.F.; No. 6 Repair Depot, R.C.A.F.; Picton Grads and the Belleville "Y" Juniors.

It looks like a good hoop setup. To you who may object to the Belleville junior entry may we say that the kids have been admitted to the loop because there is no official junior league in the vicinity. Regardless of what the league brings forth as champions, the kids will go on in their respective playdowns.

WELL, WHAT ABOUT IT?

Marse Jack Dempsey (remember) he was to the old time boxing fans and not so many years ago at that, the idol of the ring and after all, was the world's heavyweight champion for a number of years, will be here in person tonight at the Hume Arena. The lithe tiger of the squared circle will be the fifth man in the ring when those villains John Katan and Al. "Bunny" Dunlop tangle in a battle royal with the dashing Whippah Watson and the high kicking Pat Flanagan in a frolicking foursome that should climax any former meetings. But La Dempsey doesn't fool. In his idea these pachyderms can run riot as long as they stay within wrestling propriety (if there is such a thing) Then?

What's Doing in Sport

By The Canadian Press

Representatives of 33 race tracks in the United States called on the thoroughbred racing association to drive the undesirable element out of the turf sport in a move to "protect the good name of racing." Alex Robb, T. R. A. secretary, said after the New York meeting the recent doping cases at Pimlico and Jamaica had not inspired the decision, however.

Outfielder Mayo Smith, who had performed for Toronto and Buffalo, was one of two players traded yesterday by Philadelphia Athletics for Wendell Mosser from the Portland club of the Pacific Coast league.

The record price of ($450,000) was paid yesterday at London, Eng., for Tehran, four-year-old stallion which finished second in the 1944 derby and won the St. Leger. Prince Aly Khan's horse was sold to a syndicate.

Sugar Ray Robinson, 148½, last night outclassed Vic Dellicurti, 156, a fellow-New Yorker, in a 10-round bout at Boston Garden but apparently did not try for a knockout. It was Robinson's third victory over his opponent.

A number of Irish racehorses from the six-year-old Arts Ball to several yearlings have been shipped to stables in the United States, it was announced at London last night.

Lord Rosebery, 63-year-old turfman of England, last night expressed opposition to the prospect of artificial insemination of race horses last night at the annual meeting of the Thoroughbred Breeders Association at Newmarket, Eng. He said it would lead to inbreeding and the deterioration of the animals.

Paris, Dec. 5 (Reuters) — The death toll in a plane crash near Rochefort has risen to 29, all R.A.F. personnel, latest reports said.

It was reported the plane came from Castel Benito in Libya and was presumably on its way to Britain. Earlier the number of dead was given as 27.

ST. MIKES WIN 7TH STRAIGHT IN O.H.A. RACE

Oshawa Generals Defeat Marlboros While Galt Takes St. Catharines

(By The Canadian Press.)

St. Michael's strengthened their hold on leadership in the O.H.A. Junior "A" race by chalking up their seventh straight victory last night in a 7-2 decision against Barrie Flyers on Toronto ice. The visitors put up a game argument but Sandford alone, with three tallies, scored enough to reverse the northerners.

The collegians sank two markers in the first period, put on the pressure to make it 5-2 during the middle frame and added a couple more in the last chapter of a lagging engagement.

In the other fixture at Toronto, Jack Marshall whipped in three unassisted goals for Oshawa Generals against the Marlboros and these were also sufficient to settle the issue, the tilt terminating 6-1 in favor of the Motor City squad. Ross Lowe scored twice and Bob Gray earned the odd counter, while Harding was the solo specialist for the losers.

Over in St. Catharines, Galt Red Wings maintained their winning stride in handing a 6-3 setback to the Falcons, thereby gaining a three-way tie with St. Kitts and Oshawa in the league standing. Frank Curik flipped in three in a polished performance, Lee Foglin accounted for two goals and Pavelich scored the other Falcon marksmen were C. Smelle, Vic Auger and Jim Dawdy.

OMAHA KNIGHTS DOWN MILLERS

Omaha, Dec. 5 (AP)—Omaha Knights downed Minneapolis Millers 8-1 here last night and moved into a two-way tie with Kansas City for the leadership of the United States Hockey League.

Don Morrison, Barry Sullivan, George Homenuke and Eddie Reigle led the Knights' offensive in the first period with four goals while goalie Harvey Jessiman kept the Millers scoreless. The first three goals were scored in two minutes and 46 seconds.

Gordon Petrie, Reigle and Johnny Forbes sewed up the second period for Omaha while the hapless Minneapolis skaters went through the frame without scoring.

Ernie Trigg broke the Millers' jinx in the middle of the final period, but it was too late for a Minneapolis recovery. The final Omaha counter was marked down to Podolsky with an assist from Forbes.

BOSTON BRUINS TO MEET HAWKS

(By The Canadian Press)

The team which owns the longest undefeated streak of any National Hockey League Club in the seven-week league schedule places that record on the line tonight when Boston Bruins and Chicago Black Hawks meet in Boston.

The Bruins haven't lost a game since Nov. 10, winning four and tying one over that stretch. Chicago, on the other hand, has been erratic after an early-season spurt to the league lead.

Black Hawks now are tied for second place with Detroit Red Wings, three points behind the leading Montreal Canadiens and one point ahead of Boston. The winner of tonight's game will assume undisputed possession of second place.

The Chicago-Boston clash is the only game scheduled this week until Saturday, when Canadiens are at home to the fifth-place Toronto Maple Leafs.

ST. LOUIS FLYERS DEFEAT EAGLES

St. Louis, Dec. 5. (AP)—St. Louis Flyers proved themselves the better of two weak teams last night with a 4-1 decision over New Haven Eagles in a battle of the last-place Clubs of the Western and Eastern Divisions of the American Hockey League.

Pat McCreavy put the Flyers ahead early in the first period and Morey Rimstad found the net just before the period ended to give the home club a 2-0 advantage.

Joffe Desilets tallied for the Eagles in the second period while the Flyers couldn't do anything. With four minutes to play in the game St. Louis again took the offensive and George Blake and Eddie Hergert scored on the fast breaks from centre ice.

The game drew 4,802 paying fans, one of the smallest crowds of the season.

JUDGE DISMISSES NESS APPEAL

Toronto, Dec. 5. (CP)—Mr. Justice F. H. Barlow in Appeal Court yesterday dismissed an appeal by Douglas Ness, Toronto horse trainer, to have cancellation of his trainer's licence reviewed by the Ontario Supreme Court.

Incorporated Canadian Racing Associations suspended Ness Sept. 15, charging that an electrical device had been found in an overcoat hanging in a Woodbine racetrack stable here where horses under Ness' supervision were stabled.

In an affidavit filed October 3 Ness said he received no notice of suspension until the day before it came into effect when James Heffering, president of the I.C.R.A., told him of the discovery of the device and advised him of his suspension.

The following day William Hewitt, presiding steward of all Ontario race meetings, handed him his suspension, Ness' affidavit continued. The notice suspended him as a trainer for an indefinite period.

Ness denied that the coat or the electrical device belonged to him or any of his employees.

Referees, Managers To Hold Meeting

Toronto, Dec. 5. (CP)—A general meeting of referees, managers, coaches and players has been called for next Sunday, Dec. 9 by the Ontario Hockey Association.

"We find a Sunday meeting the best arrangement for all concerned," said W. A. Hewitt, O.H.A. secretary, adding that the invitation is extended to "all who wish to obtain a thorough and up-to-date conception of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association playing code."

O.H.A. president George Panter of Gravenhurst announced appointment of L. M. (Tory) Gregg of Wingham, president of the Western Ontario Athletic Association, and J. L. Fulton, president of the Northern Ontario Hockey Association, to the 1945-46 O.H.A. executive committee.

Mr.. Hewitt further announced Friday, Dec. 7, at midnight as closing date for entries for the O.H.A. intermediate A and B and Junior A and B series.

PLAY TO DRAW

Ottawa, Dec. 5. (CP)— New York Rangers of the National Hockey League and a bolstered Ottawa Senator team representing the Quebec Senior Hockey League played to an 8-8 draw in a free-wheeling exhibition game here last night.

The tying goal was scored by Neil Colville, who with brother Mac, Alex Shibicky and Goalie Jim Henry were loaned to the Senators for the night's entertainment. Bucko McDonald, captain and defence star with Hull Volants also appeared in Ottawa livery for the game.

VICTIM OF BUCHAREST STREET FIGHTING

A young demonstrator is led from the scene after being hurt and placed under arrest in bitter street fighting at Bucharest, Romania, which broke out when Communists and other followers of the regime of Premier Petru Groza clashed with Royalists who were demonstrating their loyalty before the royal palace on Nov. 8, young King Michael's name day. Soldiers called out to quell the disturbance were forced to fire into the crowd. Five persons were killed and many hundreds were wounded — even as this young Romanian.

Bancroft Boy Is Awarded $250 Scholarship

Toronto, Dec. 5 (CP)—Donald James Vance, 18, of Bancroft, has been awarded the $250 Forestry Memorial Scholarship in the Faculty of Forestry, University of Toronto, Dr. Sidney Smith, President, announced.

The winner, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Vance, entered first-year forestry in September from Peterborough Collegiate and Bancroft Public School.

He is the fourth forestry student to be awarded the scholarship, which was established in honor of former members of the faculty staff, graduates and undergraduates who lost their lives in the war or in civilian activities.

Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 837

By SAM GORDON

The Kibitzer

Standard rules are the guides by which even bridge players can gain the most. Times are, however, when a detour brings better results.

Second hand low is one of the oldest of the proven play rules. However, there are many cases where the play of second hand high will pay better dividends. Circumstances often help to decide when.

Take a case that came up in this deal:

NORTH
♠10 9 8 5
♥A 5
♦K 8 2
♣K 8 5 4

WEST
♠K 6 3
♥J 9 7 4 2
♦Q
♣10 9 3 2

EAST
♠A 7 2
♥Q 10 6
♦J 10 7 6 3
♣J 6

SOUTH
♠Q J 4
♥K 8 3
♦A 9 5 4
♣A Q 7

South stretched the bidding to a game contract of three no-trump. West came out with an opening lead of the four of hearts, the fourth from his highest card in that suit.

Making a close study of his chances, south was sure of seven tricks with his three aces, three kings, and the club queen. For the other two tricks, his spades gave good promise.

His main worry was to develop the two spade tricks before the opponents could take five tricks from him. And his fear is that they may grab off enough hearts with their two top spades.

So, he must not unblock his heart tops too soon. Figuring thus, he let east win the first heart round with the queen. East returned the heart ten and dummy was forced to use up the ace.

On that second heart trick, west dropped the deuce. If his lead of the four was his fourth best, what does the deuce show? He must have had at least five hearts at the start.

So, when dummy came back with a spade, east made the most of that information. If west had an entry, it must be preserved until his hearts were set up. East decided to help him do this.

Instead of playing second hand low, east hopped right up with the spade ace and led his remaining heart. This forced the south king. And when west got in with the spade king, the contract was sunk.

If you know when not to, you are pretty hot, too.

Tyler Kent Aboard Ship Arriving From London

Hoboken, N.J., Dec. 5 (AP) — The British steamship Silver Oak arrived from London Tuesday with a passenger list that included Tyler Kent, 34, former United States Embassy clerk convicted in Britain on charges of revealing contents of codes messages between the late President Roosevelt and Winston Churchill.

Custom officials said Kent was aboard when the ship reached the pier but that it would be "quite a while" before he or any of the other 45 passengers would disembark from the freighter.

Kent's grey-haired mother, Mrs. Ann H. P. Kent, of Washington, D. C., was waiting for him in an ante room of the pier, accompanied by "a friend of the family," Charles Parsons, of Kennebunk, Me., a retired Death Valley gold miner, and two private detectives, former police lieutenants John Shields and Edward Moran of the New York Police Department.

Shields and Moran said they were "retained by the family" to guard the mother and son until they leave here for Washington at a time unspecified.

"I'm so glad to see him back — just overwhelmed and delighted," said Mrs. Kent. "That's all I can say, over and over again."

It was shortly after Kent went to London that he was seized for trial on charges of violating the Official Secrets Act. He was sentenced to seven years' imprisonment. His term, with time off for good behavior, expired last Oct. 5.

4,000 Believed Killed by Wave West of Karachi

Karachi, India, Dec. 5 (Reuters) —Four thousand people were believed to have been killed and 40,000 rendered homeless when several villages were washed away in the tidal wave which struck a 100-mile coastal belt west of Karachi Wednesday, a party of relief workers reported today.

The tidal wave which swept over the coast north and west of Karachi followed a great earthquake, believed to have occurred in the Arabian Sea between Karachi and Bombay.

Observatory experts considered the seismic disturbance was probably one of the worst in decades.

Two villages were wiped out and seven others suffered heavy casualties, the workers said.

PRINCE PETER A WRITER

Paris, Dec. 5 (AP)— Prince Peter of Greece, declaring that "royalty is going somewhat out of style these days," said Tuesday that he planned to apply for citizenship in Denmark, homeland of his ancestors. The Prince has just arrived from China where he completed a book on highways. He said he intended to make his living henceforth as a writer.

Labor is Solid Against Proposal Of the President

By HAROLD W. WARD

Washington, Dec. 5 —(AP)— The C.I.O.'s open break with the administration today aligned labor's Big Three into solid and formidable opposition against President Truman's program for fact-finding as a means to end industrial strife.

Congressional leaders hastened to determine how seriously this united front among the C.I.O., A.F.L. and United Mine Workers would threaten enactment of the law Mr. Truman asked in a special message on Monday. But they went ahead with their plans to draft a bill to carry out his program and to introduce it today if possible.

C.I.O. President Philip Murray made the break in a bitingly critical radio broadcast from Pittsburgh, where he is directing strategy of the C.I.O. steel workers in their impending strike at the U. S. Steel Corporation.

The A.F.L., through President William Green, and John L. Lewis' U.M.W. previously had criticized Mr. Truman's plan — which calls for 30-day strike truces while fact-finding boards are at work — on the contention it would shackle labor.

But Mr. Murray went further. He said the plan was designed "to weaken and ultimately destroy labor union organizations."

"The C.I.O.," he said "is opposed to the basic policies thus pursued by the administration."

The C.I.O. leadership has been cooling toward the Truman administration since V-J Day, when the President decided to liquidate the War Labor Board.

Mr. Murray was further irked when Mr. Truman refused to make public a report of reconversion advisers who said industry generally could afford a 24-per cent wage increase without price advances. The report was the result of a study requested by Mr. Murray.

U.S. Army Finds Gardenia For Hero Son's Mother

Camp Wheeler, Ga., Dec. 5 — (AP)—In the spring of 1943 Lieutenant Harold E. Winn picked a flower from a gardenia bush here, pinned it on his mother's coat, said goodbye and was off to the wars.

At St. Lo he was killed in action.

The saddened mother — Mrs. George Winn of Marion, Ky. — recently wrote United States army officials here that memories of her son now were closely woven with the fragrance of the gardenias.

"If I could but have a plant of the gardenia to grow outside my house," her letter said.

The army lost no time in finding the precise plant from which the young lieutenant had picked the farewell gift to his mother. It had been packed and an army official will present it to her personally.

SPENDING PLENTY MONEY

Toronto, Dec. 5. (CP)—Christmas shoppers in Toronto are spending money lavishly and only shortages in some lines of goods limit their purchases, merchants report. Many articles of clothing and some household effects are in short supply, but "luxury" articles are available and are selling fast, caught up in a flood of pre-Christmas spending.

FATALLY BURNED

London, Ont., Dec. 5. (CP)— Believed by firemen to have fallen asleep in her upstairs living room here last night with a lighted cigarette in her hand, Mrs. Nellie Ross, 52, was fatally burned when fire broke out in her apartment.

Says Reactions 'Definitely Nil' As to Guilt

Windsor, Dec. 5 (CP)— Although the results would indicate him to be "a border line psychopathic" and a "great exhibitionist," the lie detector test given Raymond Haggerty, 25, of Windsor, late yesterday did not—in the total result—point to his being the man who attempted an armed robbery in Windsor last Jan. 24.

Dr. Leonarde Keeler, noted criminologist of Chicago who conducted the Windsor Star-sponsored test, said Haggerty's recorded reactions "showed him up" in many lies.

However, he said, the reactions were "definitely nil" as to guilt in the crime of attempted murder arising out of the attempted robbery, or which Haggerty was convicted and sentenced to 12 years in penitentiary.

"The test results would indicate," he said, "Haggerty didn't do that particular crime. However, there's no doubt he's a bad type of psychopathic."

At Windsor, Dr. Keeler was met by W. H. Vaughan, executive editor of The Star, to whom Haggerty dramatically surrendeded after a secret meeting "somewhere in Windsor" at which time he pleaded for a lie detector test.

Strict jail discipline applied in Haggerty's transfer from his cell to the supreme court room where the test was held.

As he was entering the room flanked by jail guards, his brother Bernard—who had worked zealously to bring about such a test—stepped forward and offered a cigaret.

Sheriff Tony Marentette who with Deputy Sheriff Milton Rocheleau, was on the scene, brushed Bernard and the cigaret aside.

Guards were close by as Mr. Gregory helped the prisoner take of his suit coat and roll up his sleeves preparatory to having the blood pressure cuffs attached.

Haggerty looked thin, seemed nervous, as he looked at the "lie box."

The group of officials and newspaper people present when Haggerty was brought into the room saw some of the preparations being made for the test. They saw the attaching of a blood pressure cuff to the upper right arm, which controlled a pen which in turn would record pulse and blood pressure.

Then they saw a sort of harness fastened about the upper chest of the subject; this was connected with a pen which recorded changes in the rate of breathing.

Then, finally, two metal plates were adjusted to the subject's left wrist to pick up electrical changes, which would be recorded by a third pen.

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop started to light his 2nd cigar with a injoyable expression, and I said, Hay pop?

Do I hear myself being paged by the hay bird? pop said.

Meening what, and I said, Is it too early to tell you what I want for Chrissmas?

It may not be too early for you to discover that your expectations are brighter than your prospects, pop said.

Meening I better be careful what I asked for if I expected to really get it, and I thought, Jimminy, I better start kind of easy.

And I said, Well how about a scooter with a real engine attached to it? I said, Yee gods what a wild idea, do you think I want you breaking your neck?

Well G, pop, I might not actually break it, I said, and pop said, That's true, you might only bend it.

Being sourcastic, and I said, Then how about a chemical set that changes all kinds of colors and makes bubbles and steam when you mix the different things? Some of the mixtures go off in little explosions, but they're not dangerous, and if I open all the windows most of the funny smells will go out of the house. Puds Simkins has had his set ever since his berthday and he hasn't set anything on fire yet, so that proves there's hardly any chance of a fire, I said.

Perish the thought, pop said, Perish it and dont revive it. Perish it beyond recognition, he said, and I said, Well then jimminy, pop, dont you think I'm old enough to own a bike of my own instead of having to make myself unpopuler by always trying to borrow rides on the other fellows bikes?

By gollies I wouldn't be surprised if you win, pop said.

Meening he would at least think about it, and making me feel lucky.

CHAPTER 7

Jocelyn drew a long breath; spoke aloud.

"Well, I'm out of that!" she said exultantly. "I'm out of that I wonder what's happened to me, I wonder what waked me up all of a sudden?" she went on conversationally. "It was all one way one minute, and just calm—just being bored the next. A man whose wife was telephoning him about car keys and hand baggage and toothache! And I sitting there feeling like the fool I am.

"He'll never forgive me, of course. His pride will be mortally wounded. Well, better his than mine! You're lucky, Jocelyn Britton."

The road wound downhill in pitch darkness. Rain was again falling, and the little wipers of the car were busily at work. Jocelyn began to speak to herself aloud again, in a different strain:

"Where on earth am I? That glare 'way over there must be Oakland, but how do I get to it? What a road, mudholes and ruts and pools! I got turned off somewhere. Well, by just keeping downward I'll end up somewhere, Berkeley or Alameda or Fruitvale or somewhere."

Plenty of gas; plenty of oil: she drove on as briskly as mud and rain permitted. Her keyboard clock said eleven.

"I'm taking the nasty new look off the Johnsons' car fool that I am!" she reflected. "Why didn't I go over to Aunt Nell's and have an evening playing writing games or dancing with Rusty and Ned and Pete Smith? Good heavens!"

The last ejaculation was wrung loudly from her as the car skidded, slipped, and turned abruptly over a low bank to wedge itself against a tree trunk that was lighted brilliantly by the lamps. Jocelyn sat still for a moment, weakened by the shock, then peered out to see what she could of the situation.

All around was the blackness of the rainy night. Her headlights showed a dirt road pitted with pools of mud and lumps of old concrete; this was certainly no part of the highway she had expected to follow. Down below her most of the heartening speckles that meant homes and lamps had disappeared; far away there was a long clean line of them; the highway between Oakland and Richmond perhaps, but there was nothing near. No gates, no houses, just empty road and rain.

She tried to back her car out of the soft mud. After a while she realized that the spinning wheels were going no further that night, and got down in the rain and groped for a rug in the baggage box and found two old blankets. "Life Savers!" she said, rolling herself into them, curling herself up on the seat to weather the dark hours until dawn.

She slept fitfully; saw the first uncertain streaks of day in the eastern sky and realized that she was on the wrong side of the hill. By the time there was enough light to see the road, she was a mile away from the car and on the north slope of the hill again, descending through the mud and chill of early morning toward the safety of the towns below.

A muddy car rattled behind her; a muddy little man with a good-natured weak face offered her a lift. Jocelyn climbed in thankfully beside him. Her good Samaritan, his breath reminiscent of alcohol, told her where to telephone for the right assistance in the matter of the car and her bag; told her something of himself as they went along. He had a little boy named Brucie, and had had a girl named Florence, who had died. Oh, too bad! What had been the trouble? Meningitis? Oh, too bad. How old had she been? Just three—that very day.

Jim Scudder had come over to see a feller named Boston — sure, that was a funny name, all right. Bridgie Boston they called him. Jim had won a turkey in a raffle and had left it with Bridgie, who had a back yard. But he couldn't find the street; he always got lost over here in the Oakland streets; it was a heck of a thing, but he couldn't ever seem to find that feller's place. But he knew a fellow in town who knew Bridgie, and he could phone him. Jim's wife was off him all right, oh, for boozing and running around, and he hoped to have a turkey sometime today with which to get her over her mad. And here was the railroad station and the lady was welcome. The glorious sun was rising on a clear cold wintry day.

"I wish you'd—" She hesitated, battered and rain-damp and disheveled, but pretty sure, he wouldn't take her money.

"No, ma'am!" he said.

"Well, thank you a thousand times!"

"I was glad to do it. I hope you have a happy Thanksgiving."

"I hope you do!" Her heart was singing; She had gotten out of a wretched predicament pretty well. She felt stiff and achy, but in a few minutes she could straighten up her clothes and comb back her hair in the dressing room on the boat, and afterward have breakfast.

"Miss Britton?" said a voice behind her. She wheeled on the station platform, terror seizing her for a second, she knew not why. But it was only Philip Fordyce, in his low-hung blue car. He was leaning out, laughing at her. "I thought I knew that hair!" he said. And then, in amazement, "For heaven's sake, what have you gotten yourself into!"

"Everything!" she answered, desperately laughing in return. He leaned over to open a door.

"Get in," he said. "I'll run you home."

"I'd be ashamed. I'm such a mess!"

His answer was an unsmiling glance and a brief, "Get in!" and Jocelyn got in. Immediately the wide clean roads, packed and trim after the rain, were flying by them. Had she had breakfast? Neither had he.

They parked in the empty orderly stillness of Market street early on a Sunday morning, and were the first in the dining room of a hotel when it opened at six o'clock.

"I was over at Claremont last night at a party," the man explained. "Well, I'd promised to play golf this morning, down in Burlingame, and I wasn't sleeping awful well, and so I got an early start. But what in the name of Sam Hill were you up to? I thought you were one of these real good girls."

Jocelyn, her usual appearance somewhat restored by a session in the dressing room with her own pocket comb and powder compact, laughed unashamedly.

"I did everything very silly," she confessed, as the blessed warmth of coffee began to penetrate the chilly fibres of her being. "And then I did something smart to get out of it, and got into worse trouble, in one way anyway, and got out of that, and here I am not quite knowing whether the whole thing was a dream. I have a friend who has a little studio up in the hills," she began her confession, "and some of us love to go there for week ends. Well, yesterday the artist and his wife who usually go sent me a message that I thought meant they would be there, and I drove myself up, in the rain, and found instead that a man I especially like—used to like, was there alone——"

"That's as good a story as any other," Philip said cheerfully, as she paused. Jocelyn laughed again, but her face was red. "You left your car where?" he presently asked.

She had noted corner posts, street names, as she had come down the hill in the dawn. Philip took out a well-filled notebook and carefully wrote down what she said.

"Give me your keys," he said then briefly. "I've a man who looks after my cars; he'll see to it. And it's to go to the Portola Garage? That's—yes, I know where it is. He'll have it cleaned and returned there today."

"I can't have you—" Jocelyn was far away from her usual moorings; she had never talked to Philip Fordyce except in the office before; she was dazed after emotional excitement and an almost sleepless night, and she could feel in her bones that a heavy cold was threatening her. But still she couldn't let a strange man assume the responsibility for her foolishness. "You mustn't do that," she said.

He paid no attention to this. He pocketed her key, and when the delicious breakfast was over, stopped the car only once before he deposited her at the Bush street boardinghouse. The stop was at a drug-store; emerging, he placed a large weighty pink-wrapped package in Jocelyn's hands.

"Dissolve two of those pills in hot water and gargle, and take the others about—oh, one every three hours," he said. "I put a hot-water bag in there; I didn't know if you had one. And I put the violet soap in to make it look more like a present."

She would not let him joke it off. Her voice was husky with gratitude. "You're awfully kind. I'm terribly grateful to you."

"I'm only too glad I happened along. I saw the hair, and thought that you were the only woman I knew with your sort of hair. This is your place? Good-bye and good luck. I'll—I took your telephone number, didn't I? I'll let you knew about the car. And if you have any fever, don't show up Monday."

Twenty minutes before eight. Jocelyn had a hot bath, filled her rubber bag with boiling water in the kitchen, returned to her room to snuggle down gratefully under her blankets and fall instantly asleep. But she did not sleep long. She awakened restlessly at ten o'clock, and unable to stand her own thoughts, dressed again, and went across the bay again, this time in the other direction, to join the family party at Aunt Nell's as calmly as if that had always been her intention.

It was a dreamy, unusual day for Jocelyn. Fortunately the big household at Maple Den was far too deeply and happily absorbed in its own affairs to notice anything strange or absent in her manner or to question her as to the abstracted moments into which she constantly lapsed. Tot's engagement was indeed announced, with much kissing and laughing and rushing all over the shabby spacious, imperfectly warmed house, and at two o'clock a Gargantuan meal was finally on the table and everyone's attention was concentrated upon the hot, delicious plentiful and badly served food.

The six Partridge sisters, married and unmarried, were all pretty and giddy and witty and bursting with health and spirits; their one brother was a silent little fellow in junior high school, who sat next to his mother at the table and watched with admiring smiles the uproar that held the dining room. The father of the big family was also quiet, also admiring. Dr. Partridge was continually being kissed; appeals were continually being flung in his direction; frequently a blonde girl was in his lap, winding up his moustache or using his ears as handles to gently bump his face against her own. But he rarely spoke.

Jocelyn's Aunt Ellen was the ruler and the moving spirit of this pandemonium. She was an enormous woman, weighing over two hundred and twenty pounds and towering half a head over her husband. In manner she was gentle, deprecatory, hesitant. But her family and everyone else who knew her at all knew the iron will and the mulish stubbornness that underlay this mild exterior.

She rarely left her own disorderly house and overgrown garden. She lived for her husband, home, son, daughters, grandchildren. Nothing was too good for them, or too much effort to secure for them, and they adored her. Her two sons-in-law were firmly of the opinion that in any crisis she would support them even against her own girls, and the girls considered it one of their richest secret jokes—and they had many—that Mama always talked as if she sided with the boys and then worked things round to exactly what the girls wanted. There had never been much money for luxuries, but they all swam and played tennis and were experts in the arts of picnicking, cooking, game playing. Their home had been a clearing house for the youth of the neighborhood for a dozen years, and such friends as had once pitied poor Nell Partridge, who had those six girls to marry off, now began to realize that her one feeling about their wedding was reluctance to let them go away from home, and that she would have handled half a dozen more without an instant's misgiving.

C. Rush, Stoco, Named President Of Federation

Succeeding Ex-warden W. J. Davis of Maple Leaf, Mr. Charles Rush of Stoco was named president of the Hastings County Federation of Agriculture, when members of that organization met for their annual meeting at Shire Hall Tuesday evening.

Vice presidents of the Federation for 1946 will be Seldon Homan of Corbyville and Chester Sills, while Flt.-Lieut. Ralph Campbell, D.F.C. and Bar, of Foxboro, was renamed to his former position as secretary treasurer. Mr. Campbell had held this position prior to his going overseas.

Directors named included Frank Tummon for Sidney Township; Seldon Homan, Thurlow; William McMechan, Tyendinaga; Jack W. Morrison, Rawdon; George Davidson, Marmora; Ted Meraw, Madoc R. R. 3, for townships of Madoc and Elzevir and William Davis, Maple Leaf, for North Hastings. Ronald Longwell and Allan Finkle, both of Foxboro, were named as auditors.

During the meeting Wilfred Spencer, Campbellford, president of the Hastings County Hog Producers' Association, paid tribute to W. E. Tummon for the work he is doing regarding the progress of the association across the province.

Col. Roscoe Vanderwater was named as the Federation representative to the county agricultural committee, while Ralph Campbell was appointed county director to the Ontario Federation.

Delegates to the annual Ontario Federation convention will be Mrs. Heasman, Charles Rush, Ralph Campbell and Seldon Homan.

Glad to Know Folks Back Home Still Remember

"It pleases me a great deal to know that although the war is over, the folks back home haven't forgotten the boys who are still away," writes B. A. Sanford of the H.M.S. "Puncher" in a letter of appreciation to the local Kinsmen for shipments of cigarettes received.

"It is with great pleasure that I write these lines of acknowledgment and thanks for the two cartons of "fags" which I received recently. . .I say thanks again and hope I will be able to thank you all personally in the near future."

Cpl. G. F. Burley also writes his appreciation for cigarettes received and states there are still many Canadians stationed in Holland. He speaks of meeting in with Mac Bonter, whom he had not seen since 1943. "We had quite a bit to talk about," he wrote.

The following Belleville Boys were each shipped three hundred cigarettes by the Belleville Kinsmen Fag Fund: H. Adams, C. Blakely, W. Carson, T. Colden, J. W. M. Cook, W. Dempsey, J. D. Doyle, V. Dulyea, E. Elliott, H. Fitzgerald, K. M. Forster, L. L. Forster, C. Gamble, L. Lawson, J. Ling, W. Lynch, G. Meades, C. Nelson, E. Post, E. L. Reid, J. G. Robson, J. Sharpe, L. Shortt, J. Simpson, T. Sutton, C. Wannamaker, J. Westlake, T. Winter, E. J. Cowan, G. M. Harrow.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto Dec. 5 —(CP)— Industrial stocks recorded a smart advance in the early session of the Toronto Stock Exchange and other groups showed little net change. Scattered narrow gains appeared in the gold and base metal groups. Turnover totalled 9914,000 shares for the first three hours.

Hiram Walker, up 2½ to 106, a new high and Brazilian, up 1½ to 28, were features of the industrial section. Abitibi 6 Per Cent Pfd gained 1¾ to 79¼ in moderate volume. Ford A was strong at 30½.

In the gold group prices were a bit stronger for Frobisher, Duquesne, Kirkland Lake, Senator, Rouyn Merger, Aunor, Tech Hughes, Central Patricia and a few others. Steep Rock gained 2 and Noranda added ½.

British Gov't 'Detests' Regime Of Francisco Franco, Says Bevin

London, Dec. 5 —(Reuters)— Foreign Secretary Bevin said today the British government "detests" the Spanish regime of Francisco Franco.

Mr. Bevin was discussing in the House of Commons the trial of 22 Spanish anti-Fascists which is about to be resumed after being suspended last October.

Mr. Bevin added that the British embassy in Madrid had reported that there was good reason to believe that the death penalty would not be imposed, but said he would continue watching this matter closely.

Asked why Franco had "regained confidence to such an extent as to thumb his nose in this way at the British government," Mr. Bevin replied: "I think the mercurial habits of this dignitary very difficult to explain."

Challenged by James Maxton, Independent Labor, as to whether it was in order to refer in such terms to the head of a state with which Britain seemed to be on reasonable terms, the Foreign Secretary said:

"You can be friendly with a person and frank with a person. In this case it is the regime, not merely the man but the whole regime, with which the British government has no sympathy."

SPANISH CHESS PRODIGY AT 13

Although only 13 years old, Arturito Pomar, ABOVE, is on his way to be among the world's foremost exponents of the ancient game of chess. He has played against the cream of Spain's chess players and has been invited to participate in the tournament to be held in London in the near future. He recently played against the world's champion, Alekhin, and made a good showing.

Fifteen Streamlined Cars Ordered by C.N.R.

Montreal, Dec. 5.—Fifteen new streamlined cars ten baggage and the others mail and express have been ordered by the Canadian National Railways for fast passenger train service D. McK. Ford vice president of purchases and stores announced here today. They will be built by the National Steel Car Company Hamilton. This is the first order placed of a heavy 1946 new equipment program.

The fifteen cars are inside 72 feet long and nine feet, six inches wide and from rail to roof 13 feet, six inches high. The side sheathing is welded instead of being riveted. The doors and windows are all streamlined. Built to association of American railroads recommended contour they meet all of the clearance requirements of the United States railroads.

"This Is the First Time in Years I've Felt So Well"

Now I Am Free from Stomach Disorders, Dizziness, Tired, Rundown Feeling and Rheumatic Pains After Five Years Suffering.. Owe it All to Syntona," Says This Man.

There is scarcely a person who at one time or another has not suffered from stomach, kidney, liver or bowel disorders and the long train of symptoms that follow. Such people have gas, bloating, indigestion, nervous irritability, dizzy feelings, backache, rheumatic pains, get tired easily and fell rundown. No claim is made that Syntona will overcome these troubles in every case, but certainly many people right in this city have found good results by taking a short treatment of this grand herbal compound.

For example, here is the recent experience of Mr. Mike Taziar, Waterdown, Ontario, who says:

"For five years I suffered with a badly disordered stomach. I had so much gas, bloating and acid risings after my meals, I never felt like eating. I was subject to dizzy spells. Dark spots floated before my eyes. My nerves were so bad I couldn't get to sleep for hours after going to bed at night. I got up mornings feeling tired, irritable and rundown. To make matters worse, rheumatic pains set in my arms, limbs and muscles. They got stiff and sore and ached a lot during the night.

"I took almost everything that people recommended to me, but nothing did me any good. Then I read about Syntona helping so many people and decided to try it. Right from the first few days my stomach felt better. I began to enjoy my meals again, I kept on taking it and now I am free from all that gas, bloating and indigestion. I haven't had any dizziness, or spots before my eyes since. The rheumatic pains do not trouble me. I sleep soundly through the night and this is the first time in years I've felt so well. I certainly can recommend Syntona to any one suffering as I did."

Get yourself a treatment of Syntona today at DOLAN THE DRUGGIST, Belleville. See how much better you, too, will be feeling in just a short time.

PICTON

Ralph Warren Elected Mayor Over W. Henley

Picton, Dec. 5 — A record vote was polled in Prince Edward County municipal elections, Monday. In Picton, Reeve Ralph Warren became Mayor for 1946 by virtue of his victory over William Henley. Mayor Nesbitt McKibbon contested a seat as councillor and was elected.

Albert Grindrod became reeve and Ross Pearsoll, deputy reeve, by large majorties.

In Hallowell township, Deputy Reeve Burt Pearsoll lost to former Reeve D. O. Reynolds by five votes. There is a possibility of a recount as six ballots in one poll were rejected when too many councillors were voted for. On the same ballot were the names of deputy reeve candidates and these were not counted on the spoiled ballots.

Bloomfield and North Marysburgh had elections for councillors. In Sophiasburg, Clarence Allison was elected reeve. Reeve A. Goodmurphy was re-elected in Wellington, while John Taylor defeated Reeve Albert Weir in Hillier. Detailed results follow:

Hillier Reeve.

Taylor 206; Weir 176. Majority for Taylor 30.

North Marysburgh.

For Councillors: Hicks 231; Carter 173; Storms 170; Neville 129; Harrison 127; Lumbley 121.

Elected, H. Hicks, F. Carter, R. Storms, J. Neville.

Bloomfield Councillors.

James Gough 240; J. Donald Baxter 239; Arthur Moore 222; Henry Leavens 202.

W. A. Arkett 97; J. T. Jackson 139.

Claude Simmons asked electors to ignore his name on the ballot and his votes were not counted.

Wellington.

For Reeve: Charles Carter 159; A. Goodmurphy 272. Majority for Goodmurphy 113.

For Councillors: J. A. Cleminson 261; L. McLennon 203; E. Greer 196; F. Brimley 179.

Clayton Tice 178; A. Archard 144; D. MacDonald 150; H. East 94.

Hallowell.

For Deputy Reeve: Pearsoll 465; Reynolds 470. Majority for Reynolds 5.

Hallowell Councillors: Allison 455; Heffernan 347; Cronk 341; Anderson 326; Collier 306; Mabee 166.

Elected: Lee Allison, Don Heffernan, Barton Cronk.

BROTHERS MEET AGAIN

St. Paul, Minn., Dec. 5 (AP)—The Conley brothers are together again—by court order. Patrick Conely, 48, with a record of 60 previous arrests, was sentenced to serve 20 days in the workhouse. Already at the workhouse was Joe, 55, who was sentenced Friday. Joe has more than 70 arrests in his police record. The judge made Patrick's sentence only 20 days so that the brothers would be out of the workhouse for Christmas.

"THE HAT" AND RING

Usually hats are thrown into rings by politicians. This time "The Hat" — Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia — is putting a new twist to it. Soon to leave the political field for the greener and lusher pastures of radio, as a commentator, Hizzoner blows a smoke ring by way of showing satisfaction with the contract he had just signed with the American Broadcasting Co. He will talk on whatever subject he pleases for 15 minutes every Sunday, beginning Jan. 6.

Thomasburg

Thomasburg—The last three days of November were a taste of real winter weather with cold east winds, snow storms and drifting. Farmers are already using their sleighs for general use. The snow plough has even been in use a few times on the highway. On Sunday morning the thermometer fell to several points below zero. Residents are hoping this weather does not continue to long.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Dunning of Saskatoon and Mr. and Mrs. Hiley Elliott of the Peace River District arrived a few days ago to visit Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Coulson and other relatives in this vicinity.

Mrs. John Walker who resides with her daughter, Mrs. Chester Adams, has been confined to her bed for a short time. Mrs. Walker is one of the older ladies of the community and has been very bright despite her advancing years.

A number from here attended the auction sale at Mr. John Morton's at Moira on Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Houston of Belleville spent Sunday with Mrs. James Way. Mrs. Way returned to Belleville with them for a short time.

Mr. and Mrs. William A. Holbert quietly observed their fifty-sixth wedding anniversary on Tuesday last. Although advancing in years, both Mr. and Mrs. Holbert are active. Mr. Holbert has been in his blacksmith shop daily until a couple of weeks ago when he developed a severe cold and bronchial pneumonia, from which he is now improving. Their many friends join in wishing them many more years of happy wedded life together.

The sympathy of the community is extended to Mrs. Albert Martin in the death of her father, Mr. Donald Leslie of Roslin, which occurred at the Belleville General Hospital on Sunday morning following a few weeks' illness.

Marmora

Marmora—Mr. and Mrs. A. G. McAuley who have been in Vancouver, B.C., for the past few months, are visiting the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Prentice.

At the euchre party held in St. Paul's Parish Hall on Friday evening the prize winners were Ronald Brown of Bonarlaw and Miss Frances Hurley.

Marmora War Workers held a quilting party in St. Paul's Parish Hall on Thursday afternoon and evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Don Ellis of Trent River visited Mr. and Mrs. R. Phillips on Friday.

Miss Viona Bartlett spent the weekend at her home in Hybla.

Miss Gwen Rundle of Belleville spent the weekend at her home here.

Mr. and Mrs. D. E. Bell of Peterborough spent the weekend with friends here.

Sergt. Frank Grant of Picton spent the weekend at his home here.

Mrs. Floyd Steenburgh and three daughters of Belmont Lake spent the weekend with her parents Mr. and Mrs. Fred Lee.

Bilingual School Abolition Sought

Toronto, Dec. 5 (CP)—Abolition of bilingual schools in Ontario is asked by the Association of Public School Tustees and Ratepayers in a brief presented yesterday to the Royal Commission on Education.

The brief said Ontario is "90 per cent English-speaking. The business of Canada is done in the English tongue.... there can be no point in annually appropriating large sums of English funds to maintain bilingual schools in the province.

TWEED

River Valley Development Under Discussion

Tweed—On Friday evening a meeting was held in the Township Hall, Tweed, to discuss River Valley development of the Moira River watershed. As most people are aware, a survey will be conducted with a view to creating watersheds along the Moira River at focal points. Some time ago a tour of the Moira Valley was made by municipal officers, with a series of meetings being held at various towns and villages along the watershed which are sponsored through the Department of Planning and Development with Mr. Alec Lucas conducting the meetings.

Mr. Lucas told his audience what the Department is. What it stands for and what a program of conservation would mean to the district and to the farmers of this area. He also dealt with reforestation, soil conservation by means of contour cultivation.

Water conservation by means of dams and the setting aside of suitable areas for recreational purposes and the protection of wild life. During the meeting Mr. Lucas showed two rolls of film with a loud speaker attachment, and a set of slides, enabling the speaker to give his listeners a clearer understanding of the river valley development.

If the Federal and Provincial governments, the City of Belleville, County of Hastings and all municipalities affected, approve the move, it will be a vast undertaking, involving probably hundreds of thousands of dollars.

If the project goes ahead, Tweed is sure to benefit to a great extent.

Madoc

Madoc—Mr. and Mrs. Elliott Burris, Mr. and Mrs. Elvin Deviolin of Madoc are spending a few days at Chalk River, Ont., with Mr. and Mrs. Don Foote.

Mrs. A. D. Ward of Newark, Del., is visiting her mother, Mrs. John Armstrong.

Mr. and Mrs. Armour Weir, Mrs. Ford Sutton, Mrs. Sexsmith, Miss Pauline Weir of Norwood, visited friends in Madoc recently.

Mrs. George West and Mrs. Walter Whytock are spending a few days with relatives in Toronto.

Mrs. Clifford Spry had the misfortune to slip on the icy street on Thursday morning fracturing her ankle in two places. She was taken to Belleville General Hospital for treatment. Her friends wish for her a speedy recovery.

MIRROR MAGIC AT CHRISTMAS

Mirrors lend enchantment to Christmas decorations. Take a bunch of evergreen and sew small Christmas tree balls on it. From this little cluster of balls and evergreen, silver ribbon can be dropped with little silver balls at the end.

One of these tacked to either side of your mirror so that the reflection shows in the mirror will lend a lovely Yule touch.

ENTERS MOVIE FILMS

Titian-haired, 19-year-old Buff Cobb began following in the footsteps of her famous grandfather, the late Irving S. Cobb, when she started her first picture on the 20th Century-Fox lot. Playing a harem queen in the picturization of "Anna and the King of Siam," Miss Cobb joined a cast headed by Irene Dunn, Rex Harrison and Linda Darnell. She was chosen from a score of girls. Although she was born in Florence, Italy, Buff has lived in Los Angeles, Calif., most of her life.

Wallbridge

Wallbridge—Wallbridge W. A. held a most successful bazaar and sale of home cooking at the Orange Hall here last Friday evening. There was a beautiful array of aprons, fancy and useful articles, most of which was disposed of, also the home cooking that was on hand. After lunch had been served, Mr. S. M. Nicolson, acting as auctioneer, sold a quilt which had been donated to the society. Sills' Orchestra, Belleville, gave a very fine program of vocal and instrumental music during the evening. The proceeds were most gratifying.

Mrs. E. Bacon who has been staying with Mr. and Mrs. F. Harris is a patient in Belleville General Hospital. Her many friends hope that she may soon recover and be able to return to Wallbridge.

Mr. Ken Kingston, cheesemaker has finished his cheese-making for this season. Last Friday, Nov. 30th was his last day for taking in milk.

Mr. and Mrs. F. Harris were Sunday dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. H. Pound, Cannifton, and in the afternoon visited their aunt, Mrs. E. Bacon at the hospital.

GUARDS CHRISTMAS TURKEYS

Hensall, Dec. 5 (CP) — With Christmas three weeks from yesterday, Percy Harris, a turkey grower in this Hamilton area community, isn't taking any chances of thieves cashing in on his holiday dinner. He has set up a bed in his turkey colony house and keeps a shotgun handy at his pillow.

MARMORA

Carl Whittmore Heads Kinsmen

Marmora—The regular meeting of Marmora and Deloro Kinsmen Club was held in Deloro Hall on Monday evening with a good attendance.

The regular business meeting was held with President "Al" Drew in charge and following this, five new members were initiated into the club.

The annual election of officers for the coming year was then dealt with and resulted as follows:

President—Carl Whittemore.
Vice President—Jack Reynolds.
Secretary—Mike Corrigan.
Treasurer—Gordon Osborne.

The remainder of the evening was spent in recreation, after which delicious refreshments were served.

Choral Communion

Advent Sunday was observed at St. Paul's with a Choral Celebration of Holy Communion at 11 a.m. The choir rendered Caleb Simpers' anthen, "Arise, Shine, Thy Light is Come" with Rev. J. M. Brownlie and L. R. Rundle taking the solo parts. The rector delivered an impressive discourse on "Behold thy King cometh unto thee." Flowers were the gift of Mr. and Mrs. George Kerr in memory of the latter's father, the late William Smith and also of Mrs. W. R. Linn in memory of the late W. R. Linn and their son James who died while in Japanese hands.

Veterans Welcomed Home

Passengers on the Empress of Scotland, two more of Marmora's soldiers returned to their homes here this weekend. Sergt. Leslie Gazley, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Gazley, overseas about four and a half years with the Canadian Tank Corps and Private Fred Hamilton of the Signal Corps with the same amount of service are glad to be back with their families and friends. Both came through a lot of action without becoming casualties and are in excellent health.

PICTON

Officials Want Mandatory Order To Install Plant

Picton, Dec. 5—Consideration of a request that a mandatory order be issued by the Ontario Department of Health relating to the installation of a sewage disposal system in Picton, was promised by Dr. A. E. Berry, heading the sanitary engineering division of that department, to local officials.

Included in the delegation were all members of town council, town clerk and treasurer, utilities superintendent, Medical Officer of Health and James Hepburn M.L.A.

Spokesmen for the party pointed out that a plan exists for the installation of a sewage disposal system here, considered as a post war project desirable to be carried out. It was suggested that 20-year debentures be issued with a charge of $10 annual service charge.

Dr. Berry stated he was aware of the situation which exists here and that it was of such a nature as to have merited some action by his department, on its own iniative, if the present development had not occurred.

Following the visit, it is understood that the Provincial Department of Health will take the matter of issuing a mandatory order under consideration.

Gone to Work in the Bush!

Men! The need for lumber for building new homes, for reconversion plans for the pulp and paper industry is critical. If you are free—waiting for that permanent job—here is a challenge and a chance.

A challenge, because working in the bush is a man's work, work typical of Canadians. It calls for good health and results in better health through clean work in the open air and good, solid food.

A chance because it pays very well in—money, health and experience. You will come back feeling stronger, healthier than ever before and with experiences you can tell your grandchildren about.

Consult your local National Selective Service office for the complete details.

Unplaced Workers Exceed Unfilled Jobs by 70,900

Surplus up Over 30,000 In 2 Weeks to Nov. 23rd

Ottawa, Dec. 6 —(CP)— Unplaced workers registered at National Employment Offices exceeded unfilled jobs by 70,900 at Nov. 23 — an increase of more than 30,000 compared with two weeks previous, the Labor Department reported today.

"As winter draws on the cessation of some seasonal activities and the greatly accelerated pace of discharges from the armed forces are contributing materially to the steady upward trend in the number of job-hunters and the accompanying downward trend in the number of jobs to be filled throughout the Dominion," the Department said.

"Thus, in the fortnight preceding Nov. 23 employment seekers registered with National Employment Service offices had increased by 11,000 to 173,800 and employment openings had decreased by more than 19,500 to 102,900."

Surplus in Concentrated Areas.

The surplus of workers was most evident in centres where war work had been concentrated. Included in the vacancies were 30,440 for skilled and semi-skilled loggers with only 2,600 available. There still were "thousands of jobs" open for tradesmen in the construction of houses and plants but they were not available.

"Early snowfalls in British Columbia and elsewhere in various parts of Canada have temporarily slowed up recruitment of bush workers, although there now are more men working in lumbering and logging and pulpwood cutting than has been the case for some years," the Department reported. In Ontario, the flow of loggers to the camps had been fairly steady.

As yet, release of former coal miners from the armed forces had done little to alleviate the labor shortage in Canadian collieries, where additional hiring of general labor depended upon obtaining more certificated men.

The release of employees from the International Nickel Company's plant at Sudbury had proved a boon to undermanned metal mines in the Timmins and Kirkland Lake districts, which have absorbed many of these experienced men. The influx into Northern Ontario of machine runners, timber men and other skilled miners should enable the gold mines to take on an equal number of beginners. At the Pacific Coast, hard-rock mining operators are expanding their orders for skilled and unskilled labor, with particular emphasis on the need for highly qualified miners.

Construction Industry

"The demand for workers in the construction industry across the Dominion has been greater than usual at this season," the report said.

The most insistent demand of Ontario building firms is for interior-trim carpenters, who are very scarce. Lack of supplies has also retarded building programs in the province.

According to the recent residential construction survey, most contractors are reluctant to place orders for labor until assured of an easier flow of materials. For the most part, the manpower needs of manufacturers of such products are being well met, but moulders are still at a premium and it has been found necessary to compromise by engaging moulders' apprentices for training.

At Nov. 23, unfilled vacancies and unplaced applicants, in brackets in some industrial centres of Canada were Hamilton, 1,794 (4,069); London, 1,218 (1,207); Oshawa, 537 (4,893); Ottawa, 1,923 (2,240); St. Catharines, 297 (1,858); Toronto, 11,482 (17,516); Windsor 388 (9,213); Fort William 732, (1720).

For Ontario unfilled vacancies and unplaced applicants were 32,177 (56,027).

WARNS OF BOGUS SALESMAN IN WINDSOR

Windsor, Dec. 6—(CP)—Gordon Preston, president of the Windsor Police Association, last night warned merchants that a bogus salesman was attempting to sell advertising space in what the association says is a bogus police magazine. Preston urged merchants to check with local police officials before buying space in any police magazine.

40 FIREARMS SEIZED FROM UNLICENCED HUNTERS

Lindsay, Dec. 6—(CP)—Game overseers seized 40 firearms from unlicenced hunters during a recent patrol of highway 35 north of Coboconk. The confiscated weapons included rifles and shotguns.

Hope for Ending Security Strike Gathers Strength

Windsor, Dec. 6. (CP)—New hope for ending the 86-day-old Union security strike at the Ford Motor Company of Canada plant gathered strength today amid reports of a Union-sponsored plan to break the deadlock.

Negotiating and policy committees of Local 200 of the United Automobile Workers of America (C.I.O.) yesterday gave unanimous approval to the new settlement proposal which many Union men hope will lead to a second membership vote.

Last week, 5,000 of the 8,500 members of the Local rejected by a 52-48 vote a government-sponsored plan to end the strike, called Sept. 6 by the Union in a bid to enforce its demands for a Union shop and a check-off.

The Union announcement that the negotiating and policy committees had reached a unanimous decision did not refer directly to the new proposal to end the dispute, but it was generaly understood that was what the decision involved.

The shop stewards, who rejected the government settlement formula last Wednesday and were supported by a membership vote the following day, are to pass on the plan within the next 24 hours.

Proposal Submitted

Union sources said the Union proposal had been submitted to Dominion Labor Minister Humphrey Mitchell.

Sources close to the Union said the government will be urged to support the Union in its reported stand that negotiation and arbitration should start while the men are on the picket line and that Mr. Mitchell should place this view before the Ford Company.

Such a course was suggested to Labor Minister Mitchell several weeks ago by Union officials.

The previous plan's provision that the men go back to work before the negotiation- arbitration formula went into effect was blamed for its rejection by the Union membership.

Nazi Hangman Says He Was Compelled To Adjust Nooses

Dachau, Germany, Dec. 6 (AP)—Hangman Emil Erwin Mahl today told the United States military court trying Dachau concentration camp personnel on war crimes charges that he was compelled to adjust nooses about the necks of between 800 and 1000 prisoners ordered executed.

Mahl one of the defendants, said he was a prisoner and was forced to act as hangman.

"As a walking corpse myself," he said, "I had to do horrible things here. My soul was ruined by what I had to do."

ARREST ORDERED OF PRINCE KONOYE, MARQUIS KIDO

Seven Others Whose Activities Date Back To Imperialistic Japan Also Wanted

By MURLIN SPENCER

Tokyo, Dec. 6 —(AP)— Two powerful political figures whom many Japanese themselves consider among their top war criminals — Prince Fumimaro Konoye and Marquis Koichi Kido — were ordered arrested as war crimes suspects by Gen. MacArthur today.

Seven other men whose activities date back to the imperialistic preludes of the Pacific war also were listed as wanted.

Konoye, the dashing prince who served as one of Japan's most prized "front men," had been premier three times. Kido, a small, shrewd wire-puller, served as Emperor Hirohito's right hand man through the war.

Receive Another Shock.

Jittery Tokyo received another shock before it had recovered from Gen. MacArthur's announcement. Japanese Communists announced their own list of 1,000 persons they termed war criminals, including the Emperor and Empress.

In the Diet, Premier Kijuro Shidehara said that his government is in no position to criticize the Allied lists. He said he had no information on how many persons the occupation authorities intended to indict or try.

Kyodo News Agency said that Shidehara's cabinet received a serious blow when it failed to obtain an Allied reprieve for Prince Morisama Nashimoto, who was named as a war crimes suspect several days ago. Rumors are circulating that the cabinet will be forced to resign at the end of the Diet session, Kyodo reported.

Seven Others Named.

Reaching into the highest circles, the Allied commander named as the other seven wanted:

Vice Admiral Takuo Godo, who was unofficial envoy to Germany to present Japan's side of the China incident, also a former cabinet member.

Shigeo Odate, long time politico-economist.

Taketora Ogata, vice-president of the Tokyo newspaper Asahi and a foremost Japanese journalist.

Viscount Masatochi Okochi, industrialist.

Lt.-Gen. Hirochi Oshima who had been Japanese ambassador to Berlin since 1938 and arrived in Japan only today.

Count Tadamasu Sakai, member of the House of Peers.

Yakichiro Suma, long time diplomat; formerly concillor of the Japanese embassy in Washington.

Konoye has been one of the most talked about men in postwar Japan. Recently he was reported active in revision of the constitution and said he was doing the work at the request of Gen. MacArthur although the General denied this.

The new arrest order came only a few days after Japan had been deeply shaken by another list of war criminal suspects which included high Japanese financial, military and political leaders, including Prince Morisama Nashimoto.

Rays From A-Bomb Blast in Japan Affected Blood of Those Injured

Washington, Dec. 6. (AP)—A scientist described today how fantastic effects of rays given off by atomic bombs killed Japanese weeks after the blasts which flattened Hiroshima and Nagasaki.

Dr. Philip Morrison, who helped assemble those bombs, said the rays strangely affected the blood and made the victims a prey to fatal infection.

In a statement prepared for the special Senate Atomic Energy Committee he told of the gruesome findings of a party which inspected the devastated cities after the Japanese surrendered.

He said most persons within a mile of the bombs died quickly—either from the great heat of the blast or injuries suffered in demolished buildings.

Many who escaped death by blast or burn, Dr. Morrison said, "died from the effects of radium-like rays emitted in great number from the bomb at the instant of the explosion."

"This radiation affects the blood-forming tissues in the bone marrow, and the whole function of the blood is impaired," said the former physics instructor at the University of Illinois.

"The blood does not coagulate, but oozes in many spots through the unbroken skin, and internally seeps into the cavities of the body. The white corpuscles which fight infection disappear."

Lack of these corpuscles permits infection to "prosper," Dr. Morrison said, "and the patient dies, usually two or three weeks after the exposure.

"I am not a medical man, but like all nuclear physicists I have studied this disease a little," Dr. Morrison said. "It is a hazard of our profession. With the atomic bomb, it became epidemic. War now can destroy not cities, but nations."

After describing the destruction wrought to Hiroshima, Dr. Morrison said it is probable that an atom-bombed western city "would be as badly damaged as a Japanese city, though it would look less wrecked from the air.

"In Japan the wreckage burned clean; in a western city, the rubble would stand in piles in the streets.

"But the city would be just as ruined, and the people of the city as dead."

City and District Air Force Personnel on Queen Elizabeth

New York, Dec. 6 (CP) — Cunard-White Star Line officials today reported the liner Queen Elizabeth making steady progress toward New York with her load of 12,000 Canadian troops, unhindered by "heavy weather" battering the east coast of the United States.

Rain and high winds that hit the New York area last night were forecast to approach storm proportions by tonight but shipping company officials said the inclement weather had not held up the 85,000-ton Queen Elizabeth.

She is due to reach the port of New York about 6:30 a.m., E.S.T. Friday.

Thirteen Aboard.

Approximately 1320 Royal Canadian Air Force personnel are expected to arrive in New York Friday, December 7th., on the troopship S.S. Queen Elizabeth.

PREFABRICATED DWELLINGS NOT POPULAR IN U.K.

Little Likelihood Canada Will Supply Any Quantity to British Market

By STUART UNDERHILL
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Dec. 6 (C.P. Cable) — Unless present plans are changed, Britain will import no prefabricated houses from Canada as part of the government's housing program, it was learned here today.

Plans to bring prefabricated dwellings from the Dominion were given "sympathetic consideration at one time," it was said at the Ministry of Works, but they were abandoned because of shipping difficulties, fear of breakages in transit, and the general unpopularity of timber houses in Britain.

"There is such a small demand for timber houses in the United Kingdom that supplies from the nearest source—Europe — will more than meet the demand," a ministry official said. "Sweden is supplying about 5,000 which will be used in Scotland."

At the same time he admitted that when government restrictions on building are lifted, probably within a year's time, private builders may seek supplies from Canada. However, it was thought the demand would be for fixtures such as kitchen units — tables and drainboards.

The ministry had no official comment to make on reports that a large order for prefabricated materials already had been placed in Canada. It was intimated that a statement might be issued at a later date to clarify the situation, but the spokesman professed no knowledge of the deal.

Highways Unsafe For Motoring Dept. Warns

Toronto, Dec. 6 (CP) — The Ontario Department of Highways today warned motorists against driving on Provincial Highways in the south-central section of the province.

"Highways are hazardous from Belleville on the east to London on the west and north of Toronto on both sides of Lake Simcoe as far as the Severn River," said a spokesman. "The light rain is general and pavements are cold, resulting in icy conditions. If the temperature rises about two degrees the ice will melt and the hazard will be gone. But in the meantime we are warning against all traffic in the area."

The rain began falling early today and the weather bureau here forecast continued precipitation for the rest of today and part of Friday. The freezing rain was confined to southern Ontario. In the north generally fair weather was reported.

Light sleet during the night left streets at Woodstock in hazardous condition and several accidents were reported, though none was serious.

Rain continued to fall at Woodstock, Galt, Brantford, Guelph, St. Catharines and London, and dropping temperature threatened freeze-ups. Sarnia and Windsor reported mild weather with the mercury hovering around 40 degrees.

In Eastern Ontario roads were very icy, reports from Peterborough and Kingston said. All highways leading into Peterborough were considered dangerous, while bus line officials at Kingston reported that out-of-town trips may have to be suspended if the freezing rainfall continued until night.

BRITAIN REPORTS LOAN FROM U.S. OF 4.4 BILLION

Announcement Follows 12 Weeks of Negotiations Between Two Countries

By BARTON D. PATTIE

London, Dec. 6 —(AP)— A United States loan of $4,400,000,000 to Britain, subject to approval of American Congress and the British Parliament, was announced here today in the press and was hailed as a boon to world trade.

Official announcement of the agreement, following 12 weeks of negotiations between the two countries in Washington, was expected to be made simultaneously in the two capitals tonight.

The London press said the agreement called for repayment over a 50-year period starting from 1946, and added no interest would be payable for the first five years. Thereafter, the accounts said, the rate of interest would be two per cent — about $88,000,000 the first interest paying year.

None of the London newspapers commented editorially, but the tenor of the headlines given the accounts indicated enthusiastic approval of the agreement both by the Conservative and Labor press.

New Magna Carta.

The Conservative Daily Sketch termed the loan a "Magna Carta for world trade," and said it would "ease Britain's winter." The Labor Daily Herald said failure of the negotiations would have meant "further tightening of belts, general imposition of restrictions to avoid a call for dollars, and a period of intensive trade rivalry."

London newspapers said the agreement provided that of the total amount of the loan, $650,000,000 would be used in payment for goods in process of delivery to Britain when lend-lease was ended. The papers, quoting their Washington correspondents, said the loan itself — $3,750,000,000 — and the $650,000,000 lend-lease aid settlement would be repaid on precisely the same terms.

The dispatch to the Daily Herald said acceptance by Britain of the Bretton Woods monetary plan was a condition of the loan, and "the United States Congress will be kept in session to ratify the loan simultaneously with the passage of the Bretton Woods Bill by Parliament."

Concern Expressed.

Announcement of the agreement came after concern had been expressed in official circles here over progress of negotiations. When it had been reported that negotiations were on the brink of complete breakdown, the dispatches said, Sir Edward Bridges, permanent secretary to the treasury, was rushed from London to Washington by plane on three hours' notice.

The Daily Mail, commenting that the word "go" had been given to world trade by the agreement, said the detailed document listing the terms included a provision that Britain work toward a reduction of the sterling debt and dissolution of the dollar pool. The Mail said also that one condition was that Britain join with the United States in a long-range plan to reduce tariffs and eliminate quotas and restrictions on world trade.

SITUATION STILL SERIOUS

Toronto, Dec. 6—(CP)—Canada's sugar situation still is serious and no change in the present rationing system is anticipated, "at least until the end of 1946," T. A. Climo of Montreal, of sugar distribution for the Prices Board's sugar administration, yesterday told the 66th annual convention of the Ontario Beekeepers Association.

HOUSE CONTINUES SPIRITED DEBATE ON POWERS BILL

Justice Minister Says Govt. Will Retain Wartime Controls As Long as Necessary

By D'ARCY O'DONNELL
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, Dec. 6 (CP)—Debate on the government's emergency powers bill continued today in the Commons, but the force of arguments for and against the measure was believed to have been expended yesterday in a spirited exchange between two of the most prominent lawyers in the House.

Justice Minister St. Laurent and John Diefenbaker, Progressive Conservative member for the Saskatchewan constituency of Lake Centre, using their court-room training to advantage, held the members in rapt attention as they argued on what powers a government should have for the transitional period. When they finished, some progress was made in dealing with the clauses of the bill.

Mr. St. Laurent, veteran of many actions before the highest courts of the empire, stated flatly that the government plans to retain wartime controls so long as they are necessary for the protection of the Canadian people.

Wrinkles Still Left

Mr. Diefenbaker, tall, curly-haired, 50-year-old criminal lawyer, leaned over his desk, shook his finger at the government and charged that while the face of the original powers bill had been altered through amendments the "tell-tale wrinkles" were still there. Those wrinkles "spelled dictatorship in this country," unless the granting of wide powers to the government was opposed.

He demanded the government make clear to what extent the special powers were to be used; to what extent price control was to be eased; the extent to which wages were to be maintained at their present level and the future of federal labor legislation and National Selective Service.

Mr. St. Laurent said he could not answer those questions offhand. It was regrettable the circumstances were such that controls were required.

Takes Sharp Issue.

"But they are required and this government has the nerve to come to the country and say it intends to see that they are maintained so long as they are required."

He took sharp issue with John Hackett (PC—Standstead) who had stated earlier the people wanted a government with the nerve to take off controls.

Whipping off his glasses and flipping them on his desk, Mr. St. Laurent said emphatically:-

"This government has not the nerve to take off controls and make opportunities for those who would derive benefit from those opportunities at the expense of the mass of the population.

"This government has not that nerve. If there are people in the country who want a government with that nerve let him choose it from the other side of the House".

The spat came shortly after the House had given second reading on division, but without a recorded vote, to the bill. The reading came after a motion of Frederic Dorion (Ind.-Charlevoix-Saguenay) to give the bill a six-month hoist was rejected without a vote being called.

Briton Resigned That Lamb Instead Of Turkey Will be Fare for Christmas

By STUART UNDERHILL
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Dec. 6. (CP Cable)—The average Briton today appears resigned to the fact that his usual Sunday roast of lamb will have to do duty for Christmas dinner in place of turkey.

For a time, a threatened strike of London meat workers raised the possibility that Londoners at least might be deprived even of that. But postponement of the strike recommendation from Dec. 17 to Dec. 31 removed the danger to the Christmas dinner table.

The strike threat, without union sanction, arose from complaints by a small group of porters, shopmen and drivers at the huge Smithfield market that some ex-servicemen formerly employed there were being refused their old jobs. It came as housewives were being told by their butchers they could have little hope of unrationed turkeys for the festive board.

Black Market transactions in fowl were reported active but most of the time they were out of the price range of the small buyer in spite of Food Minister Sir Ben Smith's statement at a press conference Tuesday that the illegal traffic could not be controlled.

The Food Ministry has complicated restrictions to check such sales but their existence was confirmed inadvertently by Sir Ben. In response to a question he said: "There is a hell of a Black Market in this and I do not know how to stop it."

However, spokesmen for the Food Ministry said later this comment was intended to be off the record. Nevertheless, every British newspaper seized upon it with relish.

The Ministry makes every effort to control the sale of birds but obviously it cannot watch every barnyard deal. During December licences are required before such sales are legal but it is admitted many persons made their purchases at above ceiling prices before Dec. 1. There is no record of the price paid in the transaction and the farmers keep the bird on the farm fattening it up until the buyer is ready.

It was thought Sir Ben had these dealings in mind when he had made his reference to the Black Market. Retail sales are much easier to control and few pitchers are willing to risk severe penalties imposed for violation of regulations.

Date for Invasion Of Poland Set Five Months in Advance

Hitler Ordered Army to Be 'On Alert' After Sept. 1. '39

(By DANIEL DE LUCE)

Nuernberg, Dec. 6.— (AP) — Britain's pledge to aid Poland in the event of hostilities delayed start of the Second Great War seven days as Hitler unsuccessfully tried to keep Britain neutral, according to a statement by Hermann Goering filed at the war crimes trial today.

Nuernberg, Dec. 6 (AP) — Adolf Hitler secretly agreed on September 1, 1939, as the date for the invasion of Poland five months in advance, while falsely proclaiming to the world that he had no thought of further aggression, German records introduced at the International War Crimes trial disclosed today.

Proving the lies of Hitler's diplomatic double talk with the Fuehrer's own official records, British prosecutors revealed that a Wehrmacht directive dated April 3, 1939, ordered the army to be ready for the Polish invasion "at any time from September 1, 1939, onwards."

Three weeks after the Nazi "Der Tag" had been set, Hitler made a speech to the Reichstag April 28 in which he shouted that he "had no thought of proceeding in any way against Poland," according to other documents introduced as evidence at the trial of 20 top Nazis accused of war crimes.

Completely Dishonest.

Hitler's public proclamation, contrasted with his cold-blooded plans for launching the Second Great War, "shows how completely dishonest was the German government at that time," commented Col. Mervin Griffith-Jones, assistant British prosecutor.

Germany's Axis partner, Italy, was not let in on the plan to invade Poland until August 12th., 1939, and Mussolini made an urgent but fruitless request for Hitler to postpone the war for two or three years to permit Italian rearmament to progress, other documents showed as British prosecutors unveiled the "inside story" of Hitler's activities just prior to the outbreak of the war.

Trial to Recess.

At the request of counsel for the 20 accused Nazis, Lord Justice Sir Geoffrey Lawrence, presiding judge on the four-power tribunal, announced that the trial will recess over the Christmas holidays, from December 20 to January 2. The chief U.S. prosecutor, Justice Robert H. Jackson, entered a formal objection to the recess after it was announced.

The order placing the German army on the alert for the invasion of Poland by September 1st., 1939, was issued by Field Marshal Wilhelm Keitel, chief of the high command and one of the twenty German leaders on trial. The directive disclosed that it was made on Hitler's order.

Attached to the order was another directive signed by Hitler himself April 11, 1939, referring flatly to "preparations for the conduct of the war" against Poland.

In May, Field Marshal Keitel was disclosed to have transmitted additional instructions to the German armed forces for "the economic war and the protection of our own autonomy" in the forthcoming invasion of Poland.

Notes of a speech Hitler made in May to top-ranking Nazis disclosed that the Fuehrer was virtually as determined to fight Britain and France as he was to attack Poland. Plans were made to dispatch submarines to the Atlantic in August and naval trading ships such as the one that bombarded the Polish garrison near Danzig were dispatched to the Baltic in August, other records showed.

The German defendants listened intently at the reading of the minutes of the August meeting between Hitler and Count Ciano, Italian foreign minister, and it was apparent that details of the Italian plea to defer the start of the war were new to most of them.

Mussolini's View Given.

Ciano presented Mussolini's view that the war should be deferred two or three years and pleaded that Italy was ill prepared. It was not until June 10th., 1940, that Italy finally declared war on Britain and France, soon after the British withdrawal from France at Dunkerque.

The British prosecutor then read the late Prime Minister Chamberlain's note warning Germany after the signing of the Russo-German pact that Britain would stand by her guarantee to aid Poland, and asking a "truce" while Polish-German discussions were held.

Answered Chamberlain.

On August 23—nine days before he attacked—Hitler answered Mr. Chamberlain that Germany could "not renounce certain essential interests."

The British prosecutor then read reports from Britain's ambassador to Warsaw terming the border clashes which Germany used as a pretext for invasion as "completely false." Previous testimony had shown that German concentration camp inmates were dressed in Polish uniforms and then shot in fake raids on a German border radio station.

For the first time, the former Reichsbank president, Walther Funk, who is one of the defendants, was named in the evidence. The prosecution produced a letter from Funk to Hitler in which the economist told of ways in which the Reichsbank had prepared for the war.

"It is difficult to say in view of the letter how the defendant Funk can claim no knowledge of the conspiracy to make war," the prosecution said.

Fat Hermann Goering, also mentioned in the letter, nodded his head and grinned.

FOOD STOLEN FROM RESTAURANT KITCHEN

The larder of some thief was quickly replenished at the expense of proprietors of the Round Spot on Dundas Street when the rear window was forced and a quantity of canned goods and half a ham taken from the restaurant kitchen. According to the report received by police the screen on the window was torn permitting entrance of those responsible for the theft.

With the exception of the apprehension of several inebriates, police circles were comparatively quiet over the night. One officer reported while patrolling Front Street he saw a man in uniform endeavoring to make off with a bicycle which was dropped when the "man in blue" called. In the ensuing chase the constable proved the more fleet of foot and the man was brought to the police station where it was learned he was slightly intoxicated.

MR. ENOS DAVID ADDRESSES MEETING IN MONTREAL, QUE.

Speaking to a joint meeting of Directors and Dealers of the Quebec Radio and Appliance Dealers Association in Montreal last Monday Enos David local dealer stressed the crying need for understanding amongst all Canadians and organizations among dealers with the primary purpose of promoting better business principles for the protection of the public and assisting the hundreds of returned service men who have chosen to enter into this business.

Approval was voiced by representatives of power companies and Quebec Hydro Commission who were in attendance. The meeting was held in the board rooms of the Retail Merchants' Association of Canada in Montreal.

Streets in Hazardous Condition Due to Rain

Sand, ashes and careful going, both on the part of pedestrians and vehicular traffic, were the were the order of the day this morning when rain started to fall and freezing as it fell left sidewalks and roadways in an extremely slippery condition.

Vehicular traffic struggling along without chains negotiated grades about the city only with extreme difficulty and several autos were noticed to slide back into the curb where they became stalled pending the advent of better conditions of traction, artificial or otherwise.

Sliding wheels caused by application of brakes and unevenness of the road surface resulted in autos skidding sideways with result minor fender clashes were inevitable. Police expected a series of bumped fenders and other minor auto crashes before conditions improved. The city sander was out promptly, however, in an effort to improve street conditions.

And pedestrians had their own difficulty in negotiating the slippery sidewalks and were forced to creep along the edges taking full advantage of any rough and uneven surfaces to avoid expected but dreaded tumbles.

No Arrear Accounts Between Hospital and Municipalities Administrator Tells Council

Gordon Barclay Says Fine Condition of Accounts Due to Splendid Co-operation

For the first time in the history of association between the Belleville General Hospital and the municipalities of Hastings County, there is not one account in arrears, Hospital Administrator Gordon Barclay told the council at the Wednesday afternoon session.

Furthermore, Mr. Barclay added, "there is not an outstanding account in our books beyond this year, while those of this year amount to only 13, the oldest of which is 90 days."

"This, I think, establishes a record in dealings between a municipality and a hospital which has been made possible only through the splendid co-operation given by the reeves of the county to our business office."

"The hospital had done its best to collect," Mr. Barclay said, "and this work has been greatly facilitated by the vast improvement in the questionnaires returned to us by the heads of the various municipalities."

Mr. Barclay paid tribute to the work of Superintendent Elmer Sandercock, head of the Hastings County Home. "No county has a better man to superintend its home. He has always co-operated with the hospital to the fullest extent.

Separate Board Set Up

Referring to the construction of the proposed new Chronic and Convalescent Hospital, the administrator told the council that separate board has been set up under the heading of finance.

Trouble has been experienced in securing parcels of land adjacent to that formerly owned by the county. "Both owners offered to sell, but the price asked was exorbitant."

Three valuators had been secured and they had appraised the property. Offers have been made to the owners and Mr. Barcaly intimated that if they are not accepted expropriation will take place.

At the present time, an architect has been contracted by the hospital Board of Governors and the Women's Christian Association and present plans call for the beginning of construction work in the spring with completion expected in late Autumn.

Made by Tunnel

From an economic point of view, the two institutions will establish a precedent in dual operations, Mr. Barclay thought. Connections will be made by tunnel underneath McDonald Avenue while the new institution will be heated by the General Hospital furnaces. He was not sure, as yet as to whether feeding facilities could be arranged with the general hospital but felt sure that it could be done.

Speaking of the Plan for Hospital Care now in vogue in many hospitals in the country, the administrator said that recently the number of people taking advantage of the plan had reached the 500.000 mark.

"I am not an agent for the plan but I feel that everyone who can should take advantage of it. It is ideal for the poorer man for the cost is only $1.50 per month which procures hospitalization for the entire family. Any organization can join which will give its members the benefit of the plan. It is marvelous for the hospital and wonderful for the people. There is no worry on the part of the people for we simply bill the Plan and they send us the cheque.

Low Per Capita Rate.

Belleville General Hospital, the administrator pointed out was one of the lowest in a per capita rate for indigent patients in the province of Ontario, according to a recent survey. This has been achieved through the whole-hearted co-operation between hospital officials and those of county municipalities.

He told council that a new organization called the Eastern Ontario Hospital Association has been formed which embraces institutions from Cobourg to Cornwall to Ottawa and Pembroke. He had been appointed a director of the organization and at its first round table conclave which occurs in the near future the administrator intends to speak on the co-operation which exists between his institution and its municipalities. "If all municipalities work in conjunction with their hospitals as is done in Hastings County and Belleville, there will be more efficiency, better feelings and fewer indigent patients in the province as a whole."

Seed Growers Endorse Policy Of Parent Body

Members of the Bay of Quinte Seed Growers' Association at their annual meeting here this week unanimously endorsed a policy sponsored by the provincial association to have growers of registered seed grain constantly advised of price levels which are current. At the present time there is considerable variation in the price of seed grain across the province through sellers not being up to date on current prices, it was stated.

John D. McLeod, of the Crops, Seeds and Weeds Branch of the Ontario Department of Agriculture, outlined the association program on the above matter with the endorsation of the plan by local members following.

Mr. McLeod also talked on the proposed amendment to the weed control act, the aim of which is to afford a better control of obnoxious weeds.

Oscar Parks of Bloomfield was re-elected as president of the Quinte Seed Growers' Association, with John Rickard of Newcastle being named as vice president. Lynn Fair, agricultural representative for Hastings, was returned as secretary treasurer. Most present members of the directorate were returned for another year, with Ralph Sills of Zion Hill being named as the Hastings representative.

The district covered by the Bay of Quinte Seed Growers' Association extends from Ontario county on the west to Frontenac county on the east.

Members decided to hold a seed fair in the district although the date or place it will be held was not determined.

Deloro Safety Committee Meets

Marmora, Dec. 6.—The regular monthly meeting of the Deloro Safety Committee was held in the Electric Shop on Tuesday with Chairman C. H. Buskard, presiding over a good attendance of members. The report of the Suggestions' Committee presented by G. Brooks showed that one suggestion had been received in the past month. For the Competitive Committee. G. H. Rennie told of one suggestion receiving an award besides mentioning that the Star was awarded to the Stellite Department and that there were no accidents in November. W. M. Regan reported for the Inspection Committee. Ten suggestions were received and all were completed. G. H. Rennie was appointed floating member for the current month. A. W. Drew for the Publicity Committee mentioned the forthcoming poster contest. J. A. Reid reported for the Health and Investigation Committee; saying that twenty men attended the Prone Method practice in the past month. Inspection of the First Aid boxes showed fifteen treatments recorded. The chairman brought in the monthly statement of the Trustee Relief Board and M. J. Corrigan gave the final report that of the Plant Bulletin.

Tribute Paid James L. Irwin By Cheese Makers

Sterling tribute to James L. Irwin, former dairy produce grader for the Central Ontario District, for his splendid work during his long term of office was heard Wednesday afternoon during the closing session of the cheese makers' annual convention.

Speaking to members of the district cheese makers' association in the absence of J. F. Singleton, Mr. Cameron stated the dairy products division of the Department of Agriculture was much better for having Mr. Irwin associated with it for so many years.

"Mr. Irwin had the ability to instill confidence in the cheese maker whose cheese he was grading," stated Mr. Cameron, "and secondly he took a profound interest in the welfare of the cheese makers. However, in view of his interest in the welfare of the individual maker, Mr. Irwin never wavered from the standards of cheese grading as required by his department."

"The Dairy Products Division is today much better for its having Mr. Irwin's association.

Druggists Hold Get-together With Combined Staffs

Were you one of the persons who tried in vain Wednesday night to find a drug store open so you could purchase some cold tablets? Sorry, but it was the night of the second annual get-together of the Belleville Druggists' Association and their combined staffs at Lattimer's Tea Room.

The first of these get-togethers was held last March but the druggists decided that the Christmas season was better for this type of meeting. This will be the policy in the future.

Court Miller acted as chairman and welcomed all the employees and guests.

The feature entertainer of the evening was Mr. Stanley Pearson who was introduced by Mr. Terry Dolan. Stan proved himself very versatile by reciting "Albert and the Lion" in his best Lancashire dialect, and rendering two very fine selections on the harmonica. These acts were very well received but his "tin whistle" selections really brought the house down. Mr. George Pauley thanked Mr. Pearson on behalf of the gathering.

Mr. Harold "Trustee-elect" Seldon proposed a toast to the employees which was responded to by Mr. Gardner Duff.

Presentation Made.

A highlight of the evening was a presentation to Mr. Frank Sharpe, recently retired messenger of the Bank of Montreal. In making the presentation, P. W. Geen said, that Mr. Sharpe had "served" the Belleville druggists (with bank drafts) for fifty-two years and that the presentation was just a small token of their esteem together with the wish that he would enjoy good health and happiness for many years to come.

Harold Seldon and Bruce Lattimer presided over the various games, contests and the drawing of prizes. Winners included Ross Schryver, Jennie Burris, Archie Boyd, George Pauley, in fact, everyone present received some sort of prize.

The chairman stated that the party was just another milestone in co-operation and good will between the druggists of Belleville and their employees.

The meeting closed with the singing of "O Canada."

Cheese Makers to Meet Producers To Discuss Measures to Eradicate Extraneous Matter in Product

A delegation of cheese makers and dairy officials appointed by the Central Ontario Cheese Makers' Association will wait on the Ontario Cheese Producers' Association at their annual meeting in Toronto to discuss measures to eradicate extraneous matter in cheese.

Discussion on the matter of extraneous matter in cheese and sediment in milk for cheese purposes took up a considerable part of the time of the different sessions of the cheese makers convention which closed here Wednesday with result it was decided to take the matter up with cheese producers where it was felt at least a part of the blame lay.

Increase in cheese production in Canada and in various other exporting countries of the world was analyzed by W. C. Cameron, chief, Dairy Products, Grading and Inspection Service, during the last session of the cheese makers' convention held Wednesday afternoon. In view of cheese production in other parts of the world Mr. Cameron outlined Canada's chances on world markets in the post war period.

Increased Production

Canada, United States and New Zealand had tremendously increased production of cheese to meet demands during the war, this increase in production amounting to three times the normal annual requirements of Great Britain. He expected that many European countries would for some time continue to require above their pre-war requirements of cheese, but warned that these countries used a type of cheese not manufactured in Canada.

The speaker felt that Canadian domestic consumption of cheese could be increased, but warned that for the export market the country making the highest quality cheese, having the most economical manufacture and the best marketing program would be the most successful.

Quality Increases.

"Quality of Canadian cheese had increased during the war years, subsidies on high scoring cheese being in a measure responsible. Prior to the war only two per cent of Canadian cheese scored 93 or 94 points, while today this had increased to approximately 25 per cent.

Net result of grading throughout Ontario during the past season showed that Central Ontario manufactured the highest percentage of 1st-grade cheese with 96.50 per cent falling into this category. Eastern Ontario came next with 96.05 per cent, while Western Ontario produced but 95.54 per cent of first grade.

Two officials of the Department of Agriculture from Quebec were heard at the convention as they reviewed dairy industry conditions in their province. Mr. Camirand paid tribute to the sponsors of the cheese show in Belleville and told members of the association that there was a tendency in his province toward larger factories. As result the number of cheese factories in the province had decreased but in contrast the manufacture of cheese had increased.

Combined factories were also quite popular in Quebec, it was stated, there being a total of 277 combined cheese and butter factories.

Thos. J. Hicks, Senior Dairy Produce Grader, Montreal, reported on the quality of cheese shown at the British Empire Cheese Show and complimented its sponsors on the success of the exhibition.

Refrigerator Car Of C.N.R. Badly Damaged by Fire

Fire which is believed to have started from a charcoal stove resulted in considerable damage to a refrigerator car of the Canadian National Railways during the noon hour on Wednesday. Members of the city fire department were called to extinguish the flames when they could not be controlled by railroad employees.

The refrigerator car was in the east end of the C.N.R. yards when it was first noticed to be afire and when efforts of employees revealed the blaze in the thickly insulated car was unlikely to be controlled, it was moved to a position near the freight sheds. Firemen then ran 450 feet of hose and with the aid of the booster tank controlled the fire.

Insulation in one end and on both sides of the car was torn out by firemen to get at the seat of the blaze. Railroad officials did not comment on the nature of the car's load.

Vastly Expanded Economy Needed if Peoples of Ravished Europe to be Fed Says Speaker

Editor of Farmers' Advocate Delivers Principal Address at Cheese Makers' Banquet Which Concludes Convention

Members of the Central Ontario Cheese Makers' Association concluded one of their most successful and largely attended conventions in years when Wednesday evening they staged their cheese makers' banquet in the Bridge Street United Church Sunday School rooms when ladies of the Plainfield Women's Institute fed more than 300 persons in a manner which left nothing to be desired.

It was a truly successful conclusion to a highly successful convention when district cheese makers played hosts to their wives and sweethearts, to ranking dairy officials and to members of the Hastings county council. The program was entertaining, the addresses brief and instructive.

Guest speaker for the evening was Watson Porter, editor Farmers' Advocate of London, Ontario, who proved his wide knowledge of world economies with a clear illustration of the path which nations must follow if their people are to live as neighbors, free from want and free from fear.

Expanded Economy Needed

Picturing the vast problems which are confronting food and agriculture organizations of the United Nations in feeding the peoples of ravished Europe and in other parts of the world, the speaker declared that a vastly expanded economy was needed. Commodity agreements in all probability would have to be entered into between the nations, different countries co-operating on the sale of products.

Naturally a country such as Canada would have to surrender something. It would possibly mean a shifting of production—a shifting to co-operate effort—with a wider distribution of world goods. The result would be a degree of security and abundance rather than scarcity in the national economy.

Have Not the Funds

At the same time Mr Porter warned Canadians to awaken to realization that they have been living in an era of war economy with practically limitless markets and guaranteed prices. Canada hasn't the funds to keep that kind of a national economy going, he said.

Canada was stated to be primarily an exporting nation with her present day economy having been built up and based on her exports. But the speaker warned Canada could not expect to blast her way into European markets, which do not exist as result of ravishes of war. She must assist other countries to again get onto their feet in order that they in turn may buy Canadian goods.

"Either we will have to come down to their scale of living or build other countries up to our level," he said. "The time has come for us to be internationally minded."

Urges Factory Beautification

In referring to the cheese industry, Mr. Porter declared the way to encourage greater domestic production of cheese was to commence a program of factory beautification which would go a long way toward causing Canadians to start purchasing cheese. "Well kept and tidy factories will help sell your product," he assured.

Again in reference to export markets, the speaker declared that in cheese the Bay of Quinte district is producing a commodity most adaptable for export and a commodity which is wanted and needed in many countries.

Well-known to cheese makers conventions and to convention banquets, Duncan R. Cowan, past master in the art of entertaining, acted as master of ceremonies for the splendid and varied evening's program. Mr. Cowan was heard in several witty Scotch numbers and his repartee kept the audience in good humour throughout the evening.

Soloists Heard

The silvery voice of Belleville's idol vocalist, Miss Ethel Smith, was heard as she sang "My Hero" and "Lonesome, That's All", while Mrs. Edna Reid Carrow, Toronto, soprano, was heard in two classical numbers. Miss Leona Riggs acted as accompanist for Miss Smith, while Eric Corradi, well-known local pianist, provided the accompaniment for Mrs. Carrow and during the hearty singsong led by Mr. Cowan.

Also included on the musical part of the program were several numbers by a harmony instrumental quartette composed of Ernie Barragar, Bruce Sills, Jack Hull and Fred Stone and his violin. Rounding out the varied entertainment was Rod Roddick, Toronto magician who presented a whole bagful of tricks for the mystification of his audience. Bill Navin brought down the house with two comedy numbers.

George Thompson, of Springbrook, acted as chairman for the evening and in a few brief remarks expressed a welcome home to the many returned veterans attending the banquet. J. Fred Wilson introduced the guest speaker.

Regular Diet

Major, the Rev. Arthur Smith, rector of St. Thomas' Church, paid tribute to the rural residents of the Bay of Quinte district in their war effort of producing cheddar cheese which he assured was regular diet for the troops guarding the front lines.

"The boys on the fighting fronts really appreciated their Canadian cheese," assured Major Smith, "and I can say they were the best fed soldiers in the world."

The speaker also extended congratulations to officials of the Cheese Makers' Association on their successful convention and cheese exhibition. "You may be justly proud of your effort, and of the effort put forth during the war years," he said.

Dr. H.P. Douglas Gives Interesting Talk to Club

Picton, Dec. 6—Dr. H. P. Douglas, Dean of Women, Queen's University, gave an interesting talk on the application of astronomy to literature, at the meeting of the Tennyson Club, Tuesday night.

Dr. Douglas, who is an authority on astronomy, and who had the distinction of being the first woman to head the Royal Astronomical Council of Canada, has the clever faculty of being able to translate highly scientific facts to the lay mind. Dr. Douglas added to her address by showing slides on the subject of astronomy.

"The music of the spheres through the mediums of symmetry and metaphor, have greatly enriched our poetry as well as our prose," Dr. Douglas said. She quoted from many of the poets facts and from the Bible, to illustrate her deductions.

The meeting was at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Calvin Spencer, with 50 present. Hostesses with Mrs. Spencer were Mrs. J. A. Harvie, Mrs. R. L. Perkin, Mrs. J. H. Hodgins, Mrs. C. R. Richtao etaoi taoi etao etao etao eee mond and Miss Lorna Arscott.

Picton's Mayor 34 Years Old

Picton, Dec. 6. —At 34 years of age, Mayor-elect Ralph Warren is believed to be one of the youngest mayors in Canada. Behind him lie eight years of municipal experience. A recent newspaper article gave the age of the youngest mayor as 37.

Mayor-elect Warren was elected to town council in 1938. After two years as councillor, he was elected Deputy-Reeve. He reverted to councillor for 1942-43 and again became deputy-reeve in 1944 and reeve in 1945. For six of these years he headed the finance committee.

Mr. Warren has been active in community affairs. He was Commodore of Prince Edward Yacht Club from 1941-45; treasurer of the Public Health Committee; President of the Home and School Committee (Men's Division), 1944-45; a member of Prince Edward County Hospital Board this year. He is a member of the United Church Board. Previous to taking over a service station, he was employed in banks at Picton and Belleville.

$8,550 Donated To Patriotic Purposes in '45

Hastings County, through the medium of its county council contributed $8,500 to patriotic purposes during 1945, the report of the County Patriotic Committee as presented by Chairman James Nickle reeve of Marmora and Lake Townships, revealed at the Wednesday session of the County Council.

The Hastings-Belleville Red Cross Society was given $3,000 at the request of these organizations while eleven Red Cross units within the county were granted $200 each, the report said.

The Community Services of Belleville and the county were granted $1,900 while the Navy League received $1,000.

Service Libraries of the Independent Order of the Daughters of the Empire received $50 while the Salvation Army branch at Tweed, Ont., was the recipient of $100.

The committee granted $300 to the fund for the reception of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment in October.

The report stated that the committee had recommended and had been granted one-half mill on the county assessment which amounted to $9,141.40. Of this amount $8,550 has been expended for patriotic purposes, which leaves a balance of $591.40.

The report was adopted by the council as a whole.

Measures to Improve Quality of Milk For Cheese Discussed at Convention

Discussion on the feasibility of the institution of farm inspection as a measure to improve the quality of milk being produced for cheese purposes, took up a considerable part of the Wednesday morning session at the Central Ontario Cheese Makers' Association annual convention being held in this city.

The matter was broached by C. E. Lackner, director of Dairying, Department of Agriculture for Ontario, when during his address he stated it was imperative that the quality of milk produced for cheese and other related purposes must be raised. He doubted, however, that farm inspection was the best answer to the problem unless the co-operation of the industry was forthcoming.

Suggests Sediment Tests

In the discussion period following Mr. Lackner's address, E. G. Hood, chief, Dairy Research Science Service, Ottawa, thought that sediment tests of milk received at the factory would go a long way to correct the trouble if the tests were followed up. Garnet Bain, dairy instructor, went further to state that if there was instituted a price differential for clean milk, all milk received at factories would soon be clean.

W. H. Montgomery, Carrying Place, past president of the Ontario Cheese Producers. Association, advocated a system of farm inspection declaring that if all milk produced came up to a certain quality standard, switching of cheese milk to the whole milk trade would offer no problem.

Says Subsidies to Continue

Bringing greetings from the Cheese Producers' Association, Mr. Montgomery expressed the opinion that the cheese industry would to a certain extent continue to be subsidized through government legislation.

A paper of the "Effect of Cooking Temperatures on Quality of Cheddar Cheese", was presented by a representative from the Ontario Agricultural College at Guelph, while J. M. Bain, London, chief dairy instructor for Western and Central Ontario, was also heard at the morning session.

Former French POW Writes of Problems Facing His People

A detailed account of the problems confronting the French people in their attempt to readjust themselves to normal family life following years of separation—as result of the Nazi occupation is contained in the following letter received by Mr. Clayton Chambers of this city, from a former French prisoner of war.

The letter was sent to Mr. Chambers to express appreciation for clothing which had been contributed in a clothing campaign to relieve conditions overseas. Mr. Chambers included a note and his address with the parcel.

The letter follows:

Etienne Desch,
25 rue de Douai,
Paris.

Dear Sir:

It was a delicate attention on your part to have added to the precious gift of your jacket, a letter of encouragement. The Canadians are in France, considered with a feeling of very warm sympathy and I am happy to be able to pronounce personally that this feeling of friendship is reciprocal.

I have just returned from captivity. Five years of slavery have seriously compromised my situation in life and without your help and that of "The Salvation Army" which has a great work to do in my country ruined by the rapacity of the Nazis, I should still be probably clothed in rags.

The Americans set me free on April 13th and, three weeks after that date, I rejoined my family—on the very day of the capitulation of Germany. My brother, likewise a prisoner in the Oldenbourg district, was liberated by your compatriots and he has a very fine recollection of their cordial reception. Those are joys which a free man can scarcely imagine.

Our readjustment to normal life took place with a slowness which was somewhat surprising to us, for we were persuaded that once we had set foot on our native soil, we would recover all our old enthusiasm. This postwar period is dreadfully disillusioning. Some people have grown odiously rich whilst others suffered. There is a blind rush towards pleasure and profit. We who have been prisoners and who know the cost of sacrifices, find the sight of this excess of base feelings heart-rending.

Let us hope that it is only the hasty reaction of a society too long held under restraint. It will subside.

My brother and I have planned to work a farm in common. We are both bachelors and prefer the hardy and active life of the country to the unwholesome atmosphere of the city. But willingness to work does not secure work and all the steps we have taken have been so far doomed to failure. Perseverence, I think will reward us.

At the age of 19—I am now 33—attracted by the picturesqueness of your country and by the loyal and upright character of Canadians, I intended to come and settle on your land in order to farm it. Mr. Davies, a friend of mine who lives at Kidderminster in England, had undertaken to get together all useful information, but at the last moment I thought I ought to give up the idea of crossing "the big pond" (herring pond), thereby letting slip a fine opportunity of participating, thirteen years later in the landing in Normandy.

If I were not afraid of boring you, I would triple the length of this letter. In any case, may I venture to ask you again not to sever, with this first exchange of correspondence, the connection between us which has been established by so helpful a gesture, for I should be happy to win your esteem and to prove to you more fully my gratitude.

With my very sincere thanks, I am,

Yours sincerely,
E. Desch.

Bowlers Initiate Member Into Masonic Order

Masonic members of the Belleville Lawn Bowling Club assisted by bowlers from the district were in charge of the meeting of Eureka Lodge at the Masonic Temple Wednesday evening when Elgin Ford a member of the Belleville Club, was initiated into the mysteries of masonry. There was a large attendance of the regular members of the lodge along with the bowlers and a most enjoyable evening was spent.

Wor. Bro. Harvey Stewart, secretary of the Belleville Club was in charge of the arrangements and acted as Worshipful Master during the ceremony of initiation. Wor. Bro. Wally Embury acted as Immediate Past Master, P. J. S. Dewar, Senior Warden, A. D. Bennett, Campbellford, Junior Warden, W. Pinkston, secretary, Clarence Clapp, treasurer, H. R. Tompkins of Stirling Chaplain, Joe Blackburn, Senior Deacon, Reg Seymour of Campbellford, Senior Deacon, Archie Myers, Campbellford, Senior Steward, Charles Hyde, Junior Steward, Lloyd Taylor, Inner Guard. These officers were assisted by Rt. Wor. Bro. Owen Watson of Campbellford, Rt. Wor. Bro. Dr. E. A. Carleton of Stirling and Very Wor. Bro. Tommy Solmes of Stirling. The degree was exemplified in an efficient and capable manner.

After the proceedings of the lodge were concluded, the members repaired to the banquet room where the Worshipful Master of Eureka Lodge presided as chairman. The usual toasts were drunk and an hour of goodfellowship prevailed.

Social Evening Held by Kiwanis Members at Centre

One of the finest parties staged by the Kiwanis Club was given by part of the roster at the Kiwanis Centre on Wednesday evening, the attendance being the largest of the many affairs given. Horace Taylor and Mrs. Harry Trepanier were co-chairmen for the event and their efforts in entertainment for the guests was greatly appreciated.

The early part of the evening was devoted to bridge with Mrs. Eddie Logan winning the women's high and Mrs. Reg. Hinchey the low. Arthur Sills was high for the men and Albert Jones secured the booby prize. A number of games were played with Russell Smith and Mrs. Russell Smith being the winners of the contests. These contests were quite original and brought gales of laughter from the audience. Mrs. Laura Hyde delighted with a reading, while Mrs. Trepanier won the bean-carrying contest. The piece de resistance of the evening was the pillow fight staged by members of the club.

Jack White was the announcer, the contestants being Harry Trepanier and Tom McNevin. Mr. Trepanier was ably seconded in the ring by Albert Jones with Morris Button doing duty for Mr. McNevin and Jimmy Cowan being the third man in the ring. The contestants were blindfolded and it was quite a task to keep the seconds out of the ring, they being bent on assisting their fighters. The pillows were not soft and the boys received quite a shellacking during their three-round encounter because no quarter was asked nor given.

A most delightful lunch was served by the women of the committee after which Santa Claus made a visit to the centre and distributed noise makers and prizes. The meeting closed with the singing of "Auld Lang Syne."

Tragic Fires

Fire is a lurking enemy of man though it has been one of the great factors in the development of civilization when under control. When control is lost or lacking or fails or in case of accident it becomes an inferno which may claim lives and the labor of mankind.

Recently there has been a number of fires which have shocked the public because so many lives have been taken. And it is not only just recently such tragedies have occurred but the record over the years indicates what a monster flame may become.

In the northern part of the world fire is essential for existence and hence in the cold seasons where humans live in houses with fires burning at night and in the daytime there is a heavy toll of lives and losses by fires.

Eternal vigilance is the only safety. And even then there may be fire that is or seems purely accidental. Care and vigilance have to take so many forms, such as care of the heating unit, whether furnace or stove, security of pipes and chimneys, lamps and the close regard of dampers to prevent fires possibly getting out of control and spreading to woodwork, walls or curtains. Care has to be taken that nothing which can take fire is left within possible range of the intense heat of the heating unit.

Fire strikes very often with fatal results at night when tired humans are asleep and are easy prey.

Montreal Herald says of fires: "Without assuming the coroner's grim duty of assigning responsibility — if any — one assumes lack of realization of the hazards of fire as a factor contributing to the toll.

"Which suggests that we need fifty-two Fire Prevention weeks a year to instil in us the safeguarding conviction that fire is still an only partially tamed force, capable of killing and destroying if not kept under constant vigilance."

Too much stress cannot be laid on this fact.

There cannot be any let-up in the taking of every possible precaution and safeguard against the chance of an outbreak of fire.

Everyone in the light of recent fire disasters can appreciate how dangerous fires can become.

British Troops in Civilian Emergencies

British troops in many parts of the world are undertaking jobs "outside their normal duties." The reputation for adaptability and good nature of the British servicemen has been borne out by the variety of unusual tasks tackled since the end of the war to help civilian populations. A example of such versatility can be found in the following operations.

By "Operation Stork" which deals with the temporary evacuation of German children. Three weeks ago the first convoy of Operation Stork set out from Berlin bearing thirteen hundred children and two hundred and fifty adults. This was the first batch in the voluntary evacuation scheme for children between the ages of four and fourteen organized by the British in the British sector of Berlin.

Every day for a fortnight the "Stork" convoy assembled in Berlin and was driven by British soldiers to Helmstedt where the children spent the night and then entrained for various reception centres. On arrival after a hot meal they met their foster parents. The Operation is now completed, with twenty-one thousand children and sixteen thousand adults settled into country districts for the winter away from the dangers of Berlin epidemics.

Berlin approves the scheme and accepts it as evidence that the British are doing all they can to alleviate suffering this winter, and the children themselves were happy and excited at the prospect before them.

"Operation Catsmeat" is the nickname given by the British naval force to their expedition deep into the interior of French Indo-China. They brought vital food supplies back to Saigon where stocks were dangerously low.

The expedition, probably one of the strangest ever sailed by the British East Indies Fleet, consisted of a small craft manned by Japanese sailors with Gurkha guards armed with machine guns. Forcing their way across the intricate canal system and then down the Naking river through heavy Annamite resistance, they eventually reached Pnom-Penh, the capital of Cambodia. After embarking about one thousand head of cattle, six thousand pigs and large stocks of rice, the force began its return journey. The Annamites expected them this time and had prepared an ambush. A row of sunken craft reinforced with a log barrier stretched from bank to bank. Despite constant fire from the Annamites on the banks, the task force managed to clear the barriers and forced a passage through, reaching Saigon as the food crisis was reaching its peak.

In the Batavia area of Java the R.A.F. have figured in an operation outside the sphere of their normal duties. They have just finished a three weeks' campaign against malaria, mosquitoes and flies. Two Dakotas have made twenty-five sorties each with D.D.T., spraying a fifty mile radius which included the dock area and the fisheries north of the city. Japanese prisoners of war were used to transport kerosene from the ships and mix it with D.D.T. powder to make the twenty-five thousand gallons needed for the task. R.A.F. Dakotas have also sprayed Singapore docks and harbors with D.D.T. and Hurricanes employed it against malaria mosquitoes in Burma.

Two Spitfires recently flew twelve hundred miles nonstop from Rangoon to Hong Kong with fifty pounds of smallpox vaccine needed by the civil authorities. The weather in the mountains in this area is often extremely dangerous for flying, and this first peacetime mission over the route is an important achivement.

The R.A.F. station at Salalah, Southern Arabia, is the base for locust research. A British explorer, Mr. W. Thesiger, is working for the Middle East Antilocust Unit, and from this centre will make two monthly trips into hitherto almost unexplored territory in the central desert two hundred and fifty miles inland. He is studying the water supplies and the vegetation of the wadis which drain into the central desert in order to discover the locust breeding ground.

An R.A.F. Dakota has taken fourteen cases of penicillin and other drugs to Warsaw, a gift from the United Polish Relief Fund in Canada to the Polish Red Cross. Destroyers of the Royal Navy are bringing the Empire's Christmas gifts of food to Britain. H.M.S. Roebuck, Esquimaux and Maidstone are carrying between them two hundred and five tons of food as free gifts from the people of Cape Province. H.M.S. Nepal has left Sydney with twenty-one tons of jam, the British battleship, Duke of York, brings one hundred and thirty-three cases of foodstuffs, the result of the Lord Mayor of Hobart's appeal, and H.M.S. Unicorn is leaving Sydney shortly with one hundred tons of food.

Owls Index to Fur Crop

Snowy owls are down from the Arctic again, according to ornithologists of the Royal Ontario Museum. The appearance of these large white, or brown and white, birds in southern latitudes in late autumn or winter indicates a meat shortage in the far north. In their tundra home snowy owls subsist on lemmings (mice). About every four years lemmings die off from causes not known. The Arctic foxes which also feed on lemmings will suffer in numbers. This, in turn, affects the welfare of the native hunter and the trade of the fur buyer. The presence of owls in the south is a predictable event and an index to the economy of the north.

JUST FOLKS

LETTER III

Beloved, there are twinkles in two sets of lovely eyes.
On two youthful, merry faces there are looks surpassing wise.
When I settle down to visit (as we wanted it to be)
I've two arms around my collar and a child on either knee.

They come racing to the doorway when they see my car outside.
That there's motive in their welcome is a fact they cannot hide.
Now they talk of dolls and wagons in an artful sort of way
And it's plain someone has told them it will soon be Christmas Day.

You remember how we chuckled at their tricks a year ago
And insisted all about them Santa Claus would surely know.
Well, they've started in already being good as they can be,
But they've also got the notion it may pay to cuddle me.

LOOKING BACKWARDS

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS.

20 YEARS AGO

DEC. 6th., 1925.

Mr. and Mrs. Allan Donnell, formerly of Stirling, have taken up residence in Belleville. Mr. Donnell, who was the publisher of the Stirling News Argus for the past two years, will enter the insurance business here.

At the annual meeting of Loyal Orange Lodge No. 51, Holloway, the following officers were elected: W. Master, W. R. Wilson; D. Master, C. Juby; Chaplain, R. Rose; Recording Secretary, W. G. Morgan; Financial Secretary, M. Hawley; Treasurer, S. J. Kelly; Marshal, A. Juby; Lecturers, C. Bird and C. Wright; Committee, S. Rose, W. Cadman, J. Lowery, H. Smith and C. Kelly; Tyler, H. Cronk; Sentinel, A. Wright; Auditors, G. H. Rose and H. Carter.

Mr. L. C. Stevens and Mr. A. E. Thomas of this city were registered at the Walker House, Toronto, yesterday.

30 YEARS AGO

Before His Honor Judge DeRoche a Court of Appeals against the city voters' list will be held at the Court House tomorrow morning. There are upwards of one thousand appeals to be considered. The approaching vote to be taken here on local option is the cause of the large number of appeals.

It is reported that the Brighton branch of the Bank of Nova Scotia will be closed on the 15th. inst.

Mr. Timothy E. Sullivan has left for Guelph where he will attend the poultry show.

Mr. R. C. Arnott attended the O.H.A. meeting in Toronto on Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. Hiram Ashley have returned home from Madoc where they visited their son, Mr. Leslie Ashley.

40 YEARS AGO

DEC. 6th., 1905.

Neighborhood, Ameliasburg

Mr. W. R. Johnstone, Centre Township, has sold his farm to Mr. Coulter of Thomasburg. Mr. Johnstone and family will leave shortly to reside in California. They will be much missed by many friends.

The Help the Hospital Fund now amounts to $1,016.75.

At a meeting of the Belleville Board of Trade the following were present: C. M. Stork, president; P. Wims, J. Rabbitts, Fred S. Deacon, D. R. Leavens, J. Parker Thomas, P. J. M. Anderson, A. Robinson, J. H. Reeves, J. A. Roy, W. B. Deacon and Dr. Perry G. Goldsmith. Col. Ponton suggested that in order to get the members of the board together more often a scheme of holding monthly luncheons be adopted. The plan he said had worked well in other places. A. Robinson and P. Wims spoke in favor of the scheme which was adopted and the first luncheon will be held on the 13th. inst.

50 YEARS AGO

The members of the Harmony Club of this city furnished the music at a tea meeting which was held at White's Church, Front of Sidney, last evening and they received a great reception. The following compose the club: Harvey Beatty, S. Burrows, C. H. Vermilyea, Frank Brintnell, George Pearce, Frank Lewis, Louis Benmore and Silas Lennox.

Last night burglars entered Poucher's grist mill at Plainfield and blew open the safe. All they got for their trouble was a small amount of change from the cash box which was not in the safe.

The advanced stage of winter this year may be appreciated better by a contrast with last year, when on Dec. 31st. Mr. J. B. Thompson came to Belleville in a row boat from his home at Big Island.

Local sportsmen are having much sport fox hunting. Yesterday afternoon hounds owned by Messrs. Deshane and Foy had a merry run after a red fox which led them a long chanse as the day was bad for tracking. Mr. Deshane ended the chase by shooting the fox which was of good size.

Why Letters to Editor

A Reader of New York Sun Tells Why

To the Editor of The Sun—Sir: A lady who says she has been a reader of The Sun "since it first began to shine" writes me asking why I have been an unsolicited contributor to The Sun for over twenty-five years past. "Why do you and others, who are not professional journalists, write letters to the press?" she asks.

My answer is that for centuries all sorts and conditions of persons, from poets down to politicians, and from jesters up to philosophers, have written "to the editor." There was the famous political critic, Junius, who wrote invictive letters to the London Public Advertiser from 1769 to 1772; the legion who have signed themselves "Pro Bono Publico" and "Earnest Reader"; the "Old Lady from Philadelphia," who for fifty years wrote asking editors to explain the method of converting Fahrenheit degrees to centigrade, and countless others.

These writers were moved by many motives, such as vanity, spleen and the cacoethes scribendi, or itch to write. Some perhaps have felt with Hamlet:

> The time is out of joint; O cursed spite,
> That ever I was born to set it right!

Not Cranks

Personally, to borrow a phrase from Chateaubriand, I have written to the press because "I have seen so many phantoms defile through the dream of life." I have lived a long time, and in many places, and my cup of memory is brimful and running over.

Your gentle correspondent must not estimate all the volunteer writers to newspapers as being "obscure cranks and eccentric exhibitionists." Thomas Jefferson, Benjamin Franklin, Alexander Hamilton, Thomas Paine, John Wilkes, W. E. Gladstone, Charles Darwin and Herbert Spencer often wrote letters to the press. John Delane, the most famous of the editors of the London Times, once wrote in that newspaper: "The letter on law reform which appears in today's issue is much better and more instructive than any leader on the subject that I have ever read in the Times, or any other newspaper."

Many readers of The Sun must have read of the celebrated letter which the art critic John Ruskin wrote to the London Times declaring that the American painter, James McNeill Whistler, had immigrated to England "to throw a pot of paint into the faces of the British public." That letter led to Whistler's suing Ruskin, and recovering, in the most famous art case in history, damages in the sum of one farthing. Cardinal Newman, one of the topnotchers of English letters, also wrote to the same newspaper a notable criticism which led to an interesting libel suit.

I do not know how many more "letters to the editors" I may be moved to write; but I sincerely hope to read the letters of many earnest writers who for one reason or another may give their unsolicited opinions to the public.

New York Hyacinth Ringrose.

MAY DEMAND RECOUNT

Toronto, Dec. 6. (CP)—L. J. Ferrie, town clerk of Suburban Mimico, yesterday cast his vote in favor of the incumbent mayor, Amos H. Waites, to break a tie in the vote cast in the Dec. 3 municipal election here. Mr. Norris continued to abide by his statement made last night that he would seek a recount regardless of the vote cast by Mr. Ferrie.

Some Observations By Fred S. Deacon Now in Miami, Fla.

Miami, Florida

Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer:

In your news columns your reporter remarks that few people he questioned about municipal elections or nominations did not show any interest. Now, I have the paper mailed to me daily to get any local news. I can get the world news in the Miami papers but I find Miami papers feature their local news on their front page. I think you might try the same. Why not try it out while elections and other civic affairs are to be promoted. The papers here feature columnists and they discuss local as well as national affairs aside from the editorial column. The columnists here discuss or report traffic jams, school and hospital affairs, sports, parks, remarking on visitors, army and navy men and business items. You have a lot of items on your agenda. How is that?

The bus terminal here is in a building, open two ends and waiting rooms on one side. The bus unloads and takes on passengers and drives through the building. The bus companies built the building. Instead of Belleville building a terminal, insist on the bus companies doing so.

Miami has not provided any community centre or building. People gather in the parks to rest. The eating places provide floors for dancing. That is all they do for the young people. I think any extra money the city may have should go into the hospital and convalescent home. Let the young people look after themselves or let parents do it.

This community is campaigning now for two hospitals and a community chest of $800,000.

They advocate destroying pigeons as they are dirty. There are lots of them flying about the streets. The city thinks "polio" cases come from dirty pigeons.

The city is hard on drunken or drinking motor car drivers. They cancel licences, fine heavily and jail some. Like Toronto, there are too many killed by motorists.

Very sorry to hear Mr. Herity and Mr. Hornsby are in the hospital. I am glad we gave J. O. H. the banquet last fall. He is our "first" citizen. When people get to my age, 72, we have to drop out of the activities of life.

There are many ticket offices on the main streets selling airway tickets, so there must be many people flying instead of by rail. The R. R. tracks or beds are in bad shape and the trains are dirty, slow and always booked up days and weeks ahead. We may have to fly back to Chicago, Detroit or Buffalo. However, cannot decide until time of our departure.

Sorry your paper did not give a good write-up of our church (Bridge Street United Church) anniversary service. (Ed. Note: We thought it was fairly good.) You know the church is the first and oldest institution in Belleville. Its leaders were the leaders in business and culture, opened up our county, encouraged immigration and gave employment to all newcomers. Belleville has kept a clean population.

It is 78 here, no snow or evidence of it. There is always a high wind to temper the heat.

It takes four days for papers to reach here and then three or four copies arrive in a bunch. Some one must hold them at the border to read the news from their home town.

Mr. C. M. Reid writes that the Sutherland sisters of Bridge St., East, arrived safely.

F. S. Deacon.

Brigadier Sager, Stirling Native, Has Retired

Ottawa, Dec. 6 (CP)—The retirement after six years of service of Brig. J. E. Sager, 47, of Vancouver, former officer commanding the 4th Infantry Brigade, was announced today by the defence department.

A native of Stirling, Ont., Brig. Sager was commissioned a lieutenant in the British Columbia Regiment in 1923 after taking a course in the Canadian Officers Training Corps at U.B.C.

He completed the militia staff course in 1930 and was appointed to command of the Westminster Regiment in February, 1940. In April, 1942, he was promoted brigadier and to command of the 4th Infantry Brigade. He vacated this command in February, 1944, to take command of a reinforcement group.

WORLD AUTHORITY ON HEREDITY DIES

Pasadena, Calif., Dec. 5—(AP)—Dr. Thomas Hunt Morgan, regarded by many men of science as the world's foremost authority on heredity died here yesterday.

The 79-year-old winner of the 1933 Nobel prize for medicine succumbed after a short illness.

Professor Emeritus of biology at California Institute of Technology, Dr. Morgan was a leader in at least five fields of scientific reserch. He won the Nobel prize for clarifying the laws of heredity and the mutation of species.

ALL GOD'S CHILDREN HAVE TONSILS AND ADENOIDS

A series of X-ray treatments will bring about shrinkage of adenoids in many instances where the child's hearing is evidently impaired by obstruction of the mouths or openings of the Eustachian tubes. These Eustachian tubes connect the nose-throat cavity with the middle ear cavities where those three famous little bones — hammer, anvil and stirrup — are housed. At least X-ray treatment is worthy of a fair trial before submitting the child to operation for removal of adenoids.

Some physicians have employed X-ray treatments successfully for enlarged tonsils, whether with or without adenoid enlargement.

There is just one way a physician can determine positively whether a patient has adenoids—by feeling them with a finger introduced behind the soft palate into the vault or upper space of the pharynx or throat, the nose-throat cavity; or by seeing an image of the adenoid mass in a throat mirror by means of head lamp. If the physician does not use one or the other method to examine the patient his diagnosis of "adenoids" is only a guess — and there's a fifty-fifty chance the guess may be wrong.

Far too many children have been subjected to crude and unnecessary surgery for "adenoids" they didn't have.

The scandalous racket in wholesale tonsil and adenoid operations which flourished in the years that are gone left one wrong impression on the popular mind and another on the medical mind.

The impression left in the mind of the layman is that the presence of tonsils and adenoids is abnormal in itself. The truth is, of course, that all healthy children have tonsils and adenoids, which serve two useful purposes—first, they manufacture blood corpuscles, and second, they protect the body against bacterial invasion.

The wrong impression still harbored by too many physicians and specialists is that the lymphoid tissue of the tonsils and adenoids body is in itself harmful and must be completely eradicated to insure success from the operation. This notion is so absurd and amateurish that I am sure no reputable physician, surgeon or specialist will even attempt to defend it today. Nevertheless it is the sorry ground on which a good many quacks in ethical clothing contrive to damn the work of honest doctors in the eyes of gullible patients and keep their own atrocious surgery in demand.

If you ask me, folks, or even if you don't, I'll say that in my opinion even now far too many children are subjected to this American atrocity because the physicians and specialists who commit the atrocity have no clear conception of the pathology the nature of the condition they are treating. They just advise and do the operation because it is conventional and they know nothing else to do.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Father and Son Tired

Husband and 17-year-old son both seem so tired all the time. Doctors find nothing wrong . . . we live in the country and have plenty of vegetables, meat, milk and eggs.

(Mrs. E. S.)

Answer — I notice you live in the goitre belt, the Great Lakes basin, where there is a deficiency of iodine in soil, drinking water and animal and vegetable food grown on the soil. It would do your husband and son and you no harm to take a suitable daily ration of iodine. Send a stamped envelope bearing your address for pamphlet "The Iodin Ration."

Sucking Ice Cubes

I have the childish habit of sucking on ice cubes — I enjoy them as much as candy. Mother thinks it is detrimental to health, but I seem to have perfect health.

(Miss D. H. M.)

Answer — It is harmless.

Leg Cramps

I have found that stretching the heel tendons by trying to touch shins with toes when I go to bed tends to relieve or prevent leg ache or cramp in the night. No charge for this information, Doctor.

(D. W. J.)

Answer — Thank you. Adult tetany frequently manifests itself by such cramps, aches or pains in legs or calves (sometimes in arms or wrists too) at night. Prevention or correction of this is described in pamphlet "Adult Tetany and Growing Pains" mailed on written request (no clipping, please) if you provide stamped self addressed envelope.

INFORMATION ROUNDUP

"Laissez faire" (pronounced "la-SAY-fair") is a French phrase literally meaning "let do."

In economics it is applied to a policy of minimum interference with industry, trade and labor; that is, competition in private business without protective tariffs, subsidies, restrictions or regulations by the government.

It is based on the theory that commerce, domestic trade, manufacturers and labor, if let alone by the government, will adjust themselves to one another.

The term is supposed to have originated about 1680 in a conversation between Jean Colbert, the French statesman and financier, and a merchant named Legendre. Colbert, then minister of finance under Louis XIV, asked Legendre what ought to be done by the government to help the merchants and business people in general. "Laissez faire, laissez," replied the merchant. Literally the French saying signifies "let do, let pass;" figuratively it signifies "let people do what they choose."

"Laissez faire," in the sense of "let the government keep its hands off and not meddle with private business affairs of citizens," is sometimes attributed to Jean Claude Marie Vincent sieur de Gournay (1712-1750), French economist and philosopher.

In the sense of "liberty of action and liberty of movement" and "government hands off in economics," the phrase was popularized in English by Adam Smith, who quoted it in his monumental work, "The Wealth of Nations," published in 1776.

Thomas Jefferson, in a letter to Thomas Digges in 1788, wrote: "It is not the policy of the government in America to give aid to works of any kind. They let things take their natural course without help or impediment, which is generally the best policy."

Foxes Overrun County, Reeves Tell Council

"Hunters could go out around Hastings County and shoot 1,000 foxes at the present time," County Clerk Erle Denyes told the Hastings County Council at the Wednesday morning session. Reeves from all parts of the county concurred in the statement and a consensus was that the fox situation in the county is very serious.

The discussion arose from a request from the Wentworth County Council asking concurrence in a resolution requesting the government to amend legislation so that fox bounties be paid by counties instead of local municipalities.

"Tyendinago," its deputy reeve said, "was over-run with the animals and he personally had suffered the loss of chickens to the value of $200 this year."

Reeve Charles Rush, Hungerford, told council that his township was in a "terrible condition" insofar as foxes are concerned. "They are running riot all over the place and are doing a lot of damage," he said.

Warden Wilson was of the opinion that these animals go in cycles. As the game increases in the various districts, so do the foxes and other animals.

Reeve Lee Gordon, Coe Hill, stated that during the last few years the quality of fox fur has been very low. "A few years ago", he said, "the pelts were worth $25 now all you get is $13 The same thing applies to mink. These pelts are now worth nearly a small fortune but a few years ago their price was almost negligible."

That in his opinion was one of the reasons the fox today is so plentiful. Hunters and trappers won't bother with them due to the low prices paid for pelts.

Council concurred in the Wentworth County Council's request.

BOY IS ACQUITTED

Sarnia, Dec. 6 (CP)—Judge M. A. Miller yesterday acquitted a juvenile here on a charge of laying five fence posts across a Canadian National Railways track here.

Confronted with testimony that section hands saw him near the posts, the boy said he had discovered the posts and intended to remove them.

Judge Miller agreed with defence counsel W. A. Donahue that "reasonable doubt" existed.

WEDDINGS

CHATTERSON—TEAL

At the home of the bride's parents, Colborne, on Saturday afternoon, November 24, Rev. William Sterling united in marriage Dorothy Irene, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Teal, to Lloyd Walter Chatterson, son of Mrs. Chatterson and the late Robert Chatterson.

The bride entered the room to the strains of the Wedding March from Lohengrin, played by Mrs. T. J. Hetherington, Belleville, and was given in marriage by her father. She wore a street-length dress of pink triple sheer, white shoulder-length veil and corsage of Talisman roses.

Miss Gene Chatterson, sister of the groom, was bridesmaid and wore turquoise silk jersey with headdress to match and corsage of pink roses.

Mr. Oscar Teal, brother of the bride, attended the groom.

During the signing of the register, Miss Dorothea Hetherington, Belleville, sang "I Love You Truly". Later luncheon was served to thirty guests by friends of the bride.

For going away the bride wore, a fuchsia wool dress, gold coat and brown accessories.

Out-of-town guests included Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Turney, Peterborough; Mr. and Mrs. E. Turney, Bowmanville; Mrs. T. J. Hetherington and daughter, Dorothea, Miss Jean Chatterson and Mr. and Mrs. Gariepy, Belleville.

HOLLOWAY ST. Y.P.U.

The Holloway Street Young People's Union meeting of December 3, was attended by thirty-five members and opened with the singing of Christmas carols led by Margaret Hillis with Ana Watson at the piano.

During the business portion of the meeting, conducted by Miss Burke, it was announced that the plot for a new play has been chosen and cast selected.

A committee was appointed to plan a fireside meeting for December and an invitation from Mr. Perkins to hold the meeting at the parsonage was gratefully accepted.

Vocal solos by Norma Arkles and Ana Watson were greatly enjoyed.

Mr. Gunsolus introduced the guest speaker for the evening, Rev. Oscar Wagar, who gave a very interesting address on the subject of Missions and his experience in this field.

Rosslyn Robertson thanked Mr. Wagar and Mr. Perkins closed the meeting.

How to Apply Your Rouge

Blend your rouge into the skin with your fingertips

By HELEN FOLLETT

The purpose of rouge is not only to put on the cheek bloom, but to lend life and sparkle to the eyes. To turn this pleasing trick, it is necessary to place it high. Oftimes a film of faint rose on the eyelids brightens the countenance.

Not enough women use the cream rouge. It can be blended nicely by putting on powder first, then rouge, then more powder.

Low Rouging Bad

Placing the rouge low makes the countenance look heavy, wide at the lower portion.

Every woman is a type, should understand herself, face and figure, wear the kind of clothes and make-up that suits her type. The dashing lady can wear black with splendid results, the drab one is made drabber by it. Black is wonderful on blondes and red heads.

Complexion Shades

There are many shades of complexions, the commonest being that with a golden cast, the other a pink and white. For the first, there is rachelle powder, for the other flesh and blends of rose and ochre.

The girl with the sallow skin should never use purple shades of rouge or lipstick; orange, tawny tones are her best bet, will prove flattering. The peaches and cream complexion calls for a light blush-rose rouge, and a lip veneer of darker cast that is a companionable shade. Tawny tones are good on the red head.

The olive complexion calls for warm tints of make-up, powder to match the flesh, damask rouge and lip coloring.

Sugar and Preserve Rationing To be Combined Effective Jan. 1

Ottawa, December 6th —(CP) —The existing sugar and preserve rationing plan will be simplified for the Canadian housewife at the beginning of the New Year, the Prices Board announced today.

The simplification will be brought about by combining sugar and preserves rationing under a single plan starting January 1. Housewives will be able to purchase preserves or sugar with one kind of coupon and the new plan will mean a slight increase in the consumer rations.

This coupon may be used for the purchase of any one of the following items:

One pound of sugar; 24 ounces of jam, jelly, marmalade, fountain fruits or cranberry sauce; four pounds of honey, 30 ounces of corn or table syrup, 80 ounces of molasses; 40 ounces of canned fruit, two pounds of honey-butter; 48 fluid ounces of maple syrup; four pounds of maple sugar.

On January 1 all valid and unused pink coupons marked "sugar" will take the new ration values. On January 17, sugar coupons numbering 68 and 69 will be declared valid, and in February the last of these coupons, No. 70, will also be validated. After this the "S" coupons are to be used for the sugar-preserves consolidated plan.

By the end of this year all of the "P" coupons will have become valid, the last four—22, 23, 24, 25—being validated on December 20. All unused preserves and "P" coupons will continue to hold their 1945 value for preserves or the half pound of sugar and all these coupons will expire January 31, 1946.

The allotment of sugar for home canning will be the same as in 1945, 10 pounds per person, and will be provided by declaring valid 10 "Q" coupons during the months when most home canning is done. These coupons may be used, as in 1945, for the purchase of either sugar or preserves on the same basis as other regular coupons.

Among the many public services promoted by daily newspapers in Canada are fresh air funds, Christmas hampers, and a variety of educational services provided free of cost.

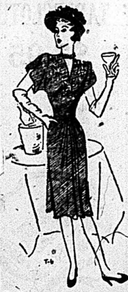
Delightful Date Dress



Steel gray crepe dress with sequins and bead embroidery.

By GRACE THORNCLIFFE

READY FOR bright and happy occasions is this charming date dress which would be as smart at a wedding reception as at the theatre. It is of steel gray crepe embroidered with sequins and bead butterflies around the narrow V neckline. The shoulders are broad and the sleeves are short and loose. The skirt is flatteringly draped from a centre knot. The back of the skirt is straight and slim.

BEAUTY

By HELEN JAMESON

Egg Facials Refresh Complexion.

Wrinkles are a curse! Why must they torment the older girls? The flesh on the body doesn't take unto itself horrid irrigation ditches. As birthdays march on, the face and neck play out, fall into accordion pleats. It is a shame, and that's a fact.

Lady Long Face, with the crepe-hanging disposition, isn't the only one whose countenance gets to look like a road map. Facial furrows can come prematurely, even in the late twenties. That is a tragic state of affairs. The cause may be ill health, loss of sleep or malnutrition. Regard for the laws of hygiene is a help in this frantic effort we all make to hang onto youthful appearance. Keep that in mind when you cut down on hours of sleep, eat hurriedly, rush and tear through life as if seven green demons were after you.

Every individual cell of skin, tissue and fibre is constantly throwing off waste material, building up a new structure. The well-being of this structure depends upon the good groceries you consume. Partake of a variety of foods so you will get the various necessary elements, vitamins and mineral salts. Finicky eaters wail about beauty griefs; let them mend their ways. They will then impart vitality not only to their bodies and nervous systems, but also to their complexions, hair and fingernails.

The lemonated woman and the expert worrier wrinkle early, not that being sour-minded or fretful actually produces lines but because emotional discord interferes with nutrition. Tissues go into a state of dissolution.

Let these misguided dears endeavor to develop calm mentalities and more cheerful spirits and they'll stop the ravages of the years. To help them along in this campaign of rejuvenation, we suggest the egg facial. Some beauty shops employ it, but it is a home treatment that is easily accomplished.

Begin with a thorough cleansing of face and neck with a light cream, wiping it away with tissues or an old, soft towel. No rough treatment when tissues have started to sag.

The lemonated woman and the expert worrier wrinkle early.

Wring a towel out of warm water, hold close to the face, then rinse with cold water. Beat the white of an egg to a stiff froth, then spread it over face and neck with your fingers or a butter knife. Pick up your mystery story, read for twenty minutes. The egg white is a splendid astringent. The flesh will seem to tighten as the egg white dries.

Apply warm water, dry gently, then get out a heavy massage cream and tap the skin briskly. Starting at the collar bones, work upward with quick slaps. Do circles around the eyes. Rub frowns crosswise. You'll like your face in the morning; it will carry a look of freshness.

The Marry Go Round

Are There She-Wolves, Too?

"Women are the worst wolves," recently declared a popular New York columnist, bravely defending his own sex.

Well—that all depends on how you define a common or gardenia "wolf", in the accepted modern sense. Is he one with deep dark designs on every girl—a heart-and-home-breaker? Or is he just a man who automatically always exerts his super-charm because he wants to be popular?

If he is the latter—and all the so-called "wolves" I have ever met have been of that harmless variety—there is a great deal of truth in what the columnist says. Girls, these days, can outdo the men when it comes to "wolfing" popularity and exerting a subtle super-charm on every man they meet.

This is partly because of the man-shortage and party because today's girl would rather be "popular" than President. She would rather be rushed by the stag line than be elected to the Hall of Fame. She would rather be on twenty active telephone lists than in Who's Who or the Social Register. She is a man-hoarder!

To have a date every night, and her telephone ringing all day, seems to be the roseate dream and the ultimate ambition of the lady-wolf. To invite men in squads and battalions to serve as background and dummy decorations at her parties, like the flowers and potted palms from the florist, is just a part of this craze for popularity. The quality of the men who hang around her doesn't matter half so much as their quantity. Their personality is not of half so much importance as their number. What she wants is a crowd!

There has always been a contest among women for masculine admiration and attention. The She-Wolf, who could attract every man just by a glance and a subtle smile, has always existed. The heartaches and rivalries behind every debutante party and gay holiday dance, will never be told. But never before has the bid for popularity been so barefaced, so eager as it is today. Never before have men been so rushed and so flattered; and never have girls been so breathless about it!

Just what kick a girl gets out of this carefully planned, built-up "popularity" is hard to see. It must be food for her vanity and her spirit of competition. But it is often the surest route to spinsterhood or a foolish marriage. Because, nine times out of ten, the one-man girl who concentrates her attention and charms, walks off with the matrimonial prize of the season, while the Lady Wolf is wasting her time on crowds, crashers, and duds.

It seems that to be known as a "wolf" is a feather in a man's cap; but a wise girl, with lupine tendencies, is much more effective and deadly, if she is careful to hide them under a disarming reserve.

NO CURE FOR BABY'S COLDS

. . . But You Can Help Nature To Fight Them Off

Medical Science denies there is any such thing as a cure for colds—only Nature herself can do it. So when baby's sniffles, or stuffy breathing warn you of a cold's presence—cooperate at once with Nature.

See that baby is kept warm, gets plenty of sleep and take extra care that the bowels are thoroughly cleared of harmful wastes which drag down vitality and resistance. To do this without upsetting baby's whole system and further weakening it, try Baby's Own Tablets—easily crushed to a powder, if desired. Mild, yet act promptly in getting rid of the irritating materials that make baby restless and feverish . . . and in this way they encourage restful sleep. Nice idea for evening is a brief bolero and a bag—both of gold brocade.

This year comfort is combined with beauty for the nicest winter fashion. A wonderful go-anywhere coat is of fine but heavy woollen in electric blue, the coat belted, and made with elbow ruffs of silver fox, the fur also bordering the parka hood.

Twelve months of the year, every year, the sailor hat is a millinery best-seller, since it looks good on any type, and in any medium, trimmed or just with a crownband. An early Spring sailor in black crepe, with a 'ow, wide crown, has a garland of tiny fuchsia feather-flowers and a big black tulle bow in back.

New lines appear in sportswear readied for late Southern wear and early Spring at home. A pinky-gray rayon jersey frock has a pointed, high-rising midriff to pull in the fullness introduced at the shoulder and the skirt at centre front. Short sleeves are very flared.

There's a new career for the tweed suit as it goes in for city doings. A beautiful town suit is of blue and black tweed in a fine, silky weave. The longer, fitted jacket is fastened with rhinestone-rimmed jet buttons.

Not Vitamins—but Iron—May be what You Need To Put Pep in Your Step and Fresh Sparkle in Your Eyes.

If that constantly tired feeling has got you looking down in the mouth as well as feeling that way—try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

Persistent fatigue that finds you as weary in the morning as if you had had no sleep, that makes you too listless to eat, that stales your energy, is often caused by a lowering of the iron level in your blood. This condition may also have a further reaction on health, for without sufficient iron your body may not be able to get the full advantages of the vitamins and protective food elements in what you do eat.

Don't let this state of affairs go on and on until you are really sick. Get Dr. Williams' Pink Pills today from your druggist—see how good it feels when you pep up with more iron in your blood.

Sister Mary Claire Honored Posthumously

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., Dec. 6 (CP)—The Royal Canadian Humane Association has awarded posthumously a certificate for bravery to Sister Mary Claire of Sacred Heart School who gave her life so that a number of school children might not be killed.

The award was presented to the Sacred Heart School by Alderman W. H. C. Brien, acting Mayor.

Sister Mary Claire was killed on Oct. 29, 1943, when a fire engine, avoiding a car in its path, jumped the curb into the school grounds where the children were playing. Sister Mary Claire was struck down as she herded the youngsters out of the path of the truck.

Mohawk Reserve

Mohawk Reserve—Mr. and Mrs. Robert Bell were at home to the members of the Laymens' Association Sunday evening. Sgt. Reginald Brant was guest speaker, and gave a very interesting description of his experiences in the eastern theatre of the war.

The largely attended funeral of Mrs. James Brant, who succumbed to a heart condition early Monday morning, in Belleville General Hospital, was held Wednesday afternoon in All Saints' Church. Mrs. Brant was 63 years of age, and an active worker in the Homemakers' Club, being president of the Shannonville Branch. She was the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. John McFarlane, and is survived by her husband and four grandchildren, Everett John, Pte. Kenneth John, overseas, Lois, (Mrs. Lloyd Lewis) and Miss Shirley John; and by one brother, Mr. John McFarlane, and two sisters, Mrs. Alexander Harvey and Mrs. Robert Harvey. The bearers were Messrs. Herbert, Barney and Amos Brant, Abram Maracle, Wm. McFarlane and Edward Sexsmith. Interment was made in All Saints' Cemetary.

William Roland, a former resident of the Reserve, recently returned from four years' service overseas, was a recent guest of Mrs. E. McEwen.

Miss A. Culbertson spent a few days last week in Shannonville.

Mrs. Robert Hill spent last weekend with Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Brant.

Toronto Police Scour Suburbs For Hold-up Men

Toronto, Dec. 6 (CP)—Toronto police scoured suburbs of Toronto along lakeshore today for three men who on Tuesday night held up and robbed the manager of the Royal Bank of Canada branch at Hillsburg, Ont., and his wife.

Hillsburg is about 25 miles northeast of Guelph, Ont., and the police were put on the hold-up men's trail here when the robber-car was found abandoned on a Toronto street.

This followed a police chase almost from Hillsburg where the robber trio had apparently hoped to make off with money from the bank itself.

The trio walked into the apartment of C. E. Hilton, bank manager in Hillsburg, who lives over his bank. They forced Hilton and his wife to go downstairs and into the bank and attempted to get him to open the safe.

When unable to gain entry to the safe the robbers tied the bank manager and his wife, stole $25 from Mrs. Hilton's purse, and made off in a car which police said was stolen from two men at Erin, not far from Hillsburg.

The robbers were seen to drive off in the direction of Toronto.

Soon after they departed Hilton and his wife got free of their bonds and notified Provincial Police who immediately established road blocks on the highway to Toronto.

The car raced through one police road block at Brampton, travelling at high speed. At suburban Etobicoke police attempted to stop the racing car but were unable to do so and the next trace of them was finding of the car abandoned along the lakeshore on the outskirts of Toronto.

Argued With Robbers

Hilton said the trio broke into his home above the bank shortly before midnight and demanded he open the safe. He told them the safe lock was controlled by a time-clock and could not be opened.

"Shoot if you like but I can't open it," Hilton told the men. He said "they argued with me for half an hour."

"They noticed a sign on the wall with instructions for setting the time lock. Then they believed what I said."

The men tied Hilton's wife with a rope and ordered the branch manager into the bank. At the point of a gun he opened the outside door and half turned the combination.

"That's all I can do," he told them. "It won't open until morning. I have only half the combination."

When the men decided the vault could not be opened they forced Hilton back to his apartment and ransacked the place. They managed to find $20 in his wife's purse and took $5 from his pocket. Then they tied him to his bed.

Hilton said his wife managed to get loose and freed him after which they informed police.

Hillsburgh is about 25 miles northeast of Guelph.

Asks R.C.A.F. Plastic Surgery Patients be Permitted to Wear Uniforms During Their Treatment

Ottawa, Dec. 6 (CP)—Air Minister Gibson said on Wednesday efforts are being made to make it possible for air force personnel to continue to wear their uniforms while undergoing plastic surgery treatment.

He was replying to Flt. Lt. James Sinclair (L—Vancouver North) who urged that a dozen plastic surgery patients at the Trenton, Ont., R.C.A.F. hospital, which was being closed, be allowed to wear their uniforms until their treatment is completed.

Col. Gibson said he had an interview during the weekend with some of the patients. Under ordinary routine the men would be discharged, turned over to Veterans Affairs and would not be allowed to wear their uniforms.

Many of the patients were badly disfigured and said it was most embarrassing for them to go around in civilian clothes. When not in uniform people did not connect their disfigurement with war service.

FINED $300

Ottawa, Dec. 6 —(CP)— An Ottawa department store (Larocque) was fined $100 and costs in police court Tuesday after its representatives pleaded guilty to charges of raising wages without the authorization of the Regional War Labor Board and without obtaining a decision on wage rates from the National War Labor Board on a new job classification.

GALLANTRY AWARDED

Brockville, Dec. 6 (CP)—Corporal Percy F. Pankhurst, one of four sons of Mr. and Mrs. Percy Pankhurst of Brockville who served overseas, has been awarded a certificate for gallantry signed personally by Field Marshal Montgomery.

Cpl. Pankhurst was twice wounded in action while serving with The Stormount, Dundas and Glengarry Highlanders, the second occasion being when his platoon successfully stormed an enemy strong point with the capture of 30 prisoners. He returned to Canada last April and recently was discharged from Christie Street Hospital in Toronto.

Mess Room Chatter Of Canada's Airmen

With the R.C.A.F. Overseas, Dec. 6. (CP)—Good progress is being made in the great humanitarian work of tracing "missing" Canadian airmen.

An R.C.A.F. member of the Missing Research and Enquiry Service, whose task is to secure positive identification of British airmen listed simply as "missing", said that by the end of next year the fate of most unlisted fliers and their places of burial will be positively known.

Canadians in the inquiry service do not discriminate as to a missing man's nationality. It is as much a part of an R.C.A.F. investigator's job to uncover information about a missing Englishman or New Zealander as it is to identify a Canadian airman.

A spokesman in Paris admitted the colossal task of tracing missing fliers, sometimes with only the thinnest shred of evidence to go on. He said, however, that French, Belgians and Dutch give painstaking care to the graves of Allied airmen. "Village school children make it a ritual to put flowers on the graves," he said.

One of the last two men to make an operational flight over Germany is on his way back to Canada. At the R.C.A.F. Repatriation Depot in Torquay Sqdn. Ldr. Jim Prendergast of Victoria, B.C., recalled the historic flight.

He and his "No. 2" photographed flak positions after the "cease fire" orders had been given to make sure the Germans were obeying instructions.

In one afternoon Prendergast shot down the only two enemy fighters he saw during nearly two tours, and on another trip he followed a 12,000 pound bomb almost until it hit its target to photograph the results.

It takes about two weeks to get your laundry done in Britain, so veterans of service in the Old Country who now are with 126 Wing in Germany are grateful to Flt. Sgt. Gene Kent-Hammond of Fort William, Ont.

Gene, who prior to his air force service never saw the inside of a laundry in his life, now is major-domo of two mobile field laundries with a guaranteed 48-hour service of wash, iron and dry.

Thirty German girls from around Hamburg where the wing is located operate the laundry service, aided by nine R.C.A.F. airmen.

Kent-Hammond's unit went all through the continental campaign after their original landing at Boulogne beaches where they were dive-bombed.

Prisoner Promises To Behave Self

Sarnia, Dec. 6 (CP)—Dalton Reardon, Lambton County jail prisoner who Tuesday violently protested his proposed transfer to Middlesex jail at London, may remain in this city, it was learned.

He has promised Sheriff A. J. Johnston he will stop his riotous performance and behave himself in return for another chance to remain here, officials said.

Reardon, who is awaiting appeal on a conviction of a serious charge, barricaded himself in a cell and defied all attempts of jail officials, city police and military helpers to dislodge him, even after a fire hose and tear gas had been used in the attempt.

Tuesday's fracas, it was stated, had been brewing for the past two or three days, when Reardon, under the apprehension that other prisoners were attempting to interfere with the preparation of his own defence, acted in retaliation. The other prisoners, Reardon claimed, had been making noise purposely to divert him from the study of his case. In retaliation, Reardon decided to create as much noise as possible, day and night, to prevent his fellow prisoners from sleeping.

The din became so unbearable that jail officials, in conference with Sheriff Johnston decided that he should be moved to Middlesex county jail at London, where better facilities exist for unruly prisoners. When Reardon, who had been at the London institution before, heard of the proposal, he barricaded the door of the cell with a large table, and declined all attempts to talk him out of his self-constructed fortress.

BRITONS AFFECTED BY WARTIME DIET

London, Dec. 6. (CP)—British doctors are worried by increasing symptoms of under-nourishment among their patients. Dr. Franklin Bicknell, an authority on diet, said most patients complained of "terrible tiredness", feeling blown out after lunch and hungry before tea.

"Every doctor knows these signs", he said, "and the next stage is usually one of complete collapse. There is no answer to this except food. For years past we have been getting only slightly more than half the meat and half the fats required for health".

Britain is Key To the Situation

By MAX HALL

Washington, Dec. 6 (AP) — After a long delay, machinery may start rolling this week for creation of the two world financial institutions agreed on at the Bretton Woods conference. They are an international monetary fund and a world bank.

Britain is the key to the situation.

The deadline for countries to sign the Bretton Woods agreements is Dec. 31. If Britain signs, several other countries probably will follow and the fund and bank are considered almost certain to come into existence as planned.

If Britain does not sign, the prospect is uncertain.

Up to now, Britain has delayed action pending the outcome of negotiations on a proposed loan from the United States. Today there is considerable optimism that these talks will conclude in agreement before the weekend.

A United States financial official who has had a part in the negotiations told a reporter the British representatives have stated their intention of introducing Bretton Woods in the House of Commons as soon as the loan talks are concluded.

Thus, if the negotiators should agree this week on the terms of a loan—to be submitted to Congress and the British parliament for approval—Britain would proceed immediately to the Bretton Woods issue without waiting to see whether Congress would approve the loan.

The fund and bank will not be born until countries subscribing 65 per cent of the capital have signed. The monetary fund's total capital is set at $8,800,000,000 and 65 percent of that is $5,720,000,000.

In order to reach 65 per cent, ratifications are needed from countries subscribing another $2,180,000,000. If Britain and Russia both sign, that will raise it to more than 65 per cent with no further help needed. But there has been no word from Moscow on the Soviet Union's intentions.

Britain's importance lies not only in its own $1,300,000,000 quota but in its financial influence over other countries, both in and out of the empire.

Canada is expected to join in any case. If Britain, Canada, France, and Australia were to join, the requirement would be met without a single other country.

As for the international bank, the quotas roughly parallel those in the fund.

Bennett Empire Prize Awarded to Dr. Camsell Deputy Minister

London, Dec. 6 (CP Cable) — The R. B. Bennett Empire prize of 100 guineas has been awarded to Dr. Charles Camsell, Canadian Deputy Minister of Mines and Resources, for his paper entitled "Canada's New North."

The paper was read to the Royal Society of Arts last April by Capt. W. M. Gilchrist.

This is the first award of the prize which Viscount Bennett, former Conservative Prime Minister of Canada, instituted in the form of a trust last year with the suggestion that it go each second or third year to the most outstanding contribution from the Dominions, India, Burma and the Colonies, to the promotion of arts, agriculture, industries and commerce of the Empire during each intervening period.

ONE-WAY PASSAGE ON ATLANTIC $375

Ottawa, Dec. 6 (CP)—Reconstruction Minister Howe said Wednesday in the Commons he understood all air lines operating over the north Atlantic had agreed, pending a final decision by the International Air Transport Association to charge a uniform rate of $375 for a one-way passage.

Mr. Howe was questioned by John Diefenbaker (PC—Lake Centre) as to whether there had been any developments in rates following action of Pan-American Airways in setting a new low rate of $275.

Turkey For Christmas

There are many very delightful traditions associated with Christmas and one of these is the serving of poultry. We all have poignant memories of the Christmas table gay with evergreen, candles and crackers. Nevertheless, the turkey, big, brown and glistening, still held the spotlight.

The home economists of the Consumer Section, Dominion Department of Agriculture say that since so much depends upon the turkey for the success of this special occasion, we must start with a bird of the highest quality.

It is easy to distinguish the grades of poultry by the government grade tags. A Grade "A" turkey is young, well-fleshed and especially fattened for tenderness and flavour. Allow ¾ to 1 pound dressed weight for each person to be served. Dressed weight is the weight of poultry as purchased, before it is drawn, including the head and feet. A fifteen pound turkey will make about twenty generous servings.

Preparation

Once the bird has been selected, its grooming starts in earnest. Pull out the pin feathers, singe and draw. The tendons of the legs should be removed, as they become hard and bony during cooking. To do this, make a slit along the outer side of the shank below the leg joint and pull tendons out separately with the fingers or a skewer. Remove oil sack from the tail. Wash thoroughly. If poultry is fat, wash well with a little soda dissolved in water, rinse, then dry thoroughly inside and out. Never allow poultry to soak in water since this causes loss of flavor and food value.

Have white bread ready for the stuffing, about three days old... just a nice stage for crumbling. A new idea for crumbling the bread might be helpful. Remove crusts and put about one-quarter of a loaf at a time in a towel, then roll and rub in the hands. This makes even crumbs.

The Stuffing

Dressing for poultry may well be made the day before thus saving time at the last minute.

The stuffing will vary with the type of poultry. Do not mask the delicate flavor of turkey with a strongly seasoned stuffing. The more highly seasoned stuffings should be used with birds of a strong flavor. Before stuffing, sprinkle the inside of the bird with salt. Stuff loosely. If the cavity is packed too tightly, no room is allowed for expansion of the dressing and the result is a firm soggy mass...so allow approximately ¾ cup of stuffing per pound of turkey—dressed weight.

To Truss Turkey

The way in which a bird is stuffed and trussed makes a great difference in its appearance when served. Fill the neck with sufficient stuffing to give the bird a plump appearance. Fold the neck skin towards the back and fasten by folding the wing tips back on the wings, "arms akimbo" fashion. Then place bird on back with legs toward you. Cross drumsticks, having leg over slit, to hold stuffing in place. Take a piece of cord about 1½ yards long and place centre of it under tail. Bring up ends over crossed drumsticks, cross cords and repeat, pulling tightly. Cross cords again and bring up firmly between the drumsticks and the body. Turn bird onto breast and bring cord around wings to centre back, so that it holds the lower wing joints close to the body. Tie cord securely on back, holding wings and neck in place.

And now the all important matter of cooking. It must be done to a turn, the acme of perfection, to grace the festive board. Place the turkey, breast down, on a rack in an uncovered pan, and add no water. Keep the temperature of the oven at "moderately slow" or even "slow", according to the weight of the bird, to brown evenly without scorching. It should be cooked until it is tender and done to the bone, but not overcooked.

The following time table, giving approximate times, may prove helpful in cooking poultry throughout the holiday season.

Chicken: 4-8 lbs. (dressed weight) 300-325 degrees F for 30 mins. per lb.

Turkey: 8-10 lbs. (dressed weight) 300 degrees F for 25 mins. per lb.

Turkey: 12-16 lbs. (dressed weight) 300 degrees F for 20 mins. per lb.

Turkey: 16-25 lbs. (dressed weight) 300 degrees F for 18-20 mins. per lb.

Duck: 3-8 lbs. (dressed weight) 325 degrees F for 20-25 mins. per lb.

Geese: 10-12 lbs. (dressed weight) 325 degrees F for 20-25 mins. per lb.

Further information on poultry is given in a bulletin which is obtainable free of charge, from the Department of Agriculture, Ottawa.

DIRECTED TRANSPORT OF TROOPS TO FRANCE

London, Dec. 6. (CP)—Maj.-Gen. Gilbert Szlumper, 61, the authority on railways who organized the movement of the British Expeditionary Force and its equipment to the embarkation ports in 1939, has retired. The Ministry of Supply announced his released from the post of director-general of supply services.

In the First Great War, he was senior railway transport officer of the British Army. When the Army was mobilized in 1939 he was released by the Southern Railway, of which he was general manager, and appointed director-general of transportation and movements at the War Office.

In addition to the dispatch of the British Expeditionary Force he controlled the "rush" movement of all troops evacuated from Dunkerque and other French ports.

SIR R. LANCASTER DIES

New York, Dec. 6 —(CP)— Sir Robert Lancaster, 61, executive secretary and general manager of the Co-operative Wholesale Society, which services all retail co-operatives in the British Isles, died Tuesday in Manchester, it was learned here yesterday. Sir Robert joined the society as head of its legal department. Under his direction it grew to be the largest single food distributor in Britain.

EARLY CHRISTMAS FOR ILL BOY

Minneapolis, Dec. 6 —(AP)— Seven-year-old Ronald Lundquist had the best Christmas of his short life Tuesday night when presents were showered on him by donors from all over the United States. Physicians say that the youngster, suffering from leukemia, a rare blood disease, may not survive until Dec. 25, so the early celebration was arranged for him.

CHECKERS BEAT WET MASH "HANDS DOWN"

More and more good poultrymen are feeding Purina Laying Checkers as a "top feed" in place of wet mash, because Checkers have so many advantages. They are handy to feed—no mixing, no messing, no pail washing . . . feed them in your Sunday clothes if you feel like it! And they can't spoil or mould or freeze if there are any left over, because they are dry.

Try Purina Laying Checkers as a noon top feed for your layers, this season. Just dump 3 to 5 lbs. per 100 hens in the hoppers every day at noon. You will find they make a real egg-producing addition to your ration, no matter what else you are feeding.

Here's our Christmas wish

We wish we could guarantee a Long Distance telephone line to everyone who is planning to exchange Christmas greetings with distant friends. We know how eagerly thousands of people look forward to this annual telephone visit.

But holiday traffic will be heavier than ever this year. Even with all operators on duty and fullest possible use of equipment, many calls may be uncompleted.

We can only say that, as always, we will do everything in our power to disappoint as few as possible.

One thing YOU can do — make your greeting calls as far ahead of Christmas Day as possible.

Questions About Hirohito And Future of Japan

By MURLIN SPENCER

Tokyo, Dec. 6 (AP) — Two undercurrent questions the answers of which may reshape the future of Japan—did Emperor Hirohito help push Japan into the war and should he abdicate?—Were out in the open yesterday.

Isanji Tanaka, independent Diet member, asked State Minister Toji Matsumoto what the government thought about abdication of the Emperor, Kyodo News Agency said. Tanaka indicated some circles thought abdication possible after Prince Konoye's discussion on the subject with foreign correspondents.

Kyodo quoted Matsumoto as replying that "even to express in public such a thing as abdication is too awesome." The minister added that those who contemplate such a "mistaken" plea were the exception.

Discussion of whether Hirohito helped push Japan into the war caused an equal stir.

FOUND GOLD NUGGETS

Toronto, Dec. 6 —(CP)— Gus Knutson, 42, of South Porcupine, Ont., was arrested here last night and charged with illegal possession of high-grade gold nuggets valued at $1,000. Police who arrested Knutson at a downtown rooming house said they found two gold nuggets weighing about a pound each.

Oxydol is Far Ahead of Other Soaps in Preventing "Dirty Grayness"

Tests Prove Oxydol Washes Clothes CLEANER and WHITER!

Yes, Whiter! In wash test after wash test — Oxydol proved that it actually washes clothes cleaner and whiter than many other soaps which, unlike Oxydol, fail to get out that last possible trace of stubborn dirt and grime! White and Bright Wash after Wash! Soaps often leave tiny discoloring particles caused by dirt in the clothes and the "hardness" of the water. These stick in the clothes and turn gray or yellow under ironing heat. But Oxydol combats "dirty grayness"—it helps prevent "dirty grayness" particles from forming in the clothes.

Turkeys Will Be In Good Supply For Christmas

Ottawa, Dec. 6 (CP)—Canadians from coast to coast received the good word today that there will be plenty of Christmas turkeys to go around this year.

That was the general prediction of officials of the poultry division of the Agriculture Department. And, going into more detail, they said most of the birds would come from the Prairies; they would be marketed at about the same ceiling prices as last year, and this year's demand was expected to equal or better the heavy demand of 1944.

Table chickens probably will be second choice to turkeys as holiday season fare. For those who prefer duck and goose, choice birds will be available in good supply, though demand for them is not expected to be great.

Turkey raisers in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta—Canada's three major turkey-producing Provinces—already are beginning to market birds fattened especially for Christmas fare.

Western production possibly may be down a bit from 1944, but not enough to affect the supply of Western birds, most of which are shipped East to fill the gap between Eastern production and supply.

Wheat Acreage Stands Unchanged For Coming Year

Ottawa, Dec. 6 —(CP)— The Dominion - Provincial Agriculture conference yesterday unanimously agreed to let 1946 wheat acreage stand unchanged from 1945 at 23,414,000 acres for the whole of Canada and 22,866,000 for the three Prairie Provinces.

The conference recommended that acreage in oats be decreased slightly to 14,310,200 acres from 14,393,000 in 1945.

To help arrest decline in hog production and stimulate output of other livestock the conference recommended that barley acreage be increased to 8,000,000 acres from 7,350,000 in 1945.

County Turns Down Recommendation For More Money

This story may come under the category of the "Man Bites Dog" heading.

Believe it or not, Hastings County Council at its Wednesday morning session turned thumbs down on a recommendation that would take money out of the government's pocket, and keep the equivalent of county money in the local exchequer.

It all happened when the county clerk read a request for concurrence in a recommendation of the Carleton County Council asking the Minister of Highways to assume 75 per cent of the cost of snow-removal instead of fifty per cent as at present.

Some of the reeves were in full accordance with the recommendation but it was not until Reeve Charles Rush, Hungerford, got up and told his colleagues that he had been a member of a committee which waited on the minister last year on certain matters.

"The minister," Reeve Rush said, "gave us a splendid talk on matters pertaining to finances of his department and it was easily seen that he has a tremendous job on his hands.

"The Department of Highways has been very generous with us and I think this request is hitting it a little too hard. We all like to get all we can from the government, but this is taking it a bit too far. I move the request be received and fyled."

The motion carried.

Yamashita's Fate In Court's Hands

By DEAN SCHEDLER

Manila, Dec. 6 (AP)—A military commission recessed Wednesday to ponder the fate of Lt.-Gen. Tomoyuki Yamashita after hearing final summations in which the prosecution demanded the death penalty and the defence pleaded for "justice—acquittal."

Maj. Robert M. Kerr, chief prosecutor, said that "in view of the aggravated nature of the crimes and in view of the measures of the crimes, we recommend that the sentence, if death, be carried out by hanging."

"Every reasonable doubt has been shattered by devastating witnesses" against the Japanese army commander, who is accused of condoning innumerable atrocities by his troops in the Philippines, Maj. Kerr said.

Col. Harry Clarke, concluding Yamashita's defence arguments, asked the commission to "exemplify the concepts and standards of American justice, the keystone of American democracy, by returning a finding of not guilty."

The commission, which has heard more than 200 witnesses and received more than 100 documents from both sides in the 32-day hearing, recessed until Friday, when its decision will be announced.

Postpone Inquiry Until Next Season

Ottawa, Dec. 6 — (CP)—The Senate will postpone an inquiry into the administration and operation of the Immigration Act until next session. Senator Arthur Roebuck (L—Ontario) withdrew a motion on the order paper to name a committee to conduct such an inquiry.

Immigration was a subject that vitally affected a great many persons and was of keen interest, Senator Roebuck said, and he had been informed the session was likely to end next week and therefore there would not be time to give it sufficient study. It was a study that would raise controversial issues.

He would renew his motion next session when he hoped there would be adequate time to give immigration the consideration it deserved.

16 NATIONS REPRESENTED

Brussels, Dec. 6 —(AP)— Representatives of 16 nations met here Wednesday in the first of a series of conferences designed to bring order out of the European traffic chaos. Primary task of the representatives is to sort out rolling stock and canal shipping equipment scattered throughout the Continent and return them to the rightful owners.

China's Yuan Meets in Nanking

Chungking, Dec. 5—(AP)—A cabinet spokesman said today that China's executive Yuan would meet in Nanking after Dec. 15 and that under present plans Premier T. V. Soong also would move to the former capital.

The spokesman, P. H. Chang, announced that personnel from various ministries would be established at Nanking within 10 days although the government would remain at Chungking, possibly until next March. Fifteen government workers will be flown to Nanking before Dec. 15 he said.

Meanwhile, the vice-minister for foreign affairs, Liu Chieh, announced that Russian-Chinese negotiations for airborne movement of nationalist troops into Mukden and Changchun, Manchuria will be concluded within a few days.

Lieu said the troops would take over provincial and municipal administrations in the rich northern province.

Dispatches from the front said the Nationalists' overland drive already has passed the rail town of Sinmin, 30 miles west of Mukden, and is heading for the historic, industrially rich city itself. Their advance along the Peiping-Mukden railroad has been virtually unchallenged all the way from the great wall gateway of Shanhaikwn, dispatches reported.

Other press reports, however described brisk fighting the past few days along the great wall south of Kupehkow, one of the main passes leading from China proper into Jehol. The main Nationalist objective in this drive was reported to be Chengteh, capital of Jehol Province.

In Chungking, Gen. Hsiung Shih-Jui, director of President Chiang Kai-Shek's branch headquarters for Manchuria, said Nationalist advances into Manchuria would continue until the whole country had been "recovered."

British-American Plan Not Approved By Late President

Washington, Dec. 6 (AP) — Congressional investigators learned today that the late President Roosevelt declined to approve on June 7, 1941, a British-American plan for joint military operations in the event the United States became involved in war.

This was brought out in records submitted to the Senate-House Committee investigating the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor Dec. 7, 1941. They showed, military aide, the late Maj.-Gen. E. M. Watson, told War Department officials that "in case of war, the papers would be returned the President for his approval."

They also showed that on Aug. 29,1941, Mr. Roosevelt approved a joint Canadian-United States basic defence plan.

Earlier, the committee was told there was no evidence that the Japanese ever broadcast, prior to the Pearl Harbor attack, the so-called "winds" message signalling a break with the United States.

William D. Mitchell, committee counsel, read the records in the course of questioning Lt.-Gen. Leonard T. Gerow, former head of the Army's War Plans Division, about military staff conferences which had been held with Britain before the Pearl Harbor attack.

Gen. Gerow said the plans drafted at Singapore in 1941, widely known as the ABCD (American, British, China, Dutch) plan, were preliminary and never received formal approval from anyone in Washington, including the Chief of Staff.

So far as he knows, he said, they never were submitted to the President.

KALTENBRUNNER TO BE RETURNED BACK TO NUERNBERG PRISON

Nuernberg, Dec. 6 —(AP)— Ernest Kaltenbrunner, former chief of Nazi security police who was stricken with a brain hemorrhage Nov. 18 — two days before he was to face the International Military Tribunal as an accused war criminal — will be returned from hospital to the prison late this week, it was learned. Medical sources said it might be 30 days before he is strong enough to appear in court with the other defendants.

Rawdon—The Young Married Class at Mount Pleasant held a pot luck supper in the church hall on Friday evening with thirty six in attendance. All enjoyed a bountiful supper after which several games were played. The president, Mrs. Carleton Potts presided over a short business meeting. Mrs. Kenneth Weaver and Mr. Don Campbell conducted a round of community singing and Rev. Townsend displayed some black magic.

Mrs. Lindsay McKeown was taken by ambulance to Belleville Hospital on Saturday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Lorne Bailey and Marilyn, Mr. and Mrs. Percy MacMullen and Mrs. Sid Demorest spent Sunday with Mrs. Emma MacMullen and Mrs. James MacMullen at Springbrook. Mrs. Emma MacMullen has been confined to her bed for the past nine months.

Mrs. Stuart Brady of Bethel had the misfortune to fracture her leg on Thursday while in Stirling, her mother Mrs. Wm. McMullen of Harold is with her.

Friends at Mount Pleasant were very sorry to hear of the sudden death of Mrs. Roy Welbourn of Bethel, father of Mrs. Stewart Hoover, teacher at the Williams school. Deepest sympathy is extended to Mrs. Welbourn and her three daughters in their sad bereavement.

Mr. Harold White has been ill with an abscess on his neck.

Mount Pleasant friends extend birthday felicitations to Mrs. Sarah McKeown who will celebrate her ninety second birthday on Thursday, December 6th. At present she is with her daughter, Mrs. Will Morrow in Peterborough.

Following the Sunday School period Sunday morning at Mount Pleasant the Mission Band held their meeting.

Mrs. Cyrus Summers presided, using Christmas hymns and prayer, Miss Ruth Linn gave a reading and Master Ray Sharp gathered the offering. The last two chapters of the Study Book "Tommy Two Wheels" were synopsized by Mrs. Summers. All repeated the Mission Band Purpose.

Mr. and Mrs. Irvin Reid, John and Gordon spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Harvie at Brighton. Mrs. Harvie has been ill for several weeks.

Miss Doris Sine spent a few days with her aunt Mrs. Wilfred Sine while Mr. Sine served on the jury in Belleville.

Messrs Irvin Potts and Ray White received their discharge papers in Kingston last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Hollinger, Marilyn, Marie and Joyce, third Sidney, were supper guests Sunday evening of Mr. and Mrs. Don Johnson.

Pte. Lorne White who has been stationed at Fort Coulougne, Quebec, has been transferred to Kingston.

Rev. and Mrs. T. F. Townsend met with an accident last Thursday evening near Shannonville when they were returning home from Presbytery held at Napanee. Their automobile was badly wrecked and it was a miracle that Mr. and Mrs. Townsend were not seriously hurt. Mrs. Townsend remained in the hospital at Belleville for a day before returning home and she is still suffering from shock.

Mr. and Mrs. Milton Blakely, Marguerite, Evelyn and Ann of Seymour West, spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Elwood Johnson.

Mrs. Ross Hoard and her sister Mrs. Harry Ketcheson spent a short holiday in Toronto and attended the "Icecapades."

HERSHEY BEARS FURTHER AHEAD BY 4-2 VICTORY

First Defeat on Home Ice in Eight Starts for the Hornets

By The Canadian Press

Hershey Bears went further ahead in the eastern division of the American hockey league last night by virtue of their 4-2 victory over Pittsburgh Hornets and now hold a four-point margin over the second-place Buffalo Bisons who dropped a 4-2 decision to the Providence Reds in the only other game on the night's bill.

It was the first loss on home ice in eight starts this season for the Hornets. Bill Jennings, speedy Hershey right-winger, was the sparkplug of the Bears attack, scoring both the winning and clinching counters.

Pittsburgh appeared to be well on the way to victory after a first period goal by Peanuts O'Flaherty and another early in the second session by Bobby Walton had given them a 2-0 lead. But Gino Rozzini got one of these back for Hershey midway through the second period and Armand Gaudreault netted the equalizer shortly after. In the last minute of play of the same stanza Jennings rapped home the winning marker on a relay from Bill Gooden and added another in the third for good measure.

Harvey McQuestion turned in a neat goaltending job as the Providence Reds gained their verdict against the Buffalo Club. Goals by Armond Lemieux, George Boothman, Jerry Bellemare and Jacques Lavoie shot the Reds into a commanding 4-0 lead and McQuestion seemed to have a shutout sewed up until Roger Leger's long shot late in the final heat trickled into the net to spoil the effort. Leger fed Vic Lynn for the Bisons other tally in the last minute of play as Buffalo pressed in vain trying to pull the game out of the fire.

Jack Dempsey, immaculately dressed in a white long collared shirt lolled against the wall in the dressing room in the Arena last night. An expensive twenty-dollar fedora lay on a chair nearby. Alongside lay a United States Coastguard topcoat, a lighter shade of blue on the epaulettes denoting where rank badges had been removed.

"Still wearing the navy blue, Jack", sang out one of the grapple fraternity. "Yep," the former heavyweight champion grinned. "Haven't had time to buy a civvy one this far."

The door opened and a husky gentleman strolled in. Dempsey looked in. Then he looked away his brows knit in a puzzled frown. Then he smiled. His eyes darted back to the newcomer and in a flash he was on his feet, hand outstretched.

"Well," he said in that husky falsetto voice, "fancy seeing you here. The last time we met was in Los Angeles, or was it 'Frisco?".

And former Battery Sergeant Major Eddie Lee, once a promising middleweight when Dempsey was in his heydey, clasped the hand that sent many potential champions to sleep and wrung it heartily.

• • •

The two former friends of ringdom reminisced for several minutes, talking of old times when fighthood was in (cauli)flower and recalled several incidents that stood out in their respective fighting lives.

Sergeant Major Lee is well-known here and recently returned from overseas where he served for five years or more.

• • •

Dempsey is in the pink of condition. The hands that sent Firpo, Sharkey, Willard and others to oblivion are still in good condition. His arms are as hard as nails and there isn't even a suspicion of a bulge where his belt buckles.

• • •

He is tall, lithe sinewy. While in the ring he moved with a sort of feline grace slipping along on the toes of his ring shoes. He hasn't forgotten the ring atmosphere, and it was apparent that he is quite capable of handling himself, if and when that is necessary. However, the four wrestlers who took part in the battle royal appeared to have a wholesome respect for him, and while Al "Bunny" Dunlop, (one of the best showmen of them all) squared off to Dempsey on one occasion, the ex-champ drew back a fist, and Bunny decided there and then that his pal needed him in the opposite corner of the ring.

Dempsey owns the Great Northern Hotel in N'Yawk and also operates a restaurant there. "But", he grinned, "I'm never there, at least hardly." He is on tour of Canada refereeing at certain spots and picking himself up some fancy mazuma. From twenty-five to forty per cent of the gross, after all, ain't hay, brother, especially for a couple of hours' work, if you can call it that.

• • •

But he has a yen to own a hockey team and don't be surprised if next winter an ice edition of "dem bums from Brooklyn" appear under an N.H.L. franchise with Skipper Dempsey at the helm. He was non-committal when asked whom he thought would win if and when Joe Louis and Billy Conn tangle in the proposed Jacobian battle of the century. "H. . ." he mused. "You never can tell these days. After all those boys have been away for some time and the years have been rolling along. I don't know," he evaded.

People crowded around him whenever he made an appearance. Men and women of all ages, kids from seven up to ninety down milled around the ex-champion in an effort to secure his autograph. One youngster had retrieved a cigarette paper from some adult and wistfully held it out for Dempsey to sign.

Jack was the soul of good nature and signed his autograph for all comers even when, at one stage, the main bouters were patiently awaiting his appearance in the ring. . . One little fellow, by some means or another wangled his way into the dressing room.

He looked up at Dempsey as he talked with a friend, held out his hand with a piece of dirty paper in it, and said nothing.

"What's your name, Sonny?" asked Dempsey.

"Pat", came the reply. "My sister asked me to get you to sign this for her, please."

Dempsey reached down and picked up the youngster. He asked for a pencil and signed the paper, then signed another. "That last one is for you", he smiled. Pat wriggled out of his arms and dashed through the dressing room door, the proudest kid in the Arena.

Dempsey appears at the Maple Leaf Gardens, Toronto, tonight where he referees the main bout between Whipper Billy Watson and Frank Sexton.

Hockey's Big Seven

(By The Canadian Press.)

Bill Shill, flashy left-winger of Boston Bruins' kid line, moved into the Big Seven last night when he picked up a goal and assist as the Bruins whipped the Chicago Black Hawks to give him a total of 13 points and a tie with veteran, Boston centre Bill Cowley for sixth place. Another member of the kid line, Don Gallinger, earned an assist to climb into fifth place deadlock with Toronto's Gaye Stewart with 14 points. Chicago's big line of the Bentley brothers, Max and Doug, and Bill Mosienko, were held scoreless and failed to advance in the scoring summaries. Other leaders were idle.

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, Dec. 6. (CP)— The death of Ottawa's beloved Billy Foran in his 75th year might well serve to revive the bitter battle over "Shamateurism" which periodically sweeps Canada's sport world.

Foran was the champion of the principle that a professional in one pastime could be an amateur in other athletic activities and was an energetic opponent of the heavenly ideal: "Once a pro, always a pro". He espoused the cause of the Amateur Federation of Canada, a Quebec-Eastern Ontario combination favoring the "free amateur" movement of some 40 years ago in direct opposition to the visionary amateur union led by James G. Merrick of Toronto.

The Federation did not survive, although tentatively recognized by the A.A.U. of the United States, but the Foran policy probably had as much to do with the ultimate downfall of the Canadian A.A.U. as any other factor.

The Foran concept of amateurism flared, for instance, in the famed Abe Ellowitz case of a decade ago when Toronto's family compact of amateur officials discovered a former Detroit professional baseball player was playing "amateur" football for Ottawa Rough Riders. Foran's Ottawa disciples couldn't understand why Ellowitz shouldn't play for Riders and the declining A.A.U. of C. lost the issue.

Foran's principle kept the National Lacrosse Union apart from the amateur union while the Federal Hockey League, which he founded on a semi-pro basis, was virtually the start of the pro ice sport early in the century. In all his activities, Foran did not care whether a competitor was amateur or pro as long as he came clean in his declaration of standing. He was vehement in his denunciation of hypocrisy and perjury in sport.

Now it can be said Billy Foran lived to see the day when his code was generally accepted in Canada. Who cares if Joe Krol or Bobby Porter once turned professional?

From 1908 the trustees of the Stanley Cup were P. D. Ross, the silent, and Billy Foran, the loquacious. Foran literally ran lacrosse as president of the old N.L.U. In 1902 he took the Ottawa Capitals to the Pan-American Exposition where they won the "World Lacrosse Championship". He was manager of the All-Canada Lacrosse team which swept aside all competition in England in 1908, winning 22 games. He was founder and president of Rivermeed Golf Club at Ottawa.

In addition to his trusteeship of the Stanley Cup, Foran was controller of various trophies, two of which have been forgotten in the passing of time. They included the Prince of Wales Trophy for the American team championship on the N.H.L.; The O'Brien Cup for the Canadian championship of the same loop; Lady Byng Trophy, annually awarded to the N.H.L.'s most gentlemanly player, and the Joe Lally Trophy, emblematic of the World's Lacrosse title.

KANSAS CITY FIRST IN LOOP

(By The Canadian Press)

Kansas City took over first place in the United States hockey league Wednesday, pulling out of a tie with Omaha by virtue of a 4-2 victory over St. Paul. It was the seventh home victory of the season for the Pla-Mors and 4,108 fans were out to watch.

In the second league game of the night Fort Worth Rangers defeated Dallas Texans 5-4 in their best game of the season. The victory did not get the Rangers out of the cellar but it pulled them up into a tie with Tulsa Oilers for that unwanted position.

Kansas and St. Paul played scoreless hockey for the first period before Maurice Vallincourt scored the first goal for Kansas and St. Paul's Joe Schack and Bill Galligan put the visitors one up. Tommy Fowler, Butch McDonald and Hank Blade scored for Kansas in the third period while Goalie Doug Jackson kept all St. Paul comers off.

Fort Worth fought its way to a 2-1 lead in the first frame of the Rangers- Texans foray with markers by Stanley Jones and Roy McBride against a single for Dallas by Mike Shabaga. A scoreless second frame was followed by Russ Kopak's tally for the Rangers and a set of goals by Ted Garvin and Al Rittinger which ran the Fort Worth lead up to 5-1. Louis Smoke, Eddie Emerton and Lloyd Finkbeiner pushed in a trio for Dallas before the final period was over.

St. Paul meets Tulsa tonight in the only scheduled league game.

Columbus, O., Dec. 6 (AP) — Baseball Commissioner Happy Chandler probably is wondering these days where he ever got that nickname....Happy's grin is undimmed but it must have hurt him a lot to be frozen out of the new baseball promotion setup — the one thing he has emphasized since he became head man was that he wanted to do anything "for the good of baseball."

Today's Guest Star.

Tommy Fitzgerald, Louisville Courier-Journal: "When Pants Rowland announced the Pacific Coast League was going major, everybody was shocked. They thought Pants was talking through his hat."

The first real scrap is due to hit the convention floor today when the matter of moving the double A leagues up to a new class is considered...Zeke Bonura, who introduced baseball into Africa and a few other odd spots while he was in the army, may wind up as player-manager at Minneapolis ....The Browns may effect the outright purchase of the municipally-owned Elmira, N.Y. Club ...Biggest player deal reported so far was one which a delegate managed to sign Vic Marino, former Ohio State and Great Lakes football guard, to play for the Chicago Bears.

Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 858
By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

When you shoot the moon in a bridge game, kid, back it up with practical reason. For a bull-necked try at a senseless bid is committing partnership treason.

Assume you are sitting south in this pair of partnership hands:

♠6
♥K Q 7 4
♦A K J 3
♣A J 9 6
NORTH
♠A 8 5
♥A J 5 3
♦Q 8
♣K 7 5 3

The bidding should go like this:

SOUTH	NORTH
1 H	3 H
4 NT	6 D
6 or 7 H	Pass

If you bid six and make seven, are you wrong? If you bid seven and make only six, are you wrong?. That depends on how good a player you are and the reasons you can give for your final call.

By the time north bids six diamonds, can you figure out what cards are propably held by your partner? If you can, you should bid seven. If you are not so capable, you should stop at six.

When you opened with one heart, you showed five tricks among other things. When your partner responded at once with a one-jump assist to three hearts, what did he show?

He denied having a biddable suit for a takeout. His assist said he had adequate support. His jump said he had five tricks. Since his jump was immediate, he said two of his tricks were sure ones.

Your four no-trump bid was the ace and king showing and asking convention. Assuming you are using The Kibitzer's convention, what did partner promise by his six diamond reply?

It was the signal for showing two aces and one king. These are three of his five promised tricks. So his other two tricks must be queens, or short cards, or a combination of both.

If you know your stuff, you can bid enough.

Jack Dempsey, Former Champ, Proves Main Attraction In Wrestling Show at Arena

Watson and Flanagan Win Two Falls But Best Fight is After Dempsey Leaves Ring

Jack Dempsey, a lithe sinewy figure, still displaying some of the catlike footwork that characterized him in his heyday as heavyweight champion of the world, proved the main attraction at the Hume Arena Wednesday night, when a packed house rang down the curtain on the 1945 wrestling season here.

The former idol of millions of boxing fans, still in the pink of condition, was besieged by hundreds of admirers, most of whom "knew him when" at least so they told him, and Jack smilingly acquiesced, to those who demanded his autograph, and got it, on cigarette boxes, cigarette papers, calling cards and hunks of wrapping paper.

Old folks, young ones, boys of assorted ages thronged around the entrance to the dressing rooms waiting for a sight of their hero and rubbed elbows with more or less haughty bobby sox brigade who wanted no part of the champ, but impatiently awaited the appearance of "Whippah" Watson.

Oh yes, lest we forget, in between all these ring and arena amenities there were some wrestling bouts thrown in.

A Battle Royal.

The main wrestling attraction was another of those battles royal which made such a hit with the faithful in the last three shows Billed as Katan and Dunlop versus Watson and Flanagan, the grapple entree was changed a bit when it was learned that Katan was unable to appear on account of an infected arm and Walter Sirois volunteered to act as guinea pig with Dunlop against the favorite duo of the faster younger men.

At that there was plenty of excitement. To abbreviate the story the Whippah and Patsy Flanagan, the trapeze act pair proved too much for the opposition and with Dempsey standing for no fooling, were winners in two official falls.

The third and unofficial fall came after La Dempsey had departed from the ring surrounded by admirers. The Sirois-Dunlop combination, thinking they were the victims of a hoax or the equivalent did not give up so easily. They resumed the foursome where Dempsey had cut it off and proceeded, much to the delight of Watson and Flanagan to stage a donnybrook of their own.

The fans crowded around the ring as the four lads let go at one another with all they had. They tossed the first pantless guy they saw out of the ring regardless, while the fans screamed for Dempsey to come back.

Best Show of Night.

It was the best show of the evening and with no fifth man to guide 'em the four huskies staged a gallant finis to an already exciting card. Finally the Whippah and Flanagan tiring of the by-play threw Dunlop and Sirois around the circle four or five times then climbed through the ropes to the dressing room while the villains of the piece consoled one another by holding each others arms aloft in token of self-awarded victory.

Toar Morgan, the Lindsay Lion and Al Krusher Kormar, staged an exciting semi-final with the Toar getting the nod after twenty-nine minutes of exciting mat work. In the preliminary, Cgeri Balini was disqualified after he had mussed Bowmanville Bill Stack in and out of the ring.

And so ends the wrestling season here. Maestro Tunney and Phil Lawson, the "Voices" of wrestling stated before they said good-bye to Belleville that they would be back again in the Spring with all the old favorites plus a lot of new faces.

Boston Bruins Threaten N.H.L. Leaders by Beating Hawks to Take Second Place

Win by 6-3 and Victory Marks Fifth Conquest in Six Games

(By The Canadian Press.)

After successfully resisting threats to their National Hockey League leadership by Detroit Red Wings, Montreal Canadiens faced a new peril today.

It came from Boston Bruins, who thumped Chicago Black Hawks 6-3 last night to leap into second place two points behind Canadiens.

Victory marked their fifth conquest in six games since Nov. 10, stretching the league's undefeated record. Over that stretch they outscored their opponents 28-13 in defeating every team in the league except Detroit, who gained a 2-2 tie last Sunday.

A jammed 13,900 crowd at Boston Garden saw the home team race into a 3-0 lead in the first 22 minutes of action. Chicago pulled up to a 4-3 margin early in the third period, but Bruins drew away again five minutes from the finish on Milt Schmidt's first N.H.L. goal since the 1941-42 season.

Two negative notes emerged from the game. Veteran Bill Cowley, for the third straight time, sought fruitlessly for the point which would stretch his point total for 11 campaigns to an even 500; and Bruins held Chicago's dynamo line of Bill Mosienko and the Bentley brothers scoreless for the second time in 14 games.

Hawks Down to Third.

Defeat left the erratic Hawks locked in a third-place tie with Detroit, one point behind Boston. Chicago defeated Boston 5-4 at Boston in the first game of the season Oct. 24.

Goals by Armand (Bep) Guidolin; Bill Shill and Jack McGill gave Bruins control before Johnny Mariucci opened the Chicago scoring at 4.51 for the second period. Woody Dumart teamed with Pat Egean and McGill to make it 4-1 before Don Grosso sailed in alone for Chicago's second tally.

Eddie Wares, in the penalty box when Grosso scored, returned early in the third to slam George Allen's relay past Paul Bibeault. That made it 4-3 for Boston and the Hawks flew to the attack, but at 15:16 Schmidt flipped in McGill's long forward pass to seal the issue. It was Schmidt's first goal in 11 games since rejoining Bruins after three years in the R.C.A.F.

Forty-six seconds from the end, Herb Cain scored the final Boston goal on a pass from Terry Reardon.

STAFFORDS BEAT HAMILTON PATS IN SENIOR O.H.A.

George Mara Aroused Most of Cheering With Three-Goal Display

By The Canadian Press

Toronto Staffords bowed in with an 8-3 victory on Toronto ice last night in the senior O.H.A., the victims being the Hamilton Patricias. George Mara aroused most of the cheering with a triple-goal display for the winners whose other snipers were Red Smith, Normie Mann, Jamieson, Stafford and Shannon. Hamilton notched the first counter of the evening through Hutchinson but the staffs closed the first period 2-1 to the good and ran in four more in the second in the national economy. the visitors. Baird accounted for Hamilton's third score.

In the senior engagement at Stratford, the Indians looked like winners for one period but Owen Sound Mohawks cancelled a two-goal deficit to gain a 3-2 triumph with three straight counters in the middle chapter. There was no scoring in the last frame. Shears, Bowen and McCarthy were the ones who put Mohawks on top while scoring Indians were McQuade and Woodward.

Hamilton Lloyds left Toronto young Rangers in the Cellar of the Junior "A" standing when they fought it out at Hamilton, the homesters emerging victorious 4-3. Ringer rang a goal at the outset for Young Rangers but Lloyds came from behind to take a 2-1 lead which lasted until the third period. Kemp counted two and Hnatiuk and Ketola one each for the victors. Ringer secured a brace and Gagnon scored the other for the Torontonians.

What's Doing in Sport

(By The Canadian Press.)

At the opening session of the National Association of professional baseball leagues at Columbus, O., yesterday, approval was given to a resolution recommending permission for clubs to sign a boy still in high school if parents and principal agree circumstances are appropriate and desirable.

The recommendation, which now goes to the majors' meeting in Chicago next week, was endorsed by H. V. Porter, Secretary of the National Federation of State High School Athletic Associations.

Dan Topping, part owner of the New York Baseball Yankees, yesterday announced his withdrawal from the National Pro Football League and the formation of the New York Football Yankees to play home games in Yankee stadium. The new club will play in the All-America Conference which has eight other teams for 1946.

Announcement was made at Newark, N.J., last night that welterweight champion Freddie Cochrane is proceeding to Ottawa to officiate as the third man in the ring for the feature bout of an inter-service boxing show. Friday night.

Paced by a four-goal spree by Grant Warwick, New York Rangers of the National Hockey League defeated Shawinigan Falls Cataracts of Quebec senior hockey League at Shawinigan Falls last night in an exhibition game before 3,500 fans.

Gerald (Gee) Walker, former outfielder with Detroit Tigers, Chicago White Sox, Washington Senators and Cincinnati Reds, has signed a 1946 contract with Sacramento of the Pacific Coast League, it was announced last night. He was released recently by the Reds. New York Yankees announced the sale of catcher Herb Crompton to the Toronto club of the International League.

The World is Like That

CHAPTER 8

It was this big comfortable aunt who came panting up to Bam's room late in the gloomy Sunday afternoon to find Bam and Peaches, the youngest girls, in enthralled conversation with Jocelyn, who was lying flat on a bed, with a warm blanket over her.

"Girls, this room is cold! Why don't you make a fire?" said Aunt Nell, sinking into a chair, "Jocelyn, you're getting a touch of flu, if you ask me." She stretched out a hand, touched Jocelyn's cheek. "Yes, you've got about a degree," she said firmly. "Bam, you go right down and tell one of the boys to bring up some wood, and get that stove going. Get Jocelyn a nightgown—get her one of Sissy's, Peaches—and Jocelyn, you turn right in, and make up your mind to it. You're going to stay right there over Thanksgiving, or as long as it takes to knock out that bug. Peaches, you get Jossy's hot-water bag."

It was only when these comfortable preparations were well under way that the older woman delivered the message that had originally brought her upstairs. Mr. Fordyce had telephoned to Mrs. Buck to say that Miss Britton's car was back in the garage, and that Miss Britton was to take it easy and stave off that cold.

"Isn't that kind of him!" Jocelyn said dreamily. Physical misery had taken possession of her now; she didn't care much, or realize clearly what was going on.

After that a lost day or two slipped by, and they were all spoiling her; it hadn't been flu, just a heavy cold, and it had been nipped in the bud. And somebody had notified the office that she wouldn't be back until Friday.

On Wednesday afternoon, when her aunt was asleep upstairs and she was watching Jane's baby boy, Tim, and Josey's baby girl, Rosemary, tumbling about in their pen, Philip Fordyce walked in unannounced. He looked handsome and rosy and kind, coming in out of the cold, and he showed an expert friendliness with the two babies.

"You seem quite all right again" Philip said, when she had answered some questions about her little illness.

"I am. I feel—oh, wonderful!" Jocelyn said.

He looked at her keenly, and she liked the look, even though it gave her a queer little sensation of fright.

"It was an emotional breakdown, as well as the cold, wasn't it?" the man said. Instantly the conversation plunged down from its surface position to something far deeper, and Jocelyn's quick change of expression showed that she recognized it as she responded slowly, with a touch of heightened color. "That was it."

"You spent the night in the car, on a rainy mountain."

"But that wasn't the worst. It was the shock," Jocelyn said. "The shock of finding that what—what I'd thought I wanted to do wasn't what I wanted at all. Finding that what I thought I'd felt for him simply wasn't there. He—he had been the cool one, before that. I'd been the one that was going slowly mad. And then suddenly it was the other way."

"You'd never cared, really," the man said, watching her.

"Oh, but I had! To think of stopping it all was like having my thoughts—my emotions amputated," Joocelyn explained, with a rueful little laugh. "I've been—sort of—sort of dazed, since. I've lain in bed, all Sunday and Monday and yesterday, just thinking it over—thinking what a shabby affair it's been all along. How cheap it is to say one takes nothing from the wife, one has a right to friendship, knowing all along that one hasn't!"

"Oh, there was a wife?" the man asked, smiling.

"There is a wife!"

"You're an honest person," Philip commented. "My daughter says it doesn't make the slightest difference whether a girl is straight or not."

Jocelyn looked at him in sudden interest. "Norma does? But Norma's only sixteen!"

"She was about fourteen when she told me that."

"She didn't!" Jocelyn's eyes brightened in spite of herself. "What things the youngsters say" she murmured, shaking her head. "I think it's a lot of talk, myself."

"But of course it is! They don't mean it. And Norma is only a little girl, Mr. Fordyce."

"I know. But Spotty's a rather sophisticated little girl."

"You don't really think that things have changed, do you? I think that decent girls grow to be decent women today, as they always have, and girls who take chances pay sooner or later in one way or another! But you stopped in casually to ask how I was, and here we are deep in morals," she added, with an apologetic smile.

"I didn't stop in casually. I came on purpose," he corrected her.

"Oh?" Her color rushed up. "Something at the office?" she asked.

"No. Look here, if you had a sixteen-year-old to raise, a pretty kid who'll someday have a lot of money, what would you do? Lock her up, cut off her allowance or give her her head and trust that it would come out all right?"

"Give her her head, I think. Or no," Jocelyn began hesitatingly. "Try to win her, to influence her, perhaps. It's a problem, isn't it?" smiling into his troubled eyes.

"It's a terrible problem. Is it one—do you have any ideas, do you think you could solve it?"

"I?" she asked, surprised. "But I don't know very much about girls today. Girls of Norma's age. It's more than ten years since I was Norma's age. And even then—" She hesitated. "I was an only daughter," she said. "We hadn't very much, my father had died, and we lived in boardinghouses. I hadn't much chance to see what a rich girl, one of the Burlingame crowd, thinks or doesn't think. I do know this," Jocelyn went on, "that the girls—the women in the office are a pretty free-and-easy lot. But it seems to me that a girl who will be as rich as Norma, and with your mother to keep an eye on her—"

"My mother can't do much, except worry and scold and be horrified. Mother's sixty-six; she says she won't play nursemaid to anyone's child. She adored Spotty when Spotty was last with us, but that was two years ago. She spoiled her and then bullied her, and Norma had a damnable fraulein that her mother had sent out with her, who broke up the whole house. Altogether, it was a cat-and-parrot time!" the man said.

"My plan now," he went on, "is to open the Burlingame house, move mother there, settle everything before Norma gets here. Then I'll make arrangements at the Palo Alto school for French or Italian lessons, and her afternoons will be free. She'll meet her old gang; there'll be plenty of excitement for her. Sub-deb things, house parties at Pebble Beach, all that.

"Janet, her mother, has picked out a Frenchwoman to come and be a companion for her, but it seems the child despises her. Norma wrote me in a fury, saying that if I didn't get rid of mademoiselle the minute she arrived she'd run away. She asked me to get someone young and pretty and sensible, that she could like, who'd go around with her and understand what it was all about. I've been trying for her old governess, Miss Sanderson. Can't get in touch with her. And that's where you come in," he finished simply.

"That's where I come in? You mean you'd like me to try it?"

"I want to keep her safe," he said. "I'd like to make her so happy here that I could keep her for a year or two, get her safely married to some decent fellow that I know something about. This mam'selle, according to Spotty, has got a cousin who's a count, and I presume he has an eye on the family fortune; I don't know. Spotty met him on the ship, and she says she can't stand him, and that he'd always be hanging around. Well, there's the setup. D'you think you could do anything with it?"

Instead of answering him she fixed him with a penetrating look, and asked in her turn, with a little difficulty and, a heightened color. "What makes you think I'd be a good person to manage her, instill a little sense into her? You know all about me, what a fool I'm capable of making of myself."

"Yep, I know all about that," he answered, after a second, and without a smile.

"You think I could do it?"

"I don't know quite what there's going to be to do for you or anyone else," Philip said, with a shrug that indicated his entire helplessness. "I don't know that it can be done. Here's a girl with looks and money and position who shows every sign of wanting to get herself onto the rocks at the first opportunity. She doesn't believe in anything or anybody, as far as I can find out. She wants a good time. Well, can she have it safely? That's what I want to find out. It occurred to me on Sunday that you might be the person to keep an eye on her. You can go anywhere she wants to go, understand how she feels. You're young enough to sympathize with her, and yet old enough to run her. If once you got her to like you, that—that might be the answer."

Jocelyn looked at him thoughtfully.

"I can't tell you, at least, what it means to me to have you feel I could try," she finally said, humbly. "I've been telling myself all week that you were the vice-president of the company and I just one of the office girls, and that it didn't matter what you thought of me. But it does matter. The only thing is," she went on somewhat hesitantly, "that I don't know very much about girls today. And if I tried this—this that you suggest, and failed, I'd feel so terribly about it."

"You couldn't fail any more than I feel her mother and I have failed," the man said decidedly. "You seem to me eminently fitted. You're human, and that's what I'm after. And if it fails, why, we'll always be glad to have you back with us in the office. Will you think it over, talk it over with your aunt?"

For some reason she could not at the moment define, tears were suddenly in Jocelyn's eyes, tears thickened her voice when she spoke.

"I'll be glad to try," she said simply.

Build Up Strength and Energy to Guard Against Colds—Flu

Many Persons Taking Syntona Say They Have Had Fewer Colds. Rids System of Acids and Poisons. Improves Action of Stomach, Liver and Bowels.

Helps Throw Off Lingering After-Effects

If you are unable to throw off the after-effects of colds, flu or grippe, you are probably rundown and need a good tonic like Syntona to improve the action of the stomach, increase appetite, promote elimination of excess acids and poisonous waste matter and to purify the blood.

Syntona contains 12 medicinal ingredients in a perfectly balanced formula to give the best of results and hundreds who have used this new medicine state that they have never taken anything like it before.

Mrs. Jennie Rouse, of Elmira, says: "I was rundown, had a weak, sickly stomach and felt so nervous that the least thing startled me. I had pains through my side and chest and seemed to have pains through my joints and muscles. I'd get severe colds and didn't seem to be able to get rid of them.

"I started taking Syntona and right from the first my food began to digest better. The aches and pains went away and now it is wonderful how different I feel. The nervous, irritable feeling is all cleared up and I haven't had a cold since. I am certainly pleased with Syntona and I will use it whenever I am feeling rundown."

Syntona is vastly different from ordinary preparations and the chances are that you, too, will say it is the best medicine you ever had the good fortune to use.

Syntona is sold and recommended in Belleville at DOLAN THE DRUGGIST.

Stirling High School Holds Commencement Exercises

Stirling, Dec. 6 —(Special)— The theatre at Stirling was filled to capacity by parents and friends on Tuesday night for the annual commencement of Stirling High School.

The prizes and diplomas were presented by the principal, Mr. J. L. Good, B.A., and Dr. E. A. Carleton, Chairman of the Board of Education. Dr. Carleton in the chairman's address, told of the origin of the Carter Scholarships and stressed the fact that they had been won by a Stirling High School student for the fifth time.

Divertisement for the evening was provided by a Dutch dance in which Ruth Rose, Barbara Robson, Joan Hoard, Jean McIntosh, Barbara Prince, Lorraine Graver, Mary Agnes Fox and Marie Ackers took part; songs by the pupils of Grade IX; and a two-act play, "The Red Lamp," by Hilliard Booth, and under the direction of G. L. Clute. The cast included Margaret McGee, Frank Weaver, Helen Johnstone, Roy Thompson, Grant Stapley and Mary Chambers.

Miss Davis Valedictorian.

Miss Margaret Davis, now attending Toronto University, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Davis of Greenview, Ont., was the valedictorian. Miss Davis, who won the Hon. J. R. Cooke Scholarship, value $50, from the local school and the 1st Carter Scholarship, value $100, with the Provincial Aid Scholarship of $400 has the distinction of winning $550 as a whole when graduating June last.

In her valedictory remarks, Miss Davis spoke of the honor of being chosen as the valedictorian of the 1945 class and her hope of being able to justify the trust that had been placed in her. "This occasion, with our friends and parents present, is a time of joy but also regret: Joy because we are graduating into the world with high aims for the future, and regret because we are leaving friends and teachers to go out and take on new responsibilities. We carry pleasant memories of happy times had here, when we have made many lasting friendships both with teachers and fellow students.

Principal Lauded.

In our principal, Mr. Good, we have found, not only a competent mathematician but a constant advisor, a friend in whom we might confide, and a counsellor whose words of wisdom spoke loudly of his knowledge and interest.

To we who graduate, these years have meant more than a course complete as we were taught much more than the requirements of the course of study, unconsciously our characters were being moulded.

I think it is fitting to give credit here to those who have truly made our high school graduation possible—our parents who have sympathized with us in our failures, encouraged us and rejoiced with us in our accomplishments.

Commencement Day, designating the day on which we receive our diplomas and graduate, marks only the beginning of our learning. What we have learned, valuable though it is, is only a milestone in our careers, we march on learning new things by new experiences and those of us who are attending universities, colleges or normal school are continuing our education directly. Also those who are taking positions are adding to their learning.

Leaving School in Critical Period

We are leaving our school in a critical and challenging period, the period of reconstruction. It has been our opportunity to have a liberal education. Let us go out into the world unprejudiced and ready to understand the rights and privileges of other people and other nations. We must be willing to do our duty and never to shirk our responsibilities. Our school motto "Work Conquers All" must remain our constant guide after we leave these halls of learning.

To those who remain fervently I say grasp from your school life all the wisdom and happiness you can. Remember that here you are gaining the ideals and knowledge that will fit you to be worthy citizens in the new era of peace.

To my fellow graduates I say, let us take into life the tools we have forged here, the judgment, the intellectual curiosity the love of truth, the fairness, the courage, the logical and may they serve us well.

Awards Presented

During the evening the following awards were made:

Scholarships donated by the Stirling High School Literary Society for the highest average in their respective grades—$4 each: Helen Johnstone, Ruth Rose, Donald Wilson, Benny Mason.

CHARLES STEPHEN FOX
(Point Anne)

Charles Stephen Fox died this morning at his home at Point Anne after an illness of four years' duration.

Born at Eldorado the late Mr. Fox was in his 53rd year and was a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Fox. For twenty-five years he lived at Point Anne and was employed at the plant of the Canada Cement Company. He was a member of Grace Chapel, Belleville, and fraternally he was a member of Loyal Orange Lodge No. 2599, Point Anne and the Royal Black Preceptory.

Surviving him are his wife the former Mary Jane Margarvey; one son, Bernard, at home one sister, Mrs. James Fox, Eldorado, three brothers Russell of Malone; Walter of Eldorado. and George A. of Stirling.

Resting at the Martin Funeral Home, Church Street, until this evening, then at his home at Point Anne; the funeral announcement is made in this issue.

Jury Disagrees In Accident Case

Four applications for naturalization were recommended by Judge Madden at the fall session of the county court held this week. The only other case heard was a civil action jury case, Hostler versus Wilson, resulting from a highway accident on the Bancroft road near the Bessemer intersection.

The accident was a collision between a large lumber truck owned by Mr. Wilson of Boulter and a lighter truck owned by Mr. Hostler of Hermon.

Presentation of arguments in the accident case took up the greater portion of the court session, the court lasting three days and the jury deliberating five hours only to disagree in their verdict. Hostler, the plaintiff asked $800 damages, while in a counter-claim Wilson asked $250 damages. R. E. Nourse of Picton acted as counsel for the plantiff, while H. Steen of Hughes, Ayer, Thompson and Amys, of Toronto, acted as counsel for the defendant.

All applications for naturalization were recommended to the following: William Mayer, furrier, 17 Campbell Street; Louis Fojtek, mechanic fitter Batawa; Antonio (Anthony) Viklicky, mechanic fitter, Batawa, and Felix Skoutajan, factory inspector, Batawa. The last three applications were of Czechoslovakian birth, Fojtek and Viklicky giving Czechoslovakia as their birthplace while Skoutajan was born in Austria.

POLICE COURT

Charged originally with resisting a police officer in the course of his duties, Richard Bardy of Deseronto paid $20 fine and $21.70 costs in county police court Thursday morning after the charge had been reduced to one of being drunk in a public place. The charge was brought by N. E. Langton, chief of police of Deseronto, with the accused found guilty on the lesser charge.

Court was of comparatively brief duration with the Bardy case being the only one heard by Magistrate T. Y. Wills. Nine cases were listed for hearing, but two traffic charges were settled out of court and the others were enlarged until future courts.

Chief Lynch Suspects Fire Bug as Cause Of Series of Blazes

Fire Chief William Lynch of the local fire department a member of the Ontario Fire Marshal's department is investigating the frequent occurrence of fires in the Coleman Street district between Catherine and Henry Streets where no less than nine fire alarms have been answered within the past four months.

The latest alarm in that district occurred Wednesday evening when a woodshed at 250 Coleman Street was discovered ablaze shortly before six o'clock. Damage amounting to approximately $50 resulted when one side of the small frame building was charred by the flames, while paint on nearby dwelling was blistered before the blaze was brought under control.

"There definitely is a fire bug in the district," assured Fire Chief Lynch today following his investigation of the blaze, "and if we are successful in finding the one responsible there will be charges forthcoming."

Although no great amount of damage has resulted from the nine recent blazes in the Coleman Street area, this was avoided only through the fires being discovered before they had gained much progress.

For the first time in its history, Hastings County is being represented at the International Congress of 4-H clubs being held in Chicago. The 4-H organization is composed of representatives of junior agriculturist in Hastings all parts of the United States and Canada.

The county representative is youthful Royden Davis, son of Reeve and Mrs. William Davis of Bangor, McClure and Wicklow township who reside at Maple Leaf. He was the outstanding junior agriculturalist in Hastings County in 1945.

Ordinarily county representation is made through the medium of its two outstanding junior agriculturists, a young man and a girl. Miss Fay Rollins, of Cooper, was the choice to accompany Royden Davis to Chicago, but a day or so previous to leaving, a member of the family was stricken with mumps.

The trip to 4-H convention was made possible through efforts of county agricultural representative Linn Fair, of Stirling, it was disclosed in the Agricultural Committee's report to the County Council at Wednesday morning's session.

Previously, Ontario representation at the Congress was made by junior boys and girls from Western Ontario. Mr. Fair, Reeve Charles Rush, Hungerford, a member of the agricultural committee stated, repeatedly requested that this county be represented and this year his request was granted.

"It is a worthy object," he said, "and will be a great incentive to junior boys and girls of the rural district to compete for the honor of representing their county at Chicago."

For the past 23 years, the report stated, boys and girls who have been outstanding in junior work in their respective districts have been awarded the trip to Chicago. It recommended that the County Council grant the sum of $40 each to the boy and girl making the trip and that the grant be an annual one.

While the council in open session could not ratify the recommendation for the grant, the item was referred to the Ways and Means Committee and there isn't any doubt of its being accepted by the body as a whole.

Establish County Forest.

The Agricultural Committee, the report stated, at its meeting a few days ago held considerable discussion on the question of establishing a county forest or forests in Hastings County. It felt that some sort of action should be taken. It recommended that a reforestation and conservation committee be formed at the January session of council which will have power to purchase land for reforestation purposes.

The committee further recommended that a concrete and definite plan of reforestation and conservation be drawn up as soon as possible.

It requested an investigation of the possibility of the erection of windbreaks along county roads, and that some definite plan of action be decided upon.

Warden Urges Support For Shrine Club

Warden J. Fred Wilson, urged his County Council and the county as a whole to support the efforts of the Belleville District Shrine Club in raising funds to be devoted to combating the dread disease of tuberculosis in this district.

Splendid results had already been achieved in the city of Belleville through a mass X-ray survey of some 5,500 residents thanks to the generosity of the Shrine Club and the Department of Health as represented by Dr. G. G. Brearley here.

The cost is nothing to the general public, the warden pointed out, and he urged all who could to take advantage of the survey when the clinic arrived in their vicinity.

"The Shrine Club," he said, "is not confining its efforts along the mass survey lines to the city of Belleville alone. Next year it will branch out into the county with clinics being held at Tweed, Madoc, Marmora, Bancroft and other villages and towns in the county."

"This is a splendid thing the Shrine Club is doing in sponsoring such a humanitarian project. It will be of great advantage not only to the residents of this city but to those of the county as well. I earnestly urge you as individuals to support its Christmas Seal campaign which is now going on and as a body to earnestly consider the question of a financial grant which will come before you at this session."

The warden quoted figures of the last mass survey held in Belleville and pointed out that those who were more or less affected would still be in ignorance of their condition if it were not for the X-ray examination which is being provided gratis to the general public of the district.

STRICKEN WITH PARALYSIS IN POLLING BOOTH

Self Studies Of 'Y' Outlined By T. Hutchinson

"Will the Canadian youth who tasted of the Canadian Y.M.C.A. services overseas find the same daring ingenuity and adequacy of service in the next peace time decade in the Canadian city Y.M.C.A.'s? This was the challenge put to the board of directors and other leaders of the Y.M.C.A. in Belleville Tuesday night by T. H. Hutchinson of the National Council of Y.M.C.A.'s in Canada.

"Let us not fall into the pit of peace and security that followed the last war. Life is always a desperate struggle and forever demands sweat, blood and tears from those who love and serve God and their fellow men."

The speaker outlined the self studies of the Y.M.C.A. This study was made by over fourteen subcommittees and covered such fields as Program, Leadership, Management, Control and Structure, Relationships, Membership and Financing. Special attention was given to the program during the period of demobilization and readjustment.

"Surely we are living in a fast changing world. Can we wonder that the responsibilities for Christian citizenship in such a world are too great for not only adults, but youth," commented the speaker.

"The Self Studies of the Y. M. C. A. indicate that there is something very vital and dynamic in this youth movement." The youth problem has been accentuated during the war by high wages paid to youth, work habits hastened maturity and a loss of school interest. "The Y.M.C.A. is one of the very few organizations to work out a post-war plan."

The speaker warned, however, that this plan was not an over-all prescription for all associations to carry out. Each association must view this plan in the light of how it could be best adopted to suit the needs of its own organization. Each branch has its own peculiar problems as to program and how it can best fill the needs in the community to which it belongs. Mr. Hutchinson urged the Y.M.C.A. to incorporate more youth leaders in its organization to help meet conditions in a changing world.

BRITISH HOUSING PROJECT

Vancouver, Dec. 6 —(CP)— A contract was signed Tuesday for manufacture and delivery of material to be used in construction of a $47,500,000 British housing project. Buildings to be erected in Britain will be of prefabricated material but of a permanent nature.

More Lumber Than Last Year Will be Cut

Approximately fifty per cent more lumber than last year will be cut in the timberlands of North Hastings this winter if weather conditions remain favorable, northern reeves now in the city attending County Council sessions stated today.

Cutting operations have been in full swing for the past several weeks in all sections of the northern district.

There is roughly eight inches of snow in the woods at the present time which is not deterring operations.

Hauling will not take place until late in January when transportation will be facilitated by the use of frozen lakes.

At the present time, the reeves said, the larger lakes are still open although smaller ones are frozen over.

Jeweller Obligingly Aids Dairy Official

With all apologies to the trend of women's clothing, styles of mere man's wearing apparel also change with the years if an incident which occurred in a local store yesterday is any criterion.

Early in the week a prominent Toronto dairy official had occasion to visit the city to attend the cheese makers' convention now in session when he suddenly developed "collar" trouble. Investigation proved the button of his shirt collar was either too small or the hole was worn too large so a search was instituted for a collar button.

The decision in favor of the collar button took but a minute, but not so the execution of the thought. The worried dairy official visited a Bridge Street jeweller but his inquiry for a mere collar button brought only raised eyebrows. When the emergency was explained, however, the jeweller after a prolonged search found a long forgotten box of collar buttons on a back shelf.

"Take as many as you want" urged the obliging jeweller. "I never get a call for them any more and you may as well have them."

Hitler's Armies Ready to Invade France in Nov. '39

Attack Postponed for Six Months Due to Bad Weather

By DANIEL DE LUCE

Nuernberg, Dec. 7. (AP)—Hitler's armies were poised for the invasion of the low countries and France Nov. 7, 1939, but the attack was postponed week by week for six months because of bad weather, official German records disclosed at the war crimes trial here today.

While the rest of the world spoke sarcastically of "a phoney war," the German military machine was ready and "waiting only for favorable weather," according to records introduced before the international military tribunal.

British prosecutors turned most of their evidence against the German military and naval leaders among the 20 top-ranking Hitlerites accused as war criminals, pointing out their part in plans for the crushing invasion while Hitler deceitfully told Holland, Belgium and Luxembourg that he had no plans to attack them.

The Fifth-column conquest of Norway and Denmark was only a prelude to the invasion a month later of the low countries, the evidence showed.

Hitler signed his directive for attack "as soon as possible" on the Low Countries Oct. 9, 1939—five weeks after the invasion of Poland, it was disclosed.

Massed Along Border

On Nov. 7, the German armies were massed along the border for the attack on Belgium, Holland and Luxembourg, other High Command orders showed.

The actual attack did not start until May 10, 1940, because of successive spells of bad weather that might have interfered with operations of the air force and the mechanized units of the German army, according to the score of military top secrets made public in the courtroom for the first time.

Another surprise was the disclosure by the prosecution that a large portion of the German air force's plans for parachute troop operations during the Lowlands invasion fell into Allied hands on Jan. 10, 1940—just four months before the Germans actually jumped off. The plans were found in a German plane which crashed in Belgium.

Jump-Off Day Set

A series of postponements finally culminated in electing Jan. 17, 1940, as the jump-off day, with Aachen selected as the invasion point. Again the weather went sour and the attack was called off "on account of the meteorological situation."

It was not until May 9, 1940, that the final order was issued and the great invasion of the Lowlands began the next day.

More evidence of Hitler's treachery was entered into the record when assistant prosecutor G. D. Roberts recalled German "assurances" Oct. 6, 1939, that Hitler would respect the neutrality of Belgium and Holland. Four days later he signed the directive for war against them "as soon as possible."

Mr. Roberts castigated the military and naval leaders on trial—Reichsmarshal Hermann Goering, Field Marshal Keitel, Col.-Gen. Alfred Jodl, German army chief of staff and Grand Admirals Karl Doenitz and Karl Raeder, German navy leaders.

"What kind of honor have these men?" asked Mr. Roberts, reciting the list of treaties broken by Germany.

Shown in Excerpts

The role that Hitler's much-vaunted "intuition" played in directing army operations was shown in excerpts from Jodl's diary in which he described the fuehrer as wrestling with the problem of whether to invade the Low Countries before the lightning grab for Denmark and Norway. At one time, it was disclosed, Hitler actually ordered the Norwegian-Danish invasion to begin after the Low Countries invasion but the plan was later reversed.

Hitler finally decided, Jodl's diary disclosed, on a "swift entry into Norway" and then argued with Keitel against further delay in the invasion of the Low Countries.

FATEFUL 120 DAYS

Ottawa, Dec. 7 —(CP)— Europe's fateful 120 days — the next four months — may mean the difference between a Europe of hope and a Europe "on the skids" which would take the rest of the world down with it, George S. Mooney, chief executive officer for U.N.R.R.A. in Europe, said here Wednesday night.

States to Give Britain a Credit Of 4.4 Billion

By MAX HALL

Washington, Dec. 7 (AP)—The United States agreed today to give war-shaken Britain a credit of $4,400,000,000, provided Congress is willing.

At the same time the two governments pledged to work together in an effort to achieve world-wide expansion of trade and job opportunities by reducing tariffs, cartels and other trade barriers.

In addition, they made a final settlement of lend-lease and other wartime financial dealings between the United States and the United Kingdom.

Under terms of the loan agreement—announced simultaneously in Washington and London — Britain would have 55 years to repay.

For the first five years she would pay nothing. In 1951 she would make the first of 50 installments, including interest of two per cent computed each year on the amount still owed.

Under certain adverse conditions—if Britain's trade fell off badly and her money reserves dropped—the interest payment could be skipped in those years.

Assuming 50 full payments, the grand total prepaid would be about $7,000,000,000. The last installment would fall due in the year 2001.

Of the total $4,400,000,000 credit Britain would receive only $3,750,000,000 in cash—the amount of a loan which Congress must approve.

The remainder—estimated at $650,000,000—is the amount the two governments agreed that Britain will owe the United States after:

1. Lend-lease and reverse lend-lease accounts have been balanced.
2. U.S.-owned surplus property in Britain has been transferred to British title and
3. Certain claims between the two governments have been settled.

That amount actually, the two governments said, may range between $625,000,000 and $700,000,000 because the exact amount of lend-lease goods delivered after VJ-Day has not been totalled finally.

Four Years Ago Jap Aggression Hit Pearl Harbor

Pearl Harbor, Dec. 7. (CP) Four years ago today Japanese bombers knifed in from the sea and across Oahu Island's towering Koolau mountains to smash the United States Pacific fleet lying at anchor in the peace of a balmy Sunday morning.

Almost the only reminders today of the disaster are the rusting, barnacled sections of unsalvaged ships in the harbor.

Fine Christmas Feast Will Be Provided Canadians in Germany

By WILLIAM BOSS
(CP War Correspondent)

With Canadian Occupation Force, Germany, Dec. 7. (CP)—Though nothing will compensate for absence from home, plans are in hand to make Christmas as festive a celebration here as possible.

"We're going to give the troops lots to eat, get them just a little merry and entertain them," said an officer at Maj.-Gen. Chris Vokes' headquarters recently, asking, "what better recipe could one have for Christmas. . . here?"

Extra rations for Christmas dinner include 31,250 pounds of turkey; three tons of Christmas pudding and as many of Christmas cake, almost a ton and a half of mine-meat and about a quarter of a ton of cranberries.

There will be sage to season the turkey and more than three tons of tinned Canadian peas to serve with it. For men who like tomato ketchup with their dinner there will be more than 1,500 bottles and to end the meal on a satisfactory note three tons of nuts and 50,000 oranges, enough for two per man, are scheduled.

The Christmas cake is to be iced and sufficient icing sugar, almond paste, egg flake, butter and extracts to do the job are on hand.

"Whether Canadian beer will be authorized and shipped in time for Yuletide is debatable but there is certain to be enough beer, brewed locally according to English standards, for quantitative effect at least. An authorized rum issue or two have been put aside for the occasion.

But unless policy is changed, Canadians in Germany this year will not be allowed to hold the children's parties which have become traditional overseas.

HOUSE DEBATES BRETTON WOODS AGREEMENTS

Ilsley Says Canada Should Have Great Interest in Expanding World Trade

By D'ARCY O'DONNELL
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, Dec. 7. (CP)— Few countries in the world have a greater interest than Canada in an expanding world trade on a multi-lateral basis, Finance Minister Ilsley told the Commons yesterday in calling for Canadian approval of the Bretton Woods international monetary agreement.

The agreement was aimed at making multi-lateral trade possible within a reasonable length of time and was put forward as a means of stabilizing international economic relations so that the world would be turned from the path which led to the disastrous depression of the 1930's, Mr. Ilsley said.

Bold steps were needed to bring a properly functioning world economic system into operation and some of those steps could be taken through the international monetary fund and the international bank of reconstruction to be set up under the Bretton Woods agreement.

If adequate steps were not taken said Mr. Ilsley, this is what would happen:—

"The countries whose economic systems have been disorganized and which are short of foreign means of payments will be obliged under the pressure of necessity to impose restrictive controls of every type on their foreign transactions.

"They will go in for restrictive import licensing and prohibitions, exchange discrimination and every sort of regimentation to keep their foreign expenditures, particularly of the 'hard' dollar currences, within the limits that they feel they can afford.

"They will do everything in their power to keep consumption of foreign expenditures, particularly of the 'hard' dollar currencies, within the limits that they feel they can afford.

No Trouble In Rebuilding Export Market

By JOHN DAUPHINEE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Birmingham, England, Dec. 7 —(CP)—Rebuilding export markets is a dominant aim of Britain now that the war is over and manufacturers in the midlands say they anticipate no immediate sales problems. The difficulty will be to get the goods to sell.

The great majority of large factories in the black country were exporters before the war and their job is to win back customers to whom they have not been able to ship since 1939. Orders from abroad are coming in rapidly — much faster than they can be filled.

Here is the experience of one large manufacturing plant in Birmingham (Bulpitt and sons) and it can be applied in scores more cases:—

Before the war this factory employed 1,200 men and women and made a wide range of aluminum household utensils such as electric kettles, percolators,

SEA, AIR ARMADA SEEKS 27 MISSING MEN IN 6 PLANES

Ship Crew Tells of Seeing Explosion and "Met." Office Refers to Storm

Miami, Fla., Dec. 7 —(AP)—A vast sea and air armada was ordered out today to scan 100,000 square miles of the Atlantic in a "last-chance" effort to rescue 27 men who disappeared with a formation of five torpedo bombers and a missing search plane.

Two clues seemed sufficiently definite to remove some of the mystery that cloaked the disappearance of the entire formation of bombers, carrying 14 men, and the big rescue aircraft that joined them in the Atlantic's limbo Wednesday with 13 men on board.

Word from a passing ship, the S. S. Gaines Mills, that it saw an explosion at sea Wednesday, and what appeared to be an airplane falling, may be the clue to the fate of the search craft.

The other clue was a report by the airport weather station at Miami that a large area of turbulent air rolled out of a storm centred over Georgia, swept over Jacksonville about noon and reached Miami by nightfall. Such a weather development could easily have carried the torpedo planes miles out of their practice area.

1-10 Oz. Uranium Used, Says Snyder, To Detonate Bomb

Los Angeles, Dec. 7 —(AP)— One-tenth of an ounce of uranium was employed to generate the first explosion of the atomic bomb, according to Conway W. Snyder, physicist, who worked nine months at the Los Alamos, N.M., laboratory, and told a group of lawyers that while the initial bombs carried between six and seven pounds of uranium, only 1/10 of an ounce was detonated.

HE SLEPT OUTDOORS

Lancaster, Pa., Dec. 7 —(AP)— Samuel Greenleaf walked into hospital for treatment, peeling off: five coats, a sweater, vest, necktie, two shirts, three pairs of trousers, two pairs of stockings, five pairs of long underwear, hat and shoes. The man said he lost his room when a returning soldier reclaimed it and had been sleeping outdoors.

QUEEN ELIZABETH RETURNS HOME 12,000 VETERANS

Majestic Liner Battles Heavy Winds and High Seas Latter Part of Voyage

By MICHAEL O'MARA
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

New York, Dec. 7. (CP) — Twelve thousand Canadian veterans of the war in Europe arrived here today aboard the liner Queen Elizabeth, bound for their homes in Canada.

The 85,000-ton Cunarder—largest vessel afloat—battled heavy winds and high seas during the last stage of her voyage from Southampton as a light storm moved along the eastern United States coast end hit the New York area Thursday.

Rain and strong winds met the returning Canadians—more than 10,000 army veterans and approximately 1,300 men of the R.C.A.F. —as the Queen Elizabeth slipped through early-morning darkness past the Narrows and moved majestically up the harbor and the Hudson River to her berth at Pier 90.

Her decks alive with khaki and air force blue, she got a typical New York welcome to returning war heroes.

Today's arrivals brought to 154,000 the total number of Canadian army troops repatriated from Europe. Many thousands of R.C.A.F. personnel also have been returned.

Carried No Units

Bulk of today's army and air force arrivals were high-priority men; the liner carried no units, travelling as such. The men were from almost every part of Canada. A few were medical cases.

Twenty-two special Canadian Pacific and Canadian National Railways trains will carry the contingent back to homes everywhere from Halifax to Victoria. The movement will get under way early tonight.

It was the largest group of homecoming Canadians yet to enter this port, exceeding the 6,200 veterans of the European theatre which the Queen Mary landed here last July 11.

It also marked the first time the Elizabeth has docked at New York since she was assigned in October to the repatriation of Canadian forces from Europe.

Four Concert Parties

In addition to servicemen aboard, there were 78 members of the Canadian Women's Army Corps; Royal Canadian Navy personnel; Red Cross Volunteer nurses and other Canadian service organizations.

WILL TREAT JAP WAR CRIMINALS AS FELONS

Prominent Suspects Will be Tried In Groups; Tojo Will Head Defendants

By MURLIN SPENCER

Tokyo Dec. 7. (AP)—Chief Prosecutor Joseph B. Keenan announced today that the first war crimes trials in Japan tentatively were scheduled for January—with warlord Hideki Tojo and his Pearl Harbor cabinet leading the parade of defendants.

"The accused will be presumed innocent until proved guilty", Mr. Keenan, Gen. MacArthur's special staff counsel told a press conference. But he added that:

"Japanese war criminals must be punished and humiliated so that they will go down in history as ordinary felons of the lowest type."

He declined comment on the Allied attitude toward Emperor Hirohito.

The death penalty will be asked at the trials he indicated.

Like their German counterparts, Japanese war crimes suspects will be tried in groups. An international court seems likely, since other interested powers have been asked to nominate members. None has complied thus far ,Mr. Keenan reported.

On top of Gen. MacArthur's order for the arrest of Marquis Koichi Kido, the arrival of Mr. Keenan in Japan brought full realization that the Allies mean business in rooting out aggressors. The order against Kido reached as close to the throne as Gen. MacArthur could get without arresting Emperior Hirohito himself.

Even before Japan could recover from the shock of the order for the arrest of Kido, who was Lord Keeper of the Privy Seal and Hirohito's closest adviser, Prince Fumimaro Konoye and seven others, there came two more explosive developments:

1.—Edwin W. Pauley, United States Reparations commissioner, recommended confiscation of all Japanese assets aboard, including those of the Emperor; removal from the country of the industrial potentials of the Zaibatsu (family monopoly); and huge slashes in shipbuilding, steel production and generation of electric power.

2.—Gen. MacArthur ordered the removal from Japan of every mineral resource which might permit development of the atomic bomb.

The Tokyo newspaper Asahi, in reporting the order for the arrests of Kido ano Konoye, said the directive is expected to "exert considerably serious consequences on the political situation of this country."

MAURICE CHEVALIER CLEARED

New York, Dec. 7—(CP)—The New York Times says today in a Paris dispatch that actor Maurice Chevalier was acquitted yesterday by the National Committee of the Theatrical Purge of charges of collaboration.

It was charged that Chevalier had toured Germany but it was shown the tour had been to French prisoner-of-war camps nd that his meeting in a camp with Hermann Goering was unsolicited.

German Warships Carried British Flags to Disguise Norway Conquest

By DANIEL DE LUCE

Nuernberg, Dec. 7—(AP)—The German navy's warships and camouflaged troop transports carried British flags and signals to disguise the speedy fifth-column conquest of Norway and Denmark, it was revealed today at the war crimes trial of 20 of Hitler's leaders.

Read into evidence before the international military tribunal was the order of Grand Admiral Karl Doenitz, commander-in-chief of the German navy, to use British flags on German ships which slipped into Scandinavian ports on the eve of invasion.

The detailed story of treachery and intrigue leading to the downfall of Germany's little neighbors in April, 1940, disclosed that the plot to use the fifth column of Vidkun Quisling in obtaining Scandinavian U-boat bases was engineered largely by Grand Admiral Erich Raeder and Alfred Rosenberg, two of the accused Nazis on trial.

Official German navy orders introduced as evidence included instructions that "the disguise as British craft must be kept as long as possible." The German government denied repeatedly in 1940 that their vessels had flown British flags.

All challenges were to be answered with the names of British warships and arrangements were made to illuminate British war flags on the masts of the German vessels, the order disclosed.

"In case of a warning shot (from the enemy) reply 'Cease firing. British ship, good friend.'" said instructions issued to German ship captains.

Raeder, who maintained under questioning after his capture that he had no hand in Hitler's plotting and was merely a bluff old sea dog doing his duty to his country, was disclosed by his own records to have sold Hitler on the idea of invading Norway in October, 1939 — five months before the invasion. He also arranged a meeting between Hitler and Quisling in December to polish up the fifth-column plot that aided the invaders.

Quisling was executed as a war criminal last October after a trial in Oslo.

Rosenberg, head of the Nazi party's foreign section, was disclosed to have groomed Quisling for his fifth column role months ahead of the invasion. Quisling agents were sent to Germany for training and then returned to Norway to open the gates to the Germans.

General Yamashita Sentenced to Hang By Military Court

Convicted for Allowing Atrocities by His Forces

By DEAN SCHEDLER

Manila, Dec. 7 —(AP)— Lt.-Gen. Tomoyuki Yamashita today was convicted by a military commission of having permitted "a series of atrocities and high crimes by Japanese armed forces under your command" and sentenced to be hanged.

Those brutalities "were not sporadic incidents, but were often methodically supervised by Japanese officers and non-commissioned officers," Maj.-Gen. Russell Reynolds, president of the United States commission which tried the former commander in the Philippines, said as he read the verdict.

Yamashita, thus became the first top war criminal of the Pacific to be convicted and sentenced.

Before hearing the verdict, the stocky defendant stood, visibly nervous, while an interpreter read this statement to the court:

"I wish to stand here today with a clear conscience and swear to God I am innocent of these charges. I wish to take this opportunity to express gratitude to the United States officers of the defence, brilliant and upright officers. I want to thank the commission for a fair trial."

Findings of Commission.

Gen. Reynolds intoned:

"This commission finds that a series of atrocities and high crimes were committed by Japanese armed forces under your command against nationals of the United States and its Allies and dependencies; that these were not sporadic incidents, but were often methodically supervised by Japanese officers and non-commissioned officers.

"During the period in question you failed to provide effective control of your troops as required by the circumstances. Accordingly, on a secret ballot, two-thirds or more of this commission concurring, this commission finds you guilty as charged and sentences you to death by hanging."

Yamashita's shoulders sagged as he heard the sentence, but he straightened quickly and made a curt bow to the commission. He quickly was led by military police from the courtroom back to his cell in cold Bilibid prison.

The entire court procedure required less than 15 minutes.

Manila, Dec. 7. (AP)—An epic of wholesale horror— the blood-chilling, monstrous story of Japanese lust and cruelty in the Philippines—was written into the records during the month-long war crimes trial of Lt.-Gen. Tomoyuki Yamashita.

It was a story fantastic in the volume and variety of mass murder, rape and fendish cruelty depicted. Yet not one of the long procession of prosecution witnesses pictured the defendant personally so much as twisting the arm of a Filipino or speaking harshly to a prisoner of war.

It was a precedent-breaking trial; for the prosecution at the outset announced it would not try to prove Yamashita himself had committed any atrocity, but that he had failed to prevent the brutal excesses of his troops.

It was blazing a new path in international law, for in previous wars top military leaders have not been held responsible for the crimes of individuals under their command.

The picture drawn by prosecution witnesses of Japanese atrocities in the Philippines left the crowded courtroom stunned. Much was told by survivors still bearing the marks of brutal treatment on their bodies. Some of them who had lost fathers, mothers, wives, husbands or children in a mass butchery of civilians wept as they testified. Several became hysterical and frantically cursed Yamashita.

They related how Japanese troops killed 12,000 men, women and children during a seven-months reign of terror in Batangas province, where civilians were herded into ravines and then machine-gunned, bayoneted, showered with hand grenades, drenched with gasoline and burned.

Witnesses described the mass murders in Manila—the butchery of 1,900 civilians at the German Club on Feb. 10; the mass raping of 25 young girls at the Bayview hotel; the night-long orgy of rape and murder when Japanese troops found some 5,000 terrified civilians seeking refuge in a cathedral during the battle for Manila, and the slaying of some 800 civilians at St Paul's college.

British House Rejects Motion

London, Dec. 7 —(CP)— The House of Commons last night rejected a Conservative motion of censure against the government by a vote of 381 to 197, concluding two days of debate in which the opposition, for the first time since the Labor party took office, berated the government heatedly for its policies.

Yesterday's debate was featured by a verbal clash between Prime Minister Attlee and his predecessor, Winston Churchill. Mr. Churchill, who had introduced the motion of censure, declared that Britain was being led "day by day nearer disaster" and accused the government of having "fettered and hobbled" industry and enterprise and of failing in its reconversion and demobilization program.

Mr. Attlee replied that the government was carrying out its socialization program in line with the platform on which it had been elected and that the Labor party was pursuing the demobilization plans advocated by Mr. Churchill himself. He added that 80 new factories were being built for peacetime production.

ACCUSED OF THEFT FROM R.C.A.F. STATION

Court action, arising out of alleged irregularities at Mountain View Bombing and Gunnery School, opened at the court house in Picton on Monday with Judge W. S. Lane presiding.

Accused of stealing material from the R.C.A.F. station at Mountain View, WO1 Armstrong is represented by F. L. Ward, K.C., while Crown Attorney Walmsley is conducting the prosecution.

Twenty-six witnesses will be called and it is not expected the hearing will close before the end of the week.

JACKS GROW BIG IN P. E. COUNTY

Jack rabbits grow big between Wellington and Consecon, according to a party of Picton hunters who on Wednesday afternoon did a good turn for district farmers by shooting a dozen of them the total bag weighing 120 pounds.

Included in the hunting party were Norman Mallett, Nick Welsh, Rom Bourke, Robt. Thompson, Ed. Hawkins and Harry Bowers. They were joined by Ralph Moore of Wellington.

Bourke asserted that the next time he goes hunting jacks he will wear spurs as one big fellow dashed right at him and passed between his legs. Nick Welsh polished off this particular jack before Bourke recovered from his surprise. The jack rabbits are classed as a considerable nuisance in the district.

LIGHTHOUSE TENDER, GRENVILLE, EQUIPPED WITH RADAR

When the Canadian lighthouse tender Grenville calls in at Point Traverse on or about December 15th to remove Duck Island light keepers, the ship will be equipped with radar. The lighthouse tender is the first civilian ship to be so equipped.

Captain Murray Barry of the Grenville stated that "we know where we are every second. No more creeping in the dark, in rain storms or in blizzards; it's just the same as daylight all the time."

"We can see the shore and everything on the water for a distance of 24 miles, just as if we were in an airplane looking down on the scene," he said.

ADDITIONAL PERSONNEL ON QUEEN ELIZABETH FROM THIS DISTRICT

The following Belleville and district men are additions to the list of Army personnel published last week arriving in New York today on the Queen Elizabeth: Pte. J. J. McCabe, 188 Dundas St. E., Belleville; Gnr. H. R. Allen, 14 Isabelle St., Belleville; Pte. W. R. Cook, Shannonville; Pte. J. B. Phillips, 165 King St., Trenton and Cfn. A. E. Stapley, Bancroft.

MINOR ALTERATIONS IN POLICE STATION

Under the direction of Alderman Charles L. Hyde, chairman, market and city property, the local city police station is undergoing minor alterations and will have the interior generally brightened by a coat of new paint.

The information wicket between the sergeants' room and the central hall has been changed to provide better facilities for handing out information and a low swing door added instead of the complete door as formerly. Also a different arrangement of desks has been effected for the convenience of the officers in charge.

Painting of the chief constable's room, the entrance hall, sergeants' room and constables' room is now underway, the walls being painted with a double coat of light green paint.

TWO LOCAL MEN CHARGED WITH THEFT

Alleged to have been responsible for stealing a wallet from Roger Mallory of this city while they were riding home with him in a taxi, William Archer and Roland McGrath, both of this city, have been arrested by local police officers and have been remanded for trial.

According to police the two young men had hired a taxi and had taken Mallory home after which he found his purse containing a considerable sum of money and a negotiable cheque missing. Archer was arrested Thursday evening by Inspector Hayes, while the same officer arrested McGrath shortly before noon today.

STREET CHRISTMAS LIGHTS TURNED ON

The downtown business section took on a further aspect of the Christmas season last evening when at the direction of Alderman Glenn Thompson, chairman of light, the colored lights were turned on in the business district. Council had originally ordered the lights turned on by December 1st., but orders had not been carried out immediately with result the lights were not turned on until the sixth of the month. The lights will be turned on at approximately five o'clock and will be turned off around four or five o'clock in the morning.

THREE PERSONS REPORT PURSES LOST

Losing of their purses seems to be a popular pastime for local residents with no less than three persons, two women and a man, reporting to police they had lost their's during the night through various causes.

Balfour Murray reported he had stayed overnight at a local dormitory with another man and this morning was missing his purse claimed to have contained approximately $90 in cash and other papers.

A Moira Street woman slipped on the ice at the Upper Bridge sometime yesterday evening and in her indignation of falling left her purse on the sidewalk, while an Ann Street woman reported she had lost her purse in the Victoria Avenue and Pinnacle Street district. The woman's loss was considerable as she had approximately $125 in her purse along with registration card and other papers.

Warden and Mrs. F. Wilson Presented With Tea, Coffee Service at Annual Banquet

Members of Council Are Thanked for Splendid Co-operation in Transacting Business of County

Tangible and other tributes were paid to one of the most popular wardens of Hastings County in years, to quote a member of county council, at the banquet tendered by Warden J. Fred Wilson of Hastings County to his council and civic, municipal and parliamentary representatives at the Tabernacle United Church Thursday night.

Highlight of the banquet was the presentation by Deputy Reeve Harry Harrison of Thurlow Township of a beautiful silver tea and coffee service to Warden and Mrs. Wilson on behalf of the County Council in appreciation of the efficiency and spirit with which the warden conducted his office as head of the county government during the past year.

The banquet which was attended by approximately 125 representatives of county council, city and district residents and parliamentary men of county and district ridings was marked by the close camaraderie and fellowship that has been one of the characteristics of official county council sessions during the year. The splendid chicken dinner was furnished by the Comrade Club of Tabernacle United Church.

No Guest Speaker.

The banquet was perhaps a bit out of the ordinary run of such affairs. There was no special guest speaker to monopolize the bulk of the evening and the result was a number of special tributes paid to Warden Wilson and his good lady by representatives of all walks of life in the county they represent.

Chairman Erle Denyes, county clerk, arranged a program that was as interesting as it was entertaining. He made "no bones" about informing the gathering and especially the speakers slated to talk, as to the length of their addresses.

There was music and mirth throughout. The old time quartet of Messrs. Harry Moorman, Thomson, Evans and Bankier was in splendid voice and received a fine ovation after their renditions of several old time favorite tunes. Highlighting their efforts was the number "Boys of the Old Brigade" which brought rounds of appreciative applause from the assembly.

Ed Shortt of the Y.M.C.A. was there acting as in a master-of-ceremony role insofar as community singing was concerned. A definite co-operation on the part of the gathering resulted in five minutes of vocal fun that was appreciated by all.

Warden Welcomes Guests

Warden Wilson in welcoming his guests spoke of the fine co-operation he had received from the members of his council during the past year. He paid reverent tribute to the late county treasurer James Haggerty and to the late reeve of Marmora village, William Linn. He also paid special attention to the fact that for the first time in two decades the banquet was marked by absence of one of the best loved men in Hastings County, Mr. J. O. Herity. The warden expressed his "heartfelt wish that Mr. Herity may soon be seen in his usual places enjoying a return to complete health.

"I have enjoyed my position as warden of the county" he said, "mainly because I have received the wholehearted co-operation of County Council individually and collectively. It has been a pleasure to conduct the business of the county under such friendly yet efficient conditions, and many problems which would have been difficult have been solved by the close co-ordination of the reeves of the county with myself and county officials. I am proud of them and the way they worked with me for the general betterment of Hastings County as a whole."

Mrs. Wilson Heard

Mrs. Wilson, in a brief address of appreciation of the beautiful gift, spoke in lighter vein of the fact that her husband might have all to say outside the home but inside—well—that was different. She graciously thanked members of council for their thoughtfulness and foresight in selecting such a beautiful reminder of the warden's year of office, saying that they will treasure it down through the years as a memento of one of the most enjoyable years of their lives.

Pleasure to Work With Warden.

The reply to the address by the warden was made by Reeve William Davis of Bangor, Wicklow and McClure. "The year now nearing its end," he said, "will be one of lasting memories to us of the county council for it has instilled in our minds a lasting picture of fine co-operation and efficient operation of the city's business. Work of the county was conducted in a pleasant businesslike manner and it has been a pleasure to work with His Honor, the warden."

The toast to the County of Hastings was proposed by Mayor Frank Follwell of the city of Belleville who stressed the pleasant camaraderie both in official and unofficial circles which exists not only between his council and that of the county but between urban and rural residents of Hastings.

Response to the toast was made by Reeve Charles Buskard of Deloro and Reeve William West of Stirling village.

Many Tributes Paid.

Paying verbal honor to the guests Reeve W. H. Tanner, Rawdon Township, also mentioned the fine spirit of co-operation which existed during the year between the warden and his council. Col. Roscoe Vanderwater also responded to the toast as did Mr. C. L. Jewell, manager of the city branch of the Canadian Bank of Commerce.

The toast to the Dominion of Canada was proposed by Reeve Charles Rush, Hungerford Township and responded to by Mr. Geo. H. Stokes, M.P., Hastings South and R. D. Arnott. Mr. George White, M.P., Hastings – Peterborough, who was slated to speak was unavoidably absent.

In verbal tribute to the ladies of the Tabernacle Comrade Club who catered to the inner wants of the gathering Reeve George West stated that "it was no small effort to arrange such a repast in such an efficient and mouth-watering manner." He conveyed the appreciation of the gathering to the ladies of the church "for a dinner that could not be surpassed anywhere."

Mrs. Edith Robson of the Comrade Club in a brief but gracious response thanked the speaker, stating that the work had been a pleasure for herself and her associates.

Harper McElrath President C.N.R. Veterans' Assoc.

Harper S. McElrath was named president of the Canadian National Railways War Veterans' Association when members held their annual meeting and election of officers this week. Mr. McElrath succeeds Larry Amo, who had acted in the above position for the past year.

Vice presidents named to assist in the direction of the association included G. H. Jerome, R. Stringer, C. Smith and H. J. Thibault. Secretary is W. G. L. Hart, treasurer, A. H. Jones, with committee chairmen being appointed as follows: welfare, E. Pigden, entertainment, Larry Amo, and parade marshal, J. Laney. The new president and vice president are veterans of two wars.

During the meeting a report was read on the activities of the Dominion council of which W. G. L. Hart and J. Walden of the Belleville club are president and secretary, respectively. Albert Jones, treasurer, reported the club's finances to be in good condition with the association's cigarette fund having sent 2,130,000 cigarettes to Belleville boys overseas since August 1940, when the fund was instituted. This has cost the local association a total of $7,108.

In making his report Treasurer Albert Jones assured that the policy of the association would be to continue sending cigarettes overseas as long as the forces are assigned to overseas duty. He stated that a Christmas card and greetings from the club has been forwarded to all those whose names are on the association's cigarette list.

Tribute to members of the ladies' club under the capable leadership of Mrs. E. Pigden, for the financial assistance given to the cigarette fund was paid by Mr. Jones. During 1945 the ladies' club had contributed $480 to the fund, he stated.

HELD FOR HIJACKING

Oshawa, Dec. 7 —(CP)— Provincial Police here said Thursday they were holding five Toronto youths on vagrancy charges in connection with alleged "high jacking" of transport trucks. Truck operators have reported heavy losses recently due to thieves boarding the trucks and throwing freight on the highway.

Police said other thieves followed the truck, picking up the freight.

Army and Navy Ladies' Auxiliary Holds Meeting

Members of the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Army and Navy Veterans combined an enjoyable Christmas party with their regular monthly meeting held in their club rooms on Wednesday afternoon when several from neighboring Trenton and Frankford were in attendance. Several new members were initiated into the organization with other applicants being received. Committee reports were given by the respective chairmen.

A varied program of entertainment was enjoyed during the Christmas party which followed the regular business section of the meeting with dance selections by the Gilbert sisters, acrobatic dances by Gladys Beatty and a solo by Comrade Mrs. Frank Gillett. Community singing and Christmas carols added to the enjoyment of the occasion.

Members of the organization were not forgotten and received gifts from a beautifully decorated Christmas tree. Mr. Sam Turner won the draw for the table mat which was donated by Comrade Mrs. J. Clarke, while much enjoyment was derived through a white navy stocking three feet long and filled to capacity with good things. The stocking was donated by the president and was won by Comrade Sadie Reid.

POLICE COURT

Some kind of a record for brief duration was made at the city police court Friday morning when the entire proceedings of the docket were disposed of in something like seven minutes.

Twenty cases were listed, but the majority of them being drunk charges, eleven to be exact, were settled out of court with the accused paying the conventional $13 including costs. One resident enriched the city coffers by $53 when he pleaded guilty to a second offence drunk charge.

Magistrate T. Y. Wills still reserved judgment in the four charges of false pretenses against Glenn R. Sommerville of Toronto. The charges against Sommerville were heard one week ago with Magistrate Wills reserving judgment until today. Judgment will now be heard next Tuesday.

Played Cards While Owner Of Cafe Robbed

Toronto, Dec. 7 —(CP)— Two men blissfully sat playing cards in a west-end lunch room last night while two thugs held up owner Chris George and fled with $60.

One of the thugs ordered a cup of coffee, threw it over George. The other drew a revolver. George dug into his pocket for $25 while one of the bandits reached over the counter and took $35 from the till.

The card players were not disturbed, knew nothing of the hold-up until George shouted after the bandits fled in a stolen automobile.

Hit-and-Run Flier Sought by Police

Coeur D'Alene, Idaho, Dec. 7—(AP)—Police are looking for a hit-and-run flier. An airplane struck telephone and electric power lines and crash-landed in a field, disrupting telephone service for two hours and imposing a one-hour blackout in nearby homes. Pausing briefly at the scene of the accident, the plane took off again before officers had a chance to check the pilot's licence.

Obituary

MISS LAURA D. LaVOIE

Miss Laura D. LaVoie died at her home, 279 Foster Avenue, on Thursday evening. She returned recently after spending several weeks visiting in Toronto and her death occurred unexpectedly.

The late Miss LaVoie was born in this city and was a daughter of Mrs. LaVoie and the late Homer LaVoie. All her life was passed here and she received her education at the local schools and at Albert College. For many years she was a member of the teaching staff at Albert College and at one time was director of the pianoforte department. Miss LaVoie was an accomplished musician being a Licentiate of the Toronto Conservatory of Music and an Associate of the American Guild of Organists. Over a period of years she filled in a capable and satisfactory manner the position of organist at the Tabernacle Church, John Street Church, St. Thomas' Church and Victoria Avenue Baptist Church. Miss LaVoie assisted freely in affording musical enjoyment to the citizens of Belleville and took part in many musical events here in past years. She was a member of the Church of England and a parishioner of St. Thomas' Church. To many friends the announcement of her death will bring sincere feelings of regret.

Surviving to mourn her loss are her mother, Mrs. Homer LaVoie; one sister, Mrs. Henry Dillnutt, Belleville, and one brother, Captain M. R. LaVoie, Toronto.

Resting at the Martin Funeral Home, Church Street, until this evening, then at the family residence, 278 Foster Avenue; the funeral announcement is made in this issue.

MISS LUCY M. AULL

After a brief illness Miss Lucy Minetta Aull died at her home, 16 Forin Street, on Thursday.

The late Miss Aull was born in Tyendinaga Township and was a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. James Aull. She came to Belleville in 1890 and was a capable and highly regarded teacher in the city and public schools for many years. She retired in 1935. To many friends her death has brought much regret. In religion Miss Aull was a member of Bridge Street United Church. She was the last of her family.

Resting at the Martin Funeral Home, Church Street, where service will be conducted this evening. The funeral announcement is made in this issue.

J. B. BRINTNELL
(Formerly of Belleville)

Plainfield, Dec. 7 (Special) — Following one week's illness, J. B. (Jack) Brintnell, passed away Dec. 5th in St. Michael's Hospital, Toronto. For several years he was in taxi business in Belleville, moving to Fort Lauderdale in 1920 where he started barbering, and later living at Ojus, Florida. He lived retired for the past two years. His wife, the former Annie Millar, passed away in May of this year. Owing to a slight stroke which he suffered a year ago, he was unable to accompany the body of his wife to Canada for burial and only three months ago was able to make the trip. Since returning to Canada he has been living with his sister, Mrs. Annie (Hamilton) Ball of Toronto. Being of a congenial disposition, he enjoyed a large circle of friends, who will regret his passing.

Mr. Brintnell was in his eightieth year and was the only son of the late Mr. and Mrs. James Brintnell.

Christmas Wish Of Sick Child Filled by Friend

Fairmont, W. Va., Dec. 7 (AP) —Nine-year-old Myrna Tawney, possibly dying from an incurable disease, had her Christmas wish filled ahead of time today — bananas by the basketful which she generously passed on to other hospital patients. Her expressed wish was answered by citizens of Fairmont with 12 dozen bananas. Believed suffering from leukemia, Myrna was given her 10th blood transfusion yesterday.

I wish to thank all who so kindly supported me with Votes and Good Wishes at the election last Monday, and apologize for unavoidable absence from the city during election day.

Thoughts of you are ever near.
—Ever remembered by George, Margaret and family.

BELCH—In loving memory of our dear mother, Mrs. George Belch, who departed this life December 7th., 1934.

Gone, dear mother, gone forever,
How we miss your smiling face;
How you left us to remember
None on earth can take your place.
A happy home we once enjoyed,
How sweet the memories still,
But death has left a loneliness
The world can never fill.

Gross Expenditures for Hastings County Roads and Bridges Till End of November Total $103,931

Gross expenditures of the Hastings County Roads and Bridges Committee for 1945 up to November 30 is $103,931.45 with accounts receivable of $4,909, the report of the committee as presented by Chairman W. H. Tanner revealed at the Thursday afternoon session.

The by-law for proposed expenditures for the year called for the amount of $109,696.60, which included a proposed expenditure of $7,500 for suburban roads. The Department of Highways approved of the by-law in full.

The current year, the report stated, has been the most difficult in some time to get the sizable program of work planned, actually accomplished. This was due to the fact that in addition to the shortage of labor which was as acute this year as last, wet weather in April, May and June forced all regular work at least eight weeks behind.

In addition the very large hay crop took away all help of farm origin earlier than usual and abnormal amount of rain this autumn tied many jobs up badly.

Snow Removal Heavy

The tremendous cost of snow removal last winter and the difficulties encountered therein cost $20,150 of which approximately $15,000 came out of this year's appropriation.

Referring to the Dust Prevention and Consolidation program of the committee, the report stated that 222 tons of calcium chloride were purchased this year with 12 tons being sold to townships. The carrying on of this treatment annually is now showing great value. The excellent results obtained from the bituminous materials would have been impossible without the previous use of calcium for some years.

A total of 9 tank cars of primer and asphalt dust layer amounting to 60,811 gallons was used on county roads and village streets. On county roads alone, 45,030 gallons were used at a cost of $5,833.40. This treated approximately 20 miles of road at a cost of $292 per mile.

Roads Resurfaced

Approximately 17,637 cubic yards of crushed material and pit run gravel were used in resurfacing roads during the year.

Some seal coating is done annually, the report revealed, and this year one-third miles was completed all twenty - four miles of paving in the county have been kept in first-class shape, by seal coating when necessary.

In the past six years 15 miles of double surface treatment have been constructed. This year, 2.8 miles were added. While some of it is on county roads inside the villages of Madoc, Tweed, Deloro, and Frankford, most of it is on county roads in the country. Total cost was $8,070.

Since the war finished and fence wire is again available in quantity, requests from farmers and property owners abutting county roads for replacement of old rail fences with wire etc., have increased.

In addition to widening on the Madoc Road the committee received seven or eight requests for fencing in 1945. Most of these new mile of pavement on the the remainder were laid over on were approved, one refused and account of lack of help.

Minor repairs were carried out on several bridges in the county system at a cost of $720 including a large culvert that failed on Mudcat Lane.

Mile of Pavement Laid

Approximately one mile of pavement was laid on the Madoc Road which continued the existing pavement northerly and in addition culvers were extended, shoulders widened and ditching carried out. Fences on about 90 per cent of the distance were set back or rebuilt to give a 66 foot right-of-way.

Twenty thousand feet of snow fence was purchased during 1945 together with the necessary metal, posts. Sand stock piles have been placed and treated with chemicals to prevent freezing, but the committee has neither the equipment nor the help to sand the straightaways, the report stated. Hills, curves, railway crossings, bridge approaches and other potential danger spots only can be sanded.

County snow removal equipment includes two tandem drive motor graders and a front-wheel drive truck, a cat crawler tractor and old plow mounted on a hired truck. Two hired outfits augment the committee's property.

The report was tabled for the time being and discussion will be held at a later date in the session due to the fact that Warden Wilson and his council were scheduled to go into caucus to discuss the appointment of the new county treasurer.

General Bennett Explains Escape From Singapore

Melbourne, Dec. 7 (CP)—Lt.-Gen. Henry Gordon Bennett Thursday told the public hearing investigating his escape from the besieged city of Singapore in 1942 that he felt it was his duty to try and get away because he "wanted to let Australia know the truth about the Malayan campaign."

Gen. Bennett was commander of Australian forces in Malaya at the time of Singapore's surrender to the Japanese.

He denied that he had ever issued an order forbidding his men to escape and told how he and other officers had sailed for five or six days in a Chinese junk from Singapore to Sumatra, using a page from a school atlas with a scale of 450 miles to one inch as their only navigational aid.

The party started out in a sampan shortly after Singapore surrendered. It later transferred to the junk, although the Chinese crew at first refused to take the Allied group. Gen. Bennett said the Chinese set the junk's course back to the British naval base but one of the officers took charge and the crew was "dumped into the hold."

Circled Junk Every Day

The Australian commander said Japanese planes circled the junk every day but the officers hid in the hold, pushing the crew up to the decks. The enemy planes never attacked.

Gen. Bennett said of the reasons for his escape: "Rumors were going around that the Australians were not fighting and that there was an undue number of battle stragglers. I was most sensitive about it. I heard it rumored that the Australians were responsible for the Malayan failure. I desired Australia to know the truth — that the men fought most valiantly and well."

Under cross-examination, Gen. Bennett said his decision to escape, which began to crystalize in his mind about the end of January, was prompted by the realization that there was no high-ranking officer in Australia with experience of Japanese tactics.

He said he realized early that the Malaya campaign was a losing fight, and that the ultimate result was inevitable.

Lumberjacks On Way Home From Britain

Liverpool, Dec. 7 (CP Cable)—The liner Mauretania sailed today for Canada with Canadian troops aboard including 94 lumberjacks many of whom declared they had had enough of the backwoods to last them for life.

William Harnum, one of the group, said: "For six years we have been part of a community of 3,000 lumberjacks operating on Skye, in the western islands of Scotland, where we built our own town of log huts from trees we felled.

"We produced timber to make the gliders which transported our invasion troops. We also provided timber for mine props, telegraph poles and defence poles against hostile aircraft attacking this country.

"We felled and carted away 300 trees a week throughout six years. Many of us are reluctant to return to our former lives as backwoodsmen and I think 70 percent of us would like to return to the British Isles to live where there is more excitement and amusement. We now feel we have had enough of lumberjack life and some of us never want to wield an axe again."

Aboard the liner were 4,726 army personnel including the Cameron Highlanders of Ottawa, first 3rd division unit to return home.

Some civilians were also aboard including 11 delegates from the recent World Youth Conference in London.

POLICE NOT CONVINCED

Sudbury, Dec. 6 —(CP)— Police said today that a shooting Wednesday in which Art Riopelle suffered two bullet wounds in his chin and chest was an attempt at suicide. The man is in hospital in critical condition.

Riopelle stumbled downstairs at his rooming house yesterday with blood streaming from the wounds, instructed a fellow-roomer to call police and said that "I was shot last night." He said a rifle was used in the shooting.

Prevent Japan Ever Developing Atomic Bomb

Tokyo, Dec. 7 (AP)—Allied headquarters today took steps to make certain that Japan—the country that shuddered under two atomic bombs—never can develop an atomic bomb of its own.

The action came only a few hours after Gen. MacArthur had ordered the arrest of two of Emperor Hirohito's most trusted advisers—Prince Fumimaro Konoye and Marguis Koichi Kido— and seven other top criminal suspects.

Headquarters announced in their newest order that every mineral resource which might permit creation of an atom bomb will be taken from Japan, even if it means shipping such minerals out of the country. Wherever possible, mining of such minerals will be banned absolutely. All mining will be limited to peacetime needs and research for war will be outlawed.

HOUSE DEBATES

"They will do everything in their power to keep consumption of foreign goods from rising and will pursue policies aimed at national self-sufficiency. These measures will provoke retaliation elsewhere and we shall find ourselves treading the path of which we caught a glimpse in the 1930's. The main difference as compared with the 1930's will arise from the fact that the world's knowledge of the technique of restriction and retaliation has been considerably improved in the interval."

Arguments Draw Support.

Mr. Ilsley's arguments drew support from J. H. Macdonnell (PC - Muskoka-Ontario) chief financial critic for the Progressive Conservative party, a non-committal statement from M. J. Coldwell, C.C.F. leader, and solid opposition from Social Credit party members, advocaters of monetary reforms.

T. L. Church (PC-Toronto Broadview) said he was opposed to ratification of the agreement because it would mean the dissolution of the British Empire.

Social Credit party spokesmen looked on the agreement as a certain cause of international friction that would lead to another war.

Mr. Coldwell said there still was much to learn about the agreement, and he believed its success hung to a great extent on the willingness of Canada and the United States to accept goods and services in payment for exports.

Mr. Macdonnell said that, if Canada could not enjoy the multi-lateral trade which the agreement aimed at providing, then "the prospects of this country are indeed very bleak."

House Adopts Bill.

Before calling for approval of the agreement, Mr. Ilsley obtained adoption of a bill authorizing the government to increase from $100,000,000 to $750,000,000 the amount Canada may loan Allied nations, other than the United Kingdom, for the purchase of Canadian goods to aid in their reconstruction.

The contentious emergency powers bill was passed clause-by-clause and will come up for third and final reading today. No major changes were made in the measure, redrafted earlier to meet objections of provincial premiers and opposition members.

Mr. Ilsley said Canada's participation in the Bretton Woods agreement would total $625,000,000—$300,000,000 to the monetary fund and $325,000,000 to the international bank of reconstructions. The subscriptions would be partly payable in gold and partly in national currency.

The monetary fund, which would seek to provide international monetary conditions conducive of expansion of international trade, would have assets of $8,800,000,000, contributed by the 44 member nations.

Make Direct Loans.

The bank would make direct loans out of its own subscribed capital resources; it could guarantee loans raised through the private investment market, and it could make loans out of funds raised through the issue of its own obligations.

Loans would be made or guaranteed only if the bank was satisfied they would increase the productive capacity of the borrower and were within the capacity of the borrowing country to service. The bank would charge a commission of one to 1 1-2 per cent on all loans made or guaranteed by it.

The Canadian dollars in the monetary fund would be spent in the purchasing of goods and services in Canada. While they were being spent in this way and the fund holdings of Canadian dollars was being reduced, the Dominion would in effect be extending credit to foreign countries through the fund.

"But it is credit which need not remain outstanding any longer than it suits us, for, if we wish to take repayment in the only practical form, namely goods and services, we shall have an important surplus which we will be in a position to finance through the fund," said Mr. Ilsley.

War Against Winter Tie-up

Modern invention and science are to be put to work by the Department of Highways in Ontario that at least the main provincial roads can be kept clear it is believed through the winter months.

Everyone knows there has been a great advance in the collecting of meteorological information. And so "Probs" will become more than "probabilities" they are forecasts or predictions of what will happen as far as weather in concerned. It has been absolutely necessary in wartime to extend greatly the range of information that can be gathered in advance sometimes as far as three days of conditions. The Dominion Meterepological Bureau has served the air force and the navy well. During the war the importance of this foreknowledge was recognized and extended to the utmost. Now it is to be used against the weather when it gets obstreperous.

The Ontario Department of Highways has an organization fortified with the latest and fullest possible information in regard to weather outlook and it will be ready when a storm strikes and the weather becomes unruly. Twice a day the weather information will be available to the Highway Department and its crews and it will be far more complete than hitherto. So the weather may be made to reveal and give due warning to the road crews as much as three days ahead of the impending blow. Then the storm king will find roads in possession of a modern uptodate scientific force ready to battle the snow and ice. It is said a chemical preparation like calcium chloride can be used which will prevent ice formation on the roads.

To be prepared to meet the snow and the storms of winter will help greatly in preventing or clearing blockades of the principal highways. Winter with its storms and suddenly changing conditions has been a foe of no mean strength for the municipal and provincial forces to contend with, but meteorology, chemistry and machinery will now make a successful effort to hold the storm king largely in check.

Icy Conditions

There are some days which are disagreeable, one of them is the type of day with unfavorable weather conditions such as Thursday when for the first time in the late autumn every bit of surface used for locomotion or walking was slippery. Walks, crossings and roadways became glaring stretches of a thin coating of ice as the fairly heavy drizzle fell. If ever motorists and pedestrians found the ways dangerous and quite untempting, it was yesterday.

The weather can play tricks on humans and such were those of Thursday when the rain fell on the cold surface of roadway or light sheeting of packed snow and froze with rain drops following to make the surface slippery in the extreme.

Fortunately such conditions are not frequent. Weather has many phases and in winter the change of weather conditions most often helps out the situation, either by thaw or colder weather or possibly snowfall. Yet the conditions are fraught with risk of injury and accident. Human ingenuity generally steps in and with sand or ashes labors successfully to improve conditions of walking and driving.

Yesterday most of the conditions that operate to make travel dangerous conspired or united to create dangers for those who move about.

Grisly Ghastly End of Hitler

No drama of crime on so vast a scale as that in which Adolf Hitler figured has ever been known. Two days ago the world was given a remarkable story of the last hours in the bunker under Berlin where Hitler and some of his associates were huddled as the forces of the Russian armies crowded in on the capital and shelled it relentlessly. This was the setting for the end of the monster whose deeds at long last brought in their train retribution which left no way out for the Fuehrer than death by his own hand.

There is an old saying from the days of the ancients which said that he whom the gods would destroy they first make mad. Adolf Hitler with his twisted and antisocial view of life committed deeds of such a nature that become a man of evil doing the deeds that could not fail to wreck him and the edifice of wrong and aggression which he had with the aid of others, sordid as he, reared in Middle Europe. Destruction was the only end of so perverted a life as that of the German leader.

The story of his last days and last hours, as told by the German aviatrix, Captain Hanna Reitsch, who claims to have flown the last plane out of Berlin, reveals an unbalanced Hitler, frantically hoping against hope that something would save him, rushing about the bunker beneath the Reichschancellery and waving a tattered map as he in his wild imagination and frenzy in his mind envisioned the arrival of Gen. Wenck's relief army which had been destroyed some time before. The man who once deemed himself as knowing all did not know that much. The man who once looked upon himself as destined by fate to sway the world was caught in a trap. The picture of that scene of horrors in which Hitler had at last to play his tragic part in destroying himself is the grimmest ever told. Doomed to die because of the evil he had done, he had to see about the room the very men, the S.S. men, who were to burn his body and then scatter his ashes.

Fate was just, the destiny which he in his folly looked upon as obeying his will. Lashed with the scorpions in his own mind he had really to avenge the multitude of victims who suffered through his evil deeds by destroying himself as his Third Reich of sin was falling in ruins about him.

The Base-Burner

(Windsor Star)

Surely everyone remembers the potbellied marvels of iron, nickel and mica. Everyone can recall that ruddy glow coming through the many tiny panes in the doors. Fire, in those days, did not only give heat. It imparted cheer and companionableness.

There was no finer place to sit of an evening than around the parlor heater, with the shoes off and the feet toasting on the rail conveniently provided. If one had been out tramping in the snow and the feet were chilled, they could be popped into the oven at the rear. Sure, it was likely to give you chilblains, but who worried about that?

There was always a kettle simmering on the small cooking surface over the oven, ready to make the pre-bedtime cup of tea. Perhaps, too, there were chestnuts roasting there.

The base-burner, of course, was usually inadequate to keep the whole house warm. The best it could do was send its pipe through a couple of rooms, and this had little effect. But bedrooms were for sleeping, not for dressing. One dashed down the draughty stairs in the morning, arms full of clothes, which were snugly warmed in front of the stove before one climbed into them.

Hot air furnaces, boilers and the like, have a becoming modesty. They stay out of sight. But we confess to a longing to see our heat as well as feel it.

For Dogs

"Horse Flesh Sold Here," an inscription above a shop in Britain with a waiting queue of women outside, does not mean, as a photograph published in a Montreal newspaper suggests, that the people of the United Kingdom have been reduced to such a diet, The Ottawa Citizen explains. The horseflesh is for canine consumption. Despite war rigors, there are still about 3,000,000 dogs in the British Isles, and this is the only meat they can get.

JUST FOLKS

By EDGAR A. GUEST

(Copyright, 1945, Edgar A. Guest)

"THEY SAY!"

They say: "He drinks too much or smokes!"
They say: "In rage his wife he chokes!"
They say, but never do they say
Just who it is they mean by "they."

They say: "One time he robbed the mail!"
They say: "His father died in jail!"
Thus starting others on their way
To tell the hurtful stuff, they say.

They say! Lord, grant I never may
Be one to use the phrase: "They say!"
Both deaf and dumb I want to be
When what "they say" is told to me.

LOOKING BACKWARDS

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS.

20 YEARS AGO

DEC. 7TH., 1925

Mr. John K. Williams has received notice of permanent appointment as a Customs Excise Examiner at Belleville.

Mrs. D. R. McQuigge and grandson, Mr. David McQuigge of Flaxcombe, Sask., former residents of Belleville, are renewing acquaintances in town.

Lieut.-Col. W. N. Ponton will install the officers of Mount Sinai Masonic Lodge in Toronto on Tuesday evening next.

Miss Bessie McCaw of Bancroft is attending business college here.

Miss Hazel Taylor is home from Toronto to spend the week end.

Mr. J. S. McKeown spent yesterday in Toronto.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Mouck, George Street, are today observing the 55th anniversary of their wedding. They were married on Dec. 7th, 1870 in the Church of England at Thomasburg. Mrs. Mouck was the former Anna Graham. Many friends will be pleased to extend to them congratulations and good wishes.

30 YEARS AGO

DEC. 7TH., 1915

Mrs. C. T. Anderson and her son of Carrol, Manitoba, are visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Leslie, Park Street, College Hill.

Mrs. Ada M. Wagner, teacher of music in this city, has accepted the position of advance manager for the Cherniavsky Russian Trio.

Mr. Alfred Docter left yesterday for Foyelet, Ontario.

Miss Knight of Bowmanville is visiting her sister, Mrs. Colonel Bonisteel, Chatham Street.

Jack Marks, the clever forward on the Quebec Hockey Team, who spends the summer in Toronto, left for the Ancient Capital last night to commence practice for the season. While Marks is a veteran he has the reputation of always being in condition and doing his best at all times. He is rated as one of the best back-checkers in the game and there is many a star who fails to shine much when he is stacked up against the former Belleville player. (Toronto News.)

40 YEARS AGO

DEC. 7TH., 1905

A West Belleville lady on hearing that a curling club had been organized here, expressed the hope that it is a gentle game and not like football.

A very pleasant incident occurred at Emmanuel Church last evening being the presentation of a purse containing the sum of $125.00 to the pastor, the Rev. A. M. Hubly. The presentation was made by the members of the congregation in appreciation of the great services he had rendered the congregation.

A man named Dickson, employed by the Bell Telephone Company, while excavating on Pinnacle Street this morning found a fifty dollar Dominion Bank bill two feet underground. He thought at first sight that it was an old piece of paper, but something induced him to pick it up and to his great joy he found it to be real money and a goodly sum at that. When his companions heard of his find they too became excited, but up to the time of going to press no more money has been found.

50 YEARS AGO

DEC. 7TH., 1895

The ice on the bay is two and a half inches thick; not of sufficient strength for traffic.

The Methodist ministers in the city arranged yesterday afternoon that Sunday, Dec. 29th be devoted to a commemoration of the first hundred years of Methodism in Belleville. It is now a century since the Rev. Darius Dunham, pioneer Methodist minister, came to Meyer's Creek, now the city of Belleville.

Horse buyers bought several fine horses on the streets here today and fairly good prices were paid.

Mrs. (Dr.) Tuttle of Tweed is the guest of Mrs. F. E. O'Flynn, Bridge Street East.

The city schools will close Dec. 20th for two weeks.

Newsman Finds Conditions Grim In City Retaken From Chinese Reds

By HALE BOYLE

Ghinhsien, Manchuria, Dec. 7 (AP)—It was two degrees above zero the morning we accompanied Gen Tu Yu-Ming commander of President Chiang Kai-Shek's North China armies, on an inspection tour of this railroad centre, recently retaken from Chinese Communists.

His bodyguards looked like walking quilts in their cotton-padded yellow-green uniforms and wrap around leggings. Many had only light gloves and thin canvas slippers to protect their hands and feet from the bitter December wind. Some southern troops have frozen to death and the cold has caused almost as many casualties as have clashes with the lightly armed Communists.

We left Nationalist headquarters in the modern Japanese railway administration building after a breakfast of eggs, tea and half raw veal steaks.

Youthful General

Tu, a close friend of Chiang Kai-Shek, is youthful looking, shrewd and friendly, and observers have a high opinion of his military ability. His secretary-general and advisor on political and economic problems is Professor Yu Hsih-Chung, 45, Harvard-trained history teacher.

During the morning we inspected a Japanese army supply dump which Yu said had been lotted and set afire by Chinese Communists, a cotton-spinning mill, and a Japanese airport. Nationalist troops had repaired minor damage to the airport, and 11 Chinese-piloted American cargo planes landed with more than 20 tons of small arms ammunition—enough Tu felt, to speed somewhat his march on Mukden, the largest city in Manchuria.

There was little left of the Japanese underground supply depot, from which Chinese Nationalist officers said Russian troops had shipped out some 500 tons of materials for their own use before withdrawing. Chinese Communists put the torch to the depot a few days later, before they were driven out.

Child Labor in Mills

At the great eastern cotton-spinning mill hundreds of small boys and girls were threading machines in the vast plant, which is now resuming operation with one-fifth of its former force of have no one of his technical skill 5,000 employees. Because they have no one of his technical skill to replace him, the Chinese have retained the Japanese manager, Shigemitsu Suzuki.

The professor became angry when in response to his query "and how are we treating you?" Suzuki said:

"Very well. Only, if you could keep your soldiers from coming at night and taking away our girls—"

"You have no right to say this!" shouted Yu.

"I know I have no right," said the little Japanese manager, bowing and grinning as all orientals do when nervous, "but I beg of you—I beg of you."

But Prof. Yu still was displeased. He is unhappy unless he can convince you that all Chinese Nationalist soldiers wear halos and all Chinese Communists carry pitchforks and walk on cloven hooves.

Mackenzie's Column

By DE WITT MACKENZIE

London, Dec. 7 (AP) — The great political, social and economic changes through which this heart of the British Empire is passing are a source of constant wonder to the visitor who is returning after a considerable absence.

The average Briton himself has small realization of the real significance of this metamorphosis. He is too close to it—too much a part of it—and on this basis the foreign visitor, perhaps has the advantage of a better perspective.

Old traditions are being shattered like glass balls in a shooting gallery. Classes are drawing closer together, and the old school tie has lost much of its magic as a passport to special privilege. The landed gentry is fast disappearing, and there has been such a mighty levelling of incomes that the time is past when great fortunes can be accumulated.

Clash of Creeds

A vivid flash of all this was given in the fierce clash at arms which began in the House of Commons and is continuing— a battle royal between the Labor government and its Conservative opponents led by Winston Churchill, son of a long line of peers. It is the Tories' first real assault on the Socialists since the lattr were elected to power six months ago.

This parliamentary debate is actually a manoeuvring for position by two fundamentally different political creeds. This debate emphasizes that Britain's way of life is in the melting pot. The big question is how these two extremes will resolve their difficulties—whether it will be done by amicable reasoning or whether it may follow the lines so grimly predicted by Mr. Churchill a few days ago when he said:

"I foresee with sorrow, but without fear, that in the next few years we shall come to fundamental quarrels in this country. It seems impossible to escape the fact that events are moving and will move towards the issue—the people versus the Socialists."

Vigorous Attack

Yesterday's debate began quietly enough as Sir Oliver Lyttelton, Production Minister in the late Conservative cabinet, made a motion of censure against the government. The ancient chamber was crowded with the largest attendance since the general election.

Sr Oliver attacked vigorously. He charged that the success of the government's program would mean regimentation of the individual. He accused the party in power of creating inflation.

Labor met this first attack with easy self-assurance in their big majority of about 200. Sir Oliver's bitterest shots were met with laughs as the members leaned back against the red morocco of the chamber. This complacency wasn't to last long, however, because a few were stung to anger as the result of a hot exchange between Mr. Churchill and Sir Stafford Cripps, President of the Board of Trade, who answered Sir Oliver.

Today winds up this debate over the motion of censure—the climax of this drama, with Mr. Churchill and Herbert Morrison, House Leader, pitted against each other. They are two of the hardest hitters in Commons.

Expects to Return From Europe About February

S. A. Auxiliary Service Supervisor Bram Humphreys, 2/4 Canadian Light A. A. Regiment, C. A. O.F. C.A.O., a Belleville boy who was formerly engaged with Mr. B. W. Brown in his Campbell Street shop, and who enlisted in Toronto in the armed forces, has written relatives here under date of Nov. 23rd thanking them for gifts. His letter was written at Camp Ebkerlege, Wilhelmshafen, Germany.

"Please thank the members of the Red Shield for the very nice box I have just received.

"It is nice to know that most of the Belleville boys will be home for Christmas and although I do not think I shall make home by then, I do hope to be started on the return journey.

"I was talking to Bill Poulton, the force director, this week and he thinks I should make it about February.

"I expect to leave Germany in a week's time to join the 4th Division. They expect to leave Holland before the first of January.

"Over one hundred boys from my unit left this morning for home. It seems almost strange to mention those things in a letter when we have been so used to saying nothing about troop movement or location.

"Please wish everybody a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year for me and tell them all there are tens of thousands of people in Europe who need food and clothing. Why not keep up the wonderful work you have all done for us while we have been away. Folks over here are not one little bit different from ourselves. I do trust that out of all this will come a better understanding of our fellow man, a love for all mankind.

"Soon we shall be singing 'Good will to men'. May we sing it from our hearts to all men.

"You know I shall be thinking of you and praying for you and I shall be happy with the thought that I am on my way home and shall be with you again soon. We'll have two Christmases this year, one now and one when I get home."

Address Dr. William Brady, care of this Newspaper.)

TO OUR DRUGGIST HI-YA

It was my intention to entitle this tirade "Apology to the Druggists"—but, honestly, it seems as though I have been apologizing to one group after another these many years and who ever apologizes to me?

This inquiry from a reader, however, makes me feel ashamed of some of the cracks I have taken at druggists in general. The lady writes:

"In purchasing iron and ammonium citrate I was informed by pharmacist that the dosage by teaspoonful from solution as you describe, i.e., 1 oz. crystals dissolved in 2½ oz. water (taken in glass of water three times a day) would be dangerously overstrong. . . ."

I have never described such a strong solution as this reader evidently believes I described. The pharmacist is right about that.

And that misunderstanding or similar confusion probably accounts for most of the quarrels our readers contrive to stir up between the druggists and the so-and-so who conducts this column.

Here is the way to prepare the iron tonic as I describe it in the booklet "Blood and Health"—for copy of the booklet send ten cents and stamped self addressed envelope:

Purchase from the druggist 4 ounces of iron and ammonium citrate, otherwise called citrate of iron and ammonia, ammonio-ferric citrate, Ferri et Ammonii Citras, USP and BP. This is not two items, but a single substance. It comes in thin, transparent, garnet-red scales or granules or sometimes brownish scales of granules, but not green

Put the entire quantity in a pint bottle. Fill the bottle with boiled water after the water has cooled a bit.

There you have it, ready to take. Take a teaspoonful of the tonic, in one-fourth glassful of water, straight or, if you prefer, flavored with fruit juice and sweetened a bit with sugar, honey or syrup, after food three times a day.

A teaspoonful of the iron tonic contains about 15 grains of iron and ammonium citrates contains approximately 2½ grains of iron. So you see, you take only 7 or 8 grains of iron a day when you take a teaspoonful of this iron tonic three times a day.

Of course a healthy person requires only about one-fourth of a grain of iron a day to supply normal daily nutritional requirements. An anemic person requires much more.

Again, only a fraction of the iron taken as medicine, no matter whether it be organic or inorganic, mineral or vegetable, in liquid or solid form, is assimilated. Most of the iron combines with sulfur compounds in the elimentary canal and is not absorbed at all.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Stop Thief

Large drugstore here in (the midwest) offers "Dr. Brady's Iodine Tablets" but. . . . (O. M. T.)

Answer—Piracy. That drugstore is flirting with a lawsuit. Readers, please remember this: No one ever has the privilege or right to use my name to sell his goods or services.

Sleeping Room

Children 4 and 7 share bedroom with 72 year old grandmother who sleeps with the 4-year-old girl. Been told this is harmful. (Mrs. B. V. H.)

Answer—Ages do not matter. Separate beds always better, because one sleeping partner disturbs the other's rest and shares any respiratory infection that either may happen to develop. Separate bedrooms are preferrable, if available.

Smoked Out

Formerly I smoked cigars and chewed tobacco, but latterly my desire for these has been taken away because everybody in the house, including my wife and son and daughter, now smokes cigarettes constantly and my bedroom is the only room in the house that is not saturated with smoke. (J. F. R.)

Answer—Hoist with your own petard? Brother, even though you did your own fumigating you must have experienced the morning sickness caused by stale cigar smoke. Your present predicament—well, you should have smoked a pipe. Remedies for the situation: Air conditioning, improved ventilation, use of chlorophyl wick, air deodorant.

INFORMATION ROUNDUP

Why do historians refer to New Jersey as "the Jerseys?"

"The Jerseys" frequently occurs in American historical writings as the familiar name of New Jersey. Everybody, for instance, has read of Washington's historic retreat through the Jerseys. Under the date of June 29, 1789, Senator William Maclay of Pennsylvania noted in his diary. "Patterson, however, of the Jerseys, sprang up." Senator Maclay, under date of July 13 in the same year, wrote: "I know many people complained of chancery in the Jerseys."

This practice arose from the fact that what now comprises the State of New Jersey was at one time divided into two provinces known as East Jersey and West Jersey. The area was originally part of New Netherland (New York) and along with that province was granted in 1665 by Charles II to his brother James, Duke of York, who later became King James II.

In the same year the Duke of York granted the tract between the Hudson and Delaware rivers to Lord John Berkely and Sir George Cateret. It was called New Jersey in honor of Cateret, who had formerly been governor of Jersey, one of the "Channel Islands." At first the territory was governed as one province, but later when it was partitioned the portion originally granted to Berkely was called West Jersey and that to Cateret East Jersey. In 1682 the province of East Jersey was sold at public auction to William Penn and eleven associates for 3,400 pounds. Penn had already acquired an interest in West Jersey.

In 1702 the proprietors, who reserved the rights to the soil, transferred jurisdiction to the British Crown and the two provinves were united under a government similar to that of the other royal provinces.

Although at the time of the Revolution East Jersey and West Jersey had comprised a single colony under the name of New Jersey for nearly three quarters of a century, many people were still in the habit of speaking of the Colony and the State as "the Jerseys."

Now the familiar name of New Jersey is simply "Jersey." "Jersey," the name of the island from which New Jersey received its name, is believed to be a corruption of "Caesar." Thus one of the members of the Union may have received its name indirectly from the surname of the famous Roman dictator.

CHURCHILL HITS OUT AT POLICIES OF ATTLEE GOVT.

Calls Action "Confidence-Killing, Impulse-Sapping Theory"

London, Dec. 7 (CP)—Winston Churchill on Thursday charged the Labor government with "confidence-killing" policies in House of Commons debate with Clement R. Attlee, his successor as Prime Minister, on the Conservative party's move to censure the new regime.

Accusing Labor of bungling revival of industry, housing and demobilization with socialist projects, Mr. Churchill declared for the first time that he would have sought to form a new coalition government for post-war unity had he been re-elected Prime Minister.

Mr. Attlee, confident that his strong Labor majority would smother the Conservative censure motion, denied Mr. Churchill's charge that reconversion was proceeding at a sluggish rate.

Mr. Churchill's complaint against Socialist policies, Mr. Attlee added, sounded as if he meant: "Why, when you were elected to carry out a socialist program, did you not carry out a Conservative program?"

Attacks Rate of Demobilization

The Conservative leader charged that Labor was keeping thousands in the army and navy "doing nothing." Mr. Attlee said he was following the demobilization program previously advocated by Mr. Churchill and discharging 100,000 men and women a week.

Opening his attack, Mr. Churchill declared he was remaining in politics because "I think it my duty to try to prevent the great position which he won in the war from being cast away by folly."

On the second day of debate on his motion of censure, the wartime Prime Minister declared the government of Prime Minister Attlee was "deliberately encouraging partisan and factional interests at the cost not only of national unity but of our recovery and our vital interests."

"There has never been a government which set out to revive our prosperity on such a confidence-killing, impulse-sapping theory as this," Mr. Churchill said.

Ripping into his Labor opponents with his old vigor, the Conservative party leader castigated Mr. Attlee's demobilization, housing and export policies. For the first time, Mr. Churchill asserted that he would have sought to form another coalition government had he been re-elected Prime Minister.

"If I had received a substantial majority at the last election," he declared, "my first thought would have been to have gone to the minority to seek co-operation and to come to the strongest, widest possible measure of agreement."

Assails Demobilization Plan

Mr. Churchill declared that the government was keeping large numbers of men and women in the armed forces "doing nothing or toiling at artificially-invented work" and added:

"It certainly is an astounding fact that at the end of this year we are employing 670,000 more workers making obsolete weapons to add to already enormous dumps than in the summer of 1939."

The former Prime Minister accused the Labor government of spreading "doubt and dismay" in the building materials industry with proposals of government competition.

Then jabbing at Sir Stafford Cripps, advocate of austerity at home to build exports abroad, Mr. Churchill said Sir Stafford's activity as President of the Board of Trade "has not only been a disappointment to his friends, but disaster to us all."

$25,000 Fire Loss At Kitchener

Kitchener, Dec. 7 —(CP)— Loss unofficially estimated at $25,000 resulted Wednesday night when the plant of the Dominion Glue, Ltd., was destroyed in the most spectacular blaze this city has seen in a long time.

Only a small portion of this building was saved by firemen who battled over three hours and laid nearly half a mile of hose to reach the plant situated far back from the street hydrant connections.

The fire was so near the Grand River railway tracks that a Kitchener-Galt radial was stranded until the blaze was brought under control.

Synthetic Tires Have no Traction On Slippery Roads

Toronto, Dec. 7 —(CP)— E. P. Murray of the Ontario Department of Highways, warning against slippery roads Thursday, said drivers of automobiles and trucks equipped with synthetic rubber tires have reported the synthetics are extremely dangerous on slippery surfaces.

"We are just beginning to find out that synthetic tires will not grip on ice like natural rubber," Mr. Murray said. He said truck drivers said the "ersatz" tires give no traction on icy roads.

Europeans Change In Attitude Toward Troops

By ROSS MUNRO
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Paris, Dec. 7 (CP)—(by mail)—Relations between people of Western Europe and Allied soldiers on the continent have changed a lot from the expansive months of liberation—and changed for the worse.

The happy camaraderie which existed in the first flush of freedom has been replaced, to a large degree, by irritations, suspicions, bickering and misunderstandings which sometimes lead to violence.

The predominant attitude among many Europeans seems to be this: "The sooner those soldiers get home and leave us to ourselves in our country, the better it will be." They have been rather quick to forget the debt they owe the armies to which these men belong.

Replacing the original practice of heaping gifts and hospitality on the liberators, a growing tendency is evident among Europeans to be curt with the troops, sell them goods at exorbitant prices, and treat them as naive tourists open for exploitation.

There is a rapidly diminishing degree of friendship shown by Europeans to Allied soldiers in practically every capital of Western Europe.

Attitude in Paris

In Paris, for example, a good many Frenchmen appear to treat American, British and Canadian soldiers with a disregard and lack of respect which has something almost hostile about it.

There is little real warmth left in the hearts of Parisians for fighting men waiting to return home. They are so preoccupied with their problems of daily life, politics and rehabilitation that foreign soldiers are considered almost a nuisance which has to be tolerated.

The same situation seems to prevail in Brussels, although not to such a marked degree.

In Le Havre relations between the French and the Americans became so strained that violence broke out and the port was made out of bounds to the troops to prevent further trouble.

As a result of this situation in Western Europe most soldiers spend their leaves in their own circles of clubs and theatres. Social contact with such people as the French and Belgians is being reduced practically to nothing.

Furs Valued At $30,000 Taken

Toronto, Dec. 7 (CP)—Toronto's major crime wave flared into prominence overnight Wednesday with the city's largest fur robbery in years and an attempted armed robbery in which a bullet grazed the hand of a tobacconist. There were other lesser crimes.

Some $30,000 worth of fur coats and scarves were taken by thieves who broke into the Allen Scholes and Company fur store in midtown Toronto only a few yards from the city's main thoroughfare. Police believe an automobile was used to transport the 30 pieces of stolen goods. The robbery was discovered by a patrolman at daylight.

Police offered a $700 reward for arrest and conviction of the thieves and recovery of the furs.

Jack Alt, downtown tobacco shop proprietor, said two men, one armed, entered his store last night, pushed his wife into the kitchen and demanded money. He grabbed the arm of one man and in the ensuing struggle the gun discharged and the bullet grazed his hand.

The two fled when an airman entered the shop.

A smash-and-grab thief tossed a rock through the window of a West Toronto fur shop and escaped with a $400 fur coat. Other valuable coats were not touched.

Robbers broke into the Reliable Ice and Fuels Company in the city's east end and carried away a 400-pound safe containing $422 in cash and $3,000 worth of ice tickets. A company official said the tickets could be cancelled and therefore were worthless.

Narcotic thieves sawed bars on a basement window to gain entry to Wellesley Hospital dispensary. Police said "a large quantity of drugs was stolen."

ONLY 10,000 SURVIVE

Ottawa, Dec. 7 —(CP)— Only 10,000 of the 104,000-man Japanese 18th Army, which Lt.-Gen. Adachi led into the Wewak area of New Guinea, survived the campaign, the Australian High Commissioner's office reported Wednesday night.

5,000 Quarts "Soup" to be Set Off in Oil Well

Calgary, Dec. 7 (CP)— Preparations for an explosion, which might affect oil production all over the world, are underway at Turner Valley, 35 miles southwest of Calgary where engineers are planning to set off 5,000 quarts of touchy nitro-glycerine in an attempt to recover an almost played out oil well.

The engineer in charge of the experiment, Haskel Greene of the Hercule Oil Well Shooting Company of Vancouver, who arrived in Calgary yesterday, said it may be Christmas before his preliminary surveys are complete and the well is ready to shoot.

The nitro, enought to obliterate a city twice the size of Calgary, will be set off at the bottom of Oil Well Reflow. It is hoped that the largest nitro explosion ever set in an oil well will crack the rock and let oil flow out of other layers into the acidized layers and then into the well.

The reason for the experiment is that in the Turner Valley field, as in many other oil fields in the world, only part of the oil said by geologists and petroleum experts to be contained has been taken out. It is said that only 100,000,000 barrels of the 600,000,000 will be taken before the well is played out. The object of the earth-shaking blast is to bring the field back to life and recover part of the other 500,000,000 barrels.

If the experiment is successful the same plan could be carried out to re-open many other oil wells in the same condition.

Haskell, however, thinks there's only one chance in ten or a hundred that it will succeed, but the stakes are so high that he's going through with it.

Stirling

Stirling — Mr. and Mrs. Tom Tanner received a Prisoner of War parcel on Wednesday, Dec. 5th., which they had mailed to their son, Flying Officer Ray Tanner, approximately the 5th. of October, 1944. STIRLING

Pincher Creek Residents Honor Newly Married

Stirling.— Over one hundred friends gathered in the United Church gym of Pincher Creek, Alberta, recently to honor Mr. and Mrs. Howard Armstrong, now residents of Belleville.

Patriotic decorations lent an attractive background for the chairs of the guests of honor while the serving table was centred with 'mums and flag blue candles.

In the presentation address made to the young married couple Mr. Bob MacLeod spoke of the appreciation of all for the service of the honored guest overseas and in his good fortune in securing such a charming bride since coming home and to whom he extended a hearty welcome to Pincher Creek.

A calf leather wallet containing a substantial sum of money was presented to Howard Armstrong while Mrs. Armstrong was presented with a lovely sheath of flowers.

In replying, Howard thanked all who had had a share in the gifts. The familiar faces recalled many pleasant memories and that wherever he was he still would think of Pincher Creek as home, inviting any who journeyed east to visit them in their Belleville home.

Following a musical program dainty refreshments were served.

HOLLOWAY STREET W.M.S.

The Christmas meeting of the W.M.S. of Holloway Street United Church, was held in the church parlors on Thursday afternoon, Dec. 6, with the President, Mrs. L. F. Reid, in charge. Mrs. M. Denton presented the report of the nominating committee with the Rev. C. Perkins conducting the election.

A carol service followed with Mrs. R. Kilbank, Mrs. C. Holmes, Mrs. Johns, Mrs. E. C. Moynes and Mrs. S. P. Hagerman assisting. An appropriate solo was beautifully rendered by Mrs. Daniels and Mrs. Perkins led in prayer.

The serving of dainty refreshments by the executive brought a very pleasant and profitable afternoon to a close.

The officers for 1946 are as follows:

Hon. Presidents, Mrs. L. M. Hall, Mrs. C. Perkins.
President, Mrs. L. F. Reid
1st Vice President, Mrs. R. Kilbank.
2nd Vice President, Mrs. A. C Campbell.

B.C.I. School And Home Club Holds Open House

It was "Open House" at the Belleville Collegiate for the members of the Home and School Association at their last meeting. Each visitor was provided with a printed copy of the school plan and proceeded to visit the classes in which he or she was interested. The teaching staff of the Collegiate were present in their respective classrooms to discuss with the parents the progress and problems of the students. In the vocational department, the visitors were given the opportunity of seeing the woodworking and machine shops in action.

Following the classroom visits, the meeting convened in the auditorium with Mr. J. M. Wood presiding. Mr. Wood expressed appreciation to Mr. G. Currie, principal of the Collegiate and his staff for their part in arranging the "Open House."

The minutes were read by the secretary, Mrs. G. Wright and approved. Mr. W. Lockyer gave the treasurer's report and Mr. G. Stackhouse reported for the membership committee.

The subject for the evening pertaining to scholarships was fully explained by Mr. K. S. Hill and Mr. J. W. Reid. It was pointed out that many students do not apply for scholarships because they are unaware that they are eligible if they have an average of 66% or over.

$60,000 Grant

The Provincial Scholarships are provided for students with the required academic standing who need financial aid. In 1944-45, the grant was $60,000. In 1945-46, the grants will be $160,000 and all students were urged to avail themselves of this assistance to their education. There are bursaries provided for second and third year students at the universities.

There are ten scholarships provided by Hastings County—three for university, three for normal school and four for Grade XIII.

Students who are interested in scholarships given by the universities were invited to write to the particular college they wished to attend and get the information from them as they varied with different universities.

The motion was made that information regarding scholarships be sent to all parents with students in the higher grades so that applications may be made in time. Application for university scholarships must be made by May 1st and for Provincial scholarships by July 1st.

During the evening, Miss Ethel Smith accompanied by Miss Leona Riggs sang two delightful solos.

FINDS HIS PICTURE HANGING IN OSAKA

Fort Scott, Kas., Dec. 7 (AP)—Cpl. Bert Moore was surprised when he walked into a camera shop in Osaka and saw his portrait hanging on the wall. The picture was taken in the United States because it shows Moore wearing civilian shoes and his civilian glasses, items which he has not worn since leaving North America a year and a half ago. Furthermore, he has no knowledge of the picture being taken.

W.M.S. Presents Pageant Entitled 'Old, Old Story'

A pageant, entitled "The Old, Old Story", was presented at the December meeting of the Evening Auxiliary of the Women's Missionary Society at Bridge St. United Church on Tuesday.

It was a song story of the birth of Christ in four scenes:

Scence 1: the story teller and listeners.

Scene 2: the appearance of the angels to the shepherds, on the hills of Judea.

Scene 3: the Manger and the Adoration of the Shepherds and the visit of the Wise Men.

Scene 4: the story teller, the listeners and all the characters in the story gathered in a triumphal song of joy.

In the introduction the reader pointed out the mockery when Christmas is celebrated only as a national holiday, especially when the world is so torn by war and cursed by hatred and selfishness. It should not be forgotten that when Christ came to earth conditions were even worse than today. Yet He faced His problems alone, confident that His Way was the only Way. It was this Divine optimism that enabled Him to conquer in even seeming defeat and it is this optimism in depression that will enable mankind to manifest good-will in all dealings, to work for peace and always to live in hope of a better day.

The pageant was under the direction of Miss Helen Sulman and Mrs. A. D. Harrison convened the supper group. Over 100 were in attendance.

CONSIDER TEACHING OF FRENCH

Kingston, Dec. 6 — (CP) — Board of Education has set up a special committee to investigate the advisability of teaching French in Kingston's public schools. Recently Kingston Collegiate and Vocational Institute and the Victoria Public School Association asked for French classes.

REJECTS COMMENT

Chungking, Dec. 6. (AP)—Madame Chiang Kai-Shek declined comment yesterday on the statement made by Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt Tuesday that the wife of China's Generalissimo was typical of the Chinese in that "she can talk beautifully about democracy but does not know how to live democracy".

WOOLER

50th Anniversary Of Wedding Is Celebrated

Wooler.—On December 4, 1895, Mr. Lewellyn C. McColl and Miss Alice May Richards were united in marriage, the wedding taking place at the residence of the late A. G. Abbott.

The golden anniversary of this marriage was celebrated on Tuesday, when Mr. and Mrs. McColl were at home both afternoon and evening, to their relatives and friends.

Mr. and Mrs. McColl have six children, all of whom attended the anniversary. The children are Mrs. W. E. Simpson, Monroe, Mich.; Mrs. N. Haggerty and Mr. Henry McColl, of Wooler; Mrs. F. W. Stacey, of Bloomfield; Mrs. Harry Orvis, of Peterborough and Mrs. George Ruttan, of Queenston.

Over one hundred friends called to extend their good wishes, others, who were unable to be present, sent their congratulations by telegram, air mail and cards.

Mrs. Haggerty welcomed the guests at the door, Mrs. Simpson was in charge of the guest book. Mrs. Ruttan and Mrs. Orvis showed the guests where to lay their wraps. Mrs. Stacey invited them to the dining room, where Mrs. Henry McColl poured tea. Three granddaughters, Mrs. Terrance Read, Mrs. Mac Anderson and Miss Marguerite Stacey served the refreshments. Mr. McColl's sister, Mrs. F. A. Dorland, also Mrs. McColl's two sisters, Mrs. R. Putnam and Mrs. L. Bryant assisted in entertaining the guests.

Many beautiful and useful gifts were received including a gold wrist watch from Mr. McColl to his bride of fifty years.

Four couples have in recent months marked the golden anniversary of their marriage. They are Mr. and Mrs. W. A. McColl; Mr. and Mrs. D. Bull; Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Smith and now Mr. and Mrs. L. C. McColl.

MILLION DOLLAR FIRE

Long Beach, Calif., Dec. 7 — (AP)— A raging waterfront fire that damaged two United States Navy vessels and half-destroyed a $1,000,000 outfitting dock was brought under control Thursday after approximately 1,000 men had fought it for 3½ hours.

The cargo vessel U.S.S. Extavia and the tanker U.S.S. Marias, both laden with fuel oil, were damaged. E. J. Amar, Long Beach port manager, estimated that damage to the dock, other wharves and the ships might total more than $1,000,000.

No serious injuries were reported. Two coast guard fire boats were lost.

U.S. CUTS A-B PRODUCTION

Washington, Dec. 6 (AP) — The United States is cutting production on atomic bomb materials in at least one of the key plants where the revolutionary weapon was developed.

This was disclosed in a routine official report on job conditions made public today by the United States employment service.

The report said:

"Declining volume in the production of atomic bomb materials at Oak Ridge, Tenn., caused a drop in employment (during November) in the Knoxville area and reduced its classification from one of stringent labor demand to one of balanced supply."

No figures were given for either the plant or the area.

Bookkeeping Methods at County Building Distinctly Outmoded Toronto Auditor Tells Council

There is a strong possibility that the Hastings County Council will install a modern new system of bookkeeping in the County Treasurer's office in the immediate future, it was intimated at the Thursday session of the council.

Warden Fred Wilson and his council colleagues heard an informative talk on the installation and auditing by Mr. H. McFadden, head of a Toronto firm of auditors which has had long experience in municipal work of this kind.

Mr. McFadden had inspected the books and present system in the treasurer's office, he said and "it is distinctly outmoded. It is like driving a 1920 automobile at the present day."

The government had set up various standards of bookkeeping for towns and villages and a separate one for cities. He suggested that the county install a standard system which would satisfy the provincial legislature for comparative reasons.

"Your present system was all right twenty years ago, but it is not designated for the issue of returns which can be compared by the government with other counties. A lot of work can be eliminated and the staff need not work so hard yet accomplish more if the new system is installed."

Important Work Not Being Done.

"As it is," he said, "a lot of important work is not being done due to the fact that much repetition in other phases of the office keeps the staff busy practically all the time."

The books in the treasurer's office are almost filled and a new set will be needed immediately. The present would be an opportune time to put in a new bookkeeping system what with a new set of books needed and a new official taking over the position.

Mr. McFadden stated that the cost of installation of the new system will be five hundred dollars. The work would be done in a modern efficient manner and reports given automatically at certain periods of the year.

Quarterly Audit

His firm would undertake a quarterly auditing of the new system at a cost of $500, but in view of the circumstances and if his services to install the new system are accepted he would reduce the cost of installation to $250. In other words the new system and a year's audit would cost the county $750.

This would include, he said, periodic visits to the office to assist and instruct the new treasurer along bookkeeping lines.

"A new set of books, as required in the treasurer's office would cost approximately $200 to $300," he said.

FRANKFORD

Returned Vets. Welcomed Home At Social Evening

Frankford — A very special evening was enjoyed by the citizens of Frankford and district when the Moose Lodge of Frankford were sponsors of a dance in the new Community Hall on Wednesday evening. Music for the dancing was furnished by the R.C.A.F. band from Trenton.

In the recently completed council chambers and banquet hall the lodge members held a carnival with bingo, etc., where many a person came away smiling and bearing one of the many prizes.

The wives of the members worked hard and long furnishing refreshments for the hungry crowds who thronged their doors.

During the evening the dancers were given recess and Mr. Gordon Benedict, Junior Past Governor of the lodge called the audience to order and in a few words welcomed the guests to their social evening. He then called upon Mr. Geo. Montgomery, Reeve of Frankford who spoke briefly welcoming the boys of Frankford who had seen active service back to our midst and expressed the hope that they would stay with us now and become citizens of our town once again. Mr. Montgomery read the following names of boys who have returned home from overseas and Mr G. W. Dickson, secretary of the Frankford Chamber of Commerce presented each with a signet ring. Mac Carr, Kenneth Horsley, Eugene Lohnes, Joseph MacGarland, Herbert Rankin, Floyd Foster, Frank Lawrence, Kenneth Lawrence, Wm. Madill, Thos. Heffernan, and Thos. McCreary.

Five Killed In Service.

After the presentation of the rings Mr. Montgomery mentioned that there are five of our boys who paid the supreme sacrifice, they are Marshal Lawes, Cecil Lawes, Charles Wilson, Clifford Smith and George Tomkins. In remembrance of them a minute silence was observed.

Mr. Montgomery spoke of the fight that was fought and won by our boys and how glad we all are to see so many of them safely home again.

Mr. Jack Rogers spoke on behalf of the returned men, thanking the Chamber of Commerce for sponsoring this fine gesture on behalf of council and citizens. He mentioned how grateful they are that the folks at home would show their appreciation in this tangible form by presenting them with rings. In speaking, he mentioned the large number of boys in proportion to the population who were in the services from Frankford and of the fine effort made by them. He said, "I am proud to be one of them." In closing he made mention of the Red Cross boxes and the cigarettes from the Chamber of Commerce they received while overseas and how glad they were to get something from home.

Mr. J. E. Finnigan president of Chamber of Commerce made a few remarks of welcome to the boys expressing the feeling of all when he said: "We are glad to have you back."

In closing Mr. Montgomery thanked the Moose Lodge very heartily for this opportunity given the citizens of our town, to see, and say welcome home, to so many of our boys.

The proceeds from this program are to be presented to the new Community Hall for the purpose of buying furnishings for the council chamber and banquet hall.

Donald McLeod Hurt in Scuffle

Toronto, Dec. 7 —(CP)— Donald McLeod, 24, Toronto, was wounded in the leg Wednesday night during a scuffle in the doorway of a downtown King Street hotel (Piccadilly.) Police said the bullet came from a German revolver McLeod was holding and that the shooting followed an altercation in the hotel ballroom.

The bullet severed an artery and McLeod was removed to hospital where a police guard was placed at his bedside.

Police said they learned McLeod became involved in an argument with James Kelly of Toronto at a table near the dance floor. Dancing stopped suddenly when the gun was produced.

The doorway scuffle began when Kelly followed McLeod from the ballroom and called to Julian Troll, hotel employee, who was standing in the lobby. Police said the three were wrestling when the gun discharged.

Dangerous Driving Conviction

Cornwall, Dec. 7 (CP)— Duncan J. McKercher, 23, of Apple Hill, Ont., was convicted of a charge of dangerous driving when he appeared before Magistrate P. C. Bergeron here Wednesday. Sentence was reserved a week.

The charge arose from the death last Nov. 14 of Vinton Papps of Monckland, Ont., after being struck by a car driven by McKercher.

Drive Continues On Gambling Dens

Montreal, Dec. 7 (CP)— A drive on betting house operators who couple their racing activities with card games was indicated Wednesday following success by police in clearing up other forms of gambling and vice in the Montreal area. Police said the record now is the best in years insofar as prostitution and gambling are concerned in Montreal.

Meanwhile, raids by the city's morality squad yesterday resulted in 25 arrests, including two keepers of east-end bookmaking establishments and seven persons in a poker house.

Director Fernand Dufresne of the Montreal police force, and Hilaire Beauregard, Deputy Director of the Provincial Police, in separate statements yesterday said the areas they controlled are "clean as never before."

Capt. Arthur Tache of the Montreal police morality squad said his men had encountered some difficulty in raiding betting houses, but it was being overcome. Flying barbottes, in which gamblers are whisked from one place to another ahead of police, bookies and card games now are the big headache for the city police.

Provincial Police who arrested 17 persons in a raid on a $100,000 gambling house in neighboring Cote St. Luc, said yesterday it was the second time that the den had been raided since it opened in the spring. Mayor Donald Fletcher of Cote St. Luc said police were advised in April that the gambling house was operating, but no action was taken until a few days ago.

Mr. Beauregard said difficulties of investigation, coupled with "lack of complaints" until recently, brought about a situation which "became intolerable" and which resulted in definite decision to close the premises.

"They Bite In Winter, Too!"

When Canadians drop an expectant line through the ice, they are practicing an art which the Indian learned from the Eskimo . . . and they are also enjoying a prolific Canadian asset . . . the abundance of fish which has been the keystone of our $149,000,000 tourist industry.

Yet this great asset can be endangered by over-fishing, by pollution of the streams through forest fires, and most of all by non-observance of conservation laws.

As a Canadian citizen, a share in this great store of natural wealth belongs to you . . . and it is both your privilege and your responsibility to help protect this rich heritage. Carling's believe you can best help by knowing what should or can be done.

Therefore, Carling's have formed The Carling Conservation Club so that current, authentic conservation news may be made widely available. *Join this club today simply by writing to Dept. Frigid Frankie Brimsek Freezes Out Bibeault In Boston Nets by Order of Ross

Takes Over Net Duty on Sunday When Bruins Meet Black Hawks

(By The Canadian Press)

Frigid Frankie Brimsek comes back into the Boston nets—and Paul Bibeault gets the "freeze out".

Brimsek, acknowledged as the No. 1 man of netminding before he left Bruins to join the United States Coast Guard, will don the heavy pads again Sunday in a scheduled National Hockey League game against Chicago Black Hawks.

He replaces Bibeault, the slender French-Canadian whose own record in 12 games this season with Bruins is beyond reproach. But Boston simply had to make room for Brimsek, so Manager Art Ross ordered the switch.

Bibeault formerly with Toronto Maple Leafs and Montreal Canadiens, owns one of the lowest goals—against averages in the league. He's allowed only 36 goals, the same as Vezina Trophy winner Bill Durnan, of Montreal. The only backstop with a better average is 19-year-old Harry Lumley of Detroit Red Wings, now tied for third place with Chicago.

Lumley has allowed 27 goals in 12 games—slightly more than two goals a game.

Brimsek's return constitutes the highlight of an N.H.L. weekend in which four games are scheduled, with Canadiens and Toropto Maple Leafs playing twice.

They open the weekend action at Toronto in the only game played Saturday. Sunday Canadiens play at Detroit and Toronto moves to New York. The third game is the Boston-at-Chicago contest which marks Brimsek's reappearance in the N.H.L.

Canadiens now hold a two-point edge over second-place Boston, with Detroit and Chicago deadlocked a point further back.

For their Saturday contest against Montreal Leafs will be without Nick Metz, injured in a weekday practice, Conny Smythe, general manager of Maple Leaf Gardens and the man behind the Leafs, meanwhile has announced the Leafs "will carry the fight" from now on, with no attempt at defensive strategy.

UNITED STATES HOCKEY LEAGUE PROVING WORTH

Spectator Interest is High and Teams Are Evenly Matched

Minneapolis, Dec. 6 —(AP)— Faster play, more substantial backing for the teams and an upsurge in spectator interest have sent the United States hockey league booming into its second complete month of play.

The league started operations late in October with seven teams—all but one with affiliation of one kind or another with major league hockey outfits. Members of the league are Minneapolis and St. Paul in the north, Dallas and Fort Worth, Tex., in the south and Tulsa, Okla., Kansas City, Mo., and Omaha, Neb., in between.

League and club officials were unanimous in declaring the present setup better than the old American Hockey Association. Contributing to the fans' interest, they said, was the faster play which resulted from younger players. The organization was on a sounder basis because operators of clubs were more solidly established.

Attendance has soared beyond expectations of league and club officials. No figures were available from league headquarters but as a sample of the fans' interest, St. Paul, in seven games this year had 37,829 admissions, compared with 18,974 for the first seven games of the 1941-42 season. Virtually the same was true at other points in the circuit, with Minneapolis officials terming crowds the best in 20 years.

While there are no outstanding "name" players on the club rosters, many of the squads have as members promising youngsters from major league clubs, gaining experience before going up to the big time. Salaries generally are higher than in the old American Hockey Association.

While the league appears spread out from north to south, travel is not too difficult. For instance when either of the Twin City clubs is scheduled to play in Texas, the schedule is sent up so that the trip is broken by games in Omaha, Kansas City and Dallas. This arrangement works so that the longest train ride is but 26 hours, and is made in a day when no game is carded.

The league is functioning so well that officials are beginning to think about another member for next year's play.

INDUSTRIAL USE OF POWER OF ATOM MAY BE DELAYED

Drummondville, Que., Dec. 7—(CP)— Lt.-Col. R. Chips Off The Sports Block

By GEORGE H. CARVER

Mike Rodden he who scrivens extensively for the Kingston sheet makes no bones about what he thinks of our fast-travelling Redmen. Mike went into a mild rave after the brilliantly garbed gang from west of the Limestone border took the speedy Barriefield Bears into camp by the slim margin of one goal the other evening.

According to the Rodden version: "There were 15 players in the Belleville squad and nary a weakling. This is a sound team and the amazing part of it is that they have no ice in the Moira River town and the players have been performing from memory. It must, therefore, be apparent that the Reds and not the Bears may become that team to beat for the championship.

Belleville used three complete forward lines and all were effective. On the defence they had the Williamsons, "Speedy" St. Louis and Vernon Goyer and it was a treat to see them in action. Goalkeeper Crandall made many sensational saves and looked very capable. at all times. Williams, Moher, the Meaghers, Baldwin and Leo Goyer were conspicuous on the front line.

The Redmen have become a real asset to the association and no good sportsmen begrudge them the lofty position they now enjoy as the onrushing pace-setters. Early in the campaign they were forced to rely on many players of junior age but they have gradually reinforced the squad with experienced material and last Monday furnished evidence of potency when they shaded the Barriefield Bears by 2 to 1 and pulled the champions off the top rung.

The Redmen offer a real challenge to Kingston in the matter of hockey supremacy and this is the team that Locos, as representatives of the Limestone City, will met in Ontario Hockey Association intermediate playdowns. At this stage it appears that Belleville, Locos and Barriefield will occupy the first three positions when the regular Kingston Association race ends with Queen's University and the Victoria juniors battling it out for the fourth slot."

• • •

Ain't it the Truth.

Strange as it may seem, the Belleville squad has been the surprise package of the Van Horne series to date. Unheralded and unsung, with plenty of criticism from those who should have been boosting them the locals took the hockey bit in their teeth, kicked up their heels and entered a team in the league regardless of the fireside referees.

They practiced twice. Took a bus with as much condition as Exterminator, and as much fighting heart, journeyed down to Kingston to play their first game with visions of coming back on the short end of a basketball score, and surprised not only themselves but a stunned Kingston crowd by defeating the highly touted Victorias junior team for their first win.

Next they bowed to the Locos rated at that time by Kingston sports writers as the "Canadiens" of the loop, but straightened away and have won their last three starts. They now lead the loop with four wins against one loss.

Back in their home balliwick fans began to sit up and take notice. Now the phone rings at least a dozen times the day after a game by people wanting to know the score, whereas at first a couple of interested ones phoned to find out now much the Redmen were beaten by.

Right now the Redmen are hot. The management has slowly but surely welded the players into some sort of an organized playing team and results are beginning to show. And their fine display, handicapped as they are with no ice at home to use for practice, has caught the fancy of a large number of Kingston fans. And, brother, that's nothing short of a miracle. The Redmen get a good hand when they skate out on the ice and their fans appear to be solidly behind them.

On Monday night they meet the Barriefield Bears again and are in high hopes of sending the Bruins back to their lair with the second straight defeat tacked on their hides. This game, like the last, should be a humdinger. The players' bus leaves the Hume Arena at 6.30 and as there is room for ten extras, fans desirous of going should contact Frank Butler.

Hoop-La.

Things are beginning to look up in basketball villa around these parts, Ed. Shortt of the "Y" tells us. His intermediate "B" team are getting themselves int ocondition and readying the chasses for the winter grind. Such hoop luminaries as Ralph McCabe, who leaves for Florida in February where he will report to the Cleveland Indians, Don Mason, George Pate,, Jerry Hyde, Bill Wright, Jack Whiting and others will turn out, it is expected with the "B's" and will no doubt give a good account of themselves, although the grapevine hasn't unearthed anything as yet on the potential strength of the opposition fives.

The juniors are also readying themselves and after the winter schedule in "B" company should be in the proverbial pink for their own playdowns. Incidentally the "B" loop champs will hop right into the Eastern Ontario championships at the end of the local league playoffs.

A Good Idea.

Plans are under way, it was learned today, for the formation in the city of Interdenominational Sunday School Athletic Association, (try and get that one in a single column head). The new organization will sponsor all kinds of sport among the Sunday schoolers of the city and they include girls as well as boys. The new loop will not only give the kids a chance to play their favorite sport but will also assist in bringing them back to the Sabbath class rooms. A constitution is being drawn up and will be released shortly. The idea is a sound one and should receive the endorsation of all good thinking people. More about that later.

New Boss.

Clay Hopper was officially promoted today from manager of the Brooklyn Dodger farm club in Mobile, Ala., to manager of the Dodgers' International League farm Montreal. He succeeds Bruno Betzel.

Toronto, Dec. 7 (CP)—That victory smirk still spread itself over the collective features of Toronto Argonauts when Joe Ryan stepped in to serve notice that the Canadian football crown won't be cheaply bought in 1946.

The man who helped make Winnipeg football conscious, loosing lefts and rights in a verbal flurry, proclaimed Montreal will return to the prewar policy of importing United States gridiron talent without so much as a by-your-leave to the Canadian Rugby Union.

Ryan, unofficial voice for Montreal Hornets in the 1945 campaign and grooming for a more authoritative role next season, told Bob (Toronto Star) Burnett players would be brought across the international boundary in August and sent home after the final banquet.

If the governing C.R.U. objects, Montreal will launch a concerted "break-up-the-Argos" campaign.

"Only trouble is it will cost us as much to lure Joe Krol or Royal Copeland to Montreal as it would to bring in four good American players!" Ryan added.

"Look what happened to Montreal and Winnipeg this year. They tried to get along with homebrew amateur talent and Argos kicked the daylights out of them. I know of at least eight grade "A" players who sat on the sidelines in Winnipeg because the club wouldn't cross their palms with the long green as usual."

Ryan said Manager Jim McCaffrey of Ottawa Rough Riders has confided plans to import about seven Americans. Western Canada clubs would have to do the same to survive. C.R.U. rules insisting that a player must live in Canada one year before the season's opening should be scrapped.

"It's nice to say we have a bunch of amateurs..but that won't fill stadiums or pay off the mortgage."

Parenthetically, it may be observed that Argos asked for it. Hornets shared equally with Argos, Riders and Hamilton Tigers in a pooling of league gates this season, but McCaffrey and Argo President T. H. C. (Tommy) Allison have indicated they don't like sharing the spoils.

"From here in, Montreal is on their own," Allison was quoted three weeks ago. That remark may rank some day with Bill Terry's classic "is Brooklyn still in the league?"

The fight is joined. After three placid wartime years in which the Ontario Union rose to stature of Eastern Canada's lone major league, the scrappy Big Four is back in business. The days of unbridled competition, committee-room squabbles and wholesale importation are back to splash new color over the sport pages.

Hockey Sidelights

By ED FITKIN

Toronto—Paul Bibeault, the good-looking French-Canadian goalie, admittedly is operating on borrowed time with Boston Bruins. Everybody knows that Paul probably will have to step aside when Fearless Frankie Brimsek considers himself sharp enough to return to the Bruin nets. Which makes it a very tough situation, indeed, for Mr. B-Bo, who happens to be playing some of the finest hockey of his career at the moment. Recently he blanked Canadiens, his old playmates, and last week-end he was a second cousin to Horatio in his defiant stand against the Toronto Maple Leafs, another club with which he played.

• • •

COACH HAP DAY of the Leafs came away singing Paul's praises. Said Hap: "That Bibeault was so good, I'd hate to be in Art Ross' shoes and have to make the decision to bench him for Brimsek." Yet, knowing the calibre of Mr. Brimsek's play, how can you keep the recognized No. 1 goalie of present-day hockey on the sidelines? It looks very much like Bibeault, who is known as The Cat because of his agility, will have to be blessed with a feline's nine lives in order to survive.

• • •

IT WAS BIBEAULT'S work in last Sunday's game, incidentally, which led to Day's decision to return Frank McCool to the Toronto twine. Young Goalie Bell played well enough but not well enough to inspire the Leafs to victory, which Bibeault's brilliant efforts at the other end of the ice were doing for the Bruins. So enter McCool...exit Bell...for the nonce!

• • •

DICK IRVIN, like Hap Day, is convinced that Boston will be the team to beat for the Stanley Cup marbles this year. Irvin says the Bruins are virtually unbeatable on their own ice. "Few teams will come away from the Hub with a win this year," sighs Irvin. "As a matter of fact, Art's team will be dangerous on any ice. The pigeon-fancier from Regina is one gent who must realize what a vast transition has come over the Bruins in the past year. In three games with the Rossmen, Canadiens have won once and lost twice ...whereas a year ago they romped to 10 straight victories over the team Ross described as "the worst to ever wear Boston sweaters."

• • •

ONE OF THE NOTABLE "comebackers" of the new season is Murph (Hard Rock) Chamberlain, who is frolicking on the Canadian front line as if he thought he had a chance to win the rookie-of-the-year award.

Murph, a rugged operator throughout his NHL career, had such a poor season last year (Mainly because of an outbreak of boils) that Canadiens fully intended to trade him this semester and there were early reports that he was ticketed for Boston. But Murph stuck around, came charging back after suffering a 17-stitch leg gash in training camp, and his "mucking in" type of play has provided much of the aggressive motif to the Habitant attack. Now Irvin is thanking whatever lucky fate kept Chamberlain with the squad.

• • •

DINK CARROLL, of the Montreal Gazette, relates a humorous story about Murph when he was a rookie with the Toronto Maple Leafs. Eager to impress Conny Smythe and Irvin, who was then coach of the Leafs, Chamberlain put everything he had into one practice session, fairly flew every time he was on the ice and checked and doublechecked like an auditor. Exhausted by his efforts, he dragged himself wearily into the dressing room after the drill, slowly took off his soggy hockey togs and climbed on the rubbing table for one of Tim Daly's famed massages. But Tim, who was hanging up gear at the time, paid no attention to him. Finally, wondering if Tim had noticed him, the naked Murph said: "Hey, Tim. How about a rubdown?" Daly wheeled on him with a look that shrivelled Murph to the size of a mouse. "You oughta be ashamed of yourself, young fella," Daly observed. "A young boy your age lookin' for a rubdown! Now get offa that table and put on your clothes before you ketch cold!"

RANGERS WIN EASILY

St. Hyacinthe, Que., Dec. 7 (CP)—Lester Patrick's New York Rangers of the National Hockey League last night defeated St. Hyacinthe Saints of the provincial senior hockey league 10-1 in an exhibition game. Muzz Patrick, Phil Watson, Lynn Patrick and Edgar Laprade were loaned by the Rangers to the Saints.

THREE LEADING SCORERS IN LOOP

Toronto, Dec. 7 (CP)—With three Stratford Indians in the top four scorers, George Mara of Toronto Staffords today was the lone "outsider" up front in the Ontario Hockey Association's senior individual scoring race.

Official league statistics showed Mara, a former Upper Canada College ace, tied for the lead with six goals and two assists in his team's four starts. Alongside him were Jim (Sailor) Eady and Bill Woodward, who each counted eight points in three games with the Stratford club.

In the third spot was another Indian, Mickey McQuade, with two goals and five assists. Hugh Barlow of Hamilton Pats completed the list of the "top five" announced by the league with six points.

Victoriaville Stars In Second Place

Sherbrooke, Que., Dec. 7 (CP)—Victoriaville Stars last night defeated Sherbrooke Randies 5-2 in a provincial senior hockey league game, and advanced to a second-place tie with St. Hyacinthe Saints, nine points behind the league leading Lachine Rapides.

Aime Bourdon and Marcel Bouchard combined in the second period to give Victoriaville a 2-0 lead, but Herb Carnegie assisted by Manny McIntyre and Ossie Carnegie got one of these back before the period ended.

In the final, Zillie Malette caught Joe Petit's pass for a third Victoriaville goal, while Herb Carnegie added another for Sherbrooke, assisted again by McIntyre and brother Ossie. Malette and Petit joined up for another goal, and Freddie Arran completed the scoring on a pass from Lucien Savard.

Columbus, O.. Dec. 7. (AP)—The minor league convention session yesterday was held in the hotel's "Hall of Mirrors"—and apparently that's how the business was transacted —by mirrors. . .There's not another reasonable explanation of how the "AA" Leagues became "AAA" the A-1 loops climbed upto "AA" and at least one B circuit, the Sally, moved into "A." The Piedmont is expected to duplicate that advance today. . . Anyway, we'd hate to trust those baseball guys in a spelling bee. . .That "busiera has been talking about is era has been talking about his ownership of the Beaumont Texas League Club. . . Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 859
By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

He must have been a rummyite. No bridger would have said it: "I think I'll play some cards tonight. And gosh how much I dread it."

If you are a bridge player, you certainly will enjoy playing this deal:

NORTH
♠A 8 5
♥A J 5 3
♦Q 8
♣K 7 5 3

WEST
♠Q J 10 2
♥9 6
♦10 7 2
♣Q 8 4 2

EAST
♠K 9 7 4 3
♥10 8 2
♦9 6 5 4
♣10

♠6
♥K Q 7 4
♦A K J 3
♣A J 9 6

Squat yourself in the south seat as declarer at a slam in the heart department. The opening lead you get from west is the queen of spades. Take a look at the dummy and go to work.

With solid diamonds and hearts you have nothing to worry about in the red suits. Only the blacks need cause you any concern. And your only real worries are in clubs.

The queen of clubs might be in the east hand. If so, a finesse from dummy toward the ace-jack will be good. And if opponent clubs are three and two, you can take all 13 tricks that way.

What the the chances of success in such a try? The finesse is a 50-50 proposition. In 71 out of 100 deals, five outstanding cards will divide three and two. Chances are better than even there.

However, no good bridge player would think of taking even a 90% possibility if a cinch can be found. So, study this deal and see if there is a plan of play that is safer or sure.

Should you first pull the opponent trumps and then sluff the two small north spades on south diamonds? That will not help. You will still have to take a gamble in the club suit.

Should you first draw opponent trumps and sluff two dummy clubs on south diamonds? If you try that, dummy will not have enough to trump the south clubs you will try to save that way.

Having waded through such thoughts, you indicate ability. If nothing better can be found, you may attempt one of them. But look some more. See if you can decide on a plan that may work better.

Get that think-tank percolating.

CAPITALS HOLD SIX-POINT LEAD OVER HORNETS

(By The Canadian Press)

Indianapolis Capitals demonstrated their vaunted power again Thursday night in coming from behind to defeat the lowly New Haven Eagles 65 in an American Hockey League game which increased their margin at the top of western division to six points over second-place Pittsburgh Hornets.

Buffalo Bisons also staged a late rally to edge the Providence Reds by an identical score, 6-5, in the only other contest on last night's schedule.

Defenceman Cliff Simpson was the big factor in the Indianapolis victory, scoring a brilliant unassisted goal midway through the third period to break a 4-4 deadlock and set up the play for the clinching counter seven minutes later. Simpson stickhandled his way through the entire New Haven team to beat goalie Yves Nadon and repeated the performance to feed Rosy Rossignol a neat pass for the clincher—Rossignol's third goal of the game. Simpson also counted another marker earlier in the contest.

The other Capital goal went to Johnny Holota while New Haven marksmen were George Pargeter with two, Roland Forget, Bob Dawes and Jake Milford.

Vic Lynn blasted a 50-foot blue line drive past Providence goalie Harvey McQueston with five minutes remaining in the final stanza to give Buffalo their victory against the Reds. The Bisons had gone ahead 3-0 in the first heat of three straight goals by Len Halderson, Roger Leger and Murdo McKay but the determined Reds countered with four of their own to lead 4-3 going into the final period.

Cleveland Indians May be Sold To Bing Crosby

By The Canadian Press

The rumor market yesterday at Columbus, O., in connection with the annual convention of the National Association of Minor Baseball Leagues, featured a story that Cleveland Indians might be sold with Bing Crosby of movie-radio fame figuring as the prospective owner. It was said the crooner, already interested in horse-racing, had been toying with the idea of becoming a big-leaguer and had indicated preference for the American loop.

Sale developments were expected to be brought to the fore at the meeting of the majors in Chicago next week.

Saying he had several very good offers, Hugh Devore, 35-year-old coach of Notre Dame football team, said last night at McKeesport, Pa., he would not handle the Irish next fall. Frank Leahy, recently discharged from the navy, is slated to resume the post.

An American hockey league deal yesterday saw defenceman Bill Allum transferred from Buffalo Bisons to St. Louis Flyers in exchange for goalie Connie Dion plus a cash consideration.

Obtained from Toronto Leafs two years ago, infielder Al Rubeling was sold yesterday by Pittsburgh Pirates to Syracuse of the International league.

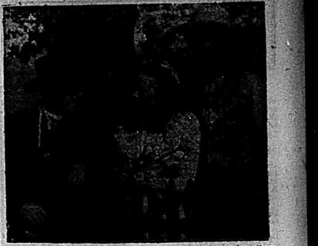
Jack Holland, assistant to Fritz Loosli at the Chateau Frontenac Ski Hawk School, arrived at Quebec from Peterborough, Ont., yesterday and immediately got out on the hickories with a party of American and Canadian visitors on the plains of Abraham.

Holland returned to the Loosli fold last winter after having served as ski instructor with the Canadian army in the Rockies. During his army service, he helped train the famous Lord Lovat scouts from England and Scotland who were preparing in the Canadian Rockies for a possible invasion of Norway.

Detroit Tigers, world series champions, yesterday sold three players, two of them pitchers. Twirler Zeb Eaton was sent to Buffalo of the International league while Moundsman Hank Oana and catcher Bob Gillespie were sold to Dallas of the Texas league.

Recently released from the Royal Canadian Navy, Penti Lund, 20, of Port Arthur, yesterday turned up at Boston garden to bid for a place with the N. H. L. Bruins. Born in Finland, Lund had performed with Port Arthur juniors at right wing and later with a navy team.

Joe Krol of Argonaut football renown last night turned to the basketball court where he was high scorer with seven baskets for Toronto Tip Tops against Varsity Blues at Hart House in an exhibition engagement. U. of T., however, grabbed the decision, 50-42, on all-round superiority.



AT THE CAPITOL — A scene from the new gorgeous color attraction, "Song of Old Wyoming," now showing at the Capitol Theatre, stars Eddie Dean, new western singing star. The added hit, "Dangerous Passage," stars Robert Lowery.

The World is Like That

CHAPTER 9

"Well, no hurry!" he said cheerfully. "Norma'll not be here for four or five weeks. I'll keep in touch with you. By the way," he added carelessly, "I talked to your pal Dunham yesterday."

"To Kent" Her cheeks were white.

"A question of a folder for the club came up; I'm on the committee. I thought he might have some idea. He did, as a matter of fact. A very attractive fellow," Philip added, with a smile.

"But I thought he was going to Portland on Monday," Jocelyn said, quickly and uncomfortably.

"Maybe he's changed his plans. He was very much upset when I said that you were away from the office with a bad cold."

"I'll telephone him, write him," she said. "I feel so much ashamed of the whole thing. Since you — since you were so wonderfully kind to me on Sunday I'd like to say just that much. Sometimes in offices——".

"Sometimes in offices is right," Philip agreed briskly. He got to his feet. "Well!" he said. "I'm very much pleased that you'll make a stab at this anyway. It's a relief to my mind. I'll write Norma's mother that the granddaughter of General Britton has consented to keep Norma out of night clubs and gentlemen's apartments as far as she can."

"You knew about my grandfather?"

"My mother added that bit of information. She knew him in the days when he was at the Presidio. It may smooth your path with her. She's quite a—quite a party," Philip said.

Jocelyn walked with him to the door, gave him her hand.

"You're very kind," she said. "I hope I'll be some help with Norma."

She watched him walk to the gate and get into his car. She had not defined it yet, but there was a great peace in her heart. She said bewilderedly that she felt within herself the spirit of Thanksgiving; consciously or unconsciously that the man who had just left her had given her back her self-respect, and the feeling was good.

On Friday Jocelyn went back to the office, feeling changed and strange, and restfully indifferent to what went on there, for it had been arranged that she should leave just as soon as a new clerk could be trained to take her place. The noon whistles were blowing when Kent Dunham came suddenly in.

Jocelyn looked up startled, tried to smile. But the expression on his face did not encourage the smile.

"Jocelyn," he said without preamable or greeting, "will you lunch with me today?"

"Ah, I can't. You see, my cousin Tots Partridge is going to marry Rusty Livermore in March, and we're going today to look at silver patterns."

"I don't care what she's doing," Kent muttered, his hard eyes not leaving Jocelyn's face, "can't you lunch with me?"

"They'd wait for me, Kent. I couldn't."

"You could leave a message here."

"We're not meeting here. We're meeting at the store and then going somewhere to eat."

"And that matters, does it?" he said bitterly. "You didn't write me. I've been in hell all week! What's the matter?"

"Kent not here," Jocelyn murmured, looking about.

"It's empty!" he said in high scorn. "Nobody'll hear! Jocelyn, ah, sweetheart," he pleaded, suddenly changing his tone, sitting down opposite her, and stretching his hands across the desk, "what's the matter? Where've you been? You don't know what I've been through! I've talked to Lilian; I've seen a lawyer—"

"Oh, you haven't!" she protested, in so distressed a tone that his own tone changed, and he looked at her in suspicion and surprise.

"Why not?" he asked sharply. "Wasn't that the arrangement? What else could I do?"

"Ah, you shouldn't have done that!"

"Jocelyn, I don't understand this. What has happened?"

"Nothing has happened. It's just—you shouldn't have. What did Lilian say?"

"She felt very bad. But she agreed to the divorce."

Jocelyn frowned. It all seemed far away and unimportant, and embarrassing.

"I got a bad cold Saturday night," she offered.

"I know. I was worried to death about you. I followed you by the new cut, and got to the bridge before eleven, and watched all the cars go by until one. But you must have passed me."

"No; I missed my way. I was in the car all night, rolled in an old blanket."

"You stayed in the car all night!" He put his head despairingly into his hands, and again with an uneasy glance about she reminded him that they might be noticed or overheard.

"It was all a mistake, Kent — my going over there—the whole thing. I had to get out because I felt such a false position—so different from anything I wanted to be. Quite suddenly it all seemed to go—well, flat and wrong, and I wanted to get home. It was a silly thing to do. It was an awful risk, rushing off into that rain, but I didn't think it out."

"You didn't think out what I went through."

She looked at him, knowing what he wanted her to feel, knowing it to be entirely out of her power to respond to him.

"I'm horribly sorry for the whole thing," she said definitely, getting to her feet with an air of ending the conversation. "I'm sorry for your telling Lilian, but I suppose when you tell her it's over she'll forgive you. You said something like this to me two weeks ago, Kent. Now I say it to you. I'm sorry, and—and it's over."

"You can't just—break it off like that," he said quickly, hoarsely. Jocelyn did not reply. She went to get her hat and coat, remembering as she did so the last time they two had been in the office together, and her going out with him into the dreary winter streets, and his walking home with her, telling her over and over again that he was going away, that he must build his life around his new work and his wife now. She felt horribly sorry for him; she wondered if he had felt sorry for her on that former afternoon.

When she came out with her outdoor things on, he was standing at the office window looking down into the street. He did not turn as she crossed to the door, and she went out without a word or sign from him.

It made her feel sorry and ashamed. But there was no worse hurt. Jocelyn could end her office days with Fordyce, Sawyer and Fordyce with the feeling that she left that whole episode, and all its attendant emotions, behind her. She went on into the new work like a new woman; a stronger, quieter, happier woman, and long before the New Year was well begun she had begun to forget as well as to forgive whatever that two years' friendship had cost her.

Packing her things to leave Mrs. Buck's, going over to Sausalito to spend a few days' holiday at Christmastime with her aunt and the big family at Maple Den and presently being picked up by the big Fordyce car and whirled down to chilly, wintry Burlingame, these were experiences novel enough to wipe the past out of her mind; never in her life had she felt so free, so ready for new experiments and experiences.

She reached the Fordyce mansion a few days after Christmas; Philip had told her that she would be the first member of the newly assembled family to get there for his mother would not arrive for several days; he himself would be in New York, and Norma would probably not return until he did.

The house was enormous, old-fashioned, delightfully warm, comfortable. Jocelyn, upon her arrival, could only guess at the uses of the big rooms behind closed doors on the first floor. The place was ramified into a dozen annexes and bays. Every few years in the past seventy someone had seen fit to add a billiard room or music room or cut through walls to enlarge and supplement parlors, and dens and libraries.

She was escorted by a silent, courteous butler upstairs, across a wide, large upper hall faced with many dark, handsome doors, through a passage, and into a suite of two rooms—both hers, and supplemented by a bath, a dressing room and a porch with fluted railings. Her trunk was nowhere in sight; a nice little maid came in to explain that she had unpacked it, and hoped everything would be all right. Reassured, she departed, to appear in a few minutes with a perfectly appointed tea tray. Jocelyn laughed aloud in sheer excitement. This couldn't last; it was much too much fun to last. But while it did, it was going to be interesting.

She went downstairs at seven to dinner, when Lena appeared to announce it, and enjoyed an evening paper with her solitary meal. It was served in the smallest of several dining rooms, but even this room was darkly furnished with heavy shining pieces of mahogany; masses of silver glittered behind glass doors and on the sideboard. Soup, a squab, a lettuce salad with various mysterious little embellishments making it delicious, a chocolate eclair with pink and green tiny candles strewn on it; she found it an epicurean meal. It was different from meals at Mrs. Buck's, and different from meals at Aunt Nell's. Jocelyn, all alone in the elegant space and dignity of the old Fordyce house, smiled inwardly as she contrasted the three. She loved it already; loved the mansion itself, the stately gardens she had only glimpsed on her arrival, the quiet service in the quiet rooms, the atmosphere of stability and security. There had not been too much of either in her life.

In her father's day there had been a good deal of moving about. The time of the great war had seen him shifted and promoted constantly; There had been a hotel in Augusta; another hotel in Washington, there had been quarters in Watervliet. Four postwar years in Watervliet had provided about the longest peaceful domestic interval she and her mother ever had known; then there had come widowhood for Catherine Britton, and after that continual changing and a continual descent of the financial scale. Mrs. Britton was a delicate, irresolute, apprehensive woman; to be left with a spirited twelve-year-old daughter to raise had appaled her. For a while she had visited cousins and aunts, but one by one these places of refuge had altered or disappeared. Finally she and Jocelyn had come back to San Francisco, drawn by the older woman's memory of happy younger days at the Presidio, and there had finished high school and gotten her first office work.

By this time Catherine Britton had been crippled with arthritis. So Jocelyn came back from the office to read to her mother, to adjust hot-water bags, to discuss the trivial episode of an invalid's day, and when she did escape for a night to Maple Den, it was always with promise to return at a certain hour, and not to keep darling Mama waiting. When her mother died Jocelyn had grieved deeply and truly, but at that exact time she had been launched upon the perilous and thrilling friendship with the tall, handsome clever commercial artist whose studio was a floor or two above the offices of Fordyce, Sawyer and Fordyce. Saddened by the ending of the old life, and tortured by the halfpromises and half-hopes of the new, she had felt all her actual moorings gone, and now, as she soberly considered the immediate past, she realized that something of her moral moorings had been swept away with them.

She was already conscious of a wish that Kent Dunham were out of the picture, safely up in Portland with Lilian, explaining to her that he must have been mad to talk as he had of change and divorce. Knowing Lilian, Jocelyn knew that she would accept these representations on their face value. What Lilian wanted was Kent and security and everyday comfort.

The whole thing had been soiling, somehow; Jocelyn wanted to wash it away as she might an earth stain from her fingers. In this fine old-fashoned house, playing duenna to a girl of sixteen, she knew that she might do so. And if she really won Norma's affection, really steered her safely through some of the rapids of modern social living, then it would seem to be a sort of expiation—a saving for herself as well as Norma.

Report Tabled In City Council

A committee appointed to investigate the collection of garbage tabled their report at the last meeting of council and many other recommendations.

The report was as follows:

Dec. 4th., 1945

His Worship Mayor Follwell and Aldermen of the City Council, Belleville, Ont.

Gentlemen,-

Re: Garbage Collections

Your Committee appointed to consider the collection and disposal of garbage begs to report as follows:

Our present system of collections consists of taking the perishable garbage and ashes all together. We find many municipalities are separating the ashes from garbage and using the former for fill on vacant city property. We have reviewed the question of filling in the marsh land between the main land and Zwick's Island and feel that this reclaimed land would be an asset to the Corporation in the future for whatever purpose Council may desire to use it. The Island and marsh land, when filled, would provide approximately thirty-three acres of land for use by the Corporation as a park, municipal airfield, or building site.

We therefore recommend that, effective January 1, 1946, the garbage be collected separately from the ashes. Collections would be made twice weekly as at present, one for the garbage other than ashes, and one collection for straight ashes, to be used as fill in the marsh land between the main land and Zwick's Island. This separation would continue until April 30, 1946, when we would revert to the present system. The following year the separation would start on Nov. 1, again and continue through until April.

At present the cost of collecting garbage and ashes is charged to general rate, which means exemption of charge for the service rendered to exempted properties. Your Committee, after reviewing some other municipal systems where they assess the service as a separate item under the Local Improvement Act (which is provided for in the Municipal Act) . . . recommends that we pass a by-law for the collection of garbage and disposition of same placing charge on local improvement basis, which would assess the charge against all properties served.

We further recommend that the City Solicitor be requested to immediately make the necessary representation to obtain patent for the marsh lands already reclaimed by the Corporation and for marsh land to be filled adjacent to Zwick's Island.

We also recommend that representation be made to the Board of Health submitting our proposition to that body and requesting permission to reclaim the portion of marsh land adjacent to Zwick's Island with ashes as outlined in this report.

Respectfully submitted,
H. J. Armstrong, F. G. Chamberlain, W. L. McDougall, C. R. Clapp, J. Trudeau and Charles A. Mott.

Next 20 Years May See Atom Rival of Coal

By JOHN CHESHER

New York, Dec. 7. (AP) Nine leaders in the atomic bomb project estimated variously today that possibly in three, and almost certainly in 20 years, the United States could have atomic power capable of competing with $15-a-ton coal. In an extraordinary symposium, held on the spotlighted stage of Hotel Grand ballroom, the scientists outlined in detail before the 50th annual convention of the National Association of Manufacturers the possibilities of harnessing the atom for peacetime use.

Maj.-Gen. L. R. Groves, director of the bomb development, was top man in guessing "how soon". He placed his estimate in "decades".

More Optimistic Views

Immediately several of his assistants declared he was "too pessimistic". Dr. Charles Thomas, vice-president of the Monsanto Chemical Co., estimated ten years would do it. Dr. J. A. Wheeler, professor of nuclear physics at Princeton University, declared the goal could be realized in from three to ten years under ideal circumstances.

Dr. James B. Conant, president of Harvard University, acting as moderator, drew forth these answers in response to the specific question: "How long will it take to develop an atomic 100,000 kilowatt hour power plant that can compete with one run by coal costing $15 a ton?"

All nine agreed that the time could be shortened if more expensive coal was taken as a base.

Other points, stressed by the atomic headliners were that:

Heat Problem Solved

The problem of producing atomic heat has been solved at the big Hanford plant in Washington State.

One of the major difficulties will be to protect the users of atomic power from radio-active harm.

The protective devices must be so heavy that an atomic 100-kilowatt hour power plant would weigh 50 tons, thereby ruling out use in automobiles and present airplanes.

Some believe atomic power could be used to run railroad locomotives; others feel ocean-going steamships would be the smallest vehicles in which such use would be feasible.

NO TROUBLE

saucepans and steam cookers. Its kettles were declared essential and it made a limited number for domestic sale after 1939; but its main output became torpedo warheads, smoke floats, flares and practice bombs.

Its pre-war factory, covering four acres, was blitzed in 1940 and it moved into four requisitioned buildings. It was bombed out of its Manchester and London offices.

Now it is swinging back to peace production. The present staff is 1,000 many of them working on continuing admiralty and R.A.F. orders. Several hundred trained workers are needed. The requisitioned premises will be lost within six months or a year and home-building takes priority over rebuilding of the blitzed factory it used to use.

"It will probably be six months before we have enough labor and materials really to get going," said the plant manager. "Light alloys are being used for housing components and we can't get enough to keep us busy."

"Before the war we made hundreds of different types of aluminum ware. Now we are allowed to make three sizes of saucepan, two types of electric kettle and a steam cooker. The kinds we can't make are the styles we used to export.

"And yet there is any amount of market for our goods. We are getting orders from the dominions, the colonies and Europe. We can't possibly begin to fill them."

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Dec. 7 —(CP)— Industrial stocks were moderately weak and other groups showed little net change at mid-day on Toronto Stock Exchange. Golds were a bit soft in the afternoon action. Volume was about normal at 1,430,000 shares for the first three hours.

Steel issues held a margin of gains and other industrial groups were down. Algoma Steel gained a point and Canadian Locomotive, Dominion Bridge, Dominion Steel B, Hamilton Bridge, United Steel and Canadian Car posted gains. Industrial Alcohol A touched 20 and held a point gain at 19. Other liquors were unchanged to lower.

Eldona had a sharp sell-off to 1.35 and then recovered to 1.44 where it was down 17 cents net. East Sullivan dropped 25 cents and Lingman Lake 5. Prices were up for Giant, Frobisher, Wasa Lake and the Powell Rouyn issues.

Uranium weakened 15 cents and Smelters, and Nickel lost fractions.

NEW YORK STOCK EXCHANGE

New York, Dec. 7 (AP)—Rails, aircrafts and coppers managed to edge forward in today's stock market although profit cashing elsewhere forced many leaders into minor declines.

Comforting to optimists was the fact that dealings slowed appreciably after the opening when offerings began to appear. The pace quickened a bit when the carriers attracted bids. Trends were no worse than slightly uneven near the fourth hour.

General Motors, Packard and Shamrock Oil touched highs for the move. Supported were N. Y. Central, Boeing, United Aircraft, Anaconda, Kennecott, DuPont, Johns-Manville and International Harvester. Laggards included U.S. Steel, Bethlehem, Chrysler, American Telephone and Union Carbide.

Canadian issues mostly were easy at mid-day. Dome Mines was off 3-4, McIntyre 1-2 and Distillers Seagrams the same amount. C.P.R. bucked the trend, up 3-4 at noon.

HOGS

Toronto, Dec. 7. (CP)—Price on Grade A, dressed, were unchanged at Hull at $17.75 delivered and at Peterborough at $17.15 plus transportation, in bacon-hog markets reporting early today.

7,000 LANCASTERS BUILT

London, Dec. 7—(Reuters)—More than 7,000 Lancaster bombers, the aircraft in which several thousand Canadians saw action, were built during the war and flew 156,000 sorties, it was disclosed here last night at a diner honoring the six firms which had built the machines.

In a message, Air Marshal Sir Arthur Harris, bomber command chief, described the Lancaster as the greatest single factor in the winning of the war.

MOIRA

Vets. Welcomed Home From Wars

Moira — On Thursday evening as many as were able to brave the storm, gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Vanderwater to honor David Scott and Frederick Regensberg, recently returned from overseas. After a short program and address, the boys were presented with billfolds and cigarette lighters as well as the money provided by Huntingdon Township for soldiers returning from overseas. The boys replied and lunch was served, after which a social evening was spent.

Many Received in Church.

On Sunday morning, Rev. Mr. Lafferty, assisted by Mr. Stewart, conducted service in Moira United Church. The choir sang "Living for Jesus," after the children's hymn "Jesus Loves Me," Adeline Lois, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Elliott was baptized. Mrs. Nelson Welsh sang "Have Thine Own Way, Lord." The following were received into full church membership: Donald McInroy, Beverley Foster, Lorne Mumby, Evelyn Emerson, Grace McInroy, Audrey Holden, Douglas Mumby, Bruce McMaster. After the reading of Luke XXII, Mr. Lafferty delivered a splendid talk on the sacraments of the church, after which the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper was celebrated.

Ameliasburg

Ameliasburg — Miss Jean Corfield entertained a number of her friends at a birthday party on Friday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. C. Humphrey and Walter, of Consecon, were Sunday guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Bisdee.

Miss Jean Hutchins was a recent tea hour guest of Misses Lois and Donna Casson.

The United Church bazaar and supper was held last Wednesday in the town hall. In spite of the bad weather there was a good attendance and a large sum of money was realized.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Hopkins visited friends at Wellington on Sunday last.

Messrs S. A. VanCott and Truman Ferguson spent Saturday in Picton.

The Ladies' Aid met at the home of Mrs. Earl Wood on Wednesday.

Pte. Arthur Corfield and Gnr. Otis Sills spent a few days in Kingston this week.

Miss Mary Kleinsteuber spent over the weekend at her home in Actinolite.

Mr. Morgan Sills has received his discharge from the army.

Moira

Moira — The Young People's Union held their meeting Monday evening in the vestry. Hymns appropriate to the season were sung and Donald McInroy read the Scripture lesson. Miss Huffman was program convener, and readings were given by Mae Scott, May Dale and Elmer Thompson. The topic was taken by Wesley Farrell; a piano solo by Gordon Foster. At the close of the program several enjoyable games were played under the direction of Beverley Foster.

Visitors at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Vanderwater for dinner on Sunday included Mr. Wesley Crawford, Harold and Eddie Crawford, Roslin; Mrs. J. W. Hall, Mr. and Mrs. Bill Hall and Maribelle, of Belleville; Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Hall, Donald and Mildred and Mr. and Mrs. Harry Hall and Linda of Huff's Island.

Mr. and Mrs. Wallace McInroy spent a few days of last week in Toronto.

Hon. Capt. L. R. Mack is home on a few days' leave.

Madoc Junction

Madoc Jct. — The November Red Cross meeting was held at Mrs. Raymond Chambers' Thursday afternoon. There was a fairly good attendance and during the afternoon a quilt was quilted. The hostess served dainty refreshments and an offering was taken.

Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Wilson, of Toronto, spent a few days last week with the former's mother, Mrs. Alfred Lake and Mr. Lake.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Detlor and sons were recent dinner guests at Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Lansing's.

Friends are pleased to hear that Miss Marion Gallivan is progressing favorably after undergoing an appendix operation in Belleville Hospital last week.

The November social evening of Eggleton Sunday school was held on Friday night at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Fitchett with a good number present.

The superintendent, Mrs. Warren Harlow, presided over the program which opened with a song service, with Miss Rosella Fitchett as pianist. Mr. Kenneth Stewart and Master Ross Bridges were in charge of the worship period. A poem, "What Are You Building, Brother," was read by Miss Gladys Clarke. Mrs. Forde Stapley sang a solo, playing her own accompaniment on her guitar. A paper, "What does your leisure hours mean to you?" which had been prepared by Mrs. Clifford Lansing was read by Mrs. C. Fitchett.

Following this, Mrs. Ray Danford and Miss Mary Chambers sang a duet with Mrs. Raymond Chambers playing their accompaniment on the piano. A reading, "A Recompense of Great Reward" was read by Mrs. W. Harlow.

The meeting closed with prayer by Mr. Nelson Stapley. The members of the Girls' Class served refreshments and a social hour was enjoyed.

Mrs. F. Stewart and Mr. Kenneth Stewart spent the tea hour Friday evening with Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Fitchett.

Recent guests at Mr. and Mrs. Hiram Ashley's were: Mr. and Mrs. Blake McMullen and Miss Bessie McMullen, of Holloway, and Miss Effie McMullen, Reg. N. from New York.

Mrs. Dan Crowley of Amherstburg, was a recent visitor at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Chambers.

Mr. and Mrs. Warren Harlow and little Miss June White, also Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Stapley spent Sunday with friends at Dartford.

Miss Betty McDonnell spent the weekend with Mrs. Ray Danford.

Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Wannamaker spent Sunday with relatives in Campbellford.

Mr. Gordon Nelson spent the weekend with his sister and husband, Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Kelly, of Warkworth.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Chambers and Sandra, Miss Mary Chambers and Master Robert Chambers were guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Burkitt, Frankford, on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Hiram Ashley spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Earl Morgan, of Foxboro.

Guests of Miss Helen McMullen on Sunday were: Mr. and Mrs. Burton Sharpe and Carol, of Mount Pleasant; Mrs. Bert Reide and children.

The Sacrament of the Lord's Supper was held on Sunday last in Eggleton United Church with Rev. A. M. Laverty, of Stirling, conducting the service.

EXHUME BODIES OF SLAIN FLIERS.

Herford, Germany, Dec. 6 (AP) —The bodies of 109 American airmen, at least 35 of whom are believed to have been murdered, have been exhumed at the Baltic port of Lubeck, the head of the United States War Crimes Investigation Section in the British zone said.

The airmen had bailed out of damaged planes, made forced landings or were shot down in raids on Kiel.

A senior officer said it was a trick of the Germans to bury murdered airmen in their own cemeteries and fake the grave records.

Marshall Testifies Jap Sneak Attack Was Great Gamble

Had it Failed Pacific Drive Would Have Failed

By CLYDE BLACKBURN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Washington, Dec. 8 (CP). — The fate of Singapore, Malaya and the East Indies hung in the balance when the Japanese made their desperate sneak attack on Pearl Harbor four years ago, according to testimony of Gen. Geo. C. Marshall, former United States army chief of staff.

Had the attack been a catastrophe for the Japanese instead of a triumph, "the entire Japanese campaign was ruined," Gen. Marshall told the Congressional Committee investigating the tragedy this week.

"Advance into Malaya and the East Indies would have been out of the question," he declared.

Complete preparedness at Pearl Harbor would have enabled American forces to beat off the Japanese and prevent more than "limited harm."

Opposition Destroyed.

Lacking that preparedness, the Japanese were able to destroy all immediate opposition on their flank as they headed southward to successful conquest.

There were inadequate defence facilities at Pearl Harbor, Gen. Marshall said, and the Japanese were fully aware of what they might expect.

"However, there were ways to improve that situation by increased vigilance, by the operation of the attack planes and the interceptor planes in every way we could.

"There was always this to be considered, which we always had in mind, and that is the great hazard the enemy undertook in sending his people so far from home.

"A surprise is either a triumph or a catastrophe.

"If it proved to be a catastrophe the entire Japanese campaign was ruined. Advacne into Malaya, advance into the East Indies would have been out of the question.

"Singapore would not have been captured, the Burma Road would not have been cut off and the attack on New Guinea probably would not have occurred.

Had Sufficient Defence.

"So you have an enemy hazarding a great risk in this stroke. Therefore you measure somewhat hazard he is accepting."
your means of defence against the

Of the existing facilities at Pearl Harbor, Gen. Marshall said: "I think they had sufficient means to so break up the attack that it could only have done limited harm.

"I think they had a sufficient amount of material there to successfully resist an enemy effort in the form of either a raid or a more serious attack.

"I believe the principal problem there was to have been prepared against an emergency of a surprise attack which might come at any time with the least possible advance notice."

WWAR DAMAGE INSURANCE PAID IN GREAT BRITAIN

London, Dec. 8 —(CP)— The government has paid 2,264,000 war damage insurance claims totalling £192,000,000 ($864,000,000), the Board of Trade Journal said last night.

SETTLEMENT PLAN AWAITS DECISION OF FORD COMPANY

Keynote of Union Formula is Request That Labor Minister Appoint Arbitrator

Windsor, Dec. 8. (CP)—The Union-sponsored proposal for ending the Union Security strike of 10,000 Ford Motor Company of Canada workers, approved late yesterday by plant stewards of Local 200, United Automobile Workers of America (C.I.O.), today awaited acceptance or rejection by Ford officials.

If the company accepts the four-point settlement plan, the proposals will go before a Union membership meeting. Supporters of the new back-to-work plan have expressed confidence the Union members will follow the lead of the shop stewards in accepting it.

Keynote of the new formula is a Union request that the Federal Minister of Labor appoint an arbitrator who will come to Windsor to arbitrate the question of Union Security—paramount issue in the strike which started Sept. 12.

The strikers will remain on the picket line until the arbitrator renders his decision, which, the Union stipulates, "shall be given 24 hours after the commencement ~~of negotiations—and~~ shall be final and binding on both sides."

A "yes" answer from the company today may set the stage for a mass Union membership meeting Sunday afternoon or evening.

New Proposals

If the new settlement plan meets clear sailing, it is believed possible that the strikers will begin to trickle back to the idle automotive plant in about a week. The 1,000 office workers likely will be the first called back to work by the company.

The new proposals provide for:

1.—Appointment of an arbitrator to arbitrate the question of Union security.

2.—An orderly return to work according to seniority and resumption of collective bargaining.

3.—Appointment of an umpire of Labor relations, upon acceptance of the proposal, to see that all conditions are carried out.

4.—Negotiation and arbitration of all remaining points in dispute, including vacations with pay, annual wage and severance pay.

The plan also calls for establishment of a special grievance committee to deal with disputes that may arise in the plant pending disposition of the negotiations of the collective agreement. Grievances relating to matters of seniority arising from the return to work are to be taken up directly with the management and then referred to the umpire.

COMMONS RENEWS PROTEST AGAINST DIVORCE SYSTEM

Members do not Want Parliament to be Used For the Dissolution Of Marriages

By D'ARCY O'DONNELL
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, Dec. 8 —(CP)— The Commons, faced with a heavier than usual run of divorce bills, renewed its protests yesterday against parliament being used for the dissolution of marriages and the discussions gave rise to confused scenes which ended with a division that broke through the lines of all major groups in the House.

The bills, the first business following the dinner recess, finally were passed 59-29 after discussion was interrupted and the House returned to debate on the Bretton Woods monetary agreements when Speaker Gaspard Fauteux reserved judgment on a difficult point of order.

Debate on the international financial agreements also occupied this afternoon sitting and brought a continuation of bitter opposition by Social Credit members who contended ratification would revive the gold standard and bind Canada to "international slavery."

Earlier, the contentious Emergency Powers Bill was passed on third reading by a 121-46 vote, with the C.C.F. and most of the Social Crediters supporting the government.

Decry Evils of Divorce.

The division on the 60 divorce bills came after several speakers had decried the evils of divorce and made suggestions on how to remove the resultant legislative burden from parliament. Cabinet Minister and party supporters alike thrust aside political affiliations in voting for or against their passage.

Five French-speaking members from Quebec, the only province that now sends its divorce cases to parliament, called for a recorded vote on third reading and Speaker Gaspard Fauteux acceded to their request. Then the confusion started.

When the division bells had sounded, Veterans Minister Mackenzie raised a point of order and said that a vote could not be taken on bills being passed "en bloc." The division had to be on one bill.

1,000 YOUTHS CONVICTED

Ross Bailey, Stirling Appointed Treasurer of Hastings County By Unanimous Vote of Council

Former School Teacher and Veteran of Second Great War

Ross Bailey, former corporal in the Royal Canadian Air Force, and son of Mrs. George Bailey and the late George Bailey, ex-Warden of the County, Stirling, was appointed treasurer of the County of Hastings at the closing meeting of the December session of the County Council on Friday. He is 27 years of age.

Mr. Bailey was selected from a list of nine applicants for the position.

The new treasurer has a rich background of municipal life in his family. His father, the late George Bailey, served for several years on the township council of Rawdon and was honored with the Wardenship of the County in 1929. His grandfather, the late Andrew Kirk, who resided in Hungerford, served on that township council for a long time, and was Warden of the County in 1907.

Born in Rawdon Township, Mr. Bailey received his early education in the little red schoolhouses of that township. Later he graduated from the Stirling High School, going from that seat of learning to the Toronto Normal School.

Graduating as a full-fledged school teacher he returned to his native Hastings County and taught school for four years, one year in Elzevir township and three years in Rawdon.

Enlisted in 1941

In 1941 he enlisted in the Royal Canadian Air Force as an AC2, and received his early training at Kingston. Later he was posted to Clinton, Ont., where he took a special course in radar. Graduating with top marks he was sent to Corpus Christi, Texas, where he spent six weeks studying the intricacies of advanced radar theory and practice.

After several months spent at Montreal, Mr. Bailey was sent overseas as a radar specialist with the rank of corporal. He was stationed in the South of England and in Northern Scotland for a period of 2½ years before returning home to Canada.

The new treasurer is married to the former Miss Thelma Ketcheson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Ketcheson, of Rawdon Township. He has four brothers: Bill, Toronto; Clarence, Port Credit, and Lorne and Gordon at home, and two sisters, Evelyn at home, and Cora of Oshawa.

He assumes his new duties on January 1st.

STEALS FROM RED CROSS

Brockville, Dec. 8—(CP)— Mrs. Adea Steele, 49, of Spencerville, was fined $25 and costs yesterday when she appeared before Magistrate G. A. Wright for sentence on a charge of stealing two blankets from an overseas shipment she had helped pack for the Canadian Red Cross Society. In convicting Mrs. Steele last Monday, Magistrate Wright termed the crime one of the "most despicable" offences he had ever handled.

W.J. Morrison Submits Brief To Commission

Toronto, Dec. 8 (CP) — Controversy between the Ontario Department of Education and the Ontario Association for the Deaf on methods of instructing deaf children was heard Friday before the last public sitting of the Royal Commission on education until probably the week of Jan. 7.

In a statement in reply to previous briefs submitted to the commission by Dr. H. E. Amoss, director of professional training for the department and W. J. Morrison, Superintendent of the Ontario School for the Deaf at Belleville, David Peikoff contended that the department's insistence on use of lip-reading "sacrifices educational progress of those unable to benefit from one means of approach."

Mr. Peikoff's statement and an appended statement by Dr. E. A. Stevenson of California urged greater understanding of a distinction between the "totally deaf" and the "hard of nearing." Only exceptionally brilliant students in the former class, the statement said, could profit by oral teaching. For average "totally deaf" students instruction through sign language brought better results.

"Radically different procedures and means of approach," are required to reach "totally deaf" and "hard of hearing" students, the statement continued. "Both groups lose out educationally when and if taught together."

Rev. Basil S. Ellard of Toronto spoke of the statement and advanced as his opinion that "very few" deaf persons could learn effectively if taught by a wholly oral method. He agreed with the statement's contention that both methods should be combined.

In a further brief presented Dr. Amoss defended oral teaching, saying it facilitated thinking by training the deaf person to use words and also that it established possibility of means of communication with the hearing world.

In comment on the controversy Mr. Justice J. A. Hope, commission chairman, expressed as his personal opinion that instead of division the parties should strive for unity to provide the best possible education for the deaf child. "This commission is not a forum for the airing of differences," Mr. Hope said.

A further brief on the education of the deaf presented by Nellie V. MacDonald on behalf of the Toronto Special Class Teachers' Association recommended that all teachers of the deaf be given training equivalent to that provided at Belleville.

Antiquated is Claim.

The Ontario Public Schools Act is a "strait-jacket, antiquated, creaking, legalistic, impractical, and quite often absurd and contradictory," Horace Brown charged in an address to the commission.

BRITISH TO USE ENOUGH TROOPS TO RESTORE ORDER

Intend to Re-establish Dutch Sovereignty In the Netherlands East Indies

Batavia, Java, Dec. 8 (AP) — Highest authorities said today the British command has decided to bring whatever additional forces might be needed into Java to restore order and re-establish Dutch sovereignty in the Netherlands East Indies.

The decision, which would end the British policy of dealing with Indonesian independence leaders in an effort to work out a compromise, was said to have been reached at the Singapore conferences this week between Admiral Lord Louis Mountbatten and British, French and Dutch commanders.

A fully informed source who cannot be quoted by name said the new plan called for use of a large number of Dutch troops as well as British reinforcements. The Dutch, this source said, would hold various objectives after they were taken by the British forces.

(In London, a British foreign office spokesman declined to comment on the report, saying the situation was in the hands of the British commander in Java.)

British attacks against Indonesian Nationalists in the Ambarawa area continued today, while in Batavia a new Indonesian newspaper said that Acting Governor General Hugertus Van Mook has received a "premptory order," to report from his Netherlands East Indies post to the Hague.

Batavia, Dec. 8 (AP) — President Soekarno, of the unrecognized Indonesian republic today sent Lt.-Gen. Sir Philip Cristison an apology for an assassination attempt against the British commander in Java.

Soekarno told reporters he had sent a letter expressing regret that a grenade had exploded near Christison upon the British general's return from Singapore Friday.

Gen. Christison, smiling, said he knew of no attempt upon his life either in Java or Singapore. He attended conferences in Singapore with Admiral Lord Louis Mountbatten, Southeast Asia commander, and British, French and Dutch commanders.

FLARES RAISE HOPE OF FINDING MISSING PLANES

Miami, Fla., Dec. 8—(AP)— The United States navy announced today that flares and a large fire were seen 20 miles apart in the desolate marshlands between Melbourne and Orlando shortly after 2 A. M. and said search crews were being rushed to the scene in the hope of finding some survivors of 27 missing naval airmen.

In addition, the navy said, green flares were seen at 2:50 A. M. today approximately 150 miles northwest of Great Abago Island in the Bahamas. The coast guard cutter Pandora, one of scores of vessels flung into the great air-sea search for the missing men, was racing to the scene.

The Pandora was reported approximately 60 miles away.

Russia Urges All Troops Evacuate Iran by Jan. 1st

Blames Trouble in Country On "Reactionary Elements"

Washington, Dec. 8 —(AP)— Russia blames the trouble in northern Iran on "reactionary elements which have opposed the extension of national rights" to people of that area, the State Department disclosed today.

This information came with the release of the text of Russia's reply to a United States note of Nov. 24 urging that all Soviet, British and American troops evacuate Iran by Jan. 1.

Russia pointed out that it already had agreed with Britain to withdraw the troops by next March 2 and said it saw no grounds for acting earlier.

Foreign Commissar Molotov also reiterated in the reply that the Soviet Union "adheres unwaveringly" to the Roosevelt-Churchill-Stalin 1943 declaration in Tehran which pledged the three countries to maintain the "independence, sovereignty and territorial integrity of Iran."

Mr. Molotov said the Tehran declaration did not specify the number of Russian troops in Iran or the period of their occupation.

He said the question of the time for removal of Russian and British troops had been decided at the council of foreign ministers in London two months ago and that no objection had then been raised "in any quarter."

Not Raised in Note.

The British government in a note to Russia on the Iranian situation Nov. 25 did not raise the question of the removal of Soviet troops he added.

The Russian note said the Iranian government's account of a so-called armed uprising in northern Iran did not, in the Soviet view, correspond to the facts. The events did not constitute an armed uprising and were not even directed against the national government at Tehran.

The so-called popular assembly of northern Iran is seeking only assurance of democratic rights for the people of Azerbaijan province Mr. Molotov said. The Azerbaijanians were asking only for "national antomony —within the limits of the Iranian state" He remarked that these people speak a language different from the Iranian tongue.

"As far as the Soviet military command is concerned, it has not hindered, and is not hindering the movement of the Iranian military forces and gendarme police units which are in the districts of northern Iran," Mr. Molotov said.

Father H. Murphy Returns to China

The Rev. Father Harold Murphy, S.F.M., of Kingston, and well known in church circles in this city left this week for China, where he will resume his missionary duties on the war-battered mission at Lishieu.

Father Murphy has visited Belleville on several occasions and spoke many times in St. Michael's Church here.

He spent eight years at Lishieu before returning to Canada on a well-deserved vacation. His mission is located 300 miles inland from the coast and was the target for Japanese ferocity during the war.

It was at Lishieu that the Japs vented their wrath following the famous raid of United States General Jimmy Doolittle and his gallant fliers. The enemy were of the opinion that the American planes were based at Lishieu and the day following the raid sent their war planes and bombers over the mission and blasted it to pieces.

Lishieu actually was landing objective of the American fliers when they took off from their "Shangri La" on board the carrier "Hornet."

Father Murphy intends to introduce the game of baseball to his Chinese flock at Lishieu, and took with him sufficient equipment to start at least two teams.

U.S. IMPORT RESTRICTIONS

Washington, Dec. 8 (AP) —The government has placed import restrictions on all shipments to the United States of candy and other products containing sugar, it was learned yesterday. Sugar trade men said the order apparently is intended to improve the United States sugar supply by increasing imports of sugar rather than sugar products.

BIG 3 FOREIGN MINISTERS WILL MEET IN MOSCOW

December 15th is Date and Members Will Discuss Atomic Energy Controls

By JOHN A. PARRIS

London, Dec. 8 —(AP)— Diplomats said today the decision of the Big Three foreign ministers to meet in Moscow Dec. 15 for discussion of atomic energy controls could be looked on as a pledge by the major powers to work together for world peace, and a reassurance of their determination to accept the responsibility for world leadership.

Some diplomats, here to attend sessions of the United Nations Preparatory Commission, interpreted the forthcoming meeting as a prelude to a joint British-American-Russian pledge to place control of the atomic bomb in the hands of the United Nations, when that organization is prepared to accept such a high responsibility.

It was also pointed out that unless the three foreign ministers were confident of reaching basic agreements on the atomic bomb and other issues to be discussed, they would not have called the conference at this time.

Most of the delegates to the preparatory commission meetings a survey revealed believe there is a growing tendency among all countries to favor placing control of the atomic bomb in the hands of the United Nations organization. Representatives of the smaller countries, particularly Belgium, the Netherlands, Yugoslavia and several Latin-American countries, feel that this step is necessary if the new peace agency is to succeed.

Some diplomats said a three-power discussion of the atomic bomb is a natural step, following the Washington conference between Britain, Canada and the United States, and preceding what will probably be a general discussion of atomic energy by all the United Nations at the United Nations general assembly next month.

Although the subject of atomic energy is expected to dominate the conference, the foreign ministers also will discuss a number of matters of current concern to the three big powers.

PUBLIC REQUESTED TO MAIL CHRISTMAS PARCELS EARLY

Fully expectant of a greater than ever rush this season, the postal department again is asking for the fullest co-operation from the general public in early mailing of their Christmas parcels and letters. To avoid the last minute rush the public is asked to post not later than December 18th for local delivery with earlier mailing being asked for outside points. As there is no mail delivery on Christmas Day, mail not posted by the "deadline date" cannot be assured delivery by Christmas.

DISTRICT VETERANS ON MAURETANIA

According to the R.C.A.F. Public Relations Dept., the following Belleville and district airmen are expected to arrive at Halifax Wednesday, Dec. 12., on the troopship "Mauretania:" F/L. J. R. Mallory, Bloomfield; LAC. P. E. McQuoid, Smithfield; LAC. W. J. Beaubien, Napanee, and Sup. R. M. O'Connor, Aux. Services, Roblin.

SCOUT HANDICRAFTS FOR SALE ON MARKET

Members of the 1st Belleville Scout Troops and Cub Pack provided an unique touch on the local farmers' market Saturday as they proffered handicrafts which had been left over from their sale of St. Thomas' Church Parish Hall, last Saturday. Quite a number of the troops were on hand in their scout uniforms offering articles of woodcraft, stuffed toy playthings and other articles, the work of efficient scout hands. From casual appearance the boys seemed to be doing a fair business. Money realized from the sale of handicrafts will be used for next year's camping expenses.

KINSMEN TO HOLD VETERANS' NIGHT

The local Kinsmen club will play host to veterans of World War 11 on Monday evening when all of the club members are requested to bring a returned man to their regular bi-monthly meeting. A first rate program has been lined up by the program chairman for the entertainment of boys returned from overseas with Barry Stafford of Kingston scheduled to appear in a story telling role. Local talent consisting of Barbara Diment and Madeline Walden, Jimmy Bankier and Jim Corradi will take part in the program for "Veterans' Night."

Abandon Plans To Hold Reception For 34th Battery

Plans for a home coming reception for the personnel of the 34th Field Battery, Royal Canadian Artillery, scheduled to arrive here as a unit in the near future, have been abandoned, it was learned here today.

The Civic Reception Committee together with others interested at a special meeting decided to contact the Department of National Defence and request that the personnel be disbanded upon arrival and sent to their respective homes across Canada.

It was learned, that only one member of the 55 officers and other ranks of the battery lives in this district and the committee felt it would be better for the men to go to their homes upon arrival rather than travel to Belleville for a brief appearance here.

Representatives of the Battery in Kingston and Napanee, have concurred in the decision of the local reception to abandon the idea of a public reception.

Plans, however, for a grand reunion of the original members of the unit, practically all of whom are home, will be laid in the near future. It is expected the function will take place some time in January.

Municipal Band To Give Concert

The first of the winter series of concerts will be given on Sunday evening in Tabernacle Church at 8.30 p.m. by Belleville's own Municipal Band. In spite of difficulties during the war to maintain the Belleville standard of band playing, our own band has kept its high standard. The band is proud of its contribution to the armed services. Over thirty-five having served in the three services. Sunday evening will find F/O Ralph Clapp, Flt. Sgt. Carm Osborne and Musician Jack Sills in their old place in the band.

The assisting artists: Miss Leona Riggs, Mrs. W. Burgoyne and Mrs. Ken Bird with Mr. Alec Gordon at the piano will contribute vocal trios.

The band conducted by Lt. Fred Jobson is happy to present the following program:

March—"On the Quarter Deck"—Alford.

Overture — "Rosamunde" — Schubert.

Vocal Trio—"Selected"— Miss Leona Riggs, Mrs. K. Bird, Mrs. W. Burgoyne. Accompanist, Mr. Alec Gordon.

Scene Intermezzo—"In a Persian Market"—Ketelby.

Concert March — "Nordic" — Liedzen.

Polka—"Pizzicato"—Strauss.

March Militare—"The World is Waiting for the Sunrise"— Orr. Alford.

Vocal Trio—"Selected".

Excerpts from "Beethoven's Works"—Orr. Reynolds.

Paraphase—"Nearer My God to Thee"—Orr. Laurendeau.

God Save The King.

Former Resident Produced Pitchblende For Atomic Bombs

A former resident of Belleville and now a prominent mining engineer played an important role in producing the pitchblende from Eldorado mine in the Mackenzie district which ultimately went into the atomic bombs which blasted the Japanese cities of Nagasaki and Hiroshima.

This has been revealed following the breaking of the news story concerning the bomb and the fact that Canadian mineral went into its manufacture. The former Belleville man connected with ore production at Eldorado is 59-year-old Edmund Bolger, son of a partner of the former local engineering firm Evans and Bolger. He is mine manager at the radium mine on the rim of the Arctic Circle.

Born in Belleville, Mr. Bolger is a 1906 graduate of Queen's University in mining engineering and has spent thirty years in mining camps. Since 1939 he has been mine manager at Eldorado on the shores of Great Bear Lake.

Motorist Surprises Stranger in Act Of Driving off With Car

When James P. Brennan, of Lonsdale, returned to his parked auto, Friday night after completing some business in the city, he was more than a little surprised to see a man in uniform sitting behind the wheel and with the car lights on apparently ready to drive away.

Lending to the suspiciousness of the incident, the ignition wires had been torn from their socket, so Brennan considered it was time to do something about the matter and a constable was called with result the man in uniform was detained on a vagrancy holding charge.

Newstand Damaged

On the whole police circles were rather quiet over the night, although William Lane, popular blind news vendor seen frequently on Belleville streets, complained to police that a local soft drink truck had collided with his newstand building at the corner of Front and Bridge Streets, the driver having gone on without stopping.

GEEN — DRUGS

Pilot Officer Norman B. Hunt of Bayside, a member of the 404th Squadron, R.C.A.F., overseas, who made the supreme sacrifice in an operational flight over the coast of Norway. He was first reported as missing January 14th, 1944, and in October 1944 was listed as "presumed dead."

A native of the Bayside district he attended the public school at Bayside and was a graduate from the Belleville Collegiate Institute where he had passed two years in succession with honors. He was prominent in young people's circles of the Bayside congregation.

Enlisting in the R.C.A.F. in December 1940 he proceeded overseas in December of the following year and at one time served for a period of six months in the Middle East.

On Sunday December 2nd an impressive service of memorial was held at the Bayside United Church where the entire community paid tribute to his memory. The service was conducted by the Rev. A. C. McCallum, the minister. Hon. F/L. J. D. Patterson, R.C.A.F. Chaplain at Trenton, was the special speaker and spoke in eulogy of the life and devoted service of the late Pilot Officer Hunt.

Wants Hunting, Fishing Seasons Reduced in Ont.

Hastings County Council at its closing session on Friday unanimously endorsed a recommendation requesting the Provincial Government to reduce the periods of the hunting and fishing seasons in Ontario.

Reeve William West, Stirling, in moving the recommendation, told council that if Hastings County is to attract the tourist business it needs good roads, good fishing and good hunting. He also included in his recommendation that three assistant game and fishery wardens be appointed to this county.

"The regular men are overworked," he said, "and cannot do their jobs properly. One man cannot be at both ends of the county at the same time. Consequently many fishing grounds of the county are being neglected.

The hunting season, in his opinion, should be cut down to ten days instead of two or three weeks. A number of game and fishery associations in Ontario have already passed resolutions to this effect, and he felt that the county of Hastings should follow suit.

By reducing the length of the seasons and adding to the staff of the game and fishery officials, Reeve West said he felt that the more game and fish available in the county, the more tourists would be attracted here. As it is much of the tourist traffic is being diverted to other parts of the province. This could be brought back to Hastings if the proper procedure regarding hunting and fishing was taken.

The motion carried by a unanimous vote.

Sharp Drop In Egg Prices

Price of eggs dropped five cents on the local produce market since one week ago with vendors Saturday morning asking 50 cents for extras and 48 cents for firsts. Fowl was fairly plentiful at 45 cents per pound for capons and ordinary dressed chickens at 40 cents the pound.

Christmas trees were again of-Green maple stovewood sold at market with prices ranging from 50 cents each to $1.

On the vegetable market potatoes were quoted at $2.20 per bag with the majority of vendors quoting their supplies by the peck at 50 cents. Carrots and parsnips brought 35 cents the six-quart basket, good cabbage was 15 cents each, and sauerkraut 15 cents the quart.

Whitefish found a ready market at 45 cents the pound and was the only type fish offered.

Several farmers offered wood with dry soft maple and poplar cordwood quoted at $11 the cord. fered in quantity on the outside $14 the cord. Only one or two farmers offered young pigs on the market with prices ranging from $6 to $7 each.

Young spaniel puppies were quoted at $5 for males and $2 for females, while collie puppies were to be had at $4.

Obituary

JOHN CHARLESWORTH
(Belleville—Tyendinaga)

John Charlesworth died in his sleep at his home, 21 North Front Street, on Friday, Dec. 7th.

Born in Tyendinaga Township, the late Mr. Charlesworth had reached the advanced age of ninety six years. He was a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. William Charlesworth. For many years he was engaged in farming in Tyendinaga Township and fifteen years ago he came to reside in this city. He was a member of St. Thomas' Anglican Church and fraternally he was a member of the Orange Order.

Mr. Charlesworth never married and is survived by four nephews, John Waterhouse, Prince Edward County; Fred Charlesworth, Percy Charlesworth and Mac McLaren, all of Frankford; seven nieces, Mrs. William Ralph, Mrs. Cecil Ralph, Mrs. Maude Thompson, and Mrs. Gladys Baker, all of Toronto, Mrs. George Wilson and Mrs. John Portt, both of Windsor and Mrs. Emma Roberts, Cobourg.

Resting at the Martin Funeral Home, Church Street, the funeral announcement is made in this issue.

LATE ROY WELBOURN
(Rawdon)

Rawdon, Dec. 8th (Special)—A large concourse of friends and relatives gathered in Bethel United Church on Wednesday afternoon, December 5th to pay their last tributes of respect to a highly esteemed citizen, Roy Welbourn. People from all nearby points were in attendance and a large number stood throughout the service as the seating capacity was not equal to the attendance.

The Rev. T. F. Townsend, B.A., B.D., brought a comforting message to the bereaved based on the Scripture passage "My Friend Lazaraus Sleepeth," found in St. John's gospel. The pastor spoke of the high devotion to duty of the deceased and of his genuine interest in the development of the Sunday School.

Mrs. Harold Elliott presided at the piano and the congregational hymns were "The Lord's My Shepherd" and "Forever With The Lord."

Mrs. Walter Warren rendered a vocal solo "Good night here and good morning up there."

Beautiful floral tributes covered the casket and included one from the Bethel Sunday School, as Mr. Welbourn had been the efficient superintendent and from the School Board as he had served as a trustee in the Fourth Line School.

The bearers were Messrs. Charles Morton, Ross Hoard, James Warren, B. C. Tucker, George Watson and William Heath.

The interment took place in Bethel Cemetery.

Two sisters, Mrs. G. W. Booth and Mrs. T. Smith, Toronto, attended the obsequies.

Deepest sympathy is extended to Mrs. Welbourn and daughters in their sad bereavement, also his mother, Mrs. Marshall of Toronto, formerly Amy Elizabeth Lyons Welbourn, who was unable to attend because of illness.

LATE JAMES WILLIAM ROSEVEAR
(Belleville-Cannifton)

The funeral of James William Rosevear, late residence, 154 Moira Street east, took place from the home of his sister, Mrs. Walter Thomas at Cannifton on Friday afternoon. The service there and at Elmwood cemetery was conducted by the Rev. J. R. Trumpour, pastor of Cannifton United Church.

The bearers were Bert Bleekman, Morley Bleekman, George Thomas, John Thomas, Allan Soble and Gerald Clement.

LATE MISS LUCY M. AULL

In the chapel at the Martin Funeral Home, Church Street, on Friday evening service for the late Miss Lucy Minetta Aull, late residence 16 Forin Street, was conducted by the Rev. D. C. Amos, minister of Bridge Street United Church. Many friends were present at the service.

Later the body was forwarded to Toronto where interment will take place today at Mount Pleasant cemetery.

MRS. CATHERINE STARK

After an illness extending over six years Mrs. Catherine Stark, 8 Wickett Street, and widow of Andrew Stark, died in the Belleville General Hospital Saturday morning.

The late Mrs. Stark was born 77 years ago at Birkenhead, England, and was a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Hunt. For a time she lived in Montreal and for the past thirty years she made her home in this city. She was a member of Bridge Street United Church.

Surviving her are two daughters, Mrs. Melville Robinson, Toronto, and Mrs. Margerite Finlay, Belleville; three sons, Gordon Stark, California; Russell Stark and Lorne Stark, both of Belleville; two sisters, Mrs. E Ethier, Belleville, and a sister in Birkenhead, England; five brothers all in Birkenhead, England. Her husband lost his life while in action during the First Great War in 1916.

Resting at the Martin Funeral Home, Church Street; the funeral announcement is made in this issue.

LATE MRS. MINNIE KEHOE

The funeral of Mrs. Minnie (Murphy) Kehoe, widow of Owen Kehoe and late of this city, took place Friday morning from the home of her nephew, Mr. John McDonnell, Trenton, to the Church of St. Peter-in-Chains where Requiem Mass was celebrated by the Rev. Father LaMarsh.

Entombment took place at Mount Calvary Cemetery, Trenton.

The bearers were Edward Finnlan, Lambert Whaley, Patrick Macaulay, Joseph Miron, Gerald McDonald and R. Carey.

Allowances Paid to Wards Of C.A.S. Spent on "Extras" Superintendent Tells Council

Correcting what he felt was a wrong impression, Mr. Tom Ruston, superintendent of the Children's Aid Society here told the Hastings County Council on Friday that family allowances paid by the Dominion Government to wards of his society are being spent on "extras" for the children and not on their maintenance or care.

In his organization, Mr. Ruston pointed out, officials have set up a separate set of books and a special bank account to take care of the administration of the allowances paid to wards of the Society.

He stressed the fact that where a child is placed in a home which is not being paid maintenance, the people can claim the family allowance for the child and they will be paid directly to the family involved.

"Questions have been asked," Mr. Ruston said, "as to what is being done with the family allowance money. Is it being spent on the children? Is it used as a refund to compensate the municipalities?

"My reply is that none of these things are done. The Act provides the foster parents can be paid up to $4 monthly for maintenance of a child. The family allowances can be spent on music, education and equipment, toys such as hockey sticks, etc. The Dominion government enforces the point that the family allowance money must be spent on the child and not for child service."

No Action Taken.

During the closing business session, the county council voted "no action" on a recommendation that outside assistance be brought in to help the new treasurer install a new system of book keeping. At the same time it unanimously endorsed a motion that the new system be installed in the treasurer's office.

Members felt that the new treasurer with a new set of books could inaugurate his own system.

However, it was recommended that the Department of Municipal Affairs could be called in to assist the treasurer with the system should he find himself in difficulties. This was being done in several parts of the province and Hastings County could avail itself of the opportunity.

Snow removal grants of $75 each were paid to the following townships; Dungannon, Wollaston, Mayo, Limerick, Tudor, Cashel and Carlow, the money to be refunded to the county should it not be used for the purpose intended.

Grants Made.

A grant of $40 each was given to the boy and girl who will represent the county at the annual Congress of the International 4-H Clubs in Chicago. The Humane Society received a grant of $100 as did the Belleville Film Council after considerable discussion.

Action on the proposed grant to the Eastern Ontario Tuberculosis Association of $30,000 was laid over to the January session.

Deputy Reeve Jack Morrison, Rawdon township speaking on the report of the House of Refuge stated that he with his committee had visited several county homes in the province and that of Hastings compared favorably with the best of them. "The farm here," he said "was being operated in a very capable manner, something that was missing in several of the places the committee visited." He advocated the enlarging and improvement of the property in the near future.

Desperately Crowded.

The County Home here is desperately crowded, housing 100 inmates in a space designed for a much smaller number. His committee suggested that some consideration be given the building program so as to provide some much needed accommodation.

The farm here was handicapped this year by insufficient pasture. At present some pasture was rented but it was still insufficient for the number of cattle owned by the Home.

Warden Fred Wilson in his closing remarks asked for the same splendid co-operation on the part of council for the incoming warden as was given him during the current year. "No finer co-operation was ever given any warden of this county than I received this year and I really and truly appreciate it."

He deplored the fact that some circles were of the opinion that municipal government could be dispensed with. "No better government can be found and no people govern better than do members of county councils," he said.

Hastings County, the warden stated, is doing a large business. Expenditure on roads alone per year is over $100,000 and that in itself is a large item. Committees were always on the job and have done their work exceptionally well."

"Nothing in my life will ever overshadow the honor paid me by this council in electing me warden for the year 1945," the warden concluded. Council adjourned to meet on January 15.

Slippery Roads Believed Cause Of Two Accidents

Slippery highway conditions are believed indirectly responsible for two highway accidents which occurred over the night resulting in extensive damage to the two involved vehicles.

Alton Stapley, Stirling, was driving toward Belleville on Highway No. 14 when approximately one mile west of Foxboro his vehicle went into a skid and continued 500 feet along the highway knocking over a highway sign and damaging a telephone pole before coming to a stop. Considerable body and fender damage resulted to the vehicle, according to police who investigated the accident.

In another auto accident a car belonging to the R.C.A.F. at Picton is reported to have gone out of control at what is known as the Mohawk turn on Highway No. 2 east of Belleville. The car is believed to have rolled over several times before coming to rest. Driver of the vehicle suffered face lacerations, it was reported.

Commission Holds Regular Meeting

Feeling that in addition to its activities toward effecting the location of new industries in Belleville that the Industrial Commission should take a greater interest in the industries which are already located in the city was voiced by Mayor Frank S. Follwell at the regular monthly meeting of the Industrial Commission held in the Chamber of Commerce building Friday evening.

Following up his reference to the above suggestion, Mayor Follwell considered it would be a splendid idea if the incoming industrial commission would contact local industries once each month. It was also the feeling of Industrial Commission chairman Robert A. Pringle that the commission should take on extra work.

A banquet in honor of Mr. Arthur Pellow, manager of the Consolidated Optical Company, will be tendered some time in the near future, it was decided by commission members. Mr. Pellow, it was stated, will retire from his present managerial position with the new year and will return to his home in the United States. Attending the banquet will be members of council, directors of the Chamber of Commerce and members of the commission.

Expression of regret from Canadian National Railways officials re the illness of Mr. J. Owen Herity, industrial commissioner, was heard at the meeting with the reading of letters from S. J. Raymond, industrial and joint facility commissioner for the C.N.R., and other officials. Verbal tribute to Mr. Herity from commission members was also heard, it being that the general public had no idea of the amount of work done by Mr. Herity as commissioner. "Mr. Herity has always had the welfare of this city at heart," assured commission member J. B. Boyce.

Mourning Dove Is Wintering With Pigeons

Believed to be another of nature's phenomenon in this district, a male mourning dove is spending the winter or at least the early part of it, with a flock of domestic pigeons on Cannifton Road, in the township of Thurlow.

The pigeons are the property of Colon Burnham, R.R. 6, who reports that his mourning dove roosts and eats with his pigeons and accompanies them during the day on their flights. Known to be a cousin of the pigeon family, this is believed to be the only case reported where these two families have decided to ease the housing shortage by uniting their flocks.

Beyond Dreams of Avarice Are Prices Asked by Shops

By JEAN MEEGAN

New York, Dec. 8 (AP)— Any one who ever has longed for a whiff of the rarefied air of Fifth Avenue's "exclusive" shops now may enter in comfort. The old trading posts of the Park Avenue patricians are teeming with the "public" this Christmas tide.

Lavish Spenders

At fabulous jewellery shops, ancient doormen draped in maroon livery mutter "Where do you come from?" as they admit new hordes who cheerfully plank down hundreds of dollars for the most improbable purchases.

Nothing is irresistibly cheap in this neighborhood. A little boy's linen suit is marked $32.50 at a Fifth Avenue children's shop—of course it's hand-made, as if the little boy cares. A department store has men's pyjamas with robes to match for $150.

One perfumer is advertising "the world's costliest perfume" without bothering to mention the price. The idea probably is if you have to ask "how much?" you can't afford it.

Costly Fripperies

A single sable skin can be had for $1,500. Patrons must do more than stare at them because new shipments have just arrived from Russia. There are nightgowns in the same emporium for $95; bathrobes as high as $225.

Some financier—customer is not a strong enough word—undoubtedly will go for the $1,200 couch cover and pillow slip in the comfort corner of another department store; or one of the $260 pocket books; or something really useful like a $1,936 silver fish platter.

If you want to do handsomely by some ten-year-old there are $20 slips at a children's shop and $30 sweaters.

Ridiculous Prices

Occasionally, somebody conservative balks. One jewellery store where ordinary working people used to be able to enter without feeling unduly self-conscious, is featuring a gold lapel trinket for $90. "Why, it's the kind of a thing you'd give somebody you didn't know very well," a shocked shopper gasped.

A woman peering at a $155 slack suit said: "The whole thing's gone cuckoo." Somebody didn't think so....the suit was gone the next day. A man examining the $150 price tag on a gold key chain dryly commented: "Inflation indeed is an uncertain term."

Wooden Gifts are Featured For Christmas Trade in London

By FLORA LEWIS

London (AP)—Britain's first peace time Christmas in six years will be a wooden and paper one.

Toys, trays, and book-ends of wood are about all crowds thronging through London's stores can find to fill their Christmas lists.

And for tree trimmings — scraps of colored paper and white or yellow candles.

Since housewives know that sparsely filled shelves are bound to empty quickly, Christmas shopping started early.

Most of the stores made some effort to decorate. One has bits of red and green paper around the pillars. Another, one of the more exclusive, has found some scrubby little trees to set up in its toy department. Their branches have clearly borne the joys of more than one past Christmas.

New War Toys

Toys consist of wooden trucks, carts, animals, blocks and little alphabet games. There are plenty of model airplanes for lads with their hearts on the skies but there are few model tanks, soldier dolls or other reminders of grim days.

There are no mechanical toys and very little sports equipment. Electric trains, roller skates or bicycles are out of the question.

For young ladies of two to 12, there are pink and blackfaced dolls of cotton. Though none has delicate porcelain noses or really golden curls, they are undoubtedly just as lovable companions.

Prices are fabulously high. A tiny puff of cotton that looks like a cat is $3. Crepe paper hats—the kind that used to cost five or ten cents each—are 50 and 75 cents.

Clothes are impossible to think of as Christmas gifts. They all take coupons, which are precious to threadbare Britons.

The joking gift-giver can find a few fancy gewgaws that should make for merriment on Dec. 25, however. Pink and white lace garters or daring red satin ones are on sale for about $1.50.

Housewives are already collecting staple rations for Christmas dinner, but there will be very few turkeys or chickens.

Whisky and gin is likely to be just as hard to ferret out at yuletide as it is now. But Britain is planning on a merry, peaceful Christmas.

ONCE WORTHLESS NOW MARKETABLE

Vancouver (CP)—Skins of the hair seal, once considered worthless, now have a market value considerably above the bounty value of $5 a seal, paid by the Dominion government. Bounties have been paid this year in British Columbia for 3,500 seals.

Markets for the skins are in Alaska and Yukon where Indians make them into parkas, moccasins and fur clothing, both for their own and tourist consumption. Black and silver furs have a higher market value than yellow ones. Baby and unborn seals are also in demand.

To Take Services

H/Major Rev. S. Farley, M. A., who has been invited by the Kirk-Session of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church to act as locum-tenens during the regretted illness of its minister, the Rev. J. G. Hornsby.

Major Farley is a graduate in Arts of Princeton University, and in Theology of Edinburgh University. His first charge was Collingwood, Ont., where he served from 1916 to 1925. From 1925 to 1941 he was minister of First Presbyterian Church, Regina, Sask. He enlisted at the outbreak of recent war in the Chaplains' Service and served as District Chaplain for Protestant personnel at M.D. No. 10, Manitoba; District No. 12, Saskatchewan and District No. 1, London.

He will begin his interim ministry tomorrow at St. Andrew's and preach at 11 a.m. and 7 p.m. His morning topic will be an Advent theme "The Silent Years of Christ." At 7 p.m. his topic will be "Building a New World."

Whitefish Spawn Up to Average

Collingwood, Dec. 8 (CP)— A better-than-average catch was reported today by George Andrews, Superintendent of the Ontario Government fish hatcheries here, as he and his staff completed their annual fall hunt for whitefish spawn.

Mr. Andrews said the spawn-gatherers brought in more than 50,000,000 whitefish eggs from both shores of the Georgian Bay. He expected another 5,000,000 would be added to this total when independent spawn collectors send in their returns.

In the fish-hatching business for more than 25 years, Mr. Andrews is not pessimistic about the future of the commercial fishing industry in the bay.

"Of course we hatch only whitefish and pickerel in the Collingwood hatchery, but there seem to be plenty of fish," he said. "Fifty million eggs is quite a batch and it took quite a few fish to lay them."

3 Firemen Hurt, 20 Persons Suffer From Fumes

Toronto, Dec. 8 (CP) — Three firemen were injured and a score of others affected by gas and smoke fumes when a two-storey drug warehouse and apartment building burned Thursday night. Damage in the two alarm fire was estimated at more than $15,000.

Fire department officials said the blaze which drove 20 persons to the street in their night attire, started when alcohol leaking through a broken bottle in the warehouse seeped through the floor and dropped onto a gas furnace in the basement.

The injured firemen were removed to hospital where they were treated for face and hand cuts caused by flying glass. Firemen rescued two small children and an 84-year-old man from the apartments above the warehouse.

National War Finance Committee Dissolved

Ottawa, Dec. 8 (CP)—Finance Minister Ilsley announced Friday in the Commons dissolution of the National War Finance Committee.

Paying high tribute to the work of the committee in selling government securities during the war, Mr. Ilsley said it was fitting it should end its active life following the greatest achievement —the ninth victory loan proceeds of which were in excess of $2,000,000,000. He also thanked all the organizations and individuals associated with the work of the committee.

Mr. Ilsley said war savings stamps and certificates would continue on sale in the regular channels at least until the fall of 1946. Consideration was being given to the promotion of some regular savings campaign when the installments on bond purchases in the ninth loan were paid up next autumn. The Minister said he was consulting provincial authorities about the desirability of continuing the sale of war savings stamps in the schools as a permanent means of teaching children saving habits.

BANCROFT

Lions Hear Talk On Delinquency

Bancroft, Dec. 8—The regular semi-monthly meeting of the Bancroft Lions was held Monday, December 3rd, the dinner being served by the W.A. of St. John's Anglican Church. A very good attendance was present comprising thirty-six members and six visitors.

The meeting was opened with President Lion Jack Follis in charge. Lion Harold Skuce ably introduced Bert Braden of Haliburton, Manager of The Erie Flooring and Wood Products Company, who gave an excellent address on Juvenile Delinquency. He emphatically emphasized that although the churches and schools of today bore the brunt of criticism in not properly training our youth it could be definitely traced to the individual home. He made it clear that unity in the home along with proper training and discipline placed the children on a firm footing towards success in later life.

Lion Walter Wiggins gave a short address endorsing Mr. Braden's speech and expressed his opinion, that he was certainly pleased that Bancroft had made the right move by inaugurating a service club and said he would be behind the project to the best of his ability.

Lion Oswold Fuller the "Tailtwister" caused some unusual excitement for a few minutes when after canvassing the club members and visitors on a draw on a Plymouth Rock rooster the winner being Lion "Bill" Morrison, he freed the frightened bird from its cage and the bird fluttered across the banquet tables only to be clutched by the Tailtwister's wife, who was assisting with the serving.

Lion Art Tomsett expressed his regret that he would be returning to Toronto for the winter months but wished the local club every success.

Lion Reg Wiggins, Chairman of the Attendance Committee made known that any member missing three consecutive meetings would be suspended.

President Jack made known of the New Year's Dance naming a committee of Jack Gordon, Cecil Wiggins, Theodore Tryon, Bert Ellerbeck and Cecil McAlpine.

Lion Ellis Mather gave his report on the Santa Claus endeavour and Lion Bob McLauchlin gave his report on equipment for boys' hockey and also arrangements for rink which vote carried in favor oof renting the rink Tuesday nights for hockey and Saturday mornings for practices.

A lengthy discussion followed in regards to raising funds by means of bingo. Although the vote carried in favor of bingo by a small margin, it was decided to waive the sport for the time being.

Prisoner Labels Former Premier War Criminal

By MORRIE LANDSBERG

Tokyo, Dec. 8 (AP)—Prison-bound Marquis Kido, Emperor Hirohito's closest war-time advisor, Friday labelled former Premier Hideko Tojo an "indisputable war criminal."

In an interview he termed Prince Fumimaro Konoye a "border-line case" and spoke out strongly against any Allied move to place Hirohito himself on trial.

Kido reports that the Emperor would abdicate. He said Hirohito had not indicated to him at any time that he would renounce the throne.

The short, 56-year-old former Lord Keeper of the Privy Seal declared that by Japanese interpretation of what constitutes a war criminal, "I am not guilty." Kido was named in a new list of nine war crimes suspects issued by Gen. MacArthur yesterday.

"I have nothing to hide," the Marquis said at his hillside home near the farm village of Tamamura, 22 miles from Tokyo.

"Before the court I will speak frankly and I will speak the truth. I feel responsible politically but I do not think I committed any crimes."

The black-robed Kido showed unshaken loyalty to the Emperor as he pleaded that Hirohito was not responsible for the outbreak or prosecution of a war which, he said, the imperial ruler wanted to conclude at several stages of the hostilities.

Documents, Which Identify Artisan As Long-Missing Archduke, Ruled Authentic by Norwegian Courts

By NED NORDNESS

Oslo, Dec. 8 (AP)—Documents identifying a humble Christiansand artisan as the long-missing Archduke of Johann Salvatore von Toscana have been ruled authentic by Norwegian courts and, as a result, at least two Norwegian pretenders claim today to be the rightful heirs to the Hapsburg dynasty.

The documents also have added another chapter to the romance of Mayerling—and an anti-climatic one. The papers which identify one Hugo Koehler, who died last may in Christiansand, as the missing Archduke, had this to say of the Mayerling story:

It was not a romantic suicide pact which led to the deaths of Crown Prince Rudolf of Austria and his beloved, Baroness Maria Vetsera, in a shooting lodge at Mayerling in 1899. The Crown Prince, son of Emperor Franz Josef of Austria, these documents say, was clouted on the head with a champagne bottle wielded by the Baroness and died of his injuries—and the Baroness then was shot to death by the Crown Prince's servant.

Counsel for the heirs of Hugo Koehler produced in the Norwegian courts documents identifying him as the Archduke Johann Salvatore Von Toscana, son of Grand Duke Ferdinand and nephew of Emperor Franz Josef. The Archduke had been supposed drowned in the North Sea in 1891.

The courts employed experts and established the authenticity of the documents presented by the heirs—although the action did not rule on whether Koehler in reality was the long-missing heir to the Austrian throne, and not Archduke Otto.

The heirs must bring their case before an Austrian estate court for final settlement.

96 P.C. of Claims Are Disallowed

Windsor, Dec. 8 (CP)— Since the beginning of labor disputes in Windsor three months ago, 5,000 claims for unemployment insurance benefits have been made by employees without work because of strikes and 96 per cent of these have been disallowed, it was announced Friday.

"This disqualification will last as long as the stoppage of work continues, or, in other words, until there is a general resumption of work," said Hugh Stratton, Windsor manager of the National Employment Service and the Unemployment Insurance Commission.

The four per cent whose claims are being paid are employees specifically excluded from collective bargaining agreement between the strike-bound Ford Motor Company of Canada, Ltd., and the United Automobile Workers of Canada (C.I.O.), Stratton said. Among them are plant protection employees, foremen and assistant foremen.

SHORTAGE OF INSULIN

Guelph, Dec. 8 (CP)—An acute shortage of insulin may develop "within the next dozen years," Dr. C. H. Best, co-discoverer of insulin with the late Sir Frederick Banting, told the student body of the Ontario Agriculture College.

Early Mailing

Need of early mailing has been stressed in respect to Christmas parcels and letters and cards so that they may be delivered before Christmas Day. On that day there will be no mail delivery and that has to be taken into account in deciding when to post.

Mail for the United States should be in the mails by December 9th. Other deadlines for delivery are: For British Columbia Dec. 14th., for Alberta and Saskatchewan Dec. 15th., for Manitoba and the Maritimes the parcels and mail should be posted by Dec. 16th., with Dec. 17th. the deadline for Ontario and Quebec.

This means that the postal service is right no wentering the busiest season of the year. From now until December 17th. will be crowded an immense amount of mail and parcels into post offices and mail cars and postal trucks and into express trucks.

With this first Christmas since the close of the war and with so many preparations for a very merry Yuletide, there are prospects of an unprecedented volume of parcels and letters moving across the Dominion into the thousands of offices from which they will be distributed to their addresses.

The public has in its power to lighten the task of the postal services at this time of intense activity and should lose no time in expediting parcels by mail or express and letters by mail so that there will be no disappointments through parcels and letters reaching their destination too late for the festive occasion.

Flow of Parcels Overseas

Canadians have been busy this year sending parcels overseas in greater volume than ever in the war years even though very many thousands of Canadians have come home from overseas. Lifting of restrictions on the weight of parcels and other regulations has brought a very great increase in the volume going across the Atlantic.

At the same time there is a corresponding increase in the volume of mail from the other side to Canada.

The men who are still overseas are not being forgotten, the evidence being that more than before the men in Europe are being remembered by their friends in Canada.

Closer relations too have been cemented between the people of Britain and Canada through the comradeships and friendships formed between Britons and Canadians while the latter were overseas. This has undoubtedly helped to swell the holiday mail for Britain.

Postal Rates

Canadians will welcome the proposed reduction in ordinary postal rates whatever it may be and in the proposed return to the two deliveries a day, which formerly were made until the war demands caused the limitation to one delivery daily.

These changes are the signs that the world has passed from the stage of war to that of peace.

But postal business will return not entirely to pre-war conditions. With the war came a great advance in the use of airmail and this will not be forgotten in an era which will find the plane more and more in operation.

Economic Discussions

With the conclusion of the U.K.-U.S. economic discussions in Washington the path is cleared for the inauguration of the contemplated discussions in this field between the United Kingdom and Canadian Governments.

As a first step towards this a party of senior representatives of the United Kingdom Treasury and Board of Trade, who have been taking part in the discussions in Washington, will visit Ottawa over the weekend.

The object of this visit will be to discuss and to report on the outcome of the negotiations in Washington and to have exploratory and preliminary conversations on the outstanding United Kingdom-Canadian economic problems.

It is expected that, following the above, a detailed study of the situation will be made, which will in turn be followed subsequently by more formal discussions. These are likely to take place in Ottawa shortly.

London's Little Shrines

(Manchester Guardian)

Keats' house in Hampstead having been reopened, one's thoughts turn to what has happened to the many other much-visited houses in London where great writers and artists lived. Dr. Johnson's house in Gough Square, which was used for a time by the National Fire Service, was damaged by bomb, but not badly. It is still closed awaiting licence for repair work. The house in Doughty street where Dickens lived (and from which he sometimes strolled at night to Gadshill, in Kent) is uninjured, but "closed till further notice," as a message on the door informs you.

Carlyle's house in Cheyne Row, Chelsea, is safe but not yet reopened to the public.

Queen's House, in Cheyne Walk, where Rossetti held his court of Pre-Raphaelites is still there with its beautiful gates and tall gate-pillars, and so is, in the same delectable neighborhood, Whistler's "White House" and Lindsey House, where he painted many famous pictures.

Thackeray's houses in Young Street, Kensington, and in Kensington Palace Gardens have survived, but that characteristic, small, shabby brick house in Wine Office Court, off Fleet Street, where Goldsmith lodged, was destroyed. Lamb's birthplace in the Temple, like many another literary and legal shrine in that historic precinct of the law, is now dust and ashes.

New Battleship

(Edinburgh Scotsman)

Britain's largest battleship, the 60,000-ton H.M.S. Vanguard, is scheduled to leave John Brown's fitting-out basin at Clydebank in March. The 5,000 men and women engaged in fitting her out have made another shipbuilding record by performing in one year what would normally have been accomplished in two and a half years.

Almost every district in Britain manufactured a part for the mighty warship. On Saturday the finishing touches were being put to her 600 miles of electric cables, 1,016 telephones, 1,000 loud speakers, and radar equipment.

The amenities include a school, a cinema, a church, a brewery, a newspaper office, and a shop. Facilities will be available for the manufacture of about one ton of ice cream daily for the crew.

There is work for many months ahead in the construction of new tonnage at Clydebank. The keel of a 1,000 Cunarder was laid down recently.

As soon as space is available, a new 30,000-ton Cunarder will be started next year.

Santa Claus

(Halifax Herald)

What child has ever been injured, mentally or morally, by his belief in Santa Claus? Is there anything in life more precious than a child's imagination? Every child has its private little dream-world, peopled with the images of its awakening creative faculty. If it hasn't, it is not a normal, healthy child.

Abolish Santa Claus? Destroy that symbol of love expressing parental affection and general kindliness, generosity and practical goodwill? A thousand times, no!

In a world of chaos created by greed and cruelty, Santa Claus, personification of good-will, is needed more than ever.

LOOKING BACKWARDS

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS.

20 YEARS AGO

DEC. 8TH., 1925

Belleville has chosen Robert J. E. Graham, barrister, over Harry Greenleaf, as Mayor for the year 1926 and has selected what appears to be one of the strongest and youngest councils in many years. Only one of last year's council was returned in the person of Robert Goudy, who served part of last year. The bylaw to reduce the council to nine members for a three year term was defeated, the vote being 1644 in favor and 1740 against. The bylaw to lease the gas works to an English Company for thirty years carried by 1071 votes; the vote being 2224 for and 1153 against. The votes cast for Mayor were 2372 for Graham and 1355 for Greenleaf. The aldermen elected ran in the following order: Wilmot, Duff, MacConnell, Wotten, G. R. Sinclair, Dr. Proctor, Hyde, Goudy, Cherry, Walker, A. B. Collins and J. L. R. Gorman. The following candidates for aldermen were defeated: Treverton, Rollins, Patterson, Macaulay, Tice, Foster, Ruttan, Thompson, Rowsome, A. H. Ketcheson, Panter, P. Harrison, Robinson, G. E. Ketcheson, D. Harrison, Dawes, Bumstead, Parish and Ashley. For public school trustee, Mrs. J. A. McFee defeated Dr. McCreary in Samson Ward by 106 votes, and in Bleecker Ward for school trustee, W. Harvey defeated Roland Pearce by 117 votes.

Public School Inspector John Johnston went to Madoc today to superintend the examinations at the Model School in that village.

Mr. W. W. Power has returned to the city. The Trilby Company, for which he was advance agent, has closed. The company found times very hard through the New England States.

Police Magistrate Gordon of Trenton was in town today.

Washington Spotlight

By CLYDE BLACKBURN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Washington, Dec. 7 (CP)—Communist Party pickets have returned to pavements near the White House—where they were active up to the moment Hitler attacked Russia and made the Soviet people allies of Britain and the United States.

Then the bitter attacks of the local Communists against American aid to Britain in what they called "an imperialistic war" disappeared like magic.

The pickets who marched along Pennsylvania Avenue with their banners went away for the duration. Now their friends are back on the avenue just a block from the White House where they march in front of the State Department with placards demanding dismissal of State Secretary Byrnes and "hands off China."

Moscow accepts no responsibility for these activities and perhaps frowns on them. But demonstrations of the revived American Communist Party here and elsewhere, designed to embarrass the administration, are coupled in the public mind with the fact that this administration and its friends are embarrassed right now by the attitude of the Communist government in Moscow.

The Washington picketers leave no doubt of their origin. Their placards are plainly marked "Communist Party of the District of Columbia."

Newspapers which charged President Roosevelt's new deal with having helped to build United States labor organizations to a position of power and authority now are praising President Truman for initiating what they claim to be the first White House move in 14 years to curb labor.

They are supporting the President's plea for legislation to force management and labor to submit their disputes to a fact-finding committee and thus delay strikes for a 30-day cooling-off period before becoming effective.

When Washington's downtown streets were packed with a screaming mob of celebrants the night Japan surrendered extra newspaper editions appeared with sobering headlines announcing loss of the cruiser Indianapolis with 880 lives.

This week the brisk, 47-year-old commander of the Indianapolis, Capt. Charles B. McVay, told a grim-faced eight-man court-martial he was not guilty of failing to take evasive measures and of delaying the order to abandon ship when it was hit last July 30 en route from Guam to Leyte after delivering an atom bomb to the air force.

The court-martial promises to be long and dramatic.

Non-commissioned personnel seem to be the most amused among the crowds in the Senate caucus room each day during the congressional inquiry seeking to learn who was responsible for the Pearl Harbor disaster. Men accustomed to quaking in the presence of brass watch generals flinching under cross-examination by politicians and answering with a subservient "Yes, sir," or "no, sir."

15 INJURED

Vancouver, Dec. 8 (CP) —Fifteen persons were injured when a motorcar last night ploughed into a safety zone on Main Street, knocking down a crowd of about 20 waiting for a streetcar.

Mackenzie's Column

By DEWITT MACKENZIE

London, Dec. 8 (AP)—The major assault against the government by the Conservatives, under the leadership of Winston Churchill, didn't get the Tories very far—a result which the veteran Generalissimo, of course, had expected, since it was a foregone conclusion that the Socialists would defeat the motion of censure by a smashing majority.

I sat in the House of Commons gallery during the two-day debate and, while Mr. Churchill's personal contribution was impressive for its superb craftsmanship, it struck me that it didn't carry the conviction we've been used to getting from him. Still, it was like old times to watch him in action again on the floor of the House, as I first did 30 years ago.

Let's see, he would have been in his happy 40s then—a nice age at that, when you're old enough to have acquired wisdom and still young enough to want to climb fences. Mr. Churchill has not lost any of his punch with passing time, and the Labor members listened to him with vast respect, but I'm afraid he was trying to lay bricks with thin mortar.

However, that's neither here nor there. What we are concerned wtih is the significance of this reaffirmation of socialist strength. Where do we go from here?

Laborites Gain Confidence

Well, there can be no doubt that this battle royal will give Labor further confidence in pursuing its program of nationalization which the Conservatives declare means regimentation of the individual and inflation. Whatever the real meaning may be, the government undoubtedly is determined to keep forging ahead in moulding a socialist state during its five years of office, for it has its mandate from the voters.

We must recognize that the working people, and many of the middle class as well, are determined on betterment of their way of life. Workers such as the vast army of coal miners, who for generations have been under-privileged, never will abandon their fight.

At the same time there is uneasiness in Britain, even among many who support Labor, over this great experiment in Socialism. The majority of the people do not want to see it sway too far to the left. They do not want regimentation.

Some Britons fear that the United States will get the idea Britain is going extremist. That isn't a new fear, for I encountered it here on my last visit in 1942 when the Socialist movement already was showing much strength.

Uneasiness Understandable

This uneasiness is understandable when you remember that Britain has been one of the most Conservative countries in the world and only now has put the helm over. Just after the last war Socialism was so scorned and feared that its great leader, the late Ramsay MacDonald, whom I knew well, wasn't wanted on the premises of the local golf club in his little native fishing village of Lossiemouth in Scotland. Yet he went on to become Labor's first Prime Minister, though Labor was a minority party in the Commons, and he came to power because the strong Liberal party combined with the Socialists against the Tories.

The answer to this fear is that Britain wants American friendship. Apart from all other considerations, John Bull has been terribly hurt by the war, and he's feeling mighty lonely these days among the wrecks of the once prosperous countries of Western Europe.

140 Persons Living In S. Bandoeng Are Abducted

Batavia, Java, Dec. 8. (AP)—British authorities said Friday 140 Europeans, Dutch and Eurasians living in the Indonesian-held southern section of Bandoeng had been abducted in the last few days, while 500 other refugees were escorted out to safety by Indian troops.

Three Gurkhas were killed and nine wounded in the operation.

R.A.F. Thunderbolts planted 6,000 pounds of bombs on lakeside gun positions of Indonesian troops near Ambarawa which had been interfering with the evacuation of Allied prisoners of war and internees at that city in Central Java 20 miles south of Semarang.

A British officer and six men of a 10-man patrol were reported missing from a reconnaissance of a railway west of the naval base of Scerabaja yesterday. Pamphlets calling upon holdout Indonesians to yield were scattered by planes over Eastern Java.

DEMAND RANSOM

Chelsea, Mass., Dec. 8. (AP)—An unidentified woman last night demanded by telephone "more than $1,000" ransom for a six-month-old kidnapped son of a navy machinest who has never seen the child. Police said Mrs. James J. Carlan, mother of the child taken from his carriage a week ago Wednesday, received the call last Thursday.

WHAT MAKES TONSILS "BAD"?

I call tonsillectomy (the attempt to remove every bit of tonsil from the throat, whether by guillotine and snare or by dissection, or by "enucleation" or by any other method) atrocious. By that I mean to say it is savagely brutal treatment when applied in the ordinary case of enlarged (hypertrophied) tonsils or infected (diseased) tonsils. In exceptional instances such radical surgery is not only justifiable but indispensable treatment—for example, malignancy (cancer).

But I repeat with all possible emphasis, and I hope this comes to the attention of every physician or throat specialist who misleads patients about it, there is no scientific basis for the quack notion that it is necessary or advisable to attempt to remove or destroy every bit of tonsil tissue when treating enlarged (hypertrophied) or infected (septic focus) tonsils.

It would be as logical and as intelligent to extract all of the teeth in order to relieve the patient of a cavity in one tooth or an abscess or focus of infection at the root of one tooth.

If my tonsils or the tonsils of any one for whose well being I felt responsible were at stake, there probably wouldn't be any atrocity. If it were a child with hypertrophied or very large tonsils, a child too young to cooperate with the physician, I'd say okeh to clipping or slicing off a considerable portion of the enlarged tonsils with the tonsillotome, under general anesthesia.

For a child old enough to cooperate or for a youth or adult, with simple enlargement of the tonsils, I'd say wait a season or a year—unless obstruction of breathing were obviously handicapping health, and development or obstruction of Eustachian tubes (ventilating middle ear cavities) were impairing the hearing or contributing to earaches and middle ear inflammation or infection. In either event I'd say the patient should receive a series of X-ray treatments, especially if the hearing or ears are involved, or a series of diathermy (electrocoagulation) treatments by a physician skilled in the technique—which is far more difficult than any mere tonsil surgery.

Hypertrophy, prolonged swelling, overgrowth, enlargement of tonsils in children seems to be more or less normal, particularly during the winter season when the poor kids, even here in heaven where the sun shines pretty constantly the year around, are holed up, overdressed and in every way prevented from enjoying exposure, because their parents, guardians, teachers and physicians are benighted.

As a physician and surgeon I deliver a mean wood on the bowling green, but please remember, I'm telling you, not canvassing you for your trade. In my opinion (speaking as a one-horse-and-buggy doctor) removal of the entire tonsil or any attempt to do so, when there is reason to believe the tonsil has a nidus or focus of infection which is responsible for some systematic trouble such as arthritis, is not only blind guesswork but it subjects the patient to greater danger of serious setback in the systemic trouble than does diathermy treatment.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

Excess Acidity

I'll be grateful for your pamphlet dealing with excess acidity. Does smoking cause it? I smoke at least a pack a day, sometimes. (A.S.)

Answer—Smoking is one cause, especially smoking before or during a meal. Send stamped envelope bearing your address and ask for the pamphlet "Yankee Stomach."

Milk

Is it harmful to drink a glass of milk with each meal and a glassful in mid-afternoon? Is it all right for the milk to be condensed milk and water? How long can you drink milk like this without harmful effects? (F.W.)

Answer—A glass of milk five times a day (at any time you like) is approximately a quart and a half pint of milk, which would yield 800 calories—about half enough to prevent you from shrivelling away if you were to remain absolutely at rest in bed all the time, or nearly one-fourth enough to keep you fit and trim if you walk to and from work, school, business every day instead of riding, or if you do a reasonable amount of honest work with your own muscles or play your own game every day. I know of nothing better for health than the custom of polishing off a quart of pure fresh milk every day of your life. Condensed milk and water is a poor substitute for fresh milk.

INFORMATION ROUNDUP

What Vice President had his name changed?

Henry Wilson, Vice President of the United States under Grant from March 4, 1875, until his death November 22, 1875, was christened Jeremiah Jones Colbath.

He was born at Farmington, N. H., February 16, 1812, and spent his youth as a farm laborer.

When he became of age, with the approval of his parents he petitioned the New Hampshire legislature for permission to change his name to Henry Wilson.

He did not give the reason for the change and what prompted him to take this step is not known for certain. Probably he regarded the name Jeremiah Jones Colbath as too old-fashioned, and the fact that his father's first name was Wilson undoubtedly led him to choose that as his new surname. A story, perhaps apocryphal, says that in the library of Levi Woodbury to which he had access as a boy he read a biography of a man named Henry Wilson that made such an impression on him that he decided to adopt that name.

On July 6, 1833, the Governor of New Hampshire approved the following act of legislature "to alter the names of certain persons:"

"Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives in General Court convened, That the several persons herein named shall hereafter be called and known by the name which by this act they are respectively allowed to assume, . . . Jeremiah Colbath of Farmington may take the name of Henry Wilson; . . ."

In many reference works, Wilson's original name is misspelled "Colbaith;" the records show it was "Colbath." He was the eldest of eight sons and all his seven brothers retained the surname of their father.

The same year Wilson's name was changed he went to Natick, Mass., where he became a cobbler, schoolteacher, editor, shoe manufacturer and politician.

On Nov. 10, 1875, Vice President Wilson suffered a stroke of paralysis in the U. S. Capitol and was removed to the Vice President's Room, where he died twelve days later.

Discouraging Difficulties Overcome by Eldorado Pioneers Uranium Development Colorful Saga of Canadian Northland

By LESLIE McFARLANE

Every Canadian owns a share of the most important mine in the world.

The Eldorado Mine at Port Radium was taken over by the Canadian Government on January 28, 1944. In their ownership of Eldorado, Canadians share a great opportunity, because Eldorado is one of the two chief sources of the uranium upon which is based the vast program of American - Anglo - Canadian atomic research. They also share a heavy responsibility, because the results of that program may well dictate the future of humanity.

Three of Eldorado's "originals" still work at the mine. Jack Fox, Gordon Spence and Joe Belec went up to Great Bear Lake when the property was first opened up. They have seen it grow from a struggling little camp on the rocks to the orderly community that Port Radium is today. They know the history of the mine, for they shared the battle. They will tell you that few mines in Canada's history won through against greater obstacles. And they will tell you that if Eldorado is a priceless national asset today the fighting spirit of Gilbert LaBine made it so.

The pitchblende vein he found in the Great Bear Lake rock in May, 1930, was not the end of the long trail for LaBine. It was actually the beginning. He had found pitchblende, the raw stuff of radium and uranium. But it was 1,400 miles from the end of steel, the Eldorado treasury was short of money, there was no refinery in Canada to process the ore, no physicist in Canada knew the process of large-scale radium extraction, and the world market for radium was strictly controlled by foreign interests.

LaBine tackled each obstacle in its turn. The Dominion Department of Mines was persuaded to set up a pilot plant which proved the richness of the ore. A handpicked crew was sent to Great Bear Lake to begin work, a small plant was set up. Water transportation alone on the first 20 tons of ore sent to Ottawa cost $400 a ton.

Silver from the mine was sent to the Consolidated Mining and Smelting Company's smelter at Trail, B.C., and helped defray some of the operation costs. The public was slowly convinced that Eldorado was no wildcat venture and money came into the treasury. LaBine went to England and found Marcel Pochon at a small pitchblende prospect in Cornwall. Pochon was a physicist from the Curie Institute in Paris. LaBine showed him the samples, persuaded Pochon to come to Canada and take charge of a refinery to be built at Port Hope, Ontario.

This was the first stage of the battle—to prove that radium could be extracted from the Great Bear Lake ore. In 1933, with two-score men employed at the mine, 150 tons of handcobbed ore went to the refinery and the first radium element was produced at Port Hope.

But the world market was not yet open to Canadian radium. The answer was to produce it so cheaply that the market would have to open. An agency was established in England. LaBine tackled the transportation problem, biggest obstacle to lower costs. The answer to that was in the air. He had Robert Noorduyn design a Bellanca freighter, biggest plane seen in the Northland up to that time. It was operated for the company by Mackenzie Air Services, with Leigh Britnell as pilot, and the customs and excise duty alone cost $12,000, which was paid under protest. But the big freighter enabled Eldorado to bring men and machinery to the property and to bring out the ore in the form of concentrates. With air freight costs cut in half, LaBine then went after water transportation.

Eldorado worker pours uranium ore concentrate into 100-pound bags for shipment to the refinery at Port Hope.

Oil from Fort Norman was the fuel for Eldorado's Diesel equipment, at a cost of $300 a year per horsepower. Eldorado acquired the Northern Transportation Company, built the first steel boats seen on the Mackenzie River—the Radium King and the Radium Queen. Pipe lines were laid over the first Bear River rapids, storage tanks were installed at both ends of the portage and at Fort Franklin. Water transportation costs were cut from $400 to $110 a ton.

Resourcefulness and hard work paid off. The refinery at Port Hope was doubled in size. Eldorado was able to sell radium at $30,000 a gram. There is a big business story behind Eldorado's entry into the world radium market but LaBine seldom discusses the details. "Well-entrenched interests offered the usual difficulties in competition," he remarks dryly and lets it go at that.

By 1939 the company was producing a substantial proportion of the Empire's needs so far as the radium element was concerned, as well as a surplus of uranium which was retained. There was a significant little paragraph in the report to shareholders that year. It read: "Efforts to develop new uses for our products have continued. These have been carried out by laboratories of various industries, by the National Research Council and the Department of Mines. Research has been most active with uranium, where much work has been done on the development of nuclear energy and the fission of uranium."

This was the first hint of the miracle to come. Eldorado shareholders were more concerned with the fact that the company had never been able to pay a dividend. Economic operation had cut the cost of radium to $25,000 a gram, but 90% of the company's business was export, and with the outbreak of war the Eldorado company had heavy going. There was enough raw material on hand to keep the refinery running, but it was necessary to close down the mine. The pumps stopped. Water poured into the workings. Two watchmen remained at Port Radium through the long sub-Arctic winter. Some people predicted that the mine would never open again.

Eldorado, in fact, was near bankruptcy. Inventories of radium and uranium were valued at $2 million, but the banks refused to accept them as collateral. Gilbert and Charles LaBine staked their personal fortunes and put up $800,000 to keep Eldorado afloat.

One of the reasons Canada became a centre of Allied atomic research during the war was because stocks of uranium were available. The other reasons were proximity to the United States effort, and the fact that work could be done in Canada free from bombing.

The "fission of uranium" mentioned in Eldorado's 1939 report was one of the momentous discoveries of all time. It was discovered by Hahn and Frisch and other scientists whose work was based on the findings of Professor Fermi, in Rome. Fermi's work developed from the researches of Lord Rutherford and his group at the Cavendish laboratories in Cambridge, world centre of nuclear research. The work of Lord Rutherford began at McGill University in 1900 and much of it was based on the discoveries of the French scientist Becquerel, who founded the science of radioactivity and inspired the early labors of Pierre and Marie Curie.

Atomic research had attracted the best scientific minds of all nations ever since Einstein had suggested mathematically that there was an incalculable supply of energy in matter, if it could be transformed. Einstein's theory of that relationship, simple in spite of the jests of those who never tried to understand it, was summed up in a brief formula—E equals MC^2—the energy content of a mass is equal to the mass multiplied by the velocity of light squared.

What Hahn and Frisch had done was show that the uranium atom could be split. The discovery threw the whole field of atomic research wide open, launched a scientific race without parallel because, with the outbreak of war, scientists realised that any nation which could develop atomic fission to the point where it could be applied and controlled would have the deadliest weapon ever known.

The science of radioactivity had shown that pitchblende gives off energy in a form similar to light, because the uranium atom is the most unstable of all atoms. That is why the physicists concentrated on uranium when they attacked the problem of splitting the atom and releasing the energy in its core.

They were dealing with the world of the invisible. A handful of matter contains 1,000,000,000,000,000,000,000,000 atoms. But there is something even smaller than the atom itself and that is the atom's nucleus, which in turn consists of protons and neutrons. Hydrogen is first in the list of elements because it contains one proton. Silver is 47th because its element has 47 protons. Uranium, with 92 protons, is 92nd. But there are three kinds of uranium atom. All have 92 protons and most uranium atoms have 146 neutrons. This gives it an atomic weight of 238 and this atom is called U-238. A very few uranium atoms have 142 neutrons — U-234. But there are uranium atoms with 143 neutrons—U-235. This is the atom that can be split.

What the scientists had to do was isolate the U1235 atom from the others. It could not be done chemically and there are 140 times as many U-238 atoms in any quantity of uranium as there are of U-235.

There was one method open to them. They knew the U-235 atom could be split by bombarding it with particles of energy known as neutrons. There was another method—to devise a way that would make the neutrons seek out the U-235 atoms and ignore the others. There was still another method—to discover some other atom that would split as easily as U-235.

These were the strange problems upon which atomic physicists were working during the war. Axis scientists worked as feverishly as did the scientists of the United Nations. Their battle was fought in deep secrecy. Billions of dollars were thrown into the struggle.

Almost the entire world's supply of "heavy water", used in the experiments to slow down the action of neutrons so they would attack U-235 atoms, had been smuggled out of Norway into France. Shortly before the fall of France the Earl of Suffolk, the modern Scarlet Pimpernel, smuggled a leading group of French scientists to England with the precious "heavy water". British atomic research moved from England to Canada to work in the Montreal laboratories of the National Research Council. Hundreds of workers, including scientists from Czechoslovakia, New Zealand, France, Great Britain and other Allied nations, worked on the atomic research projects. Findings were exchanged with researchers in the United States. When America entered the war the American-Anglo-Canadian atomic program became the biggest thing of its kind in scientific history, and the most secret. The vast project of Oak Ridge came into being. Another project was inaugurated on the Columbia River, in Oregon.

Internationally known scientists worked under two sets of assumed names—one name to be used in the East, the other in the West. Bodyguards accompanied them wherever they went. Workers were forbidden to even mention the word "uranium". Even the most innocent reference to U-235, heavy water, or atomic fission, from the radio, the pulpit, the press or a casual conversation could bring a swift visit from security officials.

The scientists solved all three methods of producing the chain reaction of uranium, which was the secret of the atomic bomb. Not only that — there were four possible methods of isolating U-235 and they solved all four.

Canada's uranium, as well as additional supplies brought from the Belgian Congo, was used in all the processes. The Eldorado mine was pumped out and reopened in 1942, under top priorities. Jack Fox and Gordon Spence and Joe Belec, all the men who went back to the mine under Ed Bolger's managership, were simply told that their jobs were important, as important as a soldier's job.

And as the Allied scientists saw success in view, holding their breath lest the cataclysmic crash of an atomic bomb from an Axis plane should tell them the race was lost, the few Canadian officials who shared the war's top secret, saw that Canada's uranium was Canada's responsibility, a trust for the future to be shared by all. A brief announcement on January 28, 1944, told that the Government had taken over the mine and refinery. No explanation was made. None could be made then. Now the world knows why.

So Port Radium, the secret settlement, emerges from behind the veil of mystery that hid it in the war years.

Canada, with the raw materials at hand, with a trained body of nuclear physicists, with a great atomic industrial project materializing at Chalk River, is in a strategic position among the nations. The incalculable energy of the uranium atom may yet be harnessed to build instead of being set loose to destroy. In the rocks of Eldorado may lie undreamed wonders of the future and the realization of men's mightiest hopes for a happier world.

This is a section of the refinery at Port Hope, Ontario, to which the uranium ore concentrate is taken from Port Radium in a trip lasting more than two months.

Queen Elizabeth Serenaded to Pier By Army Bands

By JOHN HAMILTON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

New York, Dec. 8 (CP) — One concerted cheer from several thousands Canadian throats signalled the arrival at pier 90 Friday of the liner Queen Elizabeth, making her first trip to New York with Canadian army and air force veterans of the war in Europe.

The great ship docked at 7 a.m., just as a gray dawn lifted over Manhattan's rain-swept skyscrapers, and possibly because of the hour and the weather, the thousands of returning veterans were unusually quiet, a contrast to the customary behavior of troops coming home.

Possibly contributing to the comparative quietude of the Canadians was the knowledge that they must remain aboard ship all of today, pending departure early tonight by special trains for their homes in Canada.

The decks of the great ship were jammed with troops and R. C. A. F. repatriates as she made her way up the Hudson River and into her slip in early-morning darkness. Men were bulging out of lifeboats, swinging on the rails, on every bit of deck.

Half-dressed members of the Canadian Women's Army Corps popped heads out of portholes all along the sides of the liner — swaying in rhythm with a United States army band on the pier.

For the United States army had produced its usual good show for home-coming troopships. A women's Army Corps band met the Queen Elizabeth in the lower harbor, escorting her up the river, and on the pier ready to play the vessel into the berth was Johnny Messener's swing band.

"Jersey Bounce," the band's first number, was appropriate — for the Canadians are to entrain from Jersey City across the Hudson for their homes in Canada. There followed "Lady Be Good," "June is Busting Out All Over" and other "hot" numbers.

The Canadians were cheerful. As a dozen tugs fussily pushed the 85,000-ton liner into her slip humorous comments were made from the decks where the men interestedly watched the operation.

To newspapermen on the pier one soldier called. "Is Mayor Houde here to meet us?"

Another, uninterested in Montreal's chief magistrate, wanted to know if "Willie" were on hand. "Willie," it developed, is Prime Minister Mackenzie King.

Cockroach Found In Dish of Fruit, 6 Prisoners Say

Windsor, Dec. 8 (CP)—Finding of a cockroach in a dish of fruit started a commotion at Essex County jail here during which a prisoner was struck in the face by a turnkey, six prisoners said Friday in a statement forwarded to the Windsor Daily Star. The outbreak, which occurred Nov. 26, ended only when officials threatened to use tear gas.

Jail Sheriff A. A. Marentette, in comment on the statement, said Inspector Thomas Gourlay of the Provincial Secretary's Department had replied to a report on the incident in which the inspector condemned the turnkey's action and recommended re-arrangement of the jail staff.

The commotion began when Fred Vancoughnett, 20, of Maidstone, near here, complained he has found a dead cockroach in his meal-time prunes. Vancoughnett, at the time, was awaiting transfer to Ontario Reformatory to serve a two-year automobile theft charge.

Marentette said turnkey Joseph Perron struck Morley Krete, 18, when Krete called him obscene names. Krete was awaiting transfer to Ontario Reformatory to serve 18 months for shopbreaking. Perron had been reprimanded.

The commotion took place six days after six men escaped from the jail. Five of them have since been returned to custody.

Inspector Gourlay's report said in part that "the report...would indicate that Krete and perhaps other inmates of your jail require some discipline."

325,450 Discharged From 3 Services May 1st to Dec. 1st

Ottawa, Dec. 8 (CP)— Discharge of another 13,272 men and women from Canada's armed forces during the week ended Dec. 1 was announced Friday by defence headquarters, bringing to 325,450 the total number of discharges from the three services since May 1.

The latest weekly figure compared with 13,180 discharged during the week ended Nov. 24 and included 3,256 from the navy, 7,220 from the army and 2,796 from the R.C.A.F.

Discharges by services to date now total 50,188 from the navy, 171,137 from the army and 104,125 from the air force.

Majority of U.S. Press Favors Loan to Britain

New York, Dec. 7 —(AP)— A sampling of United States editorial pages today showed an overwhelming majority of commenting newspapers in favor of the proposed loan to Britain as necessary to a revival of world trade and the financial recovery of an invaluable ally.

Most newspapers said the loan was greatly to the United States' own advantage since revival of the British economy would provide a great market for American goods.

The Denver Post, however, expressed opposition to the loan. "Now you know what the bunco experts mean when they say 'once a sucker,'" the Post commented editorially. "Only Congress can stop the international 'gimme' gang now."

The New York Times, urging Congress to ratify the agreement by an overwhelming vote, said Britain did not need dollars "for the purpose of carrying on social experiments and labor reforms at home — for that purpose the British government could use British pounds."

But dollars are needed, the Times said, "for the purpose of re-establishing Britain's position as a great purchaser of American and other foreign goods and a strong and healthy influence in the economics of the post-war world. Surely, judged by every possible standard, it is to our own definite advantage and self-interest to have her recover that position."

The Washington Post expressed belief that the most important purpose served by such a loan would be the implementation of master lend-lease agreements which committed the signing powers "to abandonment of discriminatory trade practices and reduction of trade barriers."

"The proposed agreement," the Post said, "assuredly would pave the way for development of multilateral trade on a non-discriminating basis—the goal of our own policy."

The Los Angeles Times, declaring that there should be "no quibbling" over granting of the loan, said "a strong United Kingdom and a strong British Commonwealth are essential to world peace and the comfort and safety of the United States."

The Kansas City Star said the failure of Britain to come back into the world market would have been "a serious blow to American trade," and added that the terms of the proposed loan were "probably as satisfactory as political considerations would admit."

Britain needs dollars" for the purchase of raw materials to get her industries started," the Star said.

The New York Herald Tribune said the loan was a "not very onerous investment" in British economic recovery and more particularly "in the restoration of a more or less free world market," relieved of trade barriers and discriminations."

WILL HELP STRIKERS

Toronto, Dec. 8 (CP) — All working members in other Toronto bakeries will donate 10 per cent of their pay each week to support approximately 400 strikers at Brown's Bread, Ltd., a joint membership meeting of the two A.F.L. Unions conducting the strike, decided.

Capital Closeups

By JACK BRAYLEY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, Dec. 8 (CP) — Wearing scars and honors of battle, the three young airmen who visited the capital this week, obtained results faster than many professional lobbyists.

All plastic surgery cases, they wanted to wear their uniforms after discharge because of embarrassment at meeting the curious public gaze in mufti. Persons didn't stare at their disfigurement so much when they were in uniform, they said.

The airmen arrived Monday and got Flt. Lt. James Sinclair, former Adjutant of the City of Windsor Squadron and Liberal member for Vancouver north, to champion their cause.

Sinclair talked to Air Minister Gibson who flew to Trenton air station Tuesday to visit the plastic surgery ward. The airmen, in the meantime, talked to other members of the cabinet and the commons.

On Wednesday Sinclair asked a formal question about the matter and the Air Minister announced, amid general applause, that efforts were being made to make it possible for the airmen to wear their uniforms after discharge.

"Those chaps conducted one of the most successful lobbys in history," said Sinclair.

Preferring to remain anonymous, the trio similar to their nine colleagues, are all the victims of horrible burns, the result of crashing in flames after air battles.

All wore wigs and their faces, though badly scarred, are gradually and painfully being restored.

"We don't look so hot right now," said the leader cheerfully, "but in a couple of years we'll have our beauty back and we'll get a kick out of getting back into civilian clothes."

Gad sir! Another airman visitor to the Commons this week was the new chief of the Royal Air Force, Sir Arthur Tedder.

The Deputy Allied Commander in Europe was hardly distinguishable from a lowly "AC2" as he arrived wearing his famous wedge cap and a greatcoat covering his decorations.

A newspaperman, standing amid the gold encrusted hats of the Canadian air staff as they offered Sir Arthur a welcome, pointed out informatively to one of the Briton's aides that the wedge cap was "against regulations" for officers in the R.C.A.F.

"It is in R.A.F. too," confided the aide with a smile and a wink.

TO HOLD REUNION

Toronto, Dec. 8. (CP)— Members of the R.C.A.F.'s Buffalo squadron, fulfilling a pledge made nearly a year ago when the unit was busy plumping rockets into enemy targets, will hold a re-union dinner here Dec. 11. Flt. Lt. Vern Stevens, former squadron adjutant, is in charge of the dinner.

Implement Dealers Organize Association

On Wednesday evening, Dec. 5, the initial meeting of the Retail Implement Dealers' Association for District No. 10 was held in the form of a banquet at Trenton with a splendid attendance. District No. 10 includes all territory from Kingston on the east to Cobourg on the west.

The following companies were represented: International Harvester, Massey Harris, Cockshutt, J. I. Case, Ford and John Deere.

Mr. C. Cooper, President of District No. 1 along with Mr. Watson addressed the meeting. Field Supervisors from Massey Harris and International Harvester Companies spoke and expressed their wholehearted support.

The following comprise the executive for the ensuing year:

President, W. T. Elliott, Stirling; Vice President, A. P. Wilson, Grafton; Secretary Treasurer, Harry Blakely, Picton; Executive Committee: William Walmsley, Picton; H. L. Vancleaf, Picton; A. Smith, Baltimore.

GOVERNMENT WILL PAY

Toronto, Dec. 8 (CP)—The government will pay transportation for unemployed workers and their dependents from Oshawa to other centres where jobs are available for them it was announced Thursday.

Transportation is paid when the worker has arranged for employment.

Bart G. Sullivan said the plan included not only those who came to Oshawa as war workers but also those who had lived in Oshawa before the war.

Since VE-Day the government also has been paying the fare home for workers who came to Southern Ontario war plants from other parts of the province.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

Able Seaman Jim Price is at his home, MacDonald Ave., where he is awaiting his discharge.

Mrs. Charles Dalrymple, Pinnacle Street, is confined to the hospital with a broken arm.

Friends of Pte. G. Curry, Stone St., will be glad to learn that he has arrived on Queen Elizabeth.

Miss Joan Newman left yesterday for Toronto to enter in the Junior Championship Archery contest to be held next Thursday.

Word has been received that W. E. Robinson, Minneapolis, Minn., and formerly of Thomasburg, died in that city on Friday.

Sgt. Marie Duesberry, of the C.W.A.C., Ottawa, is spending the weekend at her home, Dundas Street.

Mrs. George Carver and baby son, Peter George Keith, are returning to the city tomorrow from Kingston.

Mrs. S. M. Richardson, Toronto, has returned to her home after a week's visit with Mrs. E. Myles, Victoria Avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Pybus, of Hamilton and Mr. and Mrs. A. Pybus, St. Catharines, visited with their sister, Mrs. C. D. Tice, on Friday.

Miss Jean Price is staying with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. S. J. Price, MacDonald Ave., for a week while teaching in a local school.

Word has been received today by Dr. Austin Walters that he has qualified and been approved as a specialist in general surgery by the Council of the Royal College of Physicians and Surgeons of Canada.

A most delightful chicken dinner was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Smith, Franklin Street, on Thursday evening. The acting hostess, Mrs. M. Duncan made the guests welcome. During the evening euchre was played and the lucky winners received prizes.

WEDDINGS

BAIRD—KILPATRICK

A very pretty wedding was solemnized at Tabernacle United Church on December 1, at two pm., when the Rev. J. W. Houston united in marriage Ruby May Kilpatrick, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Kilpatrick, of Belleville, and Sigmn. Arthur S. Baird, recently returned from overseas, and only son of Mr. and Mrs. William Baird, of Vancouver, B.C.

Wedding music was played by Mrs. M. P. Duff. Miss Barbara Diment sang very sweetly "The Lord's Prayer", and during the signing of the register "Ave Maria".

The bride, given in marriage by her father, made a pretty picture in a floor-length gown of white sheer and lace, with sweetheart neckline and long sleeves tapering to points over the wrists. Her finger-tip veil fell from a wreath of orange blossoms. She carried a bouquet of American Beauty roses. Her only ornament was a sweetheart locket, the gift of the groom.

Miss Muriel Peters, of Belleville, as maid-of-honor, looked charming in a floor-length gown of blue sheer with matching shoulder-length veil and carrying a nosegay of mauve and yellow baby 'mums.

Miss Bernice Kilpatrick, as her sister's junior bridesmaid, was very sweet in a floor-length gown of pink taffeta and matching shoulder-length veil. She carried a nosegay of white baby 'mums and snapdragons.

AB. Earl Vandervoort acted as groomsman and the ushers were Mr. James Thomson, of Madoc, and Mr. Don Harvey, of Bloomfield.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents for about forty guests. The bride's mother received in a street-length dress of fuchsia, with black accessories and a corsage of pink and white carnations. She was assisted by the bride's aunt, Mrs. Frank Palmer, of Ivanhoe, Ont., wearing lime green with brown accessories and a corsage of pink and white carnations.

Tea was poured by Mrs. Clinton Bird, of Belleville, the bride's aunt. The bride's table, covered with a lace cloth and centred with a three-tier wedding cake flanked with pink tapers, was set under a beautifully decorated archway of pink and white streamers.

The Misses Gena Norton, Verna Sherry, Thelma Mullett and Beverleigh Palmer acted as serviteurs with Mrs. Harold Mason in charge of the kitchen.

The bride wore a powder blue with brown accessories, a powder blue topcoat and a corsage of pink roses for a short wedding trip to Toronto. On their return they will spend a few days with the bride's parents, before leaving for Vancouver and an extended honeymoon to Seattle, Wash.

ENGLISH WIVES OF CANADIANS PROTEST LONG WAIT OVERSEAS

Women's Activities

ST. PAUL'S W.A.

Stirling. —St. Paul's W. A. ladies met at the home of Mrs. C. I. Hatton for their December meeting with the President, Mrs. R. B. Duffin, in the chair for the devotional and business portion of the meeting. Sixteen visiting calls were made during the previous month by Mrs. Armstrong and Mrs. Macklin as well as five cards sent by the Secretary. Mrs. H. West and Mrs. J. L. Good will be the Visiting Committee for December. The Treasurer's report was given also a report from Miss Caldwell on the Parsonage Committee.

Plans were made to hold the January meeting at the parsonage the second Tuesday of the month with the new executive in charge.

The new slate of officers are as follows:

President, Mrs. Gordon Bailey
1st Vice President, Mrs. Armstrong
2nd Vice President, Mrs. Walter Elliott
3rd Vice President, Mrs. Volney Richardson.
Secretary, Mrs. N. Wescott
Treasurer, Mrs. J. B. Thompson
Pianist, Mrs. Harold West.
Assistant Pianist, Mrs. M. Hick
Parsonage Committee, Mrs. A. E. Good, Mrs. Bradburn and Mrs. W. Elliott.

Mrs. J. L. Good as convener of the program carried out the theme of Christmas with suitable hymns and a Christmas scripture lesson. Mrs. Armstrong gave a message on "Crusade for Christ and His Kingdom" which will long be remembered by those present. Readings were given by Mrs. H. L. Fair, Mrs. J. L. Good and Mrs. Gordon Bailey.

Delicious refreshments were served at the close.

IVANHOE MISSION BAND

The Ivanhoe Mission Band was held on Saturday afternoon December 1, at the home of Carlyle Rollins. The members entertained the mothers and at two o'clock the meeting was opened with Doris Twiddy in charge. A few verses of the "First Nowell" were sung and the minutes of the last meeting were read by the Secretary.

The Mission Band purpose was repeated by the members and a story entitled "The Best Christmas Gift", was read by Shirley Reid. Doris Twiddy gave the "Call to Worship", and a verse of "Silent Night", was sung. Barbara Benson gave a recitation and the Scripture Reading found in Matthew 2: 1-12, was taken by Billy Rollins. A reading was given by Larry Mitz. Mrs. S. Prest spoke briefly to those who had so faithfully learned the "Ten Commandments" and a small gift was presented to them by the leader. After the meeting closed a bazaar followed with a table well laden with articles which the members had made, among which was a quilt of bluebird design. A dainty lunch was served by the hostess and a social time spent. Total proceeds of the day amounted to $12.72.

MARMORA CHAPTER I.O.D.E.

Marmora.—The members of Marmora Chapter, I.O.D.E., met at the home of Mrs. Hugh Forbes on Tuesday, Dec. 4, with Mrs. J. Reynolds presiding.

Mrs. A. Drew reported that a shipment was being sent this week to headquarters by the Knitting and Sewing Conveners. A Christmas box was also sent to the Glenbrook, the Chapter's adopted ship. The motion was passed to send $25.00 to the Legion to aid in packing Christmas boxes for Marmora and district. After concluding the business of the evening personal service bags were packed for the women of the Armed Forces in Britain.

The next meeting will be held in January, at the home of Miss K. Gaffney, Marmora. Mrs. Ford Woodhouse and Mrs. Fred Wells will be the hostesses.

ST. ANDREW'S, W.A.

Marmora.—Members of St. Andrew's Women's Association held a noon-time luncheon in the church hall on Tuesday which was well attended. Later in the afternoon the regular December meeting was held with the election of officers taking place.

Mrs. Kouri was in charge of the devotional period which was of a Christmas nature with hymns, scripture reading and lesson thoughts along this line. Mrs. Percy Gordon, Mrs. Garth Sabine and Mrs. F. Grant assisted with the program.

The plans for the Bazaar to be held on Friday, December 7, were completed and arrangements were made to serve a supper for the scholars of the Sunday School on Friday, December 21st.

Rev. E. M. Cadigan conducted the election of officers, which resulted as follows:

President, Mrs. Thomas Cousins.
Vice President, Mrs. Frank Grant.
Rec. Secretary, Mrs. R. Neal.
Fin. Secretary, Mrs. F. Sweet.
Treasurer, Mrs. Fred Wells.
Pianist, Mrs. L. Green.
Communion Committee, Mrs. F. Sweet and Mrs. E. C. Prentice.
Kitchen Committee, Mrs. Thomas Hannah, Mrs. H. Vanstone and Mrs. S. Henry.
Parsonage Committee, Mrs. H. W. Sabine, Mrs. H. R. Haacke, Mrs. H. C. Barlow, Mrs. W. J. Pack and Mrs. P. Gordon.
Sick and Visiting Committee, Mrs. H. Connor, Miss M. Brown, Mrs. G. Jarvis, Mrs. C. Airhart, Miss Flossie Boyd, Mrs. C. Wallbridge and Mrs. F. R. Wells.

ST. THOMAS Y.P.U.

On Wednesday evening the young people of St. Thomas' Church met in the parish hall. The excutive elected consisted of,

Honorary President, Rev. A. Smith.
President, Gordon Poste
Vice President, Barbara Casey
Secretary, Isobel Morton
Treasurer, Frances Ward
Program Convener, Austin Watkin.

Projects and policies for the year were discussed followed by a short program of a quiz contest led by Bill Navin, a Virginia reel led by Isobel Morton, singing and then refreshments.

Tabernacle S.S. Holds "At Home"

On Friday night the Tabernacle United Church Sunday School was "At Home" to the parents and friends. Interest in the event was manifested by the large crowds of visitors who crowded the Sunday School room to the doors.

Mr. A. D. Archibald, superintendent, opened the program by giving a hearty welcome to all present and then proceeded to give the parents an outline of the work being attempted by the school through the midweek activities of the various organizations. The evening was then turned over to the various departments of the school, each in turn gave a splendid example of the work being carried on under their individual leaders.

The beginners sang two Christmas solos, followed by a piano solo by Jimmie Houston. Miss Moorman's class gave "Christmas Acrostics" and Ralph Cornish and Robert Houston rendered instrumental music. A Canadian Christmas play was presented by Miss Licence's and Mr. Wynne's classes. Miss Joan Wynne and Miss Shirley Mott sang two delightful solos and Mr. Taylor's class, under the direction of Wesley Mifflin sang "School Days." Temperance posters and a play were presented by Mrs. Buchanan's class, directed by Mrs. Johnston. Mrs. Archibald's class sang and Bob Stewart played a piano solo. The Trail Rangers, directed by Mr. McClelland, and the C.G.I.T., directed by Mrs. Archibald, Miss Robson, Miss Licence, Miss Garrow and Miss MacLaren, took an active part in the program. Following the program the audience was given the opportunity of seeing a display of study books and displays by the Explorers and Trail Rangers.

HOLD TWO SISTERS

Windsor, Dec. 8—(CP)—Windsor police held for investigation today two sisters, natives of Saskatchewan, who they suspect of smoking marijuana a narcotic weed which is rolled into cigarets to produce what the underworld calls "reefers." The girls, one is 16 and the other 20, walked into the police station Thursday night, apparently under the influence of drugs, police said. They refused to identify themselves until yesterday.

Cannifton Y.P.U. Entertains Groups From the District

On Friday evening, Dec. 7, Cannifton Y.P.U. entertained members of eight local unions at a very enjoyable banquet and program. This was a yearly event prior to the war and those present last evening are hoping it will be established as such, again. Approximately one hundred and seventy were in attendance, representing Centenary, Gilead, Bethany, Foxboro, Carmel, Bridge Street, and Holloway Street, of Belleville and Stirling.

The banquet served by the ladies of Cannifton church measured up to their usual high standard and got things off to splendid start after which Rev. A. Lloyd Shorten, of Foxboro, led in a lively sing-song.

D. Williams Chairman

Chairman of the evening was Mr. Don Williams, president of the Bay of Quinte Conference Young People's Union, who brought greetings from the Conference Executive and expressed their satisfaction and pride in regard to the way in which Young People's work is progressing in this district.

A welcome was then extended by the president of Cannifton Y.P.U., Mr. Gordon Locklin.

Rev. Trumpour introduced the guest speaker, Rev. A. M. Laverty, of Stirling, who recently returned to his church in Stirling, after serving overseas as chaplain. In an intensely interesting and witty manner, Mr. Laverty told of the life of the army personnel while in preparation for, and then in action on and following D-Day. He paid tribute to the brilliant leadership given by Field Marshal Montgomery, whom he said personalized the whole plan for attack by establishing a bond between himself and his men. "Montgomery's use of the element of surprise was responsible for much of the success of the invasion," remarked Mr. Laverty.

Humorius Incidents

While telling of the serious side as well, he related many humorous incidents in the routine of their work and concluded his address with a description of the Communion Service he led in, following the 'Cease Fire' order, in which four hundred and fifty men participated, remembering those of their number who had paid the supreme sacrifice, but, who nevertheless, were one with them in Spirit.

Musical numbers given by Gordon Spafford, Wilma Swan, Garnet Sills, Harold McNish, and Marilyn Eggleton, and readings by Douglas Harder and Hilda Treverton, were greatly enjoyed and appreciated.

Vote of Thanks

Mr. Douglas Harder, president of South Hastings District Y.P.U., expressed the desire of the District Executive to give assistance to any union desiring help and also the wish of the Executive to visit as many Unions as possible.

A vote of thanks was tendered to Mr. Laverty, to those who took part in the program, and to the ladies of the church, following which the National Anthem was sung and Rev. Mr. McCallum pronounced the benediction.

Salem

Salem — Mrs. Leslie McLaren was hostess to the ladies of Melrose Women's Institute on Thursday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Hagerman called on Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Anderson, 3rd Line on Sunday afternoon.

Mrs. S. E. Haight spent Wednesday and Thursday with Mr. and Mrs. Roy Badgley, Melrose.

Mrs. Thos. Leslie called on Mr. and Mrs. A. Miller, Belleville, on Sunday evening.

Tpr. Roy McLaren, who has been stationed at Kingston, after service overseas, is home on six months' furlough.

Former Pupils Are Welcomed At P. of W. School

On Friday evening the Prince of Wales School, Thurlow, was the scene of a happy event as former pupils, who have served in the armed services were officially welcomed back to the school which they had attended.

Tastefully decorated in red, white and blue, the platform presented the school's honor roll, and the framed pictures of many of the service men.

Appearing on the program were the well-known Miss Ethel Smith and her accompanist, Miss Leona Riggs. Miss Smith delighted the audience and the ex-soldiers in particular, with "When the Home Bells Ring Out Again", "Lonesome—That's All", "There's Something About a Soldier", and "My Hero".

The Misses Dorothy and Irene Dickey tap danced skilfully, also sang the well-known "Lay That Pistol Down".

Mr. Clifford Belch showed three excellent sound films on Canada's Northland, Highland Doctor and The Country of Ecuador.

Mr. George Stokes, M.P., Mr. Roscoe Robson, M.P.P., and Reeve George Macdonald, of Thurlow, all spoke briefly, welcoming the returned men home, stating their interests in their rehabilitation and wishing them a position in civil life.

The ex-soldiers were presented with service ribbons in the school colors of purple, white and green.

Marmora

Marmora—Mr. F. R. Wells is in Toronto for a couple of days this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Gray of Peterborough spent the weekend with relatives here.

Mr. and Mrs. F. Burkitt of Mountain View, are visiting Mr. and Mrs. F. Bonter.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Wannamaker of Eldorado are visiting their daughter, Mrs. P. Gordon and Mr. Gordon.

Another policy-holder reports . . .

"I AM a policyholder in The Mutual Life of Canada, an average man with the average man's problems. I know what people mean when they talk of stretching the dollars to meet all the needs. That is the reason why I decided to insure in the first place. I knew that it was unfair for me to go on making plans for the future with my family and doing nothing to guarantee their fulfilment if I should not be here. It was then that I realized that the only practical solution was life insurance.

"I DISCUSSED my needs with a Mutual Life representative and as a result I purchased Ordinary Life insurance.

"THE AMOUNT I pay remains the same each year. I share in the Company's earnings and my protection remains in force as long as I live. But I also have the option of using the cash value of the policy to provide a retirement income at any time I choose. What I shall do will depend upon my circumstances, but it gives me a great sense of security to know that I own this insurance with its constantly increasing values."

Let a Mutual Life representative help you select a policy adapted to your particular circumstances!

IF IT'S ABOUT YOUR EYES . . . SEE McFEE

HERE ARE THE FACTS

Visual comfort is NOT a medical problem. It is related to the functions of the visual brain centres governing HEALTHY eyes. Various occupations impose artificial tasks which require development, if discomfort is to be avoided and efficiency acquired. Such development was not intended by Mother Nature, deeply rooted in antiquity: but, happily, modern Optometry — and only Optometry—can afford the means of acquiring the necessary adaptation .... sometimes through the medium of glasses, often without.

Diseased and injured eyes belong solely in the field of medicine .... and preferably should be treated by physicians who, expectedly, after specific training in ocular pathology, specialize on the restoration to health of the physical organ of sight. Generally such practitioners include the surgical and medicinal treatment of ear, nose and throat diseases, especially in smaller cities and towns.

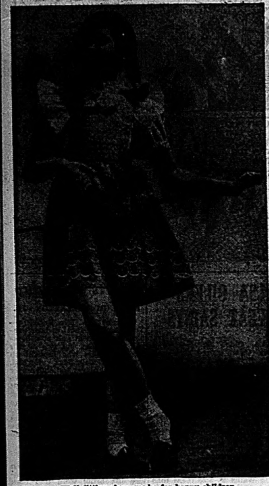
Attention Mothers! Is Your Child Wearing Proper Shoes?



Well-fitting shoes make for happy children.

By HELEN FOLLETT

HOPING this will catch the eye of the mothers, we are preaching this day on the proper care of children's little footies. We offer a few steps for healthy trotters.

Growing feet should be watched. They may need professional care at times if they are to be free of trouble. They should be bathed daily with warm water and a bland soap, dried thoroughly, little toenails should be brushed, cut straight across, never down at the sides. Cutting at the sides will cause the surrounding flesh to thicken. If shoes are a bit snug, an ingrowing nail will result.

Outgrowing Shoes

At certain ages a child can outgrow shoes in two months' time. Then a size larger should be purchased. It is necessary that the shoe should be plenty long and wide so that the toes are not forced into a huddle. Because of ill-fitting shoes in infancy the feet can become deformed.

As the bones are bent, so the foot develops. One cannot be too careful about this matter. Stockings should be of ample size, wide at the toes.

Select shoes with flexible leather soles and flexible upper parts. Kid leather is desirable in children's footwear; it gives and shapes readily, conforms to growth.

Foot Ills

The child's birthright is a sound body from toes to head, and the toes are more important than some mothers realize. Foot ills can creep up unnoticed.

A child will complain if there is acute pain, but the weakening of the muscles and arches of the feet may come on so gradually that the child may not feel discomfort until the trouble has reached an advanced stage. If there are the slightest signs that conditions are not normal, the child should be taken to a foot specialist for an examination.

Unwillingness to run, walk or play may be because of distress in the feet. If the child is bow-legged or knock-kneed, he should be examined for rickets.

The Marry Go Round

By HELEN ROWLAND

The Sweet and Lowdown.

A smart, successful business girl may not think she needs a husband; but somehow she always likes to have one around for a background, a decoration, and something to worry about.

Modern science has done wonderful things; but what this world really needs, now that the atom has been discovered, is a successful formula that will make the powder stick to the nose, a woman stick to the truth, and a man stick to a woman.

Manners and modesty may be coming into vogue again with the return of conventional styles; but most of us will have to take lessons—we've forgotten just what we ought to blush at.

Some girls appear to think that "glamor" consists entirely in taking off a few more pounds, rubbing on a little more lipstick and eye-shadow, and displaying a few more inches of chest, torso and knee.

Emotional appeal is something that every woman fancies she possesses, until she tries to use it to persuade her husband to stay away from a prize-fight and take her to a bridge party.

If a man only knew when he had enough money or enough women in his life, and if a woman only knew when she'd had enough flirtation and romance, most of the heart-breaks and suicides in this world could be avoided.

Lots of people think that they are marrying for "love", when the dalliance they feel is lighter than a ballet dancer's feet and less substantial than a soda fountain lunch.

Every new bridegroom has to master the domestic sign manual during the first year of marriage; otherwise he may drive his wife to first degree murder by his "What-have-I-done-now" look every time she kicks him under the table.

The path to a woman's heart is covered with applesauce. The same old brand will do. Just say it with words of one syllable—and her imagination will do the rest.

Winter white woollen robe

By VERA WINSTON

SO NICE to come home to, is this soft-as-butter robe fashioned of winter white woollen. It's an impressive looking affair but for all that is simply made with a neat collar, and concealed front fastening all the way from neck to hem. The set-in brown band at the deep armhole matches the set-in bands that define a tiny midriff. There are two unpressed pleats on the skirt.

Fashion Flashes

THE NEW FAVORITE in bright shades this year is royal blue, a color that stands out in the dark-garbed winter scene as red used to do. Coats of royal blue woolen—with elaborate trimmings and frogs of black braid, or trimmed with black or silver fox—are frequently encountered.

NEW BEAUTY and interest in evening frocks. A slim sheath of black crepe assumes fresh interest through inserted asymmetric bands of rose faille on the skirt.

A CARRY-OVER into Spring is that of the Winter-white coat. An early Spring model is of fine white woolen made on simple lines, with narrow collar and narrow, notched revers. The skirt is laid in unpressed side pleats and there is a double belt of brown suede.

SOMETHING NEW in the way of a basic dress appeared at a recent advance Spring showing. It is a straight frock, of mid-calf length, in navy rayon crepe with white rayon jersey panels front and back and dipping below the hemline.

DOWN SOUTH, where pretty brides prefer to honeymoon, up north or at western resorts, wedding fashions are particularly pretty. One bride, married in her going-away costume, wore a dusty pink wool ensemble consisting of a slim skirt and a matching mandarin coat that was collared, cuffed and bound in nutria. With it she wore a halo of nutria and matching pink velvet.

PLENTY OF WORK for those sequin-spattered scarfs. They fill it at necklines, act as dickies, and are nice as aprons or peplums on plain frocks. A good buy at any price.

It's About Time

Weekly Ration Fashion for a single person

SUN.	MON.	TUES.	WED.	THU.	FRI.	SAT.
Breaded Veal Cutlet	Veal Stew	Parsley Omelet	Sausages	Lamb Chop	Broiled Fish	Meat Loaf
Group B	left-over	unrationed	Group D	Group C	unrationed	Group C
9 oz 3 tokens			5 oz 1 token	4 oz 1 token		¾ lb 3 tokens

Even under meat rationing one can live alone — and like it, for the use of tokens is a boon to the single person. The one meat coupon valid each week is equivalent to eight tokens which enable the purchases to be varied throughout the week. Being on familiar terms with the Consumer Coupon Value Chart and the Coupon and Token Calculator which are available from your local Ration Board, will help you to obtain full ration value for the tokens expended. And with a little foresight, the single person's token budget can provide a meal for guests. This week's ration fashion suggests how this may be done.

Three tokens are ration exchange for a nine-ounce slice of veal steak or cutlet. This purchase will provide serving to be breaded for Sunday dinner, as well as the basis for Monday's stew. On Tuesday a parsley omelet, quickly prepared goodness so appreciated by the singleite, will keep you up to date with the meatless day fashion in restaurants. A token's worth of sausages on Wednesday will be generous enough to provide an extra to complement Thursday's lamb chop. Friday is a day to forget your token arithmetic and make unrationed fish the protein dish. For week-end hospitality an extender dish is ration economy and a savoury meat loaf is conductive to eating enjoyment. Three-quarters of a pound of hamburger with soft bread-crumb or cereal elasticizer will nicely serve from four to six, so that if Saturday's party is a small one you should have some cold slices remaining to supplement with unrationed tongue for Sunday night supper.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Would Like to Send Ex-Wife a Birthday Gift

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I was one of those idiots who didn't know when he was well off. I had a good wife, an attractive home and everything that should have made a man happy. But I wasn't satisfied unless I had several women on the string. I had affairs with three or four of them, though all the time I loved my wife.

One day she told me she was leaving to get a divorce. I was amazed, didn't think she knew about these affairs and didn't think she'd care very much anyway. We had never had unkind words. But she left and did get her divorce. Since then I've never been really happy and I'd give anything to get her back.

Her birthday is coming in November. Do you think it would be a good idea to send her a gift, or do you suppose she'd sent it back? Please pass judgment on this plan.

J. A. F.

Only a fortune teller could say whether your ex-wife would return the gift you want to send her. However, as divorced persons have a more friendly attitude to their ex's these days, why not take a chance and send her the gift?

Doesn't Want to Wreck Home Where Two Children Are

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I'm a woman of 26, in love with a married man who loves me also. He has two children. He wants to leave his family and marry me, but although I love him more than anything in the world, I don't intend to hurt his children. His wife never gives him a kind word when he's at home. I'm good to him and try to make him happy.

I own a cafe and he will come there, and I have tried staying home so I wouldn't have to see him, but he comes there. I've also tried breaking up this friendship by going to another city, but my mother will tell him where I am, and then he comes after me every time. I've gone out with other men, but he will follow me and start a fight. I've never been so unhappy as I am at present.

(Miss) N. M. M.

It does you great credit that you don't want to break up a home in which there are young children. Besides, there are new complications for what is known as the "other woman". In an unprecedented suit brought before the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Chicago, four children sued their father's girl friend for $100,000 for breaking up their home and depriving them of their father's affection and parental care. Judge Evan Evans, presiding, said: "If children are injured, why can't they obtain relief just as the mother can?" This suit is something new on the statute books.

It's a mistake for your mother to try and help things along with this married man when you wish to break it off. At 26 you can certainly have better insurance for happiness than marrying a man who wants to leave his family and forget his obligations.

"Good-Time Charlies" Pass Them Up

Dear Miss Fairfax:

My girl friend and I are both 23 years of age, attractive, well mannered, can carry on an intelligent conversation, and come from good families. We work together, holding excellent positions that bring us in contact with men of all ages. To our disappointment, the younger men shy away from our type of girl. When they find out we don't smoke, drink or indulge in heavy petting, we are put on a shelf marked "old-fashioned and uninteresting."

The only ones who seem to appreciate our good qualities are married men, who tell us not to change. These Good-Time Charlies who take a different girl out every night for a good time expect, along with their mothers, to bring home a good girl for a wife. Why can't felows realize that there are some girls left in this fast-changing world who have a high code of morals and want to live up to those morals? Must we change or remain

Disillusioned

It seems to be part of the crazy world in which we live that these "good-time Charlies" complain they don't marry because domesticating a wild woman is a risky business. Meanwhile they take out wild women and do not see the type of girl you represent.

"Good-time Charlies" often change, but "reformed rakes", as old novelists used to all them, make rotten husbands. Like moth-eaten blankets, they're poor protection in life's bad weather. In the millions of men returning from overseas you're bound to meet some who've been dreaming about a good wife, home, kids, fireside. Don't change.

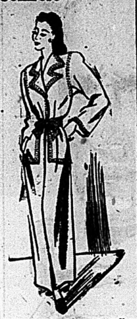
Cut For Comfort



Tailored robe of corn yellow Flannel.

By GRACE THORNCLIFFE

A SOFTLY tailored robe fashioned of a light yet warm fabric is a "must" for chilly mortals these nights. Corn yellow is the color of this nicely tailored flannel robe which is made interesting by rows of navy stitching that outline the collar and the waist-length revers. The same detail is repeated at the deep armhole and also borders the patch pockets which are gathered at the top, and slit open at the sides. A set-in stitched belt ties in a bow in front.

The Experts Say

By HELEN BANNERMAN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa (CP)—According to the rhymes, Humpty Dumpty's downfall was a catastrophe which couldn't be remedied. It's still a catastrophe when eggs are spoiled by careless handling, especially these days between peak laying periods.

Because of meat rationing many home-makers are using more eggs than usual—these reasons, plus heavy export shipments, make every egg precious and the agriculture department home economists provide these pointers for proper storage and cooking.

The storage place for eggs should be humid, but well ventilated. The humidity of the atmosphere retards evaporation and sufficient air currents prevent the development of moulds.

Never store eggs close to foods with a strong odor—the shells are porous and the flavor will be absorbed.

Place eggs with large ends uppermost, to keep yolks well centred.

In cooking you may serve eggs as "eggs" or hidden—they're good either way. The first fundamental rule in cooking eggs is to use a low to moderate, even heat. Cooking at high temperature causes the egg to become tough and leathery. Do not overcook.

To make the same number of eggs go farther combine them with such cereals as cooked macaroni, noodles, bread crumbs or cooked vegetables.

Cold weather menus need salads just the same as summer ones, but the salad may be a little more substantial at this time of year. The Agriculture Department suggests this Molded Egg Salad.

The recipe requires one tablespoon of unflavored gelatine, ¼ cup of cold water, 1½ cups of boiling water, two tablespoons of vinegar, one teaspoon of salt, four hard-cooked eggs, sliced; one tablespoon of grated onion and one tablespoon chopped pimento.

Soften the gelatine in the cold water. Add boiling water, vinegar and salt. When the gelatine mixture begins to stiffen, add the remaining ingredients. Pour into wet moulds and chill until firm. Serve on crisp lettuce or other salad greens and garnish with mayonnaise.

Here is the perfect answer to the homemaker's cry for a "quickie" for lunch or supper — using eggs. The Agriculture Department home economists have adapted it from an old English recipe for Buckingham Eggs and say that once tried it is sure to become popular with Canadians.

If it is followed with a fruit salad and whole wheat muffins and something to drink, the result will be a satisfying meal. The recipe for six servings requires six eggs, ¼ cup of milk, ½ teaspoon salt, ⅛ teaspoon pepper, one tablespoon of mild-flavored fat, six slices of bread, four tablespoons of catsup, two tablespoons of melted butter and three tablespoons of grated cheese.

Beat eggs, add milk, salt and pepper. Melt fat in top of double boiler. Add eggs and cook over hot water, stirring frequently until set. Toast bread and spread with catsup mixed with melted butter. Pile eggs on toast. Sprinkle with cheese and serve at once.

IF YOU wonder what the new designs out of Paris will look like, the lovely dancing frock above. . .for the very most important dances. . .will give you an idea. Nicole de Paris has been in Paris, has seen all of the collections, has come back to renew with her own designs the fashion contact with what was her native city.

This is a lovely gray satin frock, the stuff so soft and smooth that it drapes easily, while having the body to be dramatic. Sole elaborations of the classic trained silhouette are the bustle back, the black Chantilly lace ruffles. The neckline cuts away below the shoulders.

BEAUTY

By HELEN JAMESON

Hands Reveal Personality

Standards of pulchritude change every decade, sometimes more frequently. What constituted beauty in the time of Lillie Langtry and Lillian Russell would not make an appeal these days. Langtry had an eighteen-inch waist, it is said, and Russell tipped the scales along about 160. Later, the boyish figure was considered tops. It was swathed in a frock cut exactly like a pillow case. Not a sign of a curve! Look at an old photograph of this combination and weep for a past generation that had to "look like that."

Our ideas about hands have changed. When grannie was a belle it took her ten or fifteen minutes to put on her gloves, they were so small and tight. Each finger had to be drawn on laboriously. Now look at the gloves we wear! On again, off again, in a jiffy. In the yore time it was believed hands had to be small, soft, white, futile looking. Because of the activities of the modern woman, hands of that kind make no appeal.

We want our hands to look vital, interesting, useful — which does not mean, of course, that we do not desire them to be beautifully white and well-groomed. There is a charm in hands that appear to be strong, capable and creative. We're not clinging vines. We're out and hustling with the best of them. We're driving cars and planes, doing men's work. We don't want sissy hands. They do not belong in the present day picture.

By capable hands we do not mean, necessarily, those that do hard work, running the carpet sweeper, toiling in a menial manner. They can be capable in the arts and professions — sculpture, dress designing, music, painting, modelling, all kinds of interesting projects.

Some hands are amusing, some full of meaning, some have a lyrical beauty. They differ to the same degree as do faces and figures.

Much of the beauty of the hands depends upon the bone construction. Long, slender fingers have a greater appeal than short, pudgy ones. Even if the hands are not of pleasing outline, they can be made beautiful by charm of movement. Note the way the ballet dancer uses her hands and her fingers; she is as mindful of them as she is of her toes.

A small wrist is not always a good-looks asset, especially if the hand is well-developed, the arm of normal proportions. The wrist should be well-developed, should appear strong. The motion of the hand is regulated by the wrist, which should be flexible. Test yours, just for fun. Wave the hands up and down from the wrist. Is the movement gentle, easy, graceful? Turn the hands palm upwards and wiggle your fingers. They should be completely relaxed. Fold your hands in your lap, fingers intertwined. The first fingers should be extended, the others curled under, thumbs crossed.

Watch your hands. Note what you do with them. They have possibilities of beauty and grace.

MAJOR LEAGUE MAGNATES HEAD FOR CHICAGO

Will Decide Whether to Join Minors in Clipping Powers of Commissioner

By HAROLD HARRISON

Columbus, O., Dec. 8—(AP)—Major league baseball magnates were Chicago-bound today, faced with the job of deciding whether to join the minor loops in clipping the powers of baseball commissioner A. B. (Happy) Chandler.

The minors, who ended their biggest convention in history here yesterday, took three separate cracks at Chandler's powers but all must be approved by the majors at their convention in Chicago next week before they can be written into baseball law.

The minors first voted to take the post-war baseball promotional organization out of the commissioner's office and approved a proposal to take away from the commissioner the right to construe any major-minor league rule as being "deterimental" to baseball. They finished off the job yesterday by refusing to amend their own bonus regulations which Chandler had called "illegal and unfair" and then voted to prohibit both the majors and the minors from paying any bonuses for the signing of contracts.

With that done, the minors finished off their three-day official sessions by turning over to the major leagues their approval of placing Pacific coast league in a major loop classification.

As to the customary trades and sales of players—there wasn't much in the convention here but there it again appeared as if the main show would come in the Chicago meeting.

New York Giants, Philadelphia Phillies and Boston Braves generally were reported ready to put out cash to strengthen their teams.

Biggest names on the sale or swap market appeared to Jeff Heath and Ray Mack of Cleveland Indians and Frank McCormick of Cincinnati Reds plus a flock of the boys who helped bring the American league pennant and the world's championship to Detroit this year.

By ALAN HARVEY

Toronto, Dec. 8 (CP)—It's two decades now since Jack Dempsey ruled the fight world, but he's still the same compelling figure. Just out of the United States Coast Guard after 47 months in service, Dempsey took less than a week to bounce back into big type.

On a Canadian visit to referee wrestling matches, Dempsey talked with every reporter he met. With beguiling tact, he boarded a choice morsel of news for each fresh interviewer.

In Montreal, he confided to Andy O'Brien of the Standard a special technique for handling the brother-can-you-spare-a-dime drunk, then bounced over to Elmer Ferguson's desk at The Herald and unfolded the secret of his split with Jack Kearns. In Toronto, Johnny Fitzgerald of the Telegram heard Jack's plans for a new sports arena in New York and Andy Lytle of the star printed Dempsey's promise of a finish fight against Mike Jacobs for control of Manhattan's cauliflower cult.

Dempsey said his associate Max Waxman is smarter than Jacobs and "I'm smart enough to be tied up with men just as big as anything that fronts for the Gardens (Madison Square Garden)."

He even found time for a radio broadcast, crowded the usual commercials into another wavelength and conceded he couldn't pick the winner of the Joe Louis-Billy Conn fight.

Throughout Ontario it was the same. He talked of his mooted job as director of a firm to televise sports activities, discused his two young daughters and told of his wacky experiences as an owner of race horses.

He had his listeners licked as thoroughly as he used to rock his rivals in the prize ring.

He told Ferguson he parted with Kearns because the latter was not responsible in financial matters, but his most intriguing interview was with O'Brien. Whenever an importunate inebriate heaves into view, Dempsey slides into this routine:—

1. Booms a loud "hello" and slaps his hand against the drunk's tummy.
2. Follows with a jovial "how are you doing?" and plants his closed fist firmly into the drunk's punching arm, just below the shoulder.
3. Polishes off the proceedings with a friendly "that's swell, glad you had a good time!" and affectionately propels the visitor from the immediate vicinity with a terrific backslap.

"After that, you find the starch has gone from the drunk," says Dempsey. "You don't find him thinking of the Manassa Mauler as a broken-down ex-pug."

Okay, Jack. Lend us your muscles, and we're set.

WINDSOR JUNIORS WIN

Windsor, Dec. 8 — (CP) — Windsor Junior Spitfires last night edged the fast and tricky Stratford Squirts 5-4 in an exhibition hockey game played at the Windsor arena. The victory was sweet revenge for the Spitfires who were knocked out of last spring's O.H.A. playdowns by this same Stratford sextet.

The border cities' triumph was due, more than anything else, to the skillful netminding of Monty Reynolds. With the Stratford forewards plying him with rubber from all angles, the "small boy in a big job" was kept busy kicking out pucks all evening.

LAGGING LEAFS TO LAUNCH DRIVE FOR CONTENTION

Play Canadiens at Home and Rangers in New York Over Weekend

(By The Canadian Press)

Montreal Canadiens and Toronto Maple Leafs, bitter rivals in the 1944-45 Stanley Cup playoffs, meet at Toronto tonight in a National Hockey League contest which the Leaf management has earmarked as the start of a new drive to gain a contending position.

While Canadiens hold a two-point lead on the rest of the field after roughly six weeks of play, Leafs are nine points behind in fifth place. Billed as an early-season favorite for the Stanley Cup they won last season after knocking Canadiens off in a play-off round, Leafs have won only four games in 15 starts.

Their surprising performance has produced an almost panicky reaction among the Leaf executive, with a note of desperation emerging in a Thursday press conference held by General Manager Conny Smythe.

Smythe, after noting Leaf problems and asserting that if the Club can't make the play-offs this year it will build for the following season, promised Leafs would open against Canadiens a new campaign in which the emphasis would be entirely on attack.

Toronto will shoot shuffled forward lines against Canadiens, with Lorne Carr patrolling right wing for Billy Taylor and Sweeney Schriner. Gus Bodnar will replace injured Nick Metz at centre between Bob Davidson and Ted Kennedy.

The Montreal-Toronto clash is the only Saturday N.H.L. fixture. Three Sunday games are scheduled, with Leafs visiting New York Rangers Sunday, Canadiens at Detroit Red Wings and Boston Bruins at Chicago Black Hawks.

The two-game schedule for Montreal gives Canadiens an opportunity to lengthen their lead on second-place Boston, undefeated in six games since Nov. 10 but still a game behind Coach Dick Irvin's Club. Boston holds a one-point edge on the deadlocked Red Wings and Black Hawks.

Toronto, three games behind the joint holders of third place, leads the cellar-dwelling Rangers by two points.

HAMILTON TIGERS WIN 3RD STRAIGHT

(By The Canadian Press)

Hamilton Tigers, defending champions of the Senior O.H.A. won their third straight game at the expense of Stratford Indians 9-1, on Hamilton ice, the visitors suffering their third setback in four starts to keep company with Owen Sound and Hamilton Pats at the wrong end of the League standing.

In justice to the Indians it must be recorded that two of their regulars did not arrive on the scene until the third period because of a transportation delay. It was in the final chapter, however, that the Bengals cut loose with six goals, after holding a 3-1 advantage in the mid-session.

Dillon Brady paced the Senior leaders with four goals, followed by Johnny Conick with a three-goal trick. Liscombe and Shillington split the other two. Macey was the sole net-finder for Indians.

RECEIVED WITH ALARM

Chatham, Dec. 8 — (CP) — Chatham Ministerial Association has asked the Chatham curling club to close its doors on Sundays to children wishing to skate.

The association said it viewed with alarm Sunday afternoon skating as part of a widespread tendency to disregard Sunday as a day of rest and worship.

Ballplayers May Tour Pacific To Entertain Troops

(By The Canadian Press)

Unable to secure priority travel rights from the U.S. Army for a tour of military bases in the far Pacific, a National League squad of 15 baseball players has been waiting in New York city since Nov. 26, it was revealed last night. The tour had been arranged under the auspices of the United Services organization but the priorities had been held up by headquarters at Manila.

In charge of the party, mostly comprising Brooklyn Dodgers, is coach Chuck Dressen of that National League Club. The balltossers are waiting until next Wednesday before making other plans.

The Swiss National Skiing Association announced yesterday at Geneva that international competition would be resumed at Zermatt, Switzerland, March 17-26. Teams from France, Czechoslovakia and the Scandinavian countries are expected.

Competing at Amherst, Mass., for the first time since 1941, McGill University's swimming team last night defeated Amherst College 38-36 in a dual tank meet after winning the last two events on the card, the 300-yard relay and 300-yard medley.

After a colorful 25-year career as a baseball umpire, sports announcer and promoter, Hugh J. (Red) Rorty, 69, died at his home in Hartford, Conn. Once in a game at Hartford he climbed into the grandstand to finish his umpiring, declaring "everybody else is calling 'em from here, so I might as well."

A contingent of Toronto skiers left last night to attend the Canadian ski school at St. Adele Lodge in the Laurentian Mountains. Accompanying the Toronto group, headed by Clint Melville of the Toronto Ski Club, were Jack Hall and Russ Hamilton of Hamilton. Hall is secretary of the Ontario Ski Zone and Hamilton of the Cedar Springs Ski Club.

Ted Reeve, sports columnist and coach of Toronto Balmy Beach in the Ontario Rugby Football Union, told an East Toronto football meeting last night Beaches will have a junior club next season. Reeve, who announced his retirement as coach of the O.R.F.U. champions after they lost the eastern final to Toronto Argonauts, said he hopes other senior clubs will follow suit in developing junior teams as a training ground for the bigtime.

In an exhibition basketball game at Lexington, Ky., last night University of Kentucky defeated the Mustangs of University of Western Ontario 51-42 in a well-contested engagement.

George (Sonny) Horne, former Niles, O., middleweight, squared the count with Arty Levine of Brooklyn last night at Madison Square Garden by earning a 10-round decision while a group of 9,842 looked on. Levine defeated him in five rounds last summer.

Former Toronto Maple Leaf outfielder and recently in the U.S. Navy for two years, Ted Oliver yesterday signed to manage the Lancaster, Pa., Roses in the Interstate Baseball League next year.

ARRESTED FOR PLOTTING

Asuncion, Paraguay, Dec. 8 — (AP)— An undisclosed number of Paraguayan political leaders have been arrested on charges of plotting "a revolutionary movement against the government." A government communique last night said the plot was confined to the capital city, but few details were disclosed.

After the management of the Moscow Dynamo soccer team announced that the players would have to return to Russia for the hockey season, an Evening Standard sports writer suggested they play a Canadian army team.

"Canadian services start ice-hockey at Wembley next week: the Russians could have a trial run there. The Canadians also use the Brighton rink, where a match could be played any time. Kit would be lent by the Canadians," he said.

"Russian reaction is that the men have had no competitive ice-hockey since their last season ended in February, but neither have the Canadians."

Sweden, even without the athletes whose amateur status has been questioned, is expected to win the meet.

Jean Borotra Almost Through With Pro Tennis

By MAURICE DESJARDINS

Paris, Dec. 7 — (CP) — Jean Borotra, the bounding basque is almost through with professional tennis but he may participate in next summer's French doubles championship at Poland Garros.

"In future I shall play mainly for relaxation," the 47-year-old star told The Canadian Press after he had leaped, pirouetted and volleyed his way to a straight-set victory over Van Sau of Indo-China in the final round of an indoor tournament of Club Moliere.

Friends who surrounded him, in the locker room after the match noted that his face was unlined and he was breathing normally after sweeping tiny Van Sau off the courts 6-4, 6-2.

TULSA OILERS DEFEAT SAINTS

Tulsa, Okla., Dec. 7—(AP)—Tulsa's Oilers scored five goals in the first period and held off the St. Paul Saints for the next 40 minutes to win 6-4 a viciously-contested United States hockey league contest from the Saints before a crowd of 3,500 here last night.

Bobby Dill, St. Paul defenceman and the league's leading "bad man," performed the "hat trick" for the Saints by scoring three times in the final period.

The Oilers opened the scoring in the first period when Johnny Ubriaco tallied on an assist from Jackie Wallis at 5:35. Less than three minutes later Tulsa made it 2-0 on an unassisted shot past goalie Billy Sutherland by defenceman Vic Myles. It became 3-0 17 seconds later on Nick Knott's shot past Sutherland on an assist from John McCormick, new Oiler centre.

Joe Sadler took the puck from McCormick and made the count 4-0 at 15:55 and Myles scored in the second period. Wilson for Tulsa and Bob Kirkpatrick for St. Paul. Dill's three goals in the last period completed the scoring of the night.

Columbus, O., Dec. 8 (AP) — You'd hardly expect to hear people talking about golf at a baseball convention, but two of this week's visitors who brought up the subject were Jack Corbett, former ball player and club owner and Bill Kaiser, golfing executive of a sports goods firm....Corbett advanced the novel theory that baseball's hitters are better than they were in the good old days because they learn the golf swing ...."It's exactly the same," he maintained, "you just bring it up to where the ball is."

Proof that the Yankees are rapidly regaining their wartime losses was seen here this week when Tommy Henrich and Rollie Hemsley check in, both out of uniform..Although an important part of baseball farm operations always has been the ability to pay more than independents to acquire promising players, some of the speakers yesterday hailed the anti-bonus rule as "an absolute necessity" and as "the salvation of baseball."... Horse Sense Bridge

By SAM GORDON

The Kibitzer

When you ask A. Drip on a fishing trip, you will hear the possumpuss holler: "I'd be nuts to blow all that time and dough. I can buy a fish for a dollar."

The mere taking of tricks is not what makes bridge the deathless game it is. Aside from the companionship, every deal has a problem in bidding and play that makes worth while your time and effort.

Take another crack at this deal:

NORTH
♠A 8 5
♥A J 5 3

WEST
♠Q J 10 2
♥9 6

♠6
♥K Q 7 4
♦A K J 3
♣A J 9 6

Assume you are south as declarer at a small slam contract in hearts. West leads the spade queen. Your only worry is in the club suit. Take all 13 tricks.

Pulling trumps and sluffing clubs or spades on your long cards in diamonds will not accomplish your purpose. Nor will a finesse in clubs. But there is a simple play that will do it.

Consider that you must not take a club finesse. That means you must sluff clubs in one hand or the other. And sluffing dummy clubs is out. Therefore, you must sluff south clubs on dummy cards.

With no dummy spades or diamonds to do this, you could do it on dummy trumps if south had less trumps. So, reduce your south trumps.

Take the first trick with spade ace and trump a dummy spade in south. Win another trick with diamond dummy queen and trump another dummy spade in south. Then lead king and queen of trumps.

Now enter dummy with the club king and lead the dummy ace and jack of trumps. On these, sluff two of your south clubs. Lead the last dummy diamond and your south diamonds are the remaining tricks.

There is nothing very difficult about this plan of play. The only problem is to recognize it. In the parlance of bridge it is known as "making dummy's the master trumps."

Master it.

COMMONS RENEWS

Dr. Fauteux called for guidance from the House on what decision he should make. None was forthcoming and he said he would announce his ruling later. When he made the statement, Mr. Mackenzie made an undertaking with the opposition that advance notice of the ruling would be given.

Speaker Makes Decision

Hower, later in the sitting, Dr. Fauteux interrupted continued debate on the Bretton Woods international monetary agreement and announced that he had come to the conclusion that a point of order could not be raised after the division bells had sounded.

Mr. Mackenzie drew attention to the undertaking he had made, but Dr. Fauteux said he felt he could not postpone the vote without unanimous consent of the House. That consent was not forthcoming. The vote was taken and the bills were passed by 59-29.

The monetary debate was resumed after the Commons voted 121-46 for third reading of the government's emergency powers bill.

The bill will extend for one year the government's authority to continue, if necessary, the wartime price, wage, rental, production and other controls it enforced under the War Measures Act.

A mornnig sitting devoted to the study of agricultlure department estimates brought from Agriculture Minister Gardiner the statement that Canada could not maintain shipments of beef and pork to Britain next year unless she continued to restrict domestic consumption by rationing.

When the House opened, Finance Minister Ilsley announced the dissolution of the National War Finance Committee, the guiding organization behind Canada's Victory Loans, and said consideration was being given to promotion of some regular savings campaign when Ninth Victory Loan instalments are paid up next autumn.

Four cabinet ministers—Justice St. Laurent, Works Minister Fournier, Revenue Minister McCann and Transport Minister Chevrier—voted against passage of the divorce bills. Mr. Ilsley, Mr. Maczenzie, Mr. Gardiner, Labor Minister Mitchell and Air Minister Gibson, the only other cabinet ministers in the House at the time, voted for the passage.

Most of the opposition came from French-speaking members from various parts of the country, but they found support from among a few Progressive Conservative and C.C.F. party members.

Made No Comment

Government officials made no comment on any of the suggestions.

Debate on the Bretton Woods proposals was carried mostly by Social Credit members, advocaters of monetry reforms who claim that the agreement will mean a return to the gold standard and the binding of Canada to "international slavery."

But, speaking in favor of the proposals Garfield Case (PC—Grey North) said they are an approach to one of the greatest problems the world has ever faced.

That problem was the establishment of some central bank or clearing house where differences of currencies and exchanges could be adjusted for international trade.

Mr. Case said Canada would gain a great deal in the the central clearing house which would be set up under the agreements. It would assist Canada in disposing of her goods in the export trade channels. The dominion had to export the products of her industries, fields and her forests.

Mr. Case said he could not see anything wrong with returning to the gold standard. When that standard was in effect before it was too rigid. Students of finance believed it now could be used with more flexibility.

He could not agree that Britain was forced by the United States into accepting Bretton Woods.

He looked on Bretton Woods as an effort to mke sure that it never again would be necessary to drench Europe's soil with Canadian blood.

BIG 3 FOREIGN

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER

To Exchange Views

Washington, Dec. 8 (AP)—The Big Three world powers will make their first joint approach to the ominous subject of atomic energy control at a meeting of British, United States and Russian foreign secretaries in Moscow Dec. 15.

An official announcement by the State Department here said "an exchange of views on the subject of the control of atomic energy" definitely would be held. The secretaries also will take up other matters of "current concern" to their governments.

State Secretary Byrnes will have to leave early next week to meet Foreign Minister Bevin and Foreign Commissar Molotov on the agreed date.

Problems which they may discuss include civil strife in Iran, Allied controls for Japan, the unification of China, and means of getting European peace plans back on the track, although the announcement last night did not specify these as discussion topics.

Pending an agreement on when and how to hold a European peace conference, political reconstruction of the continent has been delayed. A troublesome issue has been whether Britain and the United States eventually will recognize governments for Romania and Bulgaria which Russia considers acceptable.

Hear Russia's Views.

The meeting will afford the first opportunity for top Anglo-American officials to hear Russia's views on atomic bomb controls. President Truman and Prime Ministers Attlee and Mackenzie King proposed recently that the United Nations set up a committee to study the controls. In the meantime they decided to retain the details of the manufacture of atomic bombs until peace appears reasonably secure.

There had been some apprehension that when it came to tackling these problems in the United Nations meetings early next year there might be a division between Russia and the Anglo-American countries unless some understanding were reached beforehand.

Meet Every Three Months

This will be the first meeting of ministers since the breakdown of the foreign ministers council at London in September. France and China were represented there but will not be present at the Moscow gathering.

A state department official said Secretary Byrnes suggested this meeting be held in Moscow, but that the next session should be in Washington. The ministers plan to meet about once every three months.

Moscow Announces Meeting

Moscow, Dec. 8 (AP)—Morning newspapers here today announced the forthcoming meeting of the Big Three foreign ministers in Moscow, Dec. 15.

The announcement said, "the meeting will give the British, American and Russian governments the opportunity of discussing, in an informal and exploratory manner, a series of questions having actual meaning for the three countries, and also for an exchange of opinion concerning the control of atomic energy."

ABANDON SEARCH FOR NAVY PLANE

Sitka, Alaska, Dec. 8. (AP)—Searching parties, stalled by five to six feet of snow in the Baranof Island hills, returned to Sitka late Thursday and abandoned the land search for a U.S. navy plane missing with 26 aboard.

Leaders of the rescue party said they would wait until air search turns up some evidence of the plane which left Kodiak Nov. 26, and has since been unreported. The land search from here started after smoke was reported to have been seen over the island wilderness.

The World is Like That

By Kathleen Norris

CHAPTER 10

Alone in the great place, except for the servants, all during the day following, she busied herself happily in getting her effects settled, in writing a long letter to her aunt and a brief one to Kent, and in much wandering over and investigating of Hill Acres. Acres they were indeed, she discovered. The gates at Hill Acres were a quarter of a mile from the house, and toward the west, behind the building of house and garage, barns and sheds and fences, the orchards stretched up almost to the Skyline ridge.

There were two tennis courts, being treated now by mysterious laborers with wheelbarrows and scrapers. There was an oval swimming pool, with more men working away at its cement lining, and still others struggling with potted plants and small trees in the freshly turned earth about it. There were many terraces; wherever Jocelyn wandered she found some new group of shallow steps and overarching trees and tied levels where summer-afternoons groups might form themselves under big umbrellas for bridge or idle gossip.

Inside the house there was the same evidence of the family's love of luxury and power to secure it. And Jocelyn had never enjoyed luxury before.

"No matter what these people expect of me, or what I have to do," she said to herself before she had been twenty-four hours at Hill Acres, "I'll remain here. I can get a thousand things I want here, things I'd never get in an office the longest day in the world! If Norma studies French, I'll study French. If she rides, I'll ride. The old lady may be feeble and troublesome, and Norma may be spoiled, but I'll manage them! I'm going to stay here from now on."

Jocelyn was sitting at dinner on her third evening at Hill Acres, beginning to get a little tired of solitude, when suddenly there was confusion in the faraway arcades that concealed the front hallway, and immediately afterwards a handsome woman who looked about forty came in, flung aside a smothering confusion of silver and black fox furs, sank into a seat opposite Jocelyn and said impatiently to the butler, "Do, Lorenz! Get me two old-fashioneds, right away. Where's somebody? That stuff in the hall is to go up to my room! You're,— Phil said he couldn't get poor Miss Sanderson and I suppose you're the pinch hitter? Put the portable radio on the table, somebody."

The last phrases were addressed to Jocelyn, who merely smiled feebly in reply. She had not the faintest idea who this could be, and found it hard to answer a person whose identity was so completely unknown. Lorenz placed a radio on the table, and the newcomer instantly shifted the dials. The roar and shouting of Madison Square Garden on a packed night filled the room.

"And plants a light left on the head of—Teddy Parsons," Jocelyn heard. The statement was followed by the somewhat remarkable phrase: "Boy, is stamina and endurance to do their work tonight! This is a—it's a left, and another, and Joe Rupetti," the voice raced on breathlessly, "—wait a minute, he is counting—three—four—and he's up again, like he was last time—he's up, and he's going—he has landed a light jab, and another on Teddy Parsons' chin. . . ."

"I'll bet there was a count while I was getting out of the cab, damn it. I could have held the taxi," Jocelyn's companion said in an irritated undertone. "You," she said to a trim little maid who had suddenly appeared in support of the butler, "go out and see what happened about five minutes ago in the Rupetti-Parsons fight. There must be someone out in the kitchen who's interested. I'm going out to dinner, Lorenz," added the crisp voice, "but I'll have a cup of soup if he's got any—ah, here we are with round seven!"

The fight continued for possibly six more minutes, when there was a knockout, and the lady had the radio carried away.

"I'm filthy," she said then. "I flew from Florida. I should have been here hours ago, but when we came down in Reno I missed my plane. A friend came down to see me at the airport and raced me off to look at some Seel'yum puppies. Adorable, but we were minutes late. Minutes. You can't do it, you know; they won't wait. Lovely woman, Cecily Baker — the candy Bakers. Millions. You're—Phil wired me he couldn't get hold of Miss Sanderson. You're Miss——"

"Britton, You're—" Jocelyn was confused enough to add "Norma's mother?"

"Norma's mother! Darling, how sweet of you," said the lady. "I'm Phil's mother. I'm her grandmother. He told you to say that, I suppose? No; I saw her mother in New York, but Janet never will come out here. Hates it. So you're Miss Britton? I can see how Phil—" She paused. Her voice died away into a speculative murmur. "Dear boy!" she said fondly. "And that reminds me that I must call up Sally McIntosh. And I have to go to a dinner; isn't that repulsive? I need rest. I've not been in bed before three o'clock for two weeks; you know what Palm Beach is. Could you come upstairs with me now and I'll dictate a few telegrams to you. You'd be a duck if you would. You can telephone them in, and it means I can sleep late in the morning no matter what happens There's only one thing—if a Colonel Dinsmore should call from Boston, I'd like to take that call. Nothing else."

Jocelyn accompanied the mistress of the house upstairs, and inspected and was inspected in turn by the room maid and the personal maid. Mrs. Fordyce cast all her clothing about carelessly as she prepared for her bath, stepped into it unembarrassedly, and proceeded to dictate telegrams as she soaked luxuriously in the hot perfumed water. Immediately afterward she was rapidly assisted into an incredibly small amount of spangles and chiffon velvet, and seated herself with her rather small amount of reddish-grayish hair in sticky clipped confusion around her head.

"Stay and talk to me," she said, as curlers and creams began their work under the hands of Annette Burgier. Silken curls of gray and red were taken from a box; pins and bands were skilfully placed; presently a sort of mask of cotton and wire was removed from her face, and delicate pastes and powders were applied. Her brows were touched; her cheeks brushed lightly with peach color; her lips were carefully dyed, and a dog collar of blazing diamonds was taken from a travelling case and clasped about her soft, almost unwrinkled throat. "Not bad for an old stager who had supper last night in Palm Beach and played three rubbers afterward," she said with an oblique glance at Jocelyn that was almost a leer.

Jocelyn said what she honestly thought, not without a consciousness that the other would like to hear it, "you don't look a day more than forty."

"When I was forty," said Mrs. Fordyce, "I thought I was too old to live any longer. I dreaded forty. I cried on my fortieth birthday. But what wouldn't I give to be forty again! Sit up for me, Annette," she added, "I'll not be late. You'll be unpacking anyway. Is Johnson there? Please telephone—perhaps you'd do that, Miss Britton? Please telephone to Mrs. Addington and tell her that I'm on my way."

A small fleet of cars had arrived at the garages that same afternoon. Jocelyn gathered that one of them was waiting, as the older woman swept downstairs and vanished into the night.

She went to her own room, just a little breathless, with her preconceived ideas somewhat shattered. She had visualized Philip Fordyce's mother as a gentle, beribboned and silk-skirted old lady, fine as porcelain and almost as breakable. To discover in her place this pretty, groomed, vivacious woman, with her beauty treatments and her interest in prize fights, was something of a shock.

She was quietly reading at nine o'clock when there was a knock at her door. Jocelyn said, "Come in," and got up to meet her visitor. A rather stern-looking woman of perhaps sixty faced her, a plainly dressed person unmistakably rigid as to ideas, morals, and the corsets that supported her lean, erect form.

"I am Miss Sanderson," she announced.

"Oh? Oh, how do you do? I'm Jocelyn Britton."

"You've unquestionably a great many qualifications for handling a girl as difficult as Norma, Miss Britton, or you would not have been so suddenly put into this position here."

It was delivered sternly and evenly, as if she had rehearsed the unfriendly little speech on her way to the house.

"I came straight to you," said Miss Sanderson. "Lorenz asked if he could announce me; I said I thought not. Announce me! I know my way around this house. I know this family, through and through. I taught Norma's mother."

"I know Mr. Fordyce was trying to get in touch with you," Jocelyn said mildly. The opening guns had been fired.

"I was in Honolulu, and then with my niece in Glendale," said the visitor. "Yesterday I came up to the city and reported at once to Mr. Fordyce's office. He is in New York, and his stenographer believed that he had filled the position."

"He didn't hear from you," offered Jocelyn.

"They tell me he is in New York. When does he get back? When does his mother get here?"

"His mother is here. She got back tonight. She's gone out to a dinner."

"I'll have Lena make up a room and stay here tonight," announced the other woman, after a second's thought in which she seemed to forget Jocelyn's presence entirely. "I'll see Mrs. Fordyce in the morning."

"Would you like me to ring for Lena?"

"I'll ring for Lena!" Miss Sanderson suited the action to the word. "It has always been understood that when Norma finished school I should be her companion," she said. And then, with the first sign of human weakness that Jocelyn had perceived in her, she added, "What happened at the school in Florence?"

"She ran away. She climbed over a wall that had broken bottles on top of it, and cut herself quite badly. Now she's with her mother in New York, and the grandmother has just come back from Palm Beach."

"I know all that," Miss Sanderson said scornfully. "I'm sorry the misunderstanding has arisen. I'll see you tomorrow, Miss Britton, and we can clear the matter up then with Mrs. Fordyce."

She went away in the wake of a somewhat terrified-looking Lena, and Jocelyn tried to settle down again to her book. But it was not possible; the disturbing thought that this formidable old woman and that other preposterously frivolous and youthful one might conspire to put her out of this position, which she was so much enjoying, came between her and the words she tried to read, and she finally gave up the effort and went to bed because there was nothing else to do.

But she slept lightly and restlessly, more upset by Miss Sanderson's intrusion than she would have admitted to herself, and she roused into wide-awakeness when she heard the return of Mrs. Fordyce. It was a cheerful, audible return. Good nights were called loudly to the friends who had brought her home; car doors were slammed.

Jocelyn turned up her bedside light and looked at her watch. It was ten minutes past three.

The next day was marked by a deathlike silence until eleven o'clock, when Mrs. Fordyce awakened and everything stirred into sudden life. Maids ran up and down; trunks were bumped upstairs; telephones rang; flowers arrived. By noon friends were coming in, women as beautifully groomed as their hostess sat in the dressing room and gossiped and laughed and drank cocktails. Bert, as they all called Mrs. Fordyce, was evidently in her glory.

Miss Sanderson went back to the city at about two o'clock and afterward Jocelyn was sent for.

"My son has gotten us into a horrible mess, and I'm afraid you'll have to be generous about it," said Mrs. Fordyce, who was again alone except for Annette, and again being put through a pretty thorough course of beautifying. "We both tried to get hold of darling Sandy—she was my daughter-in-law's governess, you know, twenty years ago. She's marvelous, inasmuch as she simply doesn't permit anything — goes right along like a Gorgon and doesn't stand for any nonsense. We thought we couldn't get her—the poor thing supposed it was all taken for granted, and didn't take the trouble to cable. She hasn't any money anyway, that may have been the reason; she had a brother who drank it all up. Well, she's much older; I confess I had rather a shock when I saw her, but after all, we did send for her, and she was Janet's governess. It makes it so awkward! I wired Philip on the train explaining that she was here and what should I do about you, and caught him at Omaha or Ogden or somewhere, and here's his answer. He says, 'Get rid of Sanderson or Spotty won't come home.' He's evidently told Norma, which is so ridiculous, because a girl of that age ought to have no say at all — You're sticking that right into my head. Annette!—They'll both be here tomorrow morning, and so will poor Sandy; she's determined to hold her ground, and of course she feels that the way you look has influenced Phil, and no wonder. I love pretty people myself; I always have!"

At this point she paused for a few seconds to rub some injury to her scalp and whimper.

Are Men Overworked?

There was, perhaps, never a time when so many men were overworked, both mentally and physically, as at present. For many it has been a long hard pull. The strain has come from worry and anxiety as well as overwork, until the nervous system is worn down.

The chronic fatigue affects the inside nerves and upsets digestion and other bodily functions. Headaches and loss of sleep, fatigue and lack of energy, get you down.

Dr Chase's NERVE FOOD

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food can be of great benefit to any man or woman suffering in this way. It acts as a "pick-me-up" to help you to better health.

If you have never used Dr. Chase's Nerve Food you have a surprise coming and a very pleasant one. Ask your druggist for the new economy size bottle of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

Inquiry Conducted Into Operation Of Lorette House

Montreal, Dec. 8. (CP) — An ecclesiastical inquiry is being conducted into the operations of Lorette House, juvenile detention home at nearby Laval Des Rapides, and definite changes will take place, Mother Marie Raphael de la Providence, prioress of the institution, said yesterday in an interview.

Lorette House, operated by the order of the Good Shepherd, was the scene of a demonstration by girl inmates, Oct. 7, in protest against detention methods. Police were called in to help quell the disturbance, and 11 of the ring leaders were transferred to the Fullum Street women's jail.

The prioress said the revolt was a result of the fact that the institution had to harbor "every delinquent girl sentenced by the Juvenile Court". This brought about a "difficult situation" when incorrigible types were mixed with the younger girls.

The order intends to see that such a disturbance does not occur again, Mother Marie Raphael added, and does not wish to take in any more girls who come under the heading of "incorrigible". This will be referred to the proper authorities.

There are about 30 nuns of the Order in the institution, with six former inmates, known as the "consecrated," assisting them. There are about 250 girls detained in the home.

Solitary confinement cells were introduced into Lorette House last year, Mother Marie Raphael said, because the order found that isolation was the only way to deal with girls who proved difficult. However, they were not held in solitary confinement for any great length of time.

CHRISTIAN'S— Headquarters for Christmas Gifts!

HERE AGAIN!
CHRISTMAS GIFT FAVORITES

In addition to the many thousand items that we have had the pleasure of serving the public with during the past Christmas season, we are now fortunate in receiving limited quantities of new items that disappeared from the market with the beginning of hostilities.

For example, our new super health cast aluminumware has proven very popular for gifts. The "pressure cooker", while in short supply is greatly sought. A limited number of pairs of skates, a trickle of mantel radios, record players, small quantities of highest quality electrical appliances, irons, heating pads, electric tea kettles, etc. These appliances, while coming in limited quantities, cannot be held for customers and we strongly advise a visit to the store every time you are down town. It is our store policy to immediately put on sale any new item immediately received. What you might not see in the store today, may in all probability be in the store tomorrow. For example, this week three companies, each delivered two mantel radios, the first of the new production, and these of course are in great demand, and are picked up quickly.

Trapped Upstairs, 4 Children Die In Suburban Home

Mother and Nine Escape In Blaze Near Montreal

Montreal, Dec. 10 — (CP) — Four children, trapped while asleep on the second storey, lost their lives today in an early morning fire which destroyed the interior of their home in suburban Sault Au Recollet.

Ranging in age from two to 16 years, they were members of a family of 13 children. The mother and nine children, all on the ground floor when the fire broke out, managed to escape.

The dead were sons of Avila Cloutier, a scavenger in the employ of the City of Montreal, who was away from his home at work when the blaze occurred.

They were Robert, 16, and his brothers Jean Guy, 13, Leo, seven and Marc, two. Police said all were asphyxiated by smoke.

Origin of the fire, which fire-fighting officials said destroyed the interior of the home, was not immediately learned.

The fire alarm, they said was received at 7:18 a.m., and when firemen reached the scene flames were already shooting through the roof.

When the flames were under control, they entered the house and found Robert, Jean Guy and Marc in a clothes closet of their room, while Leo was discovered near his bed.

It was believed that the children were blinded by smoke and that three of them entered the closet while groping for the exit from their room.

All four were pronounced dead by a doctor from St. Luke Hospital.

Germans Thought Eisenhower 'Great Military Leader;' Patton Was Greatly Feared

By GEORGE TUCKER
(Copyright, 1945, by The Associated Press)

Nuernberg, Dec. 10 —(AP)— German army intelligence officers regarded Gen. Eisenhower as a "great military leader," above even German generals, because of his skillful military planning and his ability to "over-ride feelings and objections on political grounds in the interest of achieving the one thing that was important — the successful accomplishment of military operations."

The author of that statement is Maj.-Gen. Erwin Lahousen, star prosecution witness and German army intelligence chief who evaluated the fighting qualities of various Allied armies from the German viewpoint in an exclusive interview with The Associated Press.

General George S. Patton, Jr., was looked on as the best and most feared of the United States field commanders by the Germans, Lahousen said.

He said that at the end of the war there was little difference, from a German viewpoint, in the British, United States or Russian armies, but early in the war the Russians were better at exploiting break-throughs and more daring in leadership compared with the British-American combination.

"In a tactical or dashing sense in military operations, Patton was no doubt the outstanding American general," Lahousen continued. "In order to be perfectly clear, I mean that Patton was outstanding as a leader of troops in the field. He had the necessary military and tactical ability to carry out operations that had been planned and prepared by Eisenhower, who was the great planner and who had the necessary political insight to carry out those plans, in contrast to the German generals who were experts on the battlefield but who would have been as helpless as children had they faced a similar situation."

Police Smash White-Slave Ring

Niagara Falls, N.Y., Dec. 10. (AP) — "A White-Slave ring", which had lured Canadian girls into houses of ill fame in this city apparently has been smashed by Federal agents after a series of 27 arrests, R. Norman Kirchgraber, assistant United States Attorney, said Saturday.

The story behind the arrests is "fantastic and practically unbelievable in modern times," said Mr. Kirchgraber, adding that affidavits in his possession indicated that girls were "beaten, starved and forced to submit."

"When the victim arrived in Niagara Falls after crossing from Canada," he continued, "she was taken to a resort and plied with drinks, and if she didn't drink she was forced in one way or another to enter a room in a Falls' dive. In some cases the girl's clothing was forcibly removed."

All the arrests resulted from four raids on five or six houses in one district of the city, he reported, adding that the seven latest arrests were made early Saturday by agents of the Immigration Service, Alcohol tax unit and United States Marshals.

The arrests brought the total in custody to 27—15 as defendants and 12 as material witnesses. All identified themselves as residents of Niagara Falls.

Coventry Will Build Modern Business Centre

By JOHN DAUPHINEE
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Coventry, England, Dec. 10 (CP)—Turned into a planner's paradise by German air raids which wiped out the city centre, 600-year-old Coventry intends to spend £15,000,000 ($67,500,000) to make itself a modern business centre.

Within a few weeks final designs for the five-year program will be sent to London for government approval. When the work is finished—at a cost of one-day's war—the ancient convent town which became the hub of Midlands industry will be transformed into one of England's show places.

The medieval legacy of narrow, crooked streets and lack of open space will be gone; and so will the incoherent mass of poor houses which grew up among dingy factories, legacy of the 19th. Century industrial revolution.

A new heart will be built amid the ruins of the old.

"Hitler did us a good turn" is a common phrase in Coventry. The dismay which followed the 1940 destruction of three-fifths of central Coventry has been replaced by something close to thankfulness, aside from the heavy loss of life and smashing of some old treasures.

Gen. Loucks Says Japanese Used Poison Gas in Isolated Instances

By HAMILTON FARON

Tokyo, Dec. 10 —(AP)— Brig.-Gen. Charles E. Loucks said today that the Japanese used poison gas against United States troops "in a few isolated instances," notably in New Guinea late in the Pacific war.

The chemical warfare officer on Gen. MacArthur's staff said the most recent instance was March 5, 1945, when a Japanese patrol set off vomiting gas candles in a Signal Corps area at Biak, New Guinea.

Gen. Loucks said several Americans were made severely ill but none killed.

Japanese officials he has talked to, he added, denied knowledge of this or other reported isolated use of gas but they conceded they were unable to say whether individual commanders had used it.

Gen. Loucks said the Japanese also had tossed gas grenades at United States concentrations at Biak and had used gas against the Chinese in China.

The officer said the Japanese had a modern, well-equipped gas chemical warfare school at Narashino but abandoned the manufacture of poison gas in 1943 because, as questioned Japanese officials told him "we believed the Allied statement that gas would be used only in retaliation."

GERMAN LEADERS URGED JAPAN TO GET IN WAR IN '41

Had No Idea Opening Blow Would Be Struck at Pearl Harbor

By WES GALLAGHER

Nuernberg, Dec. 10 (AP)—German military leaders were urging Japan to get into the war in the spring of 1941 but had no idea the Japanese might strike an opening blow at Pearl Harbor, according to a hitherto secret German command order disclosed today at the Nuernberg war crimes trial.

American prosecutors laid before the four-power tribunal a directive signed March 5, 1941, by Field Marshal Wilhelm Keitel, chief of the high command, proposing a Japanese attack on Singapore as a means of "forcing England to the ground quickly and thereby keeping the United States out of the war."

That Keitel was reluctant at that time to fight the United States was seen in his warning that Japanese attacks be extended to bases "of American naval power only if entry of the United States into the war cannot be prevented."

In a court session marked by the plea of innocence by Ernst Kaltenbrunner, once-dreaded No. 2 man in the Gestapo, American prosecutors turned to evidence of collaboration between Japan and Germany in spreading aggression throughout the world.

Pleads Not Guilty

Katenbrunner recovering from a cranial hemorrhage which sent him to hospital, just before the historic trial opened three weeks ago, was brought before the four-power tribunal and declared: "I do not believe that I have made myself guilty."

The tall scar-faced Gestapo man joined his co-defendants as the Hitlerite leaders heard themselves accused in their own words of launching the invasion of Soviet Russia in 1941 with the coldly calculated determination to starve the Russian people so that the Germans themselves might eat.

Hermann Goering and Alfred Rosenberg, official Nazi philosopher and head of the party's foreign affairs bureau, bore the brunt of the prosecution's attack at the opening of the fourth week of the trial.

Speech Used as Evidence.

Disclosing the detailed German plans to strip captured Russian territory of food, industries and raw materials, prosecutors introduced as evidence a speech made by Rosenberg June 22, 1941—two days before the invasion—in which the Nazi leader declared: "We feed also the Russian people with products of that surplus territory."

Goering, according to official documents, was the director of the ruthless economic policy which called for "seizing raw materials and taking over all important concerns"—a policy described by Sidney S. Alderman, assistant United States prosecutor, as "economic plunder."

The Nazi plans, the prosecution charged, were callously designed to force the Russians in occupied areas to starvation by stripping the country of food supplies and all raw materials.

Confident Reds Would Collapse.

Papers from Rosenberg's files disclosed that the Nazis were confident that the Red Armies would collapse "very soon" after the initial German onslaught with 125 divisions and three full air fleets. The June 22, 1941, date for the jump-off was set by Hitler April 30, 1941, it was disclosed.

"It is very probable that military action on our part will very soon be followed by military collapse of the U.S.S.R.," one document from Rosenberg's captured files stated.

TWO BOARDS TO BE DISSOLVED ON DECEMBER 31

Production and Resources and Raw Materials Board Will Cease to Function

Ottawa, Dec. 10. (CP)—Dissolution of the combined Production and Resources Board and the combined Raw Materials Board, effective Dec. 31, was announced today by Prime Minister Mackenzie King.

The Boards were the co-ordinating bodies for integrating the production, material supplies and food programs of Canada, the United Kingdom and the United States.

Mr. King's statement was issued simultaneously with announcements by Prime Minister Attlee and President Truman. The combined Food Board will continue probably until June 30, 1946, and special committees under the boards being dissolved may remain in being for a time to deal with short supplies.

"We take this opportunity of paying tribute to the outstanding achievements of the boards in the full and equitable utilization of resources for the effective prosecution of the war," the three leaders said in their joint statement.

"Their novel experiment in economic collaboration unquestionably hastened the moment of victory. It is, however, our view that with the completion of the main adjustments consequent upon the termination of the war programs the work of the C.P.R.B. and C.R.M.B. on its existing basis comes to an end. It has accordingly been agreed that these two boards terminate on Dec. 31, 1945."

The continuation of some committees was considered necessary to handle goods which were in global short supply. For cotton, textiles, tin, rubber and hides and leather it was proposed that the committees set up under the board to deal with those commodities should continue.

"It has been concluded that conditions do not yet permit the dissolution of the combined food board. Because many foodstuffs are still in world short supply and because of their close interrelationships, it is believed desirable to retain the board as a supervisory and co-ordinating mechanism.

It is anticipated that the combined food board itself will be dissolved on June 30, 1946, or sooner, if conditions permit".

KILLED 400 BEARS

Lindsay, Dec. 10—(CP)—Thomas Roberts of Haliburton, known throughout this area as "the big bear man," says that during his 74 years he has bagged more than 400 bears.

His bear rugs may be found on the floors of homes in New York, Buffalo, Chicago and throughout Ontario.

This year he has killed only nine bears, but he says:

"I can still hike across the woods from morning to night and get up the next morning feeling fine. That is what outdoor life does for a man."

HUNTING NOT PROFITABLE

London, Ont., Dec. 10—(CP)—Gordon Painter and Stewart Graham, London trainmen, say deer hunting with a train is not profitable in Elgin county. Their London and Port Stanley train struck and badly wounded a big buck near Port Stanley. Next morning a Port Stanley constable finished it off with a pistol and an Elgin County game overseer claimed the carcass.

TWO DEAD AND 33 HURT IN RAILWAY TRAIN COLLISION

C.N.R. Passenger Train Runs Into Rear of Another Train in Blinding Blizzard

Armstrong, Ont., Dec. 10—(CP)—Canadian National Railways officials today continued their investigation into a train accident at Jacobs, Ont. about 38 miles west of here early yesterday which claimed two lives and caused injury to 33 other, seven of them seriously.

The accident occurred a couple hours before daylight in a blinding blizzard when C.N.R. train No. 2 ran into the rear of train N. 4 while the latter was stopped to take on water before continuing east on the main transcontinental line running through rugged country north of the Great Lakes.

O. Mayes, porter, was killed instantly after train No. 4 smashed in through several coaches in the rear of the first train when visibility was practically impossible through the heavy snow driven by a high wind. Arthur W. Hall, sleeping car conductor died several hours after the crash. Both men are believed to have lived in Toronto.

Reported to be suffering serious injuries were Mrs. Doris Greisboris, Toronto; R. W. Mullins, train conductor, Winnipeg; Phil Agnew, Durham, S. C.; Stanley Ball and V. Clark, both of Geraldton, Ont.; Margaret Bell, Victoria, B. C.; and Harry Wright, Quill Lake, Sask.

In all 17 passengers and 16 C.N.R. employees were reported injured. However many of them were not in serious condition.

The injured were at first attended by two Royal Navy nurses and Surgeon-Lieut. Ellis of the Royal Navy, who were returning to England from Manila and Korea.

One car was transformed into a hospital car and Drs. G. L. Bell, Hugh Allen, and H. K. Mitchell along with three nurses from Sioux Lookout, Ont., were rushed to the scene of the accident.

PENSION FOR SIBELIUS

Helsinki, Dec. 10 —(AP)— The Finnish Government presented Composer Jan Sibelius an annual pension of $1,680 on his 80th birthday Saturday.

The composer was flooded with congratulatory telegrams in his suburban Helsinki villa. Many messages came from Britain and the United States. A richly bound book with signatures and sentiments of 18 Soviet composers also was presented.

Sibelius' daughter, Eva, said the composer was in good health and "brilliant humor." Members of the Finnish Government visited him at his home and a choir composed of representatives of local choirs of Finland sang for him.

PREDICT TURKEY SHORTAGE

Kingston, Dec. 10—(CP)—Butchers, who said they have been unable to buy their Christmas turkey supply direct from Kingston district farmers, predict a holiday turkey shortage in Kingston. The farmers have stated they will not sell to the butchers at ceiling price and intend to vend their turkeys either on the Kingston market or on the door-to-door system.

Circulation of Canadian daily newspapers increased by over 15% during the war.

COMMONS BEGINS CONCERTED DRIVE TO END THIS WEEK

Agriculture Estimates Approved in First Saturday Night Sitting Of The Session

By JACK BRAYLEY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

Ottawa, Dec. 10 (CP)—Parliament today begins a concerted drive to conclude sessional business by next weekend with the Bretton Woods international monetary agreements being the first item of the schedule.

The session's first Saturday night sitting dealt with the difficult agriculture estimates and showed all parties agreeing that Canada should extend her natural wealth by irrigation and reclamation.

Saturday also saw the House vote 124-12 to go into committee on a resolution to a bill ratifying Canadian signature of the Bretton Woods international monetary agreements. And the members wistfully thinking of the nearness of departure for home, lustily sang the nostalgic "White Christmas" during the division which also saw Dan McIvor, veteran Liberal member for Fort William, Ont., and native Ulsterman, produce a fife and shrill the Orange song "Protestant Boys" amid general laughter.

The Bretton Woods bill again will face filibustering tactics by Social Creditors, who have given notice they want answers to between 20 and 30 questions and predicted it would take them all day to get them.

Hon Ian Mackenzie, acting House leader, was more optimistic. Rising at adjournment late Saturday night, he announced the House would take up Bretton Woods this morning "hoping to be out of the woods by 1 p.m."

Often the toughest civil estimates to pilot through the House, the study of agriculture outlays was completed just before adjournment Saturday and Trade Minister MacKinnon rose to introduce his department's estimates.

If Mr. Mackenzie's hopes for a cleanup of Bretton Woods are realized, the schedule calls for consideration of Veterans' Land Act legislation followed by Mr. MacKinnon's estimates which he will introduce with a brief statement.

Bonus on Cheese To be Continued

Ottawa, Dec. 10 (CP) — Agriculture Minister Gardiner said Saturday in the Commons the government policy of paying a bonus on cheese production would be continued indefinitely and an effort would be made to maintain the relationship between the price of cheese and the price of commodities cheese producers had to buy.

Mr. Gardiner was replying, during study of Agriculture Department estimates, to Carl Boucher (P.C. Carleton), who said the question of a continued bonus was important to the cheese-making industry. Mr. Gardiner said:

"It (the bonus) continued thru' the war and so far as I know will continue indefinitely. We pay a premium on 93 score and 94 score cheese and that we shall continue to pay."

He said he could not be as definite regarding a subsidy on milk, which entered into the production of cheese, but it would be considered in any change of policy.

Hess Claims He Flew to Britain 'To Stop Slaughter of 2 Noble Races'

Nuernberg, December 10. (AP)—Rudolf Hess, in his first story to the press of his May 10, 1941, flight to Scotland, today declared he had attempted the flight several times from June, 1940, on and finally made it "specifically to stop the slaughter of two noble races—the British and the Germans—and not to enlist British aid in the war on Bolshevism as was widely rumored from time to time."

The former No. 3 Nazi, and self-confessed amnesia faker, told his story in written answers to questions submitted to him in his jail cell here.

He said he had expected to be called crazy by Hitler, but professed undying loyalty to the man he helped to write "Mein Kampf."

The gaunt Nazi-sub-chieftain considered the questions for three days before answering them. He indicated that he had no definite plans of operation, once he landed in England, and carried only a letter of introduction to the Duke of Hamilton from Professor Karl Haushoffer, his spiritual mentor and exponent of geopolitics.

Hess insisted that even Haushoffer and Willy Messerschmitt, German aircraft builder, who supplied the plane "for long distance training fighters", knew nothing of his proposed flight.

Hess told how after the fall of France he spoke with Hitler on peace with England which 'we felt was imminent', how Hitler saw the war with Britain as "a terrible tragedy" for the ending of which a "way should be offered whereby British prestige would remain intact."

Hess writes that he "decided to supply this way out by going personally to England".

"I left a letter for the Fuehrer at the moment of my departure, giving my reason for the flight. I argued: After contact with me, the British government will be in a position to declare:

Meyer Accused Of Killing 41 Canadian Soldiers

Crimes Cover the Period Immediately After Landings

By ROSS MUNRO
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Aurich, Germany, Dec. 10—(CP cable)—In a panelled court room located in the former German naval barracks here, Lt.-Col. Bruce MacDonald of Windsor, Ont., today opened the prosecution case against Maj.-Gen. Kurt Meyer with an 8,000-word statement surveying the case and crimes committed against Canadian soldiers in the Caen beachhead 1½ years ago for which the accused is indicted.

Dealing with the first five charges composing the first charge sheet in the indictment, Col. MacDonald told the Canadian Military court: "We are trying here today a man who, we shall contend, is supremely responsible both directly and indirectly for the killing of those under his command of the 41 Canadian prisoners referred to in the first charge.

We shall seek to establish that he was the motivating force behind the cold-blooded, deliberate and calculated murder of these prisoners."

These crimes cover the period immediately after the D-Day landings in Normandy when Meyer commanded the 25th S. S. Panzer Grenadier Regiment of the 12th S. S. Hitler Youth Division. The second charge sheet consists of the sixth charge, involving the shooting of seven Canadian prisoners of war on June 17 when Meyer was commander of the division. It will be dealt with later in the trial.

Killed Behind Lines

Col. MacDonald said many of the prisoners were killed far behind the front line where there was no conceivable justification or excuse — other than possibly the brutal punishment of a helpless prisoner who refused to answer improper questions.

"If he was not directly responsible then we do contend that the prisoners lost their lives as a result of wilful or criminal negligence and the failure of the accused person to perform his duties as commander of the troops concerned."

The chief prosecutor disclosed that Meyer denied in interrogations that he had any knowledge of these atrocities. However, several days later Meyer said he only discovered about the atrocities 2 days after the murders took place when they were reported to him by medical officers attached to his headquarters.

Call German Troops

In proof of the first charge, that Meyer indicted and counselled the troops under his command to deny quarter to Allied troops. Col. MacDonald said he would call three members of Meyer's favorite company, the 15th Reconnaissance Motorcycle Company, attached to his own headquarters.

He said they would say that during training, in which Meyer took a particular interest, Meyer said to them on more than one occasion: "My unit takes no prisoners" and "I don't care what other units do; my company here has taken no prisoners."

Another witness will testify that on June 6, while on the way to meet the invading Canadians, one company comamnder went from platoon to platoon telling the men they were not to take prisoners.

Gen. G.S. Patton Partly Paralyzed In Car Accident

Mannheim, Dec. 10—(AP)—Gen. George S. Patton lay partially paralyzed today in Heidelburg hospital as prominent nerve specialists were summoned from Britain and the United States to treat spinal injuries which he received in an automobile accident yesterday.

An army medical bulletin said Gen. Patton's condition was satisfactory, that he was completely rational and had spent a comfortable night but declined to forecast the probable course of a paralysis of the lower limbs resulting from a fracture of the third cervical vertebrae.

Hurrying to his side by trans-Atlantic plane were his wife and a neuro-surgery specialist, Col. R. G. Spurling of Louisville, Ky. Already at the hospital were Maj. Gen. A. W. Kenner, theatre surgeon, and Prof. Hugh Carnes, a British specialist who had been flown from Britain at the request of Mrs. Patton.

The accident occurred when an army truck was reported to have turned off a side road into a highway and crashed into Gen. Patton's sedan. Gen. Patton and his chief-of-staff, Maj. Gen. Hobart Gay, had left Bad Nauheim yesterday to go pheasant hunting near Mannheim. Gen. Gay and the driver, Pte. Horace Woodring, were unhurt.

Coldest Snap Expected Tonight

Toronto, Dec. 10 — (CP)—The coldest snap of the season can be expected throughout Southern Ontario by tonight, the weather man said today in warning that moderate gales from the north-west will come too.

"It is hardly likely to drop down near the zero line, however," the weatherman added.

The cold wave comes from the west where, for instance, Hudson Bay Junction, Sask., reported a 32-below-zero temperature last night. There will be some snow-flurries, too.

BARS OPEN ALL NIGHT FOR NEW YEAR'S PARTIES

New York, Dec. 10 — (AP) — New Yorkers who want to celebrate New Year's Eve until the dawn had a present today from the State Liquor authority. It announced it would permit bars to operate all night, provided they obtain a special $10 permit. The usual week-day closing hour is 4 a.m.

POLICE ON LOOKOUT FOR HOLD-UP MEN

Local police are on the lookout for three unidentified men who early this morning made an unsuccessful attempt to hold up the proprietor of Cunningham's store in Odessa, 12 miles east of Napanee.

The three men entered the the store shortly before seven thirty and after attempting to hold the place up left without getting anything. No description of the three men was received by police other than that they were driving a 1939 Pontiac coach, reported to be owned by a Kingston woman. The holdup attempt was reported by Provincial Constable Morden of Napanee.

SIX DISTRICT MEN SAILING FOR HOME ON MONARCH OF BERMUDA

Personnel of the Canadian Army are expected to reach Canada aboard the "Monarch of Bermuda" docking at Halifax approximately December 15.

Following is the list of men destined for this district. Sergt. W. A. Noakes, 19 Ridley Street, Belleville; Gunner F. L. Coltman, Trenton; Gnr. K. B. Hazell, Campbellford; Gnr. K. A. Sinclair, 55 Grier Street, Belleville, Gnr. J. G. Smith, Trenton; Gnr. T. L. Young, Bloomfield.

DENSE FOG DELAYED TRAFFIC SATUR. NIGHT

A dense fog which descended over the Belleville district and immediately froze to frosty pavements temporarily paralyzed traffic out of Belleville shortly before midnight Saturday.

According to highway patrol officers visibility on the highways was reduced almost to "zero" by the heavy fog which settled over the area with motorists attempting to make their way to homes in the country having to inch their way along.

Long lines of vehicles were evident on practically all highways leading out of the city as motorists were forced to play a "follow the leader" procedure to make any progress.

But despite the denseness of the fog there were no serious accidents reported on highways in the immediate Belleville area.

On the Foxboro road just north of the city two motorists bumped fenders in the fog with traffic being held up for some time before autos were able to proceed.

TRUCK CRASHES INTO VERANDA POST

Visions of a truck calling for supper were entertained by a Station Street housewife on Saturday afternoon when a truck apparently out of control mounted the street curb, crossed the sidewalk and crashed into her veranda post before the driver brought his vehicle to a stop. Police officers were called, the driver of the truck being called upon to answer a few questions following which he agreed to pay any damages resulting from the accident.

MOTION INTRODUCED BY REEVE GEO. WEST

The recommendation brought before the Hastings County Council on Friday regarding the reduction of the hunting and fishing season here and the addition of assistant game and fishery wardens to the present staff was presented by motion to council by Reeve George West of Madoc, and not by Reeve William West of Stirling as reported in Saturday's edition.

HANDICRAFT DISPLAY TO BE EXHIBITED AT MOUNTAIN VIEW

The airmen and airwomen at Air Armament School, Mt. View, have been showing a growing interest in handicraft of all kinds in the station "Hobby Shop." The Hobby Shop under the direction of F.O. "Jimmy" Osborne, first opened its doors about a year ago and ever since, station personnel has become increasingly "hobby conscious."

The results of this growing interest will be made manifest to the public during the afternoon and evening, this Thursday, as the station is presenting a display of work done by station personnel. Hobbies represented in the display will be art, photography, plastics, metalwork, model aircraft, leatherwork, radios and needlework. Prizes will be awarded for the best exhibits.

The display is open to the public and the residents of Belleville and district are cordially invited to attend.

Large Crowd Enjoys Splendid Band Concert

Approximately 500 local music lovers attended the first of a series of Winter band concerts by the Belleville Municipal Band held at Tabernacle United Church Sunday evening under the auspices of the Men's Club of that church.

In keeping with former performances of this band organization, the varied concert program was especially well done and spoke well for the remaining performances in the series of Winter concerts to be staged in this city. Three of the band's pre-war personnel in the persons of F/O. Ralph Clapp, Flt. Sgt. Carm Osborne and Jack Sills took their places in the band following their return to the city.

Highlighting the evening's program were two vocal group numbers sung by a newly organized vocal trio, composed of Miss Leona Riggs, Mrs. William Burgoyne and Mrs. Kenneth Bird. Each of the four numbers received a tremendous ovation from the audience attesting to the splendid rendition of the difficult piece numbers. Alec Gordon acted as piano accompanist for the vocal numbers. Numbers given included "Garden of Love" and "Marie Antoinette Song," with the numbers of the second group "Virgin Slumber Song" and "O Holy Night," lending a Christmas air to the program.

Members of the band and the guest artists were entertained to luncheon by the Tabernacle Church choir following the program. Proceeds of the concert, amounting to approximately $52 will be applied to the cost of renovations to the church recreation room.

W01 J. Armstrong Found Guilty Of Theft Charges

Found guilty in Prince Edward county court at Picton on charges of theft of Royal Canadian Air Force materials and equipment from the Mountain View Bombing and Gunnery School, Warrant Officer 1 James Armstrong was remanded for sentence when the case was completed late Saturday night.

Proceedings against Armstrong were commenced last Monday morning with giving of evidence on behalf of both the prosecution and defence taking the entire week to complete. Judge W. S. Lane presided over the court, while Crown Attorney Walmsley conducted the prosecution with the defendant being represented by F. L. Ward of Picton. Investigation of the offences was conducted by officers of the local provincial police.

P. Woodcock Found Dead

Marmora, Dec. 10 (Special) — Philip Woodcock residing on Victoria Avenue, Marmora, was discovered dead at his home about noon on Saturday by night watchman Albert Bartlett his brother-in-law who called after receiving word from a neighbor, Mrs. Roy Wright that she had failed to get an answer previously. Deceased was found lying face downwards on the floor, death having occurred some hours before.

On Thursday afternoon he had consulted Dr. Herb Young of Peterborough concerning his health while on a visit to his son Philip in that city and the physician had prescribed a rest. He returned the next afternoon and Mrs. Wright prepared his supper for him since his wife is an invalid and has been under the care of her daughter Mrs. George Kerr at the latter's home for some weeks. He seemed to be as well as usual when seen by Mrs. Wright and she had no anticipation that his end was so near. Albert Bartlett upon discovering the death notified Dr. H. Crawford. Later the remains were taken to F. N. Marett and Co.'s Funeral Parlors and later still to the residence of his son James who resides on the highway about a mile and a half south of Marmora Village.

The late Mr. Woodcock was twice married. His first wife the former Fannie Louise Vilneff deceased nine years ago. In July 1943 he was married to Anne Yatton widow of the late Herbert Yatton who survives him. Four children of the first marriage also are left to mourn a loved father, James, Marmora township; Philip, Peterborough; Mrs. R. Windover (Dorothy) Toronto, and Mrs. H. Viner (Theodosa) Peterborough. He is further survived by five grandchildren. Four children predeceased him. Deceased was of a friendly nature and had many friends in Tweed, Marmora and Peterborough where he had resided in turn.

In politics he was a Conservative. For some years he was a member of the Orange Order. Under auspices of Marmora Branch No. 237 Canadian Legion the funeral takes place on this (Monday) afternoon, service being conducted at the residence of his son James in Marmora township by Rev. J. Stephenson of the Pentecostal Church. Interment was made in Marmora Protestant cemetery.

Phone Too Risky To Warn Hawaii States Marshall

By WILLIAM T. PEACOCK

Washington, Dec. 10 (AP) — Axis agents, listening in on even the transatlantic convervations of President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill, made it unsafe to telephone a warning to Hawaii on Dec. 7, 1941, Gen. George C. Marshall said Saturday.

That was the reason, he told the Pearl Harbor investigating committee, that the telephone was not used to advise Hawaii commanders that Japan apparently was going to make some move at 1 p.m., Eastern Standard Time (dawn in Hawaii).

He had testified earlier that the United States High Command, for that matter, considered a raid on Hawaii less probable than attacks on airplane plants at Seattle and San Diego or on the Panama Canal.

All Posts Warned

Gen. Marshall filed warnings to all overseas posts and the coastal comands by army signal corps radio. Due to transmission difficulties, the message to Hawaii went by commercial telegraph and radio. It reached Lt.-Gen. Walter C. Short, Hawaiian Army Commander, several hours after the first bombs fell on Pearl Harbor.

Senator Homer Ferguson (Rep., Mich.) wanted to know why the telephone was not used.

"President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill were in the habit of conferring by telephone," Gen. Marshall said. "And the President also spoke with Ambassador (William C.) Bullitt by telephone.

"We had evidence that they were intercepted by the Germans. I had tests made and found that telephone conversations could be picked up."

Mr. Bullitt was ambassador to France before the German invasion and later was stationed in London.

Double Hazard

Gen. Marshall explained that there were two hazards in an Axis interception of a telephoned warning. The Japanese might have deduced from it that their code had been broken.

They might have seized upon a war warning as an "overt act" by the United States.

"The Japs would have grasped at almost any straw," Gen. Marshall explained, "to prove to such portions of our people who doubted our integrity of action that they were being forced into war."

Earlier in the hearing Senator Ferguson demanded that Britain's 1941 ideas on probable Japanese military moves be given to the committee.

He asked specifically for British "evaluations" of intercepted Japanese messages which Britain read through decoding secrets supplied by the United States in January, 1941.

The Michigan Senator voiced his demand after Gen. Marshall had testified that he knew the British Admiralty was passing information directly to the United States Navy in pre-Pearl Harbor days.

Nothing Withheld

Gen. Marshall said he did not know of any "records" as such which were available but that the War Department had been instructed "not to withhold" anything from the Senate-House committee.

Gen. Marshall was an affable witness for the most part but flushed and indicated irritation when Representative Bertrand Gearhart (Rep., Calif.) kept insisting that more information should have been sent to Lt.-Gen. Walter C. Short, army commander at Hawaii.

"We had given Gen. Short a directive," Gen. Marshall snapped. "He was a responsible commander. He had a definite task."

HELD NAILS IN MOUTH

Brantford, Dec. 10 (CP)—John Watson, 66, of Scotland village, followed an old roofer's custom when he put shingle nails in his mouth during a shingling job. The nails had been treated with a rust-proof solution and Watson went to hospital.

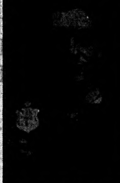
Sgt. Carson Says Hasty Pees Were One of Best Fighting Gangs Overseas



Sgt. Wm. ("Lum") Carson

Looking fit as the proverbial fiddle and "tickled to death to see the familiar sights of Belleville once again" Sergeant William (Lum) Carson is home from the wars after five years spent in Britain, France, Belgium and Holland. He is the son of Mrs. Gladys Carson, 13 Brown Street.

"Lum" enlisted with the 3/47 battery, Royal Canadian Artillery with such well-known artillery figures from Belleville as Don Thomas, Jimmy Matthews, Eddie Lee, Leo Goyer and others.

A softball pitcher here before the war, "Lum" carried on his favorite sport while overseas and was one of the shining pitching lights of the softball squad managed by Don Thomas which won the Canadian Army softball championship of Italy.

He stayed with the unit with which he enlisted all through his five years of service. His battery was later transferred from an anti-aircraft unit to a field battery.

He thinks the passing years have done something to him especially as far as athletics go and said today, with a twinkle in his eye that "I'm getting a bit too old to play softball. Better let the kids do that next year." But don't be surprised if you see him out there throwing the ball around when the balmy Spring breeze once again heralds the incoming of summer sports.

"The Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment was one of the finest, if not the best infantry unit overseas," was Lum's fine tribute to the "foot-slogging farmer soldiers from my own district."

"I followed their fortunes for a long while in Italy and other battlefields of Europe and they were one of the fightingest gangs I ever saw," he added.

He also paid tribute to the efforts of the Belleville Kinsmen Club in sending cigarettes to the troops overseas. "If it hadn't been for these fellows at home I don't know what we would have done for smokes on many occasions" he said.

Frank Pratt as Army Cook Often Had To Work With Primitive Equipment

Give a modern housewife an up-to-date kitchen crammed with electrical appliances, all the fancy ingredients her heart desires, and plenty of time to plan her culinary masterpieces and she will turn out mouth-watering pastries, pies, cookies and whatnots.

But all Frank Pratt, Station Street, who served four-and-one-half years overseas as a Canadian army cook, needs to turn out the "extras" for the troops is a few flat stones, a piece of flatiron, an oil drum with holes punched in it and a fair supply of rations with a few raisins and some extra flour thrown in.

Frank was a fancy pastry cook long before Hitler's hordes overran Europe but threw aside his cook's hat and white apron for a battle-dress when Canada went to war.

He soon found out it was a far cry from a warm kitchen in a restaurant to the mud and blood of Sicilian, Italian, French Belgian battlefields.

"There was a big difference between walking into a warm kitchen with its up-to-date equipment, taking off your coat and going to work, and slogging over shell-pocked roads, dodging shells and picking out a nice comfortable spot in six inches of mud and get breakfast for the troops."

"All we carried were some large flat stones, some pieces of flatiron and a large oil drum cut in two which was used as an oven."

"It is surprising what a fellow could do under such circumstances, but we managed to get along all right."

Pratt served as cook with a number of units but his fondest memories go back to an air service battalion in France for whom he cooked for a long time. His pastries and doughnuts, he said, while not to be compared with the best New York could offer, were eagerly gobbled up by the troops.

When he left the unit he was presented with a purse of 32 pounds sterling.

Ontario Should Spend $10,000,000 Annually to Sustain Her Forests

Gravenhurst, Dec. 10 (CP)—To sustain Ontario's forests will require double the $4,000,000 now spent annually, "and perhaps $10,000,000 a year," Frank A MacDougall, Ontario Deputy Minister of Lands and Forests told a meeting of regional forestry officials.

"Our policy in forestry is to give adequate protection to what we have, to see forest resources are wisely and fully used, to improve what we have by research and management and to replace what we now have," he said.

Recent developments in the pulp and paper industry had brought expenditures ranging into millions of dollars. The department could not administer the forest and give adequate protection to such industries without spending more money.

The government had taken steps to encourage building of pulp mills.

"Large areas were returned to the control of the crown. This permitted us to complete the negotiations and either have the contracts met or seek new customers.

"American companies are being asked to form Canadian branches rather than form companies which are not readily identified with the parent companies. The benefit of this to the province is that the full guarantee of the parent company is behind the Canadian company."

Mr. MacDougall said the department had established a forest ranger school in Haliburton County; placed limits on the sawmill size of logs; built a southern experimental station at Richmond Hill; standardized scaling; and set up forest management units at Kirkwood, Severn River, Englehart and Petawawa.

He said a forest inventory to be started in the near future would require five years.

DISCOVER NEW DRUG

London (CP) — Scientists of Imperial Chemical Industries have developed a new and revolutionary anti-malaria drug from coal tar. It is known as "Paludrine" and is far more powerful and effective than any other anti-malaria drug. It is ten times more powerful than quinine and three times more powerful than mepacrine.

Transcontinental Air Record Made By New Bomber

Washington, Dec. 10 (AP)—An experimental bomber, the Douglas XB-42, flew across the continent in 5 hours, 17 minutes, 34 seconds Saturday, cutting 46 minutes off the previous west-to-east record.

The two-engined plane with pusher propellers, averaged 432 miles an hour, on the 2,295 miles from Long Beach, Calif., to Bolling Field, army airbase in South-east Washington.

The XB-42, with its dual rotation propellers in the tail, took off from Long Beach at 10:33 p.m., P.S.T., (1:22 p.m., E.S.T.), and crossed the Bolling Field control tower at 6:39.34 p.m., E.S.T.

The plane carried four army pilots, Lt.-Col. H. E. Warden, chief of the bombardment branch of the Air Technical Service Command at Wright Field, Ohio, and Capt. Glenn W. Edwards of the Wright Field Bomber Test Section. It had a gross weight of more than 34,000 pounds with approximately 1,400 gallons of fuel.

The bomber has no counterpart among familiar military types. Its two Allison 12-cylinder in-line engines are inside the fuselage and transmit power to two Curtiss propellers through long drive-shafts.

The flight was helped by tail winds, the record attempt having been put off from time to time to await favorable weather.

The fastest previous trans-continental crossing was from Seattle, Wash., to Washington National Airport here, a distance of 2,323 miles, in 6 hours, 3 minutes, 50 seconds, las January by a Boeing C-97 army transport, a modification of the B-29 Superfortress. It averaged 383 miles on hour.

Lengthy Review of Farm Conditions Given by Mr. Fair At Closing Session of Council

Farmers Claim Increase in Price of Products Not in Proportion to Cost of Production

General trend of farm conditions in Hastings County was favorable throughout 1945, Linn Fair, county agricultural representative stated in his annual report to the Hastings County Council at its closing session.

The cost of agricultural production has increased somewhat but this was due largely through higher wages being asked by farm labor and because of the fact that for two years the county had small grain crops. Many farmers are of the opinion that the increase in the general price of agricultural products has not increased in proportion to the increase in agricultural production.

Weather conditions were not favorable generally for maximum production, Mr. Fair stated. Continued wet weather in the Spring delayed seeding operations with the result that the grain crop harvest was below average. The corn crop was considered below average, but large hay yields helps to make up for any scarcity of ensilage there might be. The county, he felt, had plenty of hay and coarse feed with which to winter its livestock.

Grain Brought In

Considerable quantities of western grain, however, will need to be brought in if present high agricultural production is to be maintained.

Hog production was maintained at about the same level as that of 1944 and this was due largely to the purchase of western grains.

Sales of grade and pure bred dairy cattle have been good at generally satisfactory prices.

The poultry population reached its peak during the year despite the fact that most hatcheries reported a considerable decrease in the sale of baby chicks last Spring Farmers have found that the price of poultry and eggs has been generally satisfactory.

Farm Labor Scarce

Farm labor was very scarce during the year, Mr. Fair told the council, but most farmers, their wives and families worked very hard and did a splendid job of harvesting the crops with a minimum of outside help. Through the co-operation of the Belleville Chamber of Commerce and the National Selective Service Board, some part-time outside help was supplied to farmers.

Referring to livestock phase of agriculture, Mr. Fair stated that there are 12,663 horses in the county at a value of $1,051,029.

There has been some activity in horses for export with these going to France and Belgium. Outside of this there has been little demand for horses outside the county and a relatively small number has changed hands within the county during the year. A number of stallions are not routed at the present time.

21 Accredited Herds

The cattle population in Hastings is 72,964 valued at $3,174,664 The number of accredited herds of various breeds in the county in 1944 amounted to 21 or 888 cattle. Accredited and blood tested herds amounted to 41 or 1,250 cattle.

Good dairy cattle have been in strong demand for the past year and a large number have been sold out of the county. The new regulations regarding the T.B. test for export cattle have been responsible for slowing down the number of grade cattle exported. Quite a number of grade cattle have been shipped to other centres, chiefly to the Toronto and Montreal districts.

Sheep Increase

The sheep population which amounts to 21,324 with a value of $145,003, has increased in the county during the past two or three years, but very little further increase is expected at the present time, Mr. Fair pointed out. The factors responsible for the past increase were better prices for both wool and lamb and also the campaign to increase sheep production.

Hastings County has a large area of land that is most suitable for sheep raising, but the two main factors discouraging the use of this land are dogs anod wolves. A large number of sheep are lost each year by the ravages of these animals and a number of flocks have been sold for this reason. In a summary of losses through this medium. Mr. Fair pointed out that 411 sheep were killed and 48 injured incurring damages of $5,873. Dog taxes of the county amount to $6,948.

62 Bacon Hog Clubs

There are 51,007 hogs at present in the county which are valued at $520,271. Since the Federal-Provincial Bacon Hog Club policy came into effect in 1938, 62 Bacon Hog clubs have been organized, 20 of which are still active. Hog production in the county so far in 1945 is somewhat below that of the same period for last year. In 1944 66,500 hogs were marketed through the packing plants an increase of 14,500 over that of 1939. No figures for 1945 are as yet available.

Valued at $1,260,945 the poultry population of the county is estimated at 419,603. Production, it is felt has reached its peak with hatcheries reporting a falling off in sales of chicks.

Mr. Fair laid a detailed report on the table of the work of the various agricultural organizations of the county which was studied by members of the council.

Warden J. Fred Wilson spoke of the fine work being done along agricultural lines by Mr. Fair and his staff, and stated that his efforts were one of the main factors in the advancement of the county's chief industry during the years of Mr. Fair's tenure here.

COMMONS BEGINS

Touch Wide Range

Saturday's decisions touched a wide range of topics and these were some of the highlights:—

1. Solon Low, Social Credit leader, continuing his party's attack on the monetary legislation, heard Finance Minister Ilsley and other opposition party leaders urge that it be expedited and then said the United States was looking after its own interests in sponsoring the agreement.

2. Victor Quelch (SC—Acadia) quoted authorities who claimed the agreement would eventually return the world to the gold standard.

3. Agriculture Minister Gardiner said his department was considering the necessity of improving cold storage facilities on trains, docksides and piers in Canada and warehouses in Britain to ensure Canadian products would be marketed in the best condition in Britain.

4. Mr. Gardiner also said the government was considering an increase in the advertising of Canadian products overseas.

5. The agriculture minister also disclosed that subsidies on cheese would be continued indefinitely and an effort would be made to maintain prices cheese producers had to pay.

Water Conversion Plan Heard

6. M. J. Coldwell, C.C.F. party leader, advocated a policy of water conversion for western Canada and land reclamation for eastern Canada and won support from all sides.

7. Percy Black (PC—Cumberland) suggested the use of war surplus explosives, destined for destruction, as a means of blowing drainage ditches in land reclamation projects, especially in the Tantramar Marshes between Nova Scotia and New Brunswick.

8. John R. Macnicol (PC—Davenport) said a South Saskatchewan River Dam project could be undertaken to ensure a good water supply for points like Moose Jaw and Regina.

9. Mr. Gardiner, winding up the irrigation and reclamation discussion, envisioned expenditures of $20,000,000 in the next five years in a continuation of projects, costing a similar amount, which had been carried on during the last 10 years.

10. Controls which prevented the sale of food produce in the United States markets where prices were higher ensured that Canada had enough food, Mr. Gardiner said.

11. Justice Minister St. Laurent announced that attempts were being made to find ways to amend the criminal code so that more effective steps could be taken to curb crime.

12. Mr. Gardiner announced his department was considering the resumption of grants to grade A and B country fairs, now that the war was over.

Senator E.D. Smith Announces Retirement

Winona, Ont., Dec. 10 (CP) — Senator E. D. Smith, oldest member of the Canadian Senate both from point of age and service, has announced his retirement from the red chamber. Senator Smith celebrated his 92nd. birthday on Saturday.

"My health is not as good as it used to be," Senator Smith said. "I no longer feel that I can devote the time and interest that the position requires."

The dean of the Canadian Senate is one of Canada's leading authorities on fruit growing, shipping and preserving.

Ernest Disraeli Smith was appointed to the Upper House in May, 1913, and has served actively in the chamber as well as keeping an active interest in his business. He served as Conservative member of the House of Commons for Wentworth from 1900 to 1908.

"For all the years that I have been a member of the Senate I attended every session, only missing an odd day. On only one occasion I drew my allowance for a few days' session and I never felt right about it.

"I did not attend that last session, nor have I been at the present one. It is the law that a Senator is automatically out of office if he fails to attend two sessions in succession.

"I was urged to do down to the present session, if only for a few days, in order to hold the appointment but I am not going back. I have made up my mind that I am retiring from the Senate."

Beaten Japanese Learn Staggering Costs of Defeat

Tokyo, Dec. 10 (AP)— Beaten Japan learned today—on this fourth anniversary of her declaration of war on the Western Allies—the staggering costs of defeat.

Some of the newly reported "price tags":

1. Japan is paying more than $2,200,000 daily to support occupation forces.

2. Some Japanese war leaders may be tried in Hawaii for "murder" because of the Pearl Harbor attack.

3. A Diet member has demanded that Japan regain China's friendship by restoring loot obtained from that country.

4. Lt.-Gen. Masaharu Homma, who led the Japanese to triumph in the Philippines, is to be taken to Manila for trial as the man responsible for the Bataan death march.

5. The Japanese reading public for the first time is being presented an Allied-prepared outline of Japanese plotting which led the nation to downfall.

6. The first war criminal trials will begin at Yokohama Dec. 17, it was announced officially. On that date, a military tribunal will begin hearing the first of approximately 300 Japanese accused of atrocities against Allied prisoners of war.

These first trials include none of the so-called major suspects whose hearings begin in January.

May be Tried For Murder

The chief prosecutor of Japan's attack on Pearl Harbor, Joseph B. Keenan, indicated some of the war plotters might be tried in Hawaii for "murder." Premier Hideki Tojo will not be one of those, however, Mr. Keenan said.

Demand for the return of property stolen from the Chinese came in the Diet's house of representatives from Liberal Takeo Kimura. He also accused Premier Baron Kijuro Shidehara of "doing nothing to solve the important problems of the nation."

Top-ranking United States army and navy commanders in China and the Western Pacific today drafted recommendations for demobilization and repatriation of Japanese troops in China, and allocation of resources. These recommendations will be submitted to the Allied Chiefs-of-Staff.

Newspapers today devoted portions of their front pages to Allied reports on the origin of the Pacific war. Most Japanese are unfamiliar with details of their militarists' calculated aggression.

More Drinking Last Year Ottawa Says

Ottawa — The apparent consumption of alcoholic beverages was higher during the fiscal year ended last March than in the preceding year, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics reported last night.

Consumption of spirituous liquor was approximately 3,720,000 proof gallons, compared with 3,444,444 gallons in the preceding year. Beer consumption approximated 110,224,000 gallons compared with 90,710,000 and native and imported wine consumption 3,712,000 gallons compared with 3,594,000.

Proof spirits produced in Canada moved up to 35,555,000 gallons from 27,203,000 in the preceding year, while the output of beer advanced to 122,530,000 gallons from 104,062,000.

In 1943 — the latest year for which statistics are available — wine produced and placed in storage for maturing totaled 3,450,000 gallons as compared with 4,352,000 in 1942.

Canada imported 1,044,000 proof gallons of spirits during the fiscal year compared with 823,000 in 1944. Exports of Canadian-made spirits advanced to 3,130,000 proof gallons in 1945 from 2,163,000 in 1944.

Excise and import duty revenues and licence fees on spirits collected by the Dominion government were $44,607,000 compared with $41,047,000 in the preceding year. Excise and import duty revenues and licence fees on malt products rose to $42,507,000 from $35,707,000. On wines, excise taxes and import duty revenues moved up to $2,012,000 from $1,930,000 in 1944.

Hitler 'Delighted' When He Heard Of Sneak Attack

Tokyo, Dec. 10 (AP)—Hitler was "delighted" when he learned of the Japanese sneak attack on Pearl Harbor but he did not have advance knowledge of Japanese plans, Lt.-Gen. Hiroshi Oshima, wartime Ambassador to Berlin, said Saturday.

Germany and Japan had no compact for sharing domination of the world if their respective campaigns succeeded, Oshima added in an interview three days after he arrived in Japan to find himself listed as a suspected war criminal.

Oshima said moreover that Germany withheld its atomic bomb research information from the Japanese but the Japanese "unofficially" learned about it anyway.

Oshima said he received no "orders" from Hitler to try to push Japan into war, but that Wehrmacht officers he did not identify advocated it.

The German view of the Pacific war, Oshima said, was that the distance between the theatres was so vast it was neither practical nor possible to co-ordinate their efforts. Germany did not plan to send troops to the Pacific.

NEW PLAN for
CAR INSURANCE RATES

☆

EFFECTIVE JANUARY 1st, 1946

☆

This new simplified plan replaces the wartime discounts allowed because of gasoline rationing and establishes a basic rate for private passenger cars. From that basic rate a substantial discount is granted for individually owned cars used chiefly for private and pleasure purposes.

Policies now in force are not affected until renewal date.

A GREAT FAMILY LINIMENT

"SALADA" TEA
Delicious Flavour

Dates to remember:

1939 The farmers and dairies were supplying Ontario families with 690,000 quarts of milk a day. Then came war! The demand began to go up and up, and the costs of producing, transporting and processing milk mounted higher and higher under war conditions.

1942 On December 16th, to help keep down the cost-of-living—and to ensure that all families could afford to use plenty of this most nourishing of all basic foods—the Government introduced its consumer subsidy of two cents per quart on fluid milk. This enabled your dairy to start delivering milk to you at two cents less per quart.

1944 The demand for milk hit an all-time "high". Handicapped though they were by manpower shortages and transportation restrictions, the farmers and dairies met the challenge . . . delivering over a million quarts of fluid milk a day in Ontario alone—59% MORE quarts-per-day than in 1939!

TODAY Victory has brought an end to the fighting overseas, but the farmers and dairymen are still battling high wartime costs of producing and distributing milk. Yet, thanks to the WPTB consumer subsidy, the price you pay for milk is still two cents less per quart than back in 1942.

The Canadian Army at War

"The Canadian Army at War," the story of the Canadians in Britain in the years 1939-1944 has just been published by the authority of the Minister of National Defence. It is written by the Historical Section of the General Staff, Canadian Military Headquarters in Great Britain and was completed in October 1944.

Lieutenant-General J. C. McMurchie, C.B., C.B.E., Chief of the General Staff, Canada, in a very brief foreword explains that this is the first of a series which has the object of giving Canadians fuller information than has hitherto been possible to publish. The years concerned are the long years of waiting in the United Kingdom before invasion of Nazi-held Europe. Later booklets will tell the story of the prowess of Canadians in action. Here is revealed the importance of the role Canadians played in Britain's defence when the Motherland was threatened with invasion and it also tells the story of the troops' relations with their hosts. For periods up to five years more than a quarter of a million of Canada's troops, who had enlisted in the hope of seeing early action were stationed in the Old Country. "The maintenance—and, indeed, the improvement — of their morale and discipline, under these singularly difficult conditions, reflects the greatest credit on two parties; the brave, generous and hospitable people of Britain, on the one side, and the officers and men of the Canadian army overseas, on the other," Gen. Murchie remarks. "The whole incident is one which hosts and guests alike will remember with pride in times to come, and it will have its effect — and a very desirable effect — upon the future of the British Commonwealth. The Commonwealth is based upon mutual goodwill and understanding; and those qualities have never been better exemplified than in the relations of Canadian and Briton during the years treated in this little book.

The story begins with the arrival of 7,500 men of the Canadian army in the Clyde on Dec. 17th., 1939, the vanguard of more than 335,000 soldiers from Canada whom the war was to bring to Britain in the next five years. This first flight of the First Canadian Division was followed by others and then by the Second Division which walked straight into the fury of Goering's first great air attacks on England but its last infantry units did not arrive until Christmas Day of 1940. It is pointed out that the actual total of Canadian soldiers lost at sea while en route from Canada to the United Kingdom was 73 all ranks on the S. S. Nerissa, which was not part of a troop convoy but was sailing independently with some Canadian troops among her passengers and fell a victim to an enemy submarine in April 1941. 35 Canadian army personnel were picked up by British destroyers. "This tragic but unique exception serves to call attention to the remarkably efficient organization of the protection of troops on the trans-Atlantic route," says the booklet. "The magnitude of the task staggers the imagination; the magnitude of the triumph is no less. To the Royal Navy, the Royal Canadian Navy, the United States Navy, the French Navy and the Polish Navy, to the Royal Air Force and the Royal Canadian Air Force, and to the men of the Merchant Navies, must go in full measure the credit for a truly extraordinary achievement."

There is a reference to Dieppe of which it is said, "The great combined raid on Dieppe, which after long preparation and several postponements caused by weather conditions was finally carried out on 19 August, 1942 is far too big a subject to be dealth with here; it must await the publication of a separate study. Only a brief reference is possible in this place. . .

"Although the outline for the raid had been drawn before Canadians became concerned in the enterprise, in its execution it became primarily a Canadian operation. About five-sixths of the whole military force involved came from the Dominion, while the Military Force Commander was the G.O.C. 2nd Canadian Division, Major-General J. H. Roberts. The assaulting force was drawn largely from General Roberts' Division, with the addition of a battalion from the 1st Canadian Army Tank Brigade. Three British special service units (Commandos) were also engaged.

"This first battle of the Canadian army in Europe was by far the largest of the many combined raids that have been directed against the German-held coasts of Europe. It was also the only one in which tanks were employed.

"Dieppe was a strong position; those responsible for the operation sought to divert the attention of the German High Command from Russia and they required knowledge of German installations and methods of defence for application when the invasion of the Fortress of Europe must be undertaken. It was known in advance that the operation was one of exceptional danger; and as it turned out the losses suffered by the Canadian troops were very heavy.

"The Canadians were the obvious troops for this dangerous job," says the book, "and General Montgomery offered it to them accordingly. It must also be said that, in spite of the bad luck and the losses, in the weeks following Dieppe all ranks of the Canadian army overseas felt a new confidence and a new pride. The army that had suffered so many disappointments and frustrations had shown that it could fight in the manner of the men of 1914-1918; and Lieutenant-Colonel Merritt's Victoria Cross, earned by almost incredible gallantry ("It wasn't human, what he did," said an officer who was with him to the very end) served as a symbol of something more than mere individual valor."

Mr. Churchill spoke in the Commons of the raid as "a reconnaissance in force." "I personally regarded the Dieppe assault to which I gave my sanction, as an indispensable preliminary to full-scale operations."

In June 1944 came V-Day with "full-scale operations" launched. On that day the name of Dieppe was suddenly in many minds and on many lips. "It was apparent to every informed observer that the experiences gained in that costly but essential undertaking had been the foundation of the success of the most momentous operation of war ever attempted."

In June 1943 the First Canadian Division left England and took part in the invasion of Sicily on the tenth of July. On September 3 it landed in the toe of Italy and from then on fought forward steadily. Canadians remaining in Britain began training for the great task of the assault upon the Continent. With the coming of June 6, 1944 "the English phase in the history of the Canadian army overseas was finally at an end."

This is a brief reference only to the first chapter of the book. The other chapters' importance can be studied from the titles, "The Shadow of Invasion," "The Days of the Blitz," "Sappers at Work," "A Little Behind the Front," dealing with reinforcement units, forestry, young ladies in khaki, and "Canadians and the British People."

The Canadians in England are called ambassadors. "It is for the Commonwealth itself, a working League of Nations and a practical example of the co-operation of all sorts and conditions of men from all over the world, to take the lead in bringing mankind back to sanity and goodwill."

The booklet is freely and aptly illustrated with reproductions of many paintings made by official war artists of the Canadian army and by Canadian army overseas film and photo units.

It will have an intense appeal to the Canadian people whose sons spent so long a period overseas. The life of those five years was of great interest to the men and the story will have a great appeal for the people of Canada.

Other volumes are to be Volume No. 2 "From Pachino to Ortona," the story of the campaign in Sicily and Italy from July to December 1943 and Volume No. 3 "From Caen to Falaise" in the Normandy campaign June-August 1944.

MAN WANTED

What is needed, we are told,
Is a most forgetful man,
Clever, vigilant and bold,
Who will do the best he can.
High in office, without fear,
True to country he'll remain,
Though he knows within a year
He will have to run again.

What is needed, so they say,
Is a man who will forget
That with favor he must pay
Many a big or little debt;
One a steadfast course to steer
When the need for that is plain,
Though he knows within a year
He will have to run again.

What is needed, so they tell,
Is a leader, unafraid,
Who'll remember to do well
And forget how votes are made.
One who sees his duty clear
And will do it, shine or rain,
Though he knows within a year
He will have to run again.

Looking Ahead in Ottawa

(By the Ottawa staff of The Canadian Press)

Ottawa, Dec. 10 (CP)— There was further lobby speculation last week on appointments to vacancies still remaining in the corps of parliamentary assistants. These appointments likely will be made early in the new year.

If the precedent of the last parliament is followed, assistants still have to be appointed for the Prime Minister, the Justice Minister, the Labor Minister and the Air Minister.

Rumor also has it that assistants might be appointed for the Minister of Agriculture, the Minister of Trade and Commerce and the Minister of Public Works —all of whom will become increasingly busy as the country buckles down to planning normal peacetime activity. The enlargement of the corps of assistants also would furnish encouragement to some of the promising young members of the new parliament.

One Liberal, usually keen on such topics, said his guesses were:

Louis Philippe Picard, member for Bellechasse in Quebec and a member of the Canadian delegation to the United Nations Conference in London, as Mr. King's assistant;

Lt.-Col. David Croll, member for Toronto Spadina and former Ontario Cabinet Minister, as assistant to Justice Minister St. Laurent;

Maurice Gingues, member for Sherbrooke, as assistant to Labor Minister Mitchell.

Any one of three airmen have been mentioned as assistants for the Air Ministry. The airmen named are Wing Cmdr. William A. Benidickson, Kenora Rainy River in Ontario; Flt. Lt., James Sinclair, Vancouver North, and Flt. Lt. Rene Jutras, Provencher in Manitoba.

Labor: Hints of a new deal for farm labor were heard at Dominion-Provincial farm labor conference. Arthur MacNamara, Director of National Selective Service, gave notice that farmers would probably face stiff competition in their bid for labor next spring when industry was getting into its full post-war swing.

Increase in farm wages during the war would be a stabilizing factor in retaining farm labor if they were maintained, he said, urging recognition of the value of paying a good man above-average wages.

Other factors which could be made effective in keeping workers on the farm would be provision for year-round employment and improvements in housing accommodation and rural electrification. Such benefits as workmen's compensation, minimum wages and unemployment insurance should eventually be extended to farm workers, he suggested.

TO POPULARIZE GLIDING

London (CP) — Britain's air ministry has prepared extensive plans to make gliding a popular pastime. Two-seater gliders of the most modern design are to be used as training planes, whereas hitherto single-seated gliders only were available for training. The few two-seaters which have up to now been available have, for the most part, been used for purposes not applicable to beginners.

Mackenzie's Column

By DEWITT MACKENZIE

London, Dec. 10 (CP) — When I returned to my hotel room Friday afternoon I found an egg on my writing table—but without explanation where it came from.

My first thought was that someone was playing a joke on me. On examination, however, there was the room number pencilled across the shell, and on the other side was a green stamp saying the egg came from Canada.

Then I remembered fresh eggs are so scarce in England that, while the ration varies, the Briton is lucky to get one or two a month, the rest being in the form of egg powder.

I went about my business, but that egg haunted me. Finally got the answer to the egg puzzle from a police constable and his wife, who invited me to their home.

They live in a three-room apartment with their daughter. The wife works in an office and their combined income is about $30 a week. Throughout the years of bombing they slept in a concrete dugout in their backyard, because they were in the heavy danger-zone and their house was damaged numerous times.

Found a Jewel

"My immediate reaction is that you've found a jewel," the constable's wife said. "That egg is a wonderful meal. You can't imagine how we treasure eggs, with our short and monotonous rations. It's been tough going, especially since lend-lease stopped and cut us off from tinned meat."

"Was there ever any time when you were hungry and couldn't get food?" I asked.

"No," she said, "we never have gone hungry, but the awful sameness of the few things we can buy is depressing. It gets one down."

She showed me an evening newspaper whose headline proclaiming "More Food, Clothes by Spring," was based on the success of the new Anglo-American loan negotiations.

Cheering News.

"That's the brightest news we've had since the war ended," she said. "It's what we've been waiting for and longing for."

"Is that what the loan means to the average working man and woman in England?" I asked.

"Yes," she nodded vigorously. "We are interested in relief from this hard life. It's not only the shortage of food, but of all necessities. All clothing, and especially shoes, are frightfully hard to get. You have to hunt for weeks sometimes to find what you need.

"A man can't have any new clothing, because he gives all his precious coupons to his wife and family."

"Well, then, what will be the effect of this loan on relations between your country and mine?" I asked.

"Good," she exclaimed without hesitation, "you know, we were feeling pretty sore about the stoppage of lend-lease. We thought the people of America didn't want to help us any more. We didn't understand. But now everything is all right again, and the feeling in England will be better."

That Canadian egg, by the way, went to the constable's wife.

Briefs From Britain

(By The Canadian Press)

Leeds, Yorkshire, England (CP) —Harry Walker, who owns the Iroquois, Ont., central meat market, has written to Leeds Retail Butchers' Association for an assistant butcher.

London (CP) — The King's household cavalry and regiments of the Brigade of Guards stationed in London will return to ceremonial full-dress uniform in January. At present service dress is worn.

UNJUSTIFIABLE MAJOR OPERATION.

Surgical removal of tonsils with guillotine and snare or dissection or so-called "enucleation" is a serious, major operation involving such grave risks to the child's life that in my opinion it is rarely justifiable.

If there is reason to believe or fear the tonsil is the seat of malignancy (cancer development), then this radical operation is indeed imperative immediately.

If the child's breathing is obstructed enough to retard or impair development and growth or to make the child constantly restless in the struggle for breath nights, then an operation should be done, but not tonsillectomy, if you ask me. I'd have no such atrocity inflicted on my child in such circumstance. Instead I'd have the tonsils "clipped" — a considerable portion sliced off with the gadget called the tonsillotome— as soon as the child is under ether the ring of the gadget is placed around the tonsil and phtt!—a portion is sliced off; then in jigg time a portion is sliceld off the opposite side. That's all. And that is enough. I say it is atrocious to subject the child to any greater risk just because the doctor is confused in his mind as to the purpose of treatment. Believe it or not, the conception on which some physicians and throat specialists base the practice of "getting every bit of tonsil" is that tonsil tissue in itself is harmful or dangerous to have in the throat. If this isn't an absurd medical fallacy I'll eat—my words, and I'll do it right here in public.

It is a familiar trick of many a puffing little all around "specialist" (eye, ear, nose, throat or what have you) to inspect the throat of a patient who has had diathermy (electrocoagulation) treatment of enlarged or infected tonsils and then sit back and flabbergast the patient with the vapid observation: "But, my friend, you still have your tonsils!"

The death rate of tonsillectomy is high. The incidence of lung abscess as an aftermath is enough to warrant condemnation of the operation except in rare cases (malignancy). That some physicians and surgeons still countenance and urge it upon parents as casually as one might advise vaccination or immunization against diphtheria, is a commentary on the pretensions of "medical science."

It is now nearly three decades since the focal infection principle was introduced. It was and is sound in theory and of real value when intelligently applied, notwithstanding all the teeth and tonsils that were sacrificed in blind speculation—on the off chance that removal of these perfectly normal organs might possibly eradicate the hypothetical septic focus that was responsible for whatever ailed the victim.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

Pimples

My 15-year old son is very unhappy over his affliction—pimples on his face—I believe you call it acne. He has done everything people have advised. (Mrs. E.R.A.)

Answer—Send a stamped self addressed envelope and ask in writing for pamphlet on Blackheads and Pimples.

Carbolic

In your article "Beware of Carbolic Acid" you said you would not advise the use of carbolic for anything. Yet you recommend calomine lotion with 1% phenol (carbolic acid) solution for the relief of severe itching in ivy poisoning. Why? (Miss T. M.)

Answer—I refuse to answer on the ground that it would tend to embarrass me. However, I still say I would never apply any strength of carbolic acid (phenol) to a wound or sore or cut or scratch, nor any salve or solution containing it, and when I suffered the torture of ivy poisoning I was grateful for the relief obtained from calamine lotion containing 1% phenol.

INFORMATION ROUNDUP

How many Americans were killed in the Revolution?

No official compilation of the number of American soldiers killed during the Revolutionary War has been made.

Many of the original records have been lost and some of those preserved are defective.

The problem is made harder by the fact that the militia of the various states often fought side by side with the Continental troops without officially becoming a part of the regular forces.

Statistics based on the incomplete records in the State and War Departments at Washington show that at least 4,044 American soldiers were killed in action during the Revolution. The office of the adjutant general of the U. S. Army says the actual number of battle deaths probably exceeded this figure considerably.

According to the same records, 6,004 men were wounded, 6,642 were captured by the enemy, and 2,124 were reported missing in action and unaccounted for — a total of 18,814 casualties on the American side. These figures, of course, do not include the casualties among the American "loyalists" or "Tories" who fought on the side of the British. Nor do they include the casualties sustained by the French in America.

It is estimated that a total of 230,000 Continentals and 164,000 militiamen enlisted in the American armies in the course of the Revolutionary War. Naturally the number of men in service at any one time during the eight years of the war was only a small fraction of these figures. The largest force of Americans under the immediate command of General Washington at any time probably did not exceed 10,000.

Statistics relative to the number of men killed in the British service during the American Revolution are not available. The original returns in the British record office show that the British troops in America attained their greatest numerical strength about Dec. 1, 1780, when there were 42,267 British soldiers in the United States, Canada, Florida and the Bahama Islands. It is probable that more than 10,000 British troops were killed in action or died of wounds received in action during the American Revolution.

SANTA RUNS GRIM RACE AGAINST TIME

In a race against time, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Clark finish trimming their Christmas tree for their son, Marvie, three, who is held by his father. Doctors have stated flatly that Marvie will die before Christmas. They do not give him more than a week to live. Death will strike when a malignant tumor reaches the boy's brain. Parents have arranged for a bit of Christmas spirit. The presents around the tree were received from newspaper readers who learned of Marvie's Yuletide death sentence. The bicycle and tricycle were presented because his principal Christmas wish was for a red tricycle.

Admiral Raeder Gave Order To Sink Graf Spee

Nuernberg, Dec. 10 (AP) — Joachim von Ribbentrop, a pale ghost of the gold-braided figure who ruled the German Foreign Office for seven years, asserted Sunday he had worked for an Anglo-German alliance and had proposed war with the Soviet Union.

Answering a list of written questions submitted by The Associated Press, Ribbentrop said he extended peace feelers to both Hitler and Germany's enemies during the war.

He denied that he had misled Hitler in August, 1939, with information that Britain would not fight for Poland and that therefore a general war would not follow.

He claimed that the incident of February, 1937, when he gave the Nazi salute to King George on being presented as German Ambassador to Britain, was misrepresented by "evil tongues."

Grand Admiral Erich Raeder said it was by his order that the 10,000-ton pocket battleship Admiral Graf Spee was scuttled off Montevideo, Uruguay, December 17, 1939.

Asked by The Associated Press why the order was given to blow up the Graf Spee instead of ordering her to risk battle, Raeder commented:

"The Graf Spee would have had to glide down the Rio de la Plata to reach the open sea. Before reaching deep waters it would have been seized by superior fighting units and knocked out without the possibility of developing its fighting powers or, after being put out of commission, of proceeding to scuttle."

He said he was unable to answer from memory inquiries as to the performance of the battleship Bismarck, which was hunted down and destroyed after sinking the British battle-cruiser Hood in 1941, or why the Admiral Tirpitz, bombed and sunk by the RAF in a Norwegian Fjord, was withheld from action.

He asserted in answer to questions that he constantly wrangled with the "nervous and temperamental" Hitler, particularly in opposing the decision to invade Russia; that he pleaded in favor of peace with France; that he regarded Germany's naval pact with Britain and the non-aggression pact with Russia as meant seriously; that he repeatedly asked to be relieved because of differences with Hitler and finally obtained discharge in January, 1943; that the navy had nothing to do with concentration camp atrocities.

Raeder declined to answer questions about violations of international law which the German Navy is accused of committing during the invasion of Nprawy.

NINE KILLED IN ACCIDENTS

Most spectacular of the accidents which claimed nine lives in Eastern Canada at the weekend was a train collision 38 miles west of Armstrong in which two men died and 33 others suffered injuries.

ASSEMBLED "BRAINS"

London, Dec. 10 — (Reuters)— A secret team of 63 members of the Women's Royal Naval Service assembled the "brains" of the Royal Navy's top secret mines, including those which blocked the Kiel Canal before D-Day and others intended for use against the German pocket battleship Tirpitz, the Admiralty disclosed yesterday.

DOCK CARRIED AWAY

London, Ont., Dec. 10 — (CP) —The 50 mile an hour gale which swept the Lake Erie coast two weeks ago carried away the outer end of the wharf at St. Williams, Norfolk County, it was learned by the Department of Public Works officials on Thursday. The damage, which had not been previously reported, was discovered during a routine inspection.

HESS CLAIMS

and those with a war message.

"We have become convinced in talks with Herr Hess hat proposals of the Fuehrer looking toward an understanding had been made in earnest. Under these circumstances, England does not feel justified in assuming responsibility for prolonging the slaughter without having endeavored to bring the war to a conclusion acceptable to all parties. She therefore declares her willingness to enter upon negotiations looking to this goal.

"What I wrote to the Fuehrer, I repeated in England.

"The decision concerning my flight was, without doubt, the hardest I ever made. It was rendered easier, however, when I visualized the endless rows of children's coffins in both Germany and England, with mothers in dire distress following behind and similar rows of mothers killed by bombs, with crying children following."

Hess repeats in his answers that only an adjutant knew of his plans before hand. He got the plane from Messerschmitt on the pretext of needing it for special training flights, the introduction from Haushoffer o nthe pretext that he was meeting the Duke on neutral soil with Hitler's knowledge.

To the questions, "When did you decide to make the flight?" "from where did you take off?" Hess answered:

"I decided to fly shortly after my conversation with the Fuehrer in June, 1940. A delay of nearly one year was caused by difficulties in obtaining the machine and long-range equipment, as well as by unfavorable weather conditions.

"It took until May 10, 1941, before all necessary preconditions coincided.

"I took off from an airfield of the Messerschmitt plant at Augsburg, from where I had made several short training flights previously, as well as several takeoffs for England, which I had to break off because of bad weather.

Plot on U.S. Told

Nuernberg, Germany, December 10 (AP)—When Hitler heard how his personally-ordered sabotage attempt on United States factories in 1942 had failed because of action of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, he yelled at Germany's intelligence chiefs: "Why didn't you take Jews for that?"

This was reported Sunday by Maj.-Gen. Erwin Lahousen, war crimes prosecution witness, who had direct charge of German sabotage operations.

As a result of Hitler's statement, Lahousen added, Jews were given jobs in the German intelligence Service for more than a year.

Lahousen was referring to the incident at Long Island, N.Y., and Jacksonville, Fla., in 1942 when German submarines put ashore eight saboteurs who were quickly rounded up. "This was the greatest failure ever" said Lahousen.

MEYER ACCUSED

"To indicate these seeds did not fall upon barren ground but upon very-very fertile sail we have only to look at the loss of lives as detailed in the succeeding charges," Col. MacDonald continued. "The killings consisted of 'mass shootings in which as many as 9 were killed at one time and of individual and very brutal killings of wounded soldiers in which it is believed that at least one officer participated."

A Star Witness

A Polish soldier named Jesoinek who served with the 12th S.S. Division will be one star witness for the prosecution Co. MacDonald indicated.

He will testify, the prosecutor said, regarding the shooting of 18 Canadian prisoners at Meyer's headquarters at the ancient Abbey of Argenne.

The prosecution's main endeavor will be to fix upon Meyer responsibility for the murders. If they were committed either directly as a result of his orders or were done in obedience to his reiterated instructions previous to the invasion that no quarter be given, that prisoners not be taken or else be shot immediately after interrogation, the responsibility and hence the guilt must be his.

Obtaining evidence which it is hoped will convict Meyer has been the task of Col. MacDonald's unit for the last 15 months.

Repeated to Men

Going into the details of the charge alleging that Meyer urged the 15th Company not to take prisoners, Col. MacDonald said:

"Evidence will be given that these orders were repeated to men by their company commander, Capt. Von Buttner, his associate of many campaigns who for long had been Meyer's regimental adjutant and was so until a week or 10 days after the invasion. As the 15th Company under Von Buttner's command remained with Meyer's company at the regimental headquarters, he at all times was in close proximity to Meyer and in a position to know at all times the wishes and policy of his commander.

"Further, the company sergeant-major, a man named Hagetorn, read to the company strict written orders that they did not have to take prisoners but if they were taken they should be shot after interrogation.

"Members of the company were required to sign that they had heard this and understood these orders. There was also talk ascribed to Meyer to retaliation against British prisoners for the bombing of German cities and consequent loss of life among mothers, wives, and other relatives of troops. Some of these orders were repeated immediately before the invasion.

"To show that these orders were not confined to this particular company alone, another witness will be called from the first battalion of Meyer's regiment to say that his unit also was told by Meyer 'my unit takes no prisoners' and that on June 6 while on the way to meet the invading Canadians, one company commander went from platoon to platoon of his company telling men they were not to take prisoners.

Prisoners Not Important

"At that time it was thought that they were going to drive the Allies into the sea and prisoners for interrogation purposes were not important.

"If this evidence is to be believed, then Meyer undoubtedly incited and counselled his men to deny quarter. In fact you may well come to the conclusion that such remarks coming from a regimental — that is a brigade — commander to his troops in tantamount to an order. We have however, to avoid any argument on that point, himply confine our chareg to one of inciting and counselling, which, of course, in any event is a war crime.

"If this particular charge stood by itself without anything more, the accused would deserve punishment. I think, however, it also might be argued that if there were nothing more to indicate how serious this language was intended to be taken, it would be questionable whether he should receive the maximum penalty if convicted.

"With these other charges, however, against him, this indication of Meyer's attitude and policy is of great significance and it should be of assistance to the court in weighing evidence which he may give to escape responsibility and punishment for these atrocities.

Terrific Battle Ensued

"We will submit that of all the evidence, these instructions and declarations can not be taken to be simply the over-enthusiastic effort of a commander to inspire his men with the necessary fighting spirit, but something more significant and vicious."

Col. MacDonald went on to the second charge involving the shooting of 23 prisoners in eight separate instances on the afternoon of June 7 at the villages of Buron and Authie, five miles north of Caen.

It was there that the North Nova Scotia Regiment and the Sherbrooke Fusiliers attacking toward Capriquet airfield met the 12th S. S. and a terrific battle ensued.

The chief prosecutor said that Meyer admitted he took an active part in leading this battle and was well forward as was his usual practice in a neffort to "draw on" his young troops in this, their first engagement.

"It will be submitted that because of this the court can reasonably infer that the accused must share directly in responsibility for what occurred and indeed may himself be the perpetrator of some of these offences, or the immediate instigator of them."

Interrogated by Officer.

On the third charge that Meyer gav eorders for the murder of seven prisoners at his headquarters at the Abbey five miles northwest of Caen, Col. MacDonald said it would be shown that the prisoners were interrogated by an officer and then shot within 100 yards of Meyer's own command post by a corporal and allowed to lie there unburied for at least two days.

"We are fortunate in having proof of this charge in the evidence of a soldier serving with the 15th. Recce Company at headquarters at the time who saw and heard most of what occurred. This witness is a Polish lad named Jesionek who was wounded on the evening of June 8 and after his recovery went to a training school for N.C.O.'s.

"From there he deserted in March of the following year and it is his original statement given voluntarily on his first interrogation which resulted in this evidence being uncovered.

Announced to Meyer.

"He will say that when these prisoners were brought to headquarters their presence was announced to Meyer by the guard in charge of them; that Meyer then said word to the effect 'what do we want with these prisoners—they will only eat our rations'; that he then had a private conversation in a low tone with one of the officers standing beside him and then in a louder voice so that all could hear, said 'in future take no prisoners.' Following this, the officer to whom he had spoken privately left with a guard followed by my witness, and after another officer had interrogated the prisoners and left, they were individually taken into an adjoining small barn where an Unterscharfuehrer shot each in turn."

Four Officers Charged With Communism

Montreal, Dec. 10 — (CP) — Charged with giving support to Communism, four officers of Aircraft Lodge 712 of the International Association of Machinists (A.F.L.) today stand suspended from that organization just as they and 36 other delegates to the Montreal Trades and Labor Council were suspended by the council for one year recently for backing the Labor-Progressive party during the last Federal election.

The union leaders under suspension are: Robert Haddow, organizer, Jean Pare, business agent, Irving Burman, financial secretary and Adrien Villeneuve, Grand Lodge representative.

Romeo Desparois, special investigator appointed by the I.A.M. to check on the activities of members of Lodge 712, told of his findings and the I.A.M. decision at a press conference here yesterday.

Mr. Desparois and George Smith, Grand Lodge representative of the I.A.M., seized the books and documents of Lodge 712 Saturday afternoon. It was reported that Irving Burman disputed the right of the two officers to take over the control of the lodge but he agreed when shown a letter authorizing Mr. Desparois to proceed with the action.

Mr. Desparois stated that orders for the investigation were given by the I.A.M. vice-president D. S. Lyons, following reports of Communistic activity which reached the Association's headquarters.

"It is alleged the suspended members have been meeting with local and national leaders of the Labor-Progressive for some time," an official I.A.M. statement declared.

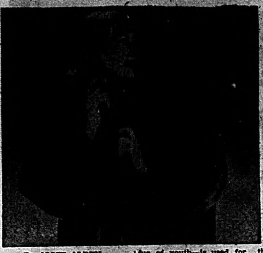
Young and Lovely



By ALICE ALDEN

SOME OF THE most delightful fur fashion seen this season are not of the worldly, magnificent, opulent variety, but rather the simple, lovely fur coats designed for college girls and beginner-careerists. Laskin mouton— the fur of youth—is used for this young and appealing three-quarter length Bloomer girl coat, made with buttoned and shirred shirtwaist sleeves. It is nice in beaver brown or the darker Logwood brown and offers high fashion at an endearing price, which is what a young person's fur coat should do.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Siren in War Plant Breaks Up Another Home.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I've been married for twenty years, and during that time we were happy. We have two children. Several times during the twenty years I had reason to doubt my husband, but I was so much in love that I just put those doubts out of my mind.

Two years ago he started to work in a defence plant, where he met a divorced girl who has been taking up a lot of his time. Someone told my son about the affair, and it finally broke up our home. My husband had been away for five months, but I miss him terribly and just can't forget him, as I still love him.

He comes up to see the children and me once a week. They are now 17 and 14 and are old enough to know why their father left. When my husband came over yesterday, he said he would return on his terms, which are that he wants to come and go as he pleases and would give us a certain amount of his pay on which to live. My answer was 'No' as there was no mention made of his love for us. Did I do right? Presumably he's still seeing the other woman.

I think all he wants is a home, because he's sick of a furnished room, and it probably would be cheaper for him to come back with us. I don't believe his terms would make a happy home. Do you?

UNHAPPY.

I agree with you that when a man is willing to return to his home for economic reasons and insists on making his own terms, the prospects for happiness are uncertain. You've been married twenty years, your husband must be middle-aged or over, and gentlemen getting a bit stiff in the joints, and of "rugged" years are fond of their creative comforts, even if a divorced siren helps to tip the balance of the scales.

Let him continue to enjoy the doubtful meals of the hasheries and the gloom of his furnished room, in addition to which he's probably harboring doubts about the fidelity of the charmer he met in the defence plant. If his case runs according to form, he'll probably agree to return home on your terms, unless he's one of the stubborn irreconcilables who would rather die in discomfort than admit a mistake.

The Marry Go Round

By HELEN ROWLAND

Casual Observations

Sometimes it looks as though you've got to choose between being a man's "dream girl" and being a wife. Because the average man is such a paradox! Usually, he admires one sort of girl—and marries the other kind.

Theoretically, a man admires a witty, intelligent girl who knows all the answers and is the life of the party—not a dumbell. But the girl whose telephone number he takes most carefully is the one who has been talking with her EYES, and applauding his own bursts of eloquence all evening.

Any man will vow that he admires a girl with a little reserve and emotional control. Yet the girl whose doorbell he rings most often is the one who greets him with all the reserve and emotional control of a playful puppy. Because when he's looking for a playmate, he is not looking for the ice-maiden, but for something friendly and spontaneous that will put him at ease.

Of course, a man admires orderliness and domestic efficiency in a woman. But when he needs relaxation, he finds himself heading for the happy-go-lucky woman who doesn't care where he drops his cigarette ashes, and lets him loll on her best divan, boots and all.

When he wants a girl to tramp beside him on a long hike, he chooses a strong husky girl who can help him stake a tent or bait a hook, and beat him climbing a hill. Yet the same man will turn right around and select a delicate, nervous, emaciated victim of a reducing diet, who teeters on high French heels, and invite her to walk beside him to the altar.

Yes, man is a paradox! You've got to choose between his admiration, which is mostly theoretical—and his attentions which are factual—between the orchids and the orange blossoms! Ever notice this?

Radar, it is said, will do more wonderful things for us than have ever yet been told. Besides doing away with telephone wires, it will enable ships to see each other in all sorts of darkness and foggy weather at sea, and airplanes to see mountains or any other dangers ahead, and thus it will make it possible for wives in Miami to see what their husbands are doing back in New York or husbands to keep eys on their wives in Miami or Bermuda. And will that avoid "collision" or promote them? It can work both ways—but any way you look at it, this world is becoming more like a goldfish bowl every day!

When we are young, we fancy that love-making is a matter of technique; when we are older, we know that the only thing important about it is the enthusiasm.

Almost any girl can bury her real troubles and force a smile; her big problem is to keep from being buried by her imaginary troubles.

PICTON

Santa Claus Greets 2,300 Children At Armouries

Picton, Dec. 10 — Santa Claus came to Picton on Saturday and he was greeted by a throng which jammed the main street of the town. From his throne in the armouries, Santa greeted 2,300 children, and each received an orange.

The parade started at one o'clock at the west end of the town, travelled Main Street and then returned to the armouries. Picton fire truck with screaming sirens, led the way. Members of Picton band were on a wagon drawn by a team of white horses owned by Fred Webster. Then came Santa on his throne on another wagon, drawn by a pair of handsome black horses wearing silver mounted harness alone valued at $500. These were driven by George Atkinson and are owned by the Sawyer-Stoll Lumber Co. of Kaladar. Bringing up the rear was a team of greys owned by H. J. McFarland. This was loaded with children, while Donald Duck, a monkey and a clown created much fun.

Sponsored by C. of C.

The parade was sponsored by the Chamber of Commerce with the treats provided by local merchants. The Canadian Department Store supplied costumes.

In the stores it was busier than the day before Christmas and business set a record. Some stores were so closely packed with shoppers that others were turned away.

Large Crowds at Armouries

The Christmas Jamboree sponsored by the Rotary Club attracted large crowds to the armouries Friday and Saturday nights. Proceeds were for underprivileged children. There were three hundred cards for bingo and these were filled each time Saturday night. There were many other games which proved popular. Arnold Covert was games manager.

Members of the junior O.H.A. hockey team went to Kingston arena for skating last week. They have been getting in condition at the collegiate gym and are ready for the season as soon as ice is possible.

Hold Bazaar.

Nearly three hundred ladies attended the bazaar at the Parish House, sponsored by the Guild of the Church of St. Mary Magdalene, Friday. Tables were centred with mums and the booths decorated with Christmas emblems. In charge of refreshments were Mrs. J. C. Cooper, Mrs. L. Eamer, Mrs. D. Wark, Mrs. G. Jones, Mrs. Owen Jones. Tea was poured by Mrs. George Cook, Mrs. H. B. Tully, Mrs. G. Haddon and Mrs. T. Shaw. Members assisted in serving.

Mrs. M. Conway, Mrs. A. L. Greenside and Mrs. S. J. Collier had charge of the fancy goods.

Mrs. J. A. Wallace and Mrs. H. J. Hodgins the touch and take table; Mrs. N. Medhurst the apron booth; Mrs. H. A. Le Heup and Mrs. W. Thompson, the home-cooking. Mrs. N. A. Mellett received the fees. Mrs. E. L. Bronskill received reservations for tea parties of which there were many.

1. 'Way back in "cracker barrel" days, Mr. C. W. Post, the creator of Grape-Nuts, was busy telling folks about those carbohydrates, proteins, phosphorus, iron and other food essentials that make Grape-Nuts' nourishment so popular today.

2. Now millions of folks enjoy that same Grape-Nuts goodness in crisp, golden-brown GRAPE-NUTS FLAKES as well as Grape-Nuts.

3. You'll smack your lips to a double goodness in Grape-Nuts Flakes. That's because they're made of two grains—wheat and malted barley specially blended, baked and toasted for malty-rich, sweet-as-a-nut flavor and easy digestion. And no fuss or bother—they're ready to eat from the package.

4. That hard-working fellow who runs the grocery store down at the corner has been busy all morning stacking Grape-Nuts Flakes on his shelves so they'll be ready when you get down there. Why not hike down now and pick up a couple of packages. Take along your shopping bag so you can take advantage of the real economy of the giant size.

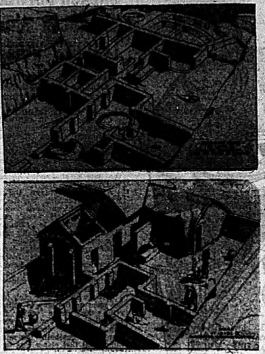
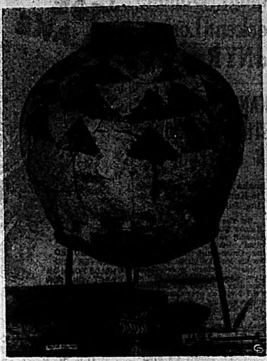
FIRST FARMING COMMUNITY KNOWN TO MAN FOUND AT TELL HASSUNA, IN IRAQ

View of one of the community levels found in excavation at Tell Hassuna, North Iraq, during the discovery of the first farming community known to man. Archaeologists Seton Lloyd and Fuad Safar, trained at the University of Chicago, dug through this level to reach the lowest at the site, the walls of which protrude slightly through the floor of the level shown in this photo. The above walls were raised by an agrarian folk 6,000 years before Christ. Found here was a sickle made of flint chips set in bitumen, still sharp enough to cut grain. According to the Bible, when Adam and Eve were driven from the Garden of Eden, they became husbandmen. The discovery at Tell Hassuna comes as part of the search for the place where the transition to agriculture occurred.



Reconstruction and plan of a house in the first known farming community at Tell Hassuna in Iraq, placed in the seventh millennium before Christ. The rooms are damaged by the intrusion of circular grain bins from a later period.



A large jar, dating back to approximately 5500 B.C., found at Tell Hassuna in North Iraq. An infant was buried in this urn. Below the "painted and incised" jar is a drinking cup which accompanied the body.

HURLEY SPEAKS UP

Maj.-Gen. Patrick J. Hurley, whose recent resignation as U. S. ambassador to China, resulted in a Senate inquiry into American foreign policy in China, is shown reading newspaper clippings before his appearance before the U. S. Senate Foreign Relations Committee in Washington. Hurley charged that members of the U. S. embassy staff in China wanted to arm Communists with U. S. lend-lease weapons to destroy the Nationalist government.

NAMED BY HURLEY

George Atcheson, Jr., one of the five U. S. State Department officials named by Maj.-Gen. Patrick J. Hurley, former ambassador to China, as sabotaging the U. S. foreign policy. A NEW COVENTRY GROWS IN MINIATURE

So complete was the Nazi bomb damage to the city of Coventry, Eng., on the night of Nov. 15th, 1940, that the word "Coventryize" was coined to describe complete destruction. A tradesman poses with the cake before taking it into the House.

LORD LOTHIAN COMES HOME

Stanley Woodward, chief of protocol, U. S. State Department, is shown boarding a coast-guard cutter for transportation to the United States cruiser Augusta, with the ashes of the Marquess of Lothian, who died in Washington, D.C., on Dec. 12, 1940, while ambassador to the United States. The Augusta later sailed for Greenock, Scotland. When an ambassador dies at his post, it is customary for the government to which he was accredited, to send his body home in a warship. The five-year delay was accredited by the war. Lord Lothian's body was cremated, and until recently the ashes rested in a vault in Arlington National Cemetery.

Little Benny's Note Book

There was a Parents-Teechers meeting last night, and in school today Miss Kitty was telling us about it, saying, Now there was one thing in particuler that most of the mothers present agreed upon, and that was the seeming impossibility of inducing you to study your homewerk under the proper conditions, in other words without having the radio terned on at the same time. Now just to get at the facts, how many of you boys really prefer to do your homewerk and listen to the radio at the same time? she said.

Everybody in the class raising their hand, and Miss Kitty said, Oh dear, apparently your mothers didn't exaggerate. Now I ask you, can anyone give me a real reason why the radio helps you to study? she said.

Which Puds Simkins waved his hand, saying, It makes you forget you're doing your homewerk and helps you imagine you're just sitting there listening to the radio.

Oh my, Miss Kitty said. When you get old enough to study fizzicks, you'll learn that one thing cant be in 2 places at the same time, especially such an important thing as your concentration. Now what would you think of a group of business men holding an important conference while the radio was blaring out a lively tune? Would it help them or hinder them? she said, and Sam Cross waved his hand, saying, It would help them, because if business started to seem to bad they could get up and do a little dance.

I hope someone has a more sensible answer than that, Miss Kitty said, and I waved, saying, It would help them because it would teach their concentration to be in 2 places at once and make them twice as smart as other business men.

How many boys agree with that statement? Miss Kitty said, and everybody waved their hand and some waved both.

Being the end of the subject.

Maple Leafs Encounter Double Disaster Over Weekend Losing To Canadiens and NY Rangers

Toronto Squad Only Able to Score One Goal in the Two Games

(By The Canadian Press)

Unless Montreal Canadiens falter badly, it appears that the principal interest in the National Hockey League race will focus upon the struggle for second place.

Canadiens haven't the kind of a clutch on first place they had last season, but they're playing consistent enough hockey to remain in the top tier week after week.

Meanwhile their closest rivals—Chicago Black Hawks, Detroit Red Wings and Boston Bruins—are working up such an earnest argument over the runner-up spot that none has been able to overtake Canadiens.

Bruins threatened momentarily with a six-game undefeated streak that carried them from fourth to second place, but they slipped back into fourth last night after losing an 8-3 verdict at Chicago.

It was Boston's first defeat since Nov. 10 and it thrust Chicago into a second-place tie with Detroit, who conquered Canadiens 2-1 at home on Adam Brown's goal in the last four minutes of play.

In the third N.H.L. game Sunday, New York Rangers met Toronto Maple Leafs in a "basement" game and took a 2-1 triumph on home ice. In defeat Leafs dropped into a tie for last place with the reinforced Rangers, who have two games in hand on Leafs.

Leafs, encountering double disaster on the weekend that was to have launched their announced new offensive campaign, lost 1-0 to Canadiens in Toronto Saturday.

Goal-Tending Duel

Leo Lamoureux' third-period goal in that tight struggle broke up a goaltending duel between Frank McCool of Leafs and Montreal's Bill Durnan. The only Toronto goal of the weekend was scored by Lorne Carr in the second period of their Sunday game, but Rangers previously had built up what proved to be a winning lead on successful first-period thrusts by Mac Colville and Lynn Patrick.

It was the first home ice appearance for Patrick and Mac Colville since their release from the services. Joining them was a third war veteran, lanky Alf Pike.

At Detroit scoreless hockey was the vogue until the final 7½ minutes of play when Joe Carveth finally fired a shot past Durnan. One minute later Dutch Hiller's unassisted goal tied the score for Canadiens, only to have Mud Bruneteau provide a pass to Brown for the winning goal at 16:52.

At Chicago sharp-eyed Frank Brimsek made his debut in the Boston nets after a lengthy stretch in the services. After holding Hawks scoreless through the first period, he was greeted by a shower of rubber in the second which netted four Chicago goals. Four more tallies flashed the red light while Boston replied only three times.

Alex Kaleta, Bill Mosienko and Clint Smith scored twice for Chicago, with the other goals going to Pete Horeck and Wingy Johnston. Herb Cain scored twice for Boston and Bill Cowley fired the third for his 500th scoring point in 11 seasons.

KANSAS CITY STILL IN FRONT IN U.S. LOOP

Omaha Kept Out by Losing to Kansas City After Beating Tulsa Oilers

By The Canadian Press

Kansas City emerged from the weekend still in front of the United States hockey league after Omaha had threatened to take the lead by virtue of a 5-4 Saturday victory over Tulsa Oilers. Kansas pulled out of the momentary tie with the Knights by a 7-2 victory over Omaha in a Sunday meeting.

Other weekend games saw St. Paul Saints break their losing streak to down Fort Worth Rangers 12-4 and land themselves in third place in the league running. Fort Worth had beaten Minneapolis Millers 4-2 Saturday.

The Saturday and Sunday set-to's left Minneapolis, Dallas, Tulsa and Fort Worth tied for bottom spot in the league, with Kansas, Omaha and St. Paul leading in that order.

The Kansans scored in each of the three periods of their game with Omaha with Johnny Harms placing the Pla-mors on goals in the second and last period. Goalie Doug Jackson of Kansas was rival star of the evening as he stopped 29 pucks.

Feature of the St. Paul-Fort Worth tangle was a smashing second period when the Saints set a season record scoring seven times after their 2-1 lead won in the first frame. Injuries and penalties were reported as Stan Swain, referee, sprained an ankle in the final period and Nelson Little, Fort Worth goalie, drew two penalties—one for tripping and one for fighting. Doug Stevenson, the Saints' lend-lease goalie from Chicago Black Hawks, played sparkling hockey, making 37 stops.

MOVING GERMANS HOME

Washington, Dec. 10 (AP) — One of the greatest organized mass movements of people in history—the transfer of at least 6,350,000 Germans back to Germany—is under way.

The State Department announced that the four major European Allies have begun to bring back Germans from Poland, Czechoslovakia, Hungary and Austria.

Repatriates will continue to move into the shrunken Reich by foot, train and truck convoy until Aug. 1, 1946, when the migration is scheduled to be completed.

Some Germans have lived in their adopted countries for many years. Most, however, moved in on the heels of Hitler's aggressions.

Chips Off The Sports Block

By GEORGE H. CARVER

WHAT HO, THE LEAFS

Once upon a time when we were kids and the lure of the old swimmin' hole in one of the most beautiful spots in Prince Edward County was strong; when we chased butterflies barefooted over lush pastures and sneaked back to the bush where we furtively smoked elmroot (the dried corn tassel wasn't bad at that) and did other things the kids of yore called fun, there was a large tom cat in the neighborhood which suddenly developed a strange streak of laziness. Jumbo just curled up in the sunshine hour after hour, and was practically forced to rise and get his daily quota of milk. Even the neighboring Tabby cats raised no spark of romance in Jumbo's heart and he seemed content to live the rest of his life in undisturbed peace.
